After this figure of comfortable and recovering sorrow two poor little mortals stood gazing in absorbed sympathy. There was something pathetic about the empty basket the little girl carried—it seemed to symbolize the evident emptiness of her life. As for the small boy, he had a lean look as to face and jacket, but there was no leanness about his soul.

"What do you think has happened to her?" the little girl asked, the active sympathy of an emergency bureau looking out from great hunger-haunted eyes.

"I don't know," returned the masculine waif, utterly oblivious to the emaciation of his own life as he followed with wistful look the vanishing figure—an hour-glass of fashion, with expansion of sleeve and spread of skirt.

"Maybe," he added after a thoughtful pause, "the lady has lost her little boy." Ah, perhaps she had! If she would only turn back and look!

But the expanded figure hurried onward, clasping a full purse, while the little pinched figures, rich in the Divine gift of sympathy, resumed their journey in the opposite direction.—Chicago Tribune.

Misdirected Eggs.

There have been many stories told within the last few days about Vice-Chancellor Bacon; there is said to be only one to tell about the late Vice-Chancellor Malins. When that most excellent and well-meaning man was on a certain occasion pelted with eggs while administering justice on the bench by a discontented suitor, he observed, after committing the offender, that he had probably mistaken the court, since the eggs must certainly have been intended for Bacon.—London World.

Accepted as an Apology.

Two colored men were having a lively discussion down on Pleasant street the other night. "You're a liar," said the little one. The other reached for his bootleg. "I reiterate that you are a liar," exclaimed the first one. "Oh, if yer reiterate," said the other, as he straightened up, "that's all right. I thought yer'd take it back." The little man looked at him for a moment, then, with a smile all over his face, joined the other in a walk to the nearest barroom.—Boston Traveller.

CO-OPERATIVE stores are making headway in France as well as in England. The value of the sales of the 306 societies in France is over $15,000,000 a year, and the total number of members is about 300,000. In addition to these societies in France are the farmers' syndicates, in which about 900,000 persons are concerned. The syndicates buy fertilizers and other chemicals for vine culture, maintain laboratories for the analysis of soils, publish monthly price lists and perform other services for the general benefit.

AT the age of 90, George W. Goff, who lives near Punta Gorda, Fla., has grown young again. Up to a year ago he was blind, deaf and bald; suddenly he recovered his eyesight and hearing, and his hair began to grow. Now he hears and sees as well as he ever did, and his head is covered with a growth of black hair. As his eyesight strengthened and his hair grew a marked change occurred in his physical condition, and from being a decrepit man, hardly able to walk, he became as strong and active as a youth of 20 years. The case has puzzled the physicians.

REV. E. R. DONOHUE, pastor of the Eighth Presbyterian church of Pittsburgh, Pa., who has been identified with Chinese mission work for years, in a recent interview said that he believed the efforts to convert Chinese paganism was futile. He said that although the Chinamen go to Sunday school and seem to take an interest in the Christian religion and even profess Christianity, yet they cling to their heathen ideas and ceremonies. He believed, however, that the Chinese can be raised to a higher social level by religious influences, so he will not give up work amongst them.

LOST BY AN ACCIDENT

Was the Great Trial Race of the Defender Yesterday.

SHE IS BY FAR THE BEST BOAT.

A Broken Gaff Permits the Vigilant to Beat Her and Win a $500 Cup, In a Race of the Fleetest Crafts—Another Race.

NEW PORT, Aug. 3.—Defender lost her first race yesterday and great was the pity of it for she had walked away from her three competitors and was coming home when a new fangled gaff at the top of her mainsail broke and most ingloriously the aspirant for the cup honors was obliged to take a line from a common every day tug and retiring, allowing the Vigilant to win. The $500 cup offered by Ogden Goelet was the prize for which the syndicate boat was racing; but the fair fame of a craft that seeks international honors was at stake. Pitted against her were her persistent antagonists George J. Gould's Vigilant, the preserver of the America's cup in 1895, and General Charles J. Paine's unknown "Jubilee" built for a cup defender in '93 but not chosen and also J. Malcom Forbes successful cup defender of 1887, the Volunteer.

With three opponents fit to try her steel, the latest Herreshoff creation went out to Brenton's Reef Light Ship off the entrance to Newport harbor in the morning and put up a race that delighted the big crowd of spectators until after rounding the second turn and sailing 32 miles of the 36 course. Then her new hollow gaff broke near its middle and the great mainsail became a misshapen bag.

The spar was hollowed out and bound together like a barrel in order to save weight. Hollow spars were first used in England and the Herreshoffs have elaborated on the foreign idea. Better go back to the solid yankee stick was the general opinion of yachtmen yesterday who were conjecturing as to where we would be at if such an accident happened in a cup race.

Before the mishap the Defender had pressed to windward 17¼ miles and run 18 miles with the wind as tern spinnaker out and had turned the second mark with 11 minutes and 35 seconds advantage over Vigilant, 16 minutes 21 seconds over Jubilee and 34 minutes and 33 seconds over Volunteer. This was clearly a demonstration of what the new boat is capable of. In the windward work the gain over Vigilant was 2 minutes and 29 seconds and in the run 9 minutes and 6 seconds. The wind was about 14 knots an hour at the start dropping to 10 knots at the first turn and increasing during the run to 18 knots, after which rate it was blowing when the gaff gave way. The boat was pulled at the time and there was a lumpy sea, which may have had something to do with carrying away the gaff. After the Defender withdrew the Vigilant sailed home an easy winner.

The great race of the sloops diverted attention from the race for the $1,000 schooner's cup, also offered by Mr. Goelet, which was sailed at the same time over the same course. There were nine crack schooners in the race. The best elapsed time was made by the Lascand, which was 5:42:33. The Vigilant covered the distance in 5:3:54, or almost thirty-nine minutes better than the best of the schooners. Emerald was the scond schooner to finish and was given the prize on time allowance. Amorita was the the third schooner in. The others finished in the following order: Mayflower, Mertin Elsemarie, Neara and Loyal.

NOT HOLMES' PAL.

He Is Not the Kind of a Man Holmes Would Select.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Aug. 3.—Hatch alias Allen, alias Caldwell, alias Fogg, alias Mascot, the convict doing time in the Arkansas penitentiary and who has been alluded to as one of the right hand confederates of Holmes is undoubtedly a huge fake, so far as any connection he may had with Holmes and his crime is concerned, and it is most probable that the police of Memphis will be able to show that at the time this man of many aliases claims to have been operating with Holmes in Texas, he was doing a term in the penitentiary of Tennessee. His first penitentiary sentence in this state was for horse-stealing and was for twenty-one years but he was pardoned and at once resumed his old habits. He is not at all the kind of a man Holmes would select for his confederate, and the tale is a fake.

SILVER GAINS A LEGAL POINT.

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 3.—The supreme court in special seession yesterday informally settled the questions of the issuing of gold bonds by municipal corporations in Ohio. The issue was raised over an effort of the sinking fund trustees of Cincinnati, who, acting under a special law of the legislature, attempted to refund $3,000,000 of 4 per cent. bonds, falling due in a few months.

The trustees had a proposition from a syndicate to take the bonds at 3.65 per cent on condition that the principal and interest be made payable in gold. They decided to accept the proposition, and were preparing to refund the bonds, when the silver men went into court, setting up the claim that the trustees were without authority to make the bonds payable in gold and thus exclude silver.

The common pleas and circuit court divided on the question, the former holding that the trustees had power to provide that the bonds should be paid in gold, while the higher tribune of the county reversed this decision.

The supreme court being the next resort, Chief Justice Minshall broke the summer vacation by calling a special session to consider the question.

The chief justice, while not wishing to establish a precedent of rendering a decision in vacation time, announced that the conclusion of the court, when formally recorded in September, would be to sustain the circuit court. This is a victory for the silver adherents, as it prohibits the issuing of gold bonds, and is perhaps the first judicial determination of the issue between the money metals. The court was divided, standing three to two.

GOLD WITHDRAWALS.

The Authorities Say, However, it Has no Special Significance.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—Treasury officials were surprised yesterday afternoon when informed that a demand had been made upon the sub-treasury at New York for a considerable sum of gold for export. The amount exceeds two millions, and opens up another gap which the Morgan-Belmont bond syndicate may feel called upon to fill. One million was called for by the bank of Montreal, and upwards of a million and a quarter by the coffee importing houses. The treasury has not been official advised of the transaction. According to the official figures issued at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The reserve stands at $107,118,251, a loss since the day before of $118,251.

Acting Secretary Curtis says the movement indicates nothing more than a desire upon the American exporters to pay their debts as they fall due, the export of this season being occasioned by the liquidation of foreign accounts. The shipping of gold to the Montreal bank is not, the secretary says, an unusual occurrence. That bank has a large credit in New York and this call for gold is, he thinks, on account of the demand for settlement. Assistant Secretary Curtis scouts at the idea of any attempted run on the treasury gold.

The Queen and Crescent Change Will be Made September 1.

BIRMINGHAM, Aug. 3.—C. C. Harvey, vice-presipent of the Queen and Crescent and president of the Alabama and Vicksburg, Vicksburg, Shreveport and Pacific, and New Orleans and Northeastern railroads, was here yesterday en route to New Orleans, and in an interview confirms the report that he will remove his office from Cincinnati to New Orleans, where he says he will take charge of the active management of the three roads of which he is president.

They will be operated separately from the rest of the Queen and Crescent system, but will have close traffic arrangement with that line.

Mr. Harvey says the change will be made Sept. 1. He has made no appointments as yet.

CANTON, O., Aug. 3.—A freight train on the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne and Chicago Railroad broke in two on a heavy grade near Stark siding yesterday.

The rear end crashed into the first section and ten cars were wrecked. A dozen tramps riding in a furniture car which was smashed to splinters. Four were killed, another will die and the others were badly injured.

Columbus Southern Receivership.

ATLANTA, Aug. 3.—T. E. Richard, of Columbus, was yesterday appointed receiver of the Columbus Southern Railway Company on the application of the Central Trust Company, holders as trustees, of $1,087,000 of bonds. The road defaulted on the interest on the bonds two years ago and has continued to default ever since.

Atlanta's New Pastor.

ATLANTA, Aug. 3.—Rev. John Newton McCormick, of Suffolk, Va., has accepted a call to the rectorship of St. Luke's Episcopal church of this city. Mr. McCormick is a nephew of Bishop Newton, of Georgia, and was for eight years in the Methodist ministry. He is now one of the most prominent preachers in Virginia.

Fire in East Knoxville.

THROUGH ALABAMA

Condensed News of Interest Throughout the State.

ALL IS NOW QUIET AT BROOKSIDE.

The Reports Were Greatly Exaggerated, Only One Killed and Two Wounded. Other Interesting News Through the State.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Aug. 1.—No further trouble has occurred at Brookside since last night. Reports sent out by special correspondents were greatly exaggerated, only one man was killed and so far as known two others shot in the legs. It was no race war but a battle between officers and some negroes tenents whom the Sloss Iron & Steel Company had instructed to vacate. The officers had gone there to serve notice on them when the negroes fired upon them. Deputy Sheriff Wood, was killed: but if any others were killed their bodies have not been found and nothing is known of it by the officers.

An Age-Herald reporter, spent the night at the scene of the fight and heard but little talk of a race war though there was considerable indignation expressed towards the negroes engaged in the shooting.

About a dozen negroes, who are supposed to have been engaged in the fight, have been arrested and are now in jail.

IT IS CONFIRMED.

OPERATOR KILLED.

His Assailant Then Made His Escape and Averted a Lynching.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Aug. 1.—Information reaches here of the cowardly murder of Ed West, station agent of the K. C. M. & B. Railroad at Pottscamp, Miss., thirteen miles east of Holly Springs, by J. A. Gatlin, a politician. Gatlin had been to a political convention and wanted to send a telegram. He knocked upon the station door, and West, who was making out his monthly reports, was a little slow in opening the door. Some words passed, when Gatlin pulled a gun, fired on West, killing him instantly. As soon as Gatlin fired the shot he ran off up the railroad track and was soon followed by the enraged citizens, but so far has escaped. If caught, the general opinion is that he will be lynched.

FRIGHTFUL MORTALITY

Raging Among the Convicts of an Alabama Prison.

BIRMINGHAM, Aug. 2.—A sensation has been created here by the publication yesterday of the report of Dr. Thomas D. Park, who, by direction of the committee of health, has been investigating the health rate and cases of mortality at Coalburg convict prison. He reports a death rate of ninety persons in every 1,000, which he shows by comparisons is simply frightful, the next highest death rate of any penitentiary being that of Mississippi, which is forty to the thousand. Tuberculosis was the chief cause of death. He recommends changes in the prison for health benefits.

ATTEMPTED ESCAPE.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., July 31.—About 20 negro convicts at work in the mines of the Sloss Iron Steel Company, at Coalburg, made an attempt to escape last evening but were foiled and one of them was shot down by a guard. The convicts had discovered a weak spot in the walls of the mine and cut a tunnel to the side of the mountain through which the attempt to escape was made.

A negro named Frankfield was the leader and he alone succeeded in getting outside. He was hailed by a guard three times but refused to halt and was shot down. He will recover.

Many Injured at a Negro Riot.

COLLINSVILLE, Ala., July 30.—A riot took place at a negro pic nic near Edward's bridge, in which about fifty men and women took part, and all kinds of weapons were used. One negro was badly cut about the shoulder and arm with a razor: two others received heavy blows on the head with sticks, which knocked them senseless, and one of them is thought to be fatally injured. It is feared that the trouble is not yet ended.

Chattanooga Southern Railway.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Aug. 1.—Application for a charter for the Chattanooga Southern Railroad was filed in the office of the secretary of state here yesterday. The company asks permission to build a road from Gadsden eastwardly to the Georgia line, a distance of forty-two miles.

Took the Morphine Route.

MOBILE, Ala., July 31.—A stranger was found in a comatose condition at Monroe Park, and upon an investigation being made it was discovered that his name is John Benjamin Gaunt, of Garden Grove, Decatur county, Iowa, and that he had taken morphine with suicidal intent. He was taken to the city hospital where he died last night.

SITUATION IMPROVING.

In Industrial and Trade Centers—Crops Not So Good.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—Bradstreet's today says:

The week presents a larger volume of trade in many lines and at many points than in the weeks before and one year ago. The rush of orders for steel and iron leads in the interior displaying remarkable strength. Western manufacturers have been obliged to purchase eastern billets to meet their orders. Less confidence is placed in last week's rumors of serious damage to the spring wheat crop in Minnesota and the Dakotas, and other conspicuous features of the week is the evidence of reviving confidence on the part of Western and Northwestern interior merchants now that the corn and spring wheat crops promise well. This is shown plainest at Chicago, St. Louis, Milwaukee and St. Paul, where order demand and sales to buyers in person have increased to a striking extent. At the South general trade remains of as moderate volume as previously noted. Nashville and Galveston report material gains.

There is a better outlook and feeling at Charleston, but elsewhere midsummer quiet rules. All the mills are busy in Augusta. Delay in paying the sugar bounty affects trade very unfavorably in Louisiana. At larger Eastern centers there are no changes beyond a better demand in leading staple lines at Baltimore, New York and Boston, based on importing interior demand for fall delivery.

The general industrial situation is somewhat improved through the probable success strike of the New York tailors, the end of the strike of the Cleveland Wire Drawers. Continued advances of wages, starting up of new manufacturing enterprises and a further increase in demand for leading manufactured staples notable iron and steel. At Chicago, coke, pig iron manufacturers have been refusing orders.

There are 221 failures in business reported this week as compared with 239 throughout the United States last week, 220 in the week one year ago, and 159 in the corresponding week of 1893. In the like week of 1892, the total was only 155.

To which R. G. Dun & Co., add.

The year's business will be much affected by the crops and the most hopeful estimates falls below a full year crop, except for corn. Larger stocks than were immediately wanted have been taken by traders as prices were advancing, and these tend to limit further orders. The general advance in many products also causes reluctance to purchase, and the distribution of the past year has been in part to make up for stocks and individual supplies depleted during two years of economy.

HABEAS CORPUS GRANTED

In the Ex-City Treasurer's Case—He Was Rearrested and Gave Bond.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Aug. 3.—Judge Call, of the Circuit court, yesterday morning granted the writ of habeas corpus petitioned for by R. C. Scott, ex-city treasurer, who was arrested Wednesday on a capias issued by the clerk of the Criminal court, on information filed by the county solicitor charging Scott with embezzlement.

Mr. Scott, however, was immediately arrested on a warrant sworn out in County Judge Baker's court charging him with the embezzlement of $9,167.88. He waived examination and gave bond for his appearance at the next term of the Criminal Court of Record. The bond was for $5,000 and was signed by Banker John Stockton and R. D. Knight. Scott claims that the experts for political purposes have "doctored" the books so as to make a shortage appear.

VERDICT APPLAUDED.

A Banker and Rich Father Are Found Guilty of Murder.

CARROLTON, Mo., Aug. 3.—After being out two and one half hours, yesterday, the jury in the Meeks murder case brought in a verdict of guilty. The clerk polled the jury and then read the verdict, "We the jury find William P. and George Taylor guilty of murder in the first degree." The crowd began to applaud vigorously in spite of the judge.

William Taylor is a banker at Browning, Linn county, Missouri and his brother George is a farmer near Browning. Both are married and accounted wealthy. The crime of which they stand convicted was the murder of Gus Meeks, his wife and two children, in May, 1894.

A HORRIBLE CASE.

His Wife Said it Was Suicide But Circumstances Point Otherwise.

COLUMBIA, S. C., Aug. 3.—A special to the State from Spartanburg, S. C., says: J. O. Carson, a well-to-do farmer of this county, was found murdered in his bed, covered with blood and presenting a horrible spectacle. His throat had been cut with a srazor. His wife said it was suicide, but bloody tracks were found on the floor and there was no blood on the dead man's feet. His wife acknowledges that she had been charged by her husband with unfaithfulness. The coroner's jury found a verdict that Carson came to his death at the hands of a person unknown. The case is being investigated and something sensational is expected to develop.

KNOXVILLE'S REFORM MOVE.

First Meeting Yesterday of the Citizenship League.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 3.—The first meeting of the Christian Citizenship League was attended by 400 people at the Clinch street Methodist church last night. Three hundred charter members were received. Able addresses were made by half a dozen prominent speakers. The aim of the league is to establish better morals in Knoxville and elect sober and responsible city officers.

THE L. & N. MAKES A PURCHASE.

The Road Has Now Gotten Into Knoxville.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 3.—The Louisville & Nashville has purchased the Tennessee Central now being built from Nashville to Knoxville, for $250,000 agreeing to assume the obligations of the promoters of the latter road as to time of construction, agreements with counties, etc. This gives the Louisville and Nashville an entrance into Knoxville.

Shot Himself Instead of a Rabbit.

KISSIMEE, Fla., Aug. 3.—While shooting at rabbits yesterday, Julius Blue, a Frenchman, accidentally killed himself. He had fired several times and turned the pistol up to look in the barrel when the weapon was discharged, the bullet entering under the chin and going out through the top of his head.

DEMOCRATS REVOLT.

Many in Maryland Who Do Not Like Hurst's Nomination.

WILL AN INDEPENDENT BE RUN?

An Effort Will be Made to Get Senator Hayes to Make an Independent Campaign—It is Said Many Democrats Will Support Him.

BALTIMORE, Aug. 3.—Senator Gorman's desertion of State Senator Thos. G. Hayes at the eleventh hour for John E. Hurst and the nomination of the latter at the democratic nomination has aroused a tremendous storm of indignation among the democrats throughout the city and state, and on all sides today this act of the senior Senator has been subjected to the most vigorous denunciation, and the elation among the republicans is of the most enthusiastic character.

The republicans have been looking toward Congressman William B. Baker of the second district as the most available man to bring before the state convention, which meets at Cambridge on the 13th, and many Baker men have visited the republican headquarters yesterday, and a movement has been started which may result in his nomination.

Should Baker be nominated thousands of democrats, who would have followed the leadership of Hayes had the state senator received the nomination yesterday, will support the republican nominee, and it was reported this morning that, in that event, Senator Hayes himself would lend his influence in Baker's behalf.

Not a few of the delegates have announced their intention of voting for the republican nominee, and many county democrats who have remained over yesterday say that should the republicans come out on a reassessment platform they will accord the republican candidate most enthusiastic support.

The general opinion is that the outlook for republican success next fall is uncommonly bright.

As an illustration of the sentiment of the people, the Evening News (democratic), will oppose the election of Hurst. An independent movement is talked of, which may aid the republicans to carry the state. The opposition expressed today in the hotel lobbies and clubs is almost tumultuous in its character and bodes no good to the nominee on election day. An effort will possibly be made to get Senator Hayes to make an independent campaign, in which case he would bring much strength to the anti-Gorman forces in the state.

ALLIGATOR SKINS

Are Purchased in Large Quantities—The Florida Skins The Best.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Aug. 3.—Charles Bayer of Bayer Brothers, 99 Gold street New York, is now traveling the state buying up all the hides and alligators skins he can get hold of. He says that there is a great demand for them and are bringing good prices. Already he has purchased $25,000 worth of the hides and has contracted for all he can get in the next six months. He expects to secure 90 per cent., of the skins of alligators that are killed this year. The alligator skins are shipped to Europe, but the hides are sold to exporters and tanners. Mr. Bayer's firm are also purchasing alligator hides in Mexico and South America, but those he says are disposed on the domestic markets. The Florida skins are considered much the finest.

THE COLUMBIA ARRIVES.

She Is, With One Exception, the Fastest Warship, of Her Class, Afloat.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3. — The United States commerce destroyer Columbia, next to Minneapolis, the fastest warship of her class afloat, arrived here yesterday from her race against time across the Atlantic. No war ship ever built crossed the ocean in the same time. These are the principal figures: Time from the Needles, Isle of Wight, to Sandy Hook Light ship six days 23 hours 49 minutes. Course 3,112 knots. Average hourly speed 18.53. Best hourly run 20.60. Best four hours run 80.59. The daily runs were from 26th a. m., of July at the Needless to noon of the following day 405 knots and to noon on each succeeding day 466, 480, 457, 455, 453 and 405 to Sandy Hook Lightship at 8:45 a. m.

DEAD BESIDE HIS WHEEL.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Aug. 3.—John Quincy Aeams, a direct descendant of the famous Adams family, which furnished two presidents to the United States, was found lying dead on Quay street near his home last evening. Mr. Adams was 59 years of age and was a devotee of the bicycle. His wheel was found standing against a tree near by, and the supposition was that he felt an attack of heart failure coming on and dismounted.

Lady Shot a Boy for Stealing Fruit.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—About noon yesterday the daughter of General Flagler, chief of ordnance of the United States army, shot and killed a boy, who, she claims, was stealing fruit from her father's garden in this city. The young lady was arrested and is held by the police.

At the hearing of the case yesterday, Miss Flagler was discharged as the killing was unintentional.

Latest From the Flooded District.

DENVER, Col., Aug. 3.—Representatives from the flooded districts through out the state continue to make known the terrible damage to crops and loss of property. The Denver and Rio Grande had another washout yesterday evening about five miles west of Pueblo. The Arkansas has swollen to a raging torrent and two miles of the road is gone.

THE SAVANNAH & WESTERN.

NEW YORK, Aug. 1.—The following circular has been issued by the Borg Committee of Savannah and Western holders in which the position of the bonds under the Georgia Central plan. Under the plan all the underlying liens on the Savannah and Western property are discharged by Messrs. Samuel Thomas and Thomas F. Ryan, as intending purchasers of the Georgia Central. All claims moreover of the Georgia Central against Savannah and Western are paid by Messrs. Thomas and Ryan, as also the cost of receivership and foreclosure of the mortgages on the property. Furthermore the $1,628,000 Savannah and Western bonds claimed by Georgia Central are cancelled. Under the plan each $1,000 bond of the Savannah and Western receives $550 in new mortgage bonds, $250 in first bonds and $250 second income bonds. An agreement has been made by Messrs. Thomas and Ryan, with the Savannah and Western Company that all the consolidated bonds allotted under the plan to Savannah and Western bond-holders shall be sold for the accounts of the respective owners by the syndicate marketing the main issue of such securities.

The pro rata results of the operation will be distributed by the committee of Savannah and Western bond-holders. Bond-holders, however, have the right to cash their consolidated bonds at 85 per cent and accrued interest after September 1. Any bond-holders wishing to do business must give notice within fifteen days after Aug. 27, the date of the bond-holders meeting. The committee states that the new consolidated bonds have, or will be underwritten and will be offered to the public in the usual way at a price above 85. Bond-holders who have deposited with the committee and fail to notify the committee of their desire to cash their new consolidated bonds will be deemed to have chosen to become members of the syndicate which will market the bonds. From this agreement it does not seem that Savannah and Western bond-holders who have deposited with the Borg committee can elect to receive their new consolidated bonds. The Georgia Central plan provides that these must be sold by the syndicate for the account of the Savannah and Western bond-holders.

SISTER TO THE NEW YORK.

The New Cruiser Brooklyn About Ready for Launching.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 3.—The launch of the armored cruiser Brooklyn, which has been on the ways at Cramps' shipyard for two years, will take place in about two weeks.

The navy department has not as yet made public its plans for the christening. It is believed that some member of Secretary Herbert's family will officiate.

The Brooklyn is designed to have a speed of at least twenty knots at a displacement of 8,150 tons. Her main engines are of the triple-expansion type, four in number, and will drive twin propellers. The contract price is $2,986,000, the building of the ship being authorized by an act of congress approved July 19, 1892. Her dimensions are: Length, 400 feet 6 inches on load-water line; beam, extreme, 64 feet; mean daught, 24 feet; cruising displacements, 9,153 tons; maximum indicated horse powor (estimated), 16,000; coal bunker capacity, 1,733 tons.

FIVE SERIOUSLY WOUNDED,

As the Result of a Conflict Between a Posse and Some Negroes.

ATLANTA, Aug. 3.—A posse which was out last night in search of Jess Hardeman, for an assault upon a married woman, met his father, a brother and several friends near the Smyrna Cable Company, and a battle followed. Hardeman's father started the shooting, he having heard that his son had been lynched and he and some friends started for the scene of action. On the way they met a posse of whites, and upon starting the shooting it became general; and as a result four negroes and one white man were seriously wounded.

A PRICE UPON HIS HEAD.

A Polish Count Long a Refugee, Kills Himself in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Aug. 3.—Algernon Wilhelm Djialinski, who it is alleged, was a count of Poland, but who was known here as August W. Kenkel, the name of a relative, died yesterday from a gunshot wound, which he inflicted with suicidal intent on last Sunday at his home. He was 72 years old and said he fought in the war against Russia as a Polish spy. After the conquest of Poland, it is said, a reward of $25,000 was offered by Russia for his head, but he escaped to America.

ADD TO THEIR EMPLOYES

Atchison Railroad Preparing to Move the Immense Corn Crop.

TOPEKA, Kan. Aug. 3.—The large machine shops of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe in this city were started at their full capacity yesterday. The increasing business of the road has made this necessary, together with the preparations that are required for handling the immense corn crop now assured.

The shops have been running with a reduced force working half time for several years.

Hung Protesting His Innocence.

CORSICANNA, Tex., Aug. 3. — H. T. Whitehead, alias Lee Thomas, was hanged here yesterday for the murder of J. W. Farley, a year and a half ago. Whitehead maintained his innocence to the last. The execution was without especial interest.

Receiver Appointed.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.—C. C. Stophyton was yesterday appointed receiver of the First National Bank of Ocala, Fla., to take effect August 7, vice Joseph K. McDonald, resigned.

BROWN CHEMICAL CO. BALTIMORE, MD.

THE * CHRONICLE.

C. C. DuBOSE, Editor and Proprietor.

COLUMBIANA, AUGUST 8, 1895.

RAILROAD BILL has not been captured yet, although his pursuers have exchanged shots with him and he has killed their hounds. He held up and robbed the U. S. mail between Brewton and Belleville, Ala., last Saturday.

H. H. HOLMES finds himself in the very unenviable predicament of having his name go down in history as a new definition of crime, similar to that of "burking," which is defined as "The practice of killing persons by suffocation for the purpose of selling their bodies for dissection."

THE new woman has appeared in a New York court charged by her husband with being most of the time away from home, and neglecting the children. Her plea was that the husband should look after the little ones, but he says he can't do that and go to work every day. The wife was paroled for trial.

NEW ZEALAND sells advertising space on postage stamps. The ads are printed on the backs of the stamps—one advertisement on each stamp—before they are gummed. Thus, the manufacturers of soap, cocoa, cigarettes, shirts, etc., who are not so represented by ads, are reduced to the distasteful necessity of reading the announcements of their rivals every time they lick a postage stamp.

THE production of pig iron in this country in 1880, fifteen years ago, was 4,295,414 tons. The production in the half of 1895 ended June 30, 4,087,558 tons, lacking about 200,000 tons of being equal to the whole output of 1880. The product this year will be close to 9,000,000 tons, and next year the product of 1892, the banner iron year, will be exceeded by a least a million tons. We made 9,157,000 gross tons that year.

IF "Old Hickory" Jackson were president today, he would hang before sundown about one hundred Wall street dealers and legislators as conspirators against public welfare, and tomorrow would have their remains tried for treason. But in this day of readily bribed officers in all the departments of state, there is no such crime as conspiracy against public welfare. Get office, and get what you can out of it, is the motto of the average statesman.

JAPAN has a chip on her shoulder. She is anxious that Russia should knock it off. Flushed with the success of her encounter with China, Japan is anxious to to demonstrate her metal in contest with a power of higher grade. It is said, and on good authority, that she will declare war against Russia next spring. A disagreeable surprise awaits her. To whip a corrupt, half-barbarous country is one thing, to conquer a nation of soldiers is another. Russia is lacking in many of the essentials of civilization, but her soldiery is above proof. Her troops are brave and disciplined to the highest extent. The war history of Russia proves this. Japan is simply inviting annihilation.

A SECOND lieutenant of the Sixth United States infantry, a graduate from West Point, and a young fellow of good army record as far as it goes, has resigned and taken the position of brakeman on a leading railroad. He seems to take this course because the comparatively idle life of the army irks him; because the chances of promotion are remote; because an army man is a sort of waif, without home or habitation. The authorities of the road have promised the young man promotion as fast as he earns it; and the probabilities, we should say, favor his earning promotion. He desires to master all the practical business of railroading, both in relation to the work and the direction. It shows that a longheaded fellow may early find out he made a mistake, and correct it, in part, at least.

DEMOCRATS MORE HOPEFUL.

Richmond (Va.) Dispatch.

We think there can be no doubt that the Democrats are more hopeful now than they were a few months ago. The cry of "hard times" has lost its potency, and has been succeeded by a new condition of things which promises to show to the democrats the path they must pursue if they expect or desire to elect the next president and congress.

Ex-Senator Camden, of West Virginia, a shrewd, sharp politician of the practical kind, sums up the political situation in a few words. He says that two or three months ago he would not have given a copper for the chances of the democratic party, but that since then there has been a marked change in public sentiment, due largely to the improvement in business prospects throughout the country. He adds that cattle (West Virginia raises many cattle) have gone up, as have wheat, iron and cotton. "All these things redound to the credit of the democratic party," says Mr. Camden, and his belief is that it will triumph in 1896.

From the far off Northwest comes a like hopeful utterance. That section has been supposed to be ready to cut loose from the democratic party on the silver question, and a serious defection was feared. But the St. Paul Globe tells us that there is a revival of courage and confidence everywhere discernible amongst democrats, and that this revival has a solid foundation. "Those democrats who had abandoned all hope of success next year are now becoming confident of it." In fact the Globe claims that the silver question no longer threatens to destroy the integrity of the democratic party. All good democrats should, at least, come to the conclusion that the condition of things now existing would not justify the democrats in dividing this year on the silver question, nor on what that paper styles the "larger question of the currency."

Just here let us call the attention of our readers to the fact that the Globe, an administration organ to the backbone, testifies that the democrats stand with the currency policy commended by the president and the secretary of the treasury. This policy involves the divorce of the government from banking, but calls for strict federal supervision of the projected new state bank system.

Returning to Virginia, we quote from that sterling democratic paper, the Staunton Vindicator, as follows:

"When the last congress adjourned there was not one Virginia democrat out of a hundred—you might say a thousand—who had the slightest hope of electing a democratic president in 1896. Now there's not one out of a hundred who doesn't hope to elect him. The times have improved, the tariff is working well, the president has kept the ship steady and gotton more ballast in the treasury, there is more skilled employment all over the country, wages that shrunk so in the hard times are being raised everywhere, common labor is finding work, wool under the new tariff has about doubled its price, wheat is 20 cents better than it was this time last year, beef holds its price well—all things are better.

"All this compared with last year. Compare next year with this, next July, and the change will be still more marked—there won't be a peg to hang a hard times complaint on anywhere. And then the democrats will be as keen as greyhounds for victory in the presidential race."

These are only straws, but they show the direction in which the wind is blowing. It is not too late for the democrats to snatch victory from the hands of the republicans.

THE INVISIBLE CLOTH.

Hans Christian Andersen tells of the story, evidently an ancient one, of a sharp rascal who offered to sell to the sultan a certain wonderful rich cloth that possessed, he said, the property of being visible to the virtuous only, while remaining invisible to the vicious. The sultan could not see the cloth, neither could his courtiers, but they could not afford to admit the fact, fearing this would be taken as an admission of lack of virtue; so they praised the cloth most highly as the merchant made motions of unrolling, measuring and displaying it. Yet there was no cloth; the dupes were looking at the empty air, each one afraid of acknowledging the truth because of the danger of being exposed to ridicule.

How much like the people in this story are the laboring men of today! They are told that free coinage means more money for them, more work and higher wages; and that he who does not believe it is an enemy of the class to which he belongs, because capitalists are all opposed to free coinage; yet no one can tell how the benefit is to come to him. Even Mr. Bryan, who came all the way from Nebraska and talked to him for two hours, could not and did not show him the least evidence of it. In fact, the harder the laboring man looks at the "cloth" the less he sees of it. He is morally convinced that there is nothing there at all for him, but he does not dare say it. After awhile, when he discovers that the whole scheme is designed to use him to make money for a few silver mine owners and to help forward the political fortunes of seekers after office he will feel like fighting somebody, but he will have no one to blame but himself.

The prime of life in a man of regular habits and sound constitution is from thirty to fifty-five years of age; of a woman from twenty-four or twenty-five to about forty years of age.

THE NEGRO COLONY IN MEXICO.

The New York Post has a correspondent at Bolson de Mapimi, Mexico, who gives a satisfactory explanation of the failure of the scheme to colonize Alabama and Georgia negroes in that district. The correspondent describes the country as quite equal to the garden lands of Texas; and says every preparation was made to treat the negroes fairly, good homes being prepared for them and liberal terms agreed upon for working on shares. The negroes, however, were at least 60 per cent town people, were ignorant and suspicious, and easily led by mischief makers, They began by demanding salt meet three times daily, and were refused on the ground that eating so much salt meat in that country would induce scurvy. Next, they said their grits were too coarse. They were offered mills in which to grind the grits finer, but they did not care to exert themselves, seeming to enjoy grumbling. Then they became alarmed because there was no rain. They were told that it was the dry season and that crops were raised by irrigating the land. Crops under such cultivation were shown them, but they would not accept such evidence; so, instead of working, they took to holding prayer meetings for rain. Then there was a faction among them that concluded that this was an impious act, and they set about praying that the rains might not come until their due season. Those who were induced to work the crops refused to chop out according to the Mexican fashion, claiming that the leaving of but one stalk in a hill was done to bring them in arrears. About this time they observed that the Mexican houses in which they lived were built around a court having but one outlet, and that there were no windows in the outer walls. This gave rise to the story that they were in a "prison," and although it was pointed out that all Mexican villages were built on the same old-fashioned plan, and that they were free to go and come as they pleased, or to open windows in their outside walls if they chose, this prison theory held its ground. The mischief-makers among them put it into their heads that they were being "guarded" by armed Mexicans. The explanation was made that on an estate of that size, with thousands of peon laborers, all in authority went armed as a matter of tradition and habit. The negres would have it that they were being deprived of their liberty.

But little was needed to set the colony wild and that little was supplied when the fomentors of the discontent, who proposed that the colony make a break for home, were arrested and locked up. Thereupon the men, women and children hastened forth into the mountain country, and having no definite idea of their route, became lost in the desert. Many starved to death and a few reached Texas, after unheard-of suffering. The experiment was a wretched failure, and the cause of the failure was—if we may believe the correspondent's story, which bears evidence of being the truth—inherent defects in the negro character.

DELAY MAY COST US THE CANAL.

It is reported that the new government of Nicaragua proposes to declare the canal concession forfeited on account of the alleged failure of the company to carry out its contract.

When the company secured the grant it promised to build a canal six feet deep between lakes Nicaragua and Managua. It was then believed that the enterprise would cost $150,000, but it has been ascertained since that the subsoil is solid rock, and the expense of cutting the canal would amount to about $1,000,000. The company offered to pay the Nicaraguan government $150,000 to be released from this part of the contract. The proposition was accepted, but the present government refuses to stand by the bargain made by the preceding administration and threatens to forfeit the concession.

This is bad news, and it is easy to see the hand of England back of it all. The forfeiture would probably cause us to lose the canal, and Great Britian would then step in and get the concession. We have gone too far in this matter to let it drop.

Our policy of delay is responsible for the whole trouble. The canal will have to be built and it must under American control. If England slips in ahead of us our interests will force us in the near future to seize the canal, and the best way to avoid trouble is to go right ahead now and push this waterway through. This new avenue of transportation is a necessity, and we can never reach out for the trade of the orient and the countries bordering on the Pacific until we build it and control it.

Baby Marion Cleveland will probably touch the button that will start the machinery at the opening of the exposition. The Western Union will run a wire to Gray Gables, and another into the exposition grounds. An operator in Atlanta will give the signal, and at the other end, 1,000 miles away, a touch of the button will send the current that starts the wheel. The exposition directors desire that the little Maid Marion shall touch the button. If she does not it will be Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland. Mr. Cleveland was originally invited to come to the opening September 18th. He replied that his engagements would not allow him to remain here but a few hours on that day if he should come, and proposed to come on October 18, which will be "President's Day."

A MONUMENT TO THE SLAVE

Capt. White's Tribute to the Southern Negro in the War—It Will Preserve History and Do Justice to Man and Master Alike.

Chattanooga Times.

Captain Samuel E. White, Lancaster county, South Carolina, an ex-confederate soldier, a descendant of Revolutionary stock, a man of large means, is at the head of two enterprises, located at the town of Fort Mill, in the said county, that at first mention would hardly seem congruous, as coming from a common source.

One of these is the erection of a monument to Jefferson Davis; the other, which seems to be Captain White's individual affair, is a tribute to negro loyalty and faithfulness, and it, too, is to be a monument.

The purpose of this memorial is set forth in the following extracts from a letter written on the spot and printed in the Charlston, S. C., News and Courier:

"A standing contradiction and rebuke is to be given to all those who insist that the relation between the Southerner and his slaves was one marked by force and cruelty on the one side and slavish, rebellious hatred on the other. A monument is to be erected to the faithful slaves by whose fidelity, obedience and labors we were enabled to send every able-bodied freeman to the front. A few torches would have made their masters homeless, a few blows would have made them childless; it needed but the inclination on his part for him to march away, leaving behind him, dead, all those who were dear to him who was his master. The power was there, the inclination never moved him. Never was greater trust committed to a race in slavery, never was confidence more nobly repaid. The monument to these slaves will be a lofty shaft, on one side the figure of a female negro nursing with tender care her future lord, on the other a male with some agricultural implements in his hand. So far as can be learned these are the first monuments of their kind to be designed, and it is a matter of congratulation that they are to stand on the soil of South Carolina. While these three monuments stand we will have a history, though we may not have written a record. It is more likely that, if the struggle of civil war was again begun, a greater home guard would be needed. But other influences have been at work. The ties formed by the protection and care of the master, and the fidelity and obedience of the slave, have been broken; that generation is rapidly passing away; to them some tribute is due. May we not forget the animosity now existing and render honor to whom honor is due."

A race capable of both the docility and faithfulness of slaves, and the valor and self-denial of first-rate soldiers, has in it (it may be in germ only) the elements of highest humanity. The character is there, sure. The foundation is ready for the builder time, aided by religion and science.

Nor is there any incongruity in these undertakings, that are meant solely to preserve history and do justice. There is no mere vain glory in them. They are to be bearers of the truth to the generations to follow. They are to tell how broad and generous men, with no political axes to grind and no selfish end of any kind to seek, regarded the chief of the confederacy, and the faithful slave, the two social extremes in the old South.

"Mr. Grady was right when he said that 'history has no parallel to the faith kept by the negro in the South during the war,' and we are glad that an old confederate soldier of South Carolina, who fought for Southern independence in the war between the states even as his fathers fought for American independence in the war of the Revolution—we are glad that he will have the honorable distinction of being the first to pay this great tribute to the Southern slave. All honor to Samuel E. White, of Fort Mill! His example should be an inspiration to the people of the South, who should esteem it a sacred duty to build at the old confederate capital a memorial column to the Southern negro in the war. This monument should not be the grateful work of one man, but it should be built by the whole people of the South, and be built under the direct auspices of Southern women and children."

It is never hard to believe when we get on believing ground.

We can only walk with God when we are willing to go his way.

Our mission of sorrow in this life is to show us our need of God.

Give thorns the right to live, and you make a law against killing snakes.

Praying is sometimes done when God wants us to first do something else.

Some men whom God calls to preach misunderstand him, and write essays.

The devil has to work hard for all he gets in the house of a praying mother.

The old serpent hasn't grown an inch since he crept into the garden of Eden.

When the devil goes about as a roaring lion he is careful not to show his teeth.

It is a long step toward heaven to be born in a home where the Bible is loved.

It is doubtful if the man who makes a long prayer ever expects a quick answer.

There is something wrong with the preaching that won't hit a sinner somewhere.

The man who enters the straight gate has to leave behind him all that is crooked.

Whatever we undertake in the name of the Lord, is sure to have God's help behind it.

We must do the thing that God tells us to do, before any other good work will count.

The prayer that opens a window in heaven, can only be offered when God is worshiped.

The Bible will not long remain a closed book against the one who opens it to look for Christ.

THE PLAN.

Each county is organized into a separate organization. Get a policy for thirty years for five dollars per thousand dollars without renewal. You only pay your pro-rata share of the loss of a brother member in your own county. In Kentucky, South Carolina, Georgia and Virginia the average cost has not been more than two dollars per annum in each thousand dollars of insurance.

AYER'S PILLS

"For fifteen years, I was a great sufferer from indigestion in its worst forms. I tested the skill of many doctors, but grew worse and worse, until I became so weak I could not walk fifty yards without having to sit down and rest. My stomach, liver, and heart became affected, and I thought I would surely die. I tried Ayer's Pills and they helped me right away. I continued their use and am now entirely well. I don't know of anything that will so quickly relieve and cure the terrible suffering of dyspepsia as Ayer's Pills."—JOHN C. PRITCHARD, Brodie, Warren Co., N. C.

J. W. Dykes, who has been taking a two weeks' vacation, visiting his parents and friends, returned to his post as clerk in Lester, Mason & Co.'s store.

Familiarity, no doubt, breeds contempt in most instances, but certainly not in the matter of money. The more we have of it the better we like it.

Three negroes were jailed here yesterday, they having been arrested in Birmingham and brought here for trial for crimes committed in this county.

South Carolina now has three times as many cotton mills as she had four years ago. The capital to construct and operate them mostly comes from the north.

Rufus Lester was called to the bedside of his mother, who lives on Yellow Leaf, Tuesday. She has been very sick, but we learn today that she is improving.

Reedy Walls was accidentally hit in the right eye, Saturday, by a stone thrown by Bud Adams, causing a painful wound, but it is not thought will impair the sight.

Mrs. Tom Rhodes, of Montgomery, who has been a guest of her sister, Mrs. L. Armstrong, left Wednesday for Talladega to visit her daughter, Mrs. John C. Williams.

A nine, composed of Columbiana boys, went to Wilsonville, Tuesday, and "done up" that club to the tune of 21 to 16. Who told the Wilsonville boys they could play ball?

At an early date the young people expect to give a rare treat to our town and surrounding cities. They will give a most entertaining concert, the admission fee, etc., will be published soon.

At the council meeting, Monday, nothing of importance was done except to fix the salaries of teachers, and to make such other arrangements for the opening of the school as were necessary.

Don't mention or think of what your neighbor is doing in the direction of progress and growth, until your own record is clear. How much have you done in a public spirited, enterprising way the past year? Have you thought of your own gain entirely?

On the tomb of Jefferson at Monticello he is described as the author of the declaration of independence, the founder of religious freedom in Virginia, but there is a significant omission of the fact that he was twice president of the United States.

In our last week's issue we committed the error of printing what we thought were the wages of the teachers. The amounts named were suggestive, and not fixed, by the board. We are glad to say the teachers are employed at a better salary.

A half dozen progressive, thorough going, active, public spirited men, can do more in a community towards building it up and bringing progress and advancement than a hundred drones who know nothing beyond the hunt after the dollar for their own aggrandisement.

In the Selma-Shelby ball games at Selma last Wednesday and Thursday the scores were as follows: First game, 9 to 11 in favor of Selma; second game, 14 to 15 in favor of Shelby. The Shelby boys complain bitterly of the shabby treatment received at the hands of the Selma boys.

In order to introduce Chamberlain's Cough Remedy here we sold several dozen bottles on strict guarantee and have found every bottle did good service. We have used it ourselves and think it superior to any other. W. I. Mowrey, Jarvisville, W. Va. For sale by Parker & Armstrong.

There is a great deal of talk going on now about values and the measure of values, and the most of it is nothing but talk. Did you ever think how little people know about value? Why, it's the easiest thing in the world to pass a counterfeit coin. Very few people know a good steak when they see it. Not one person in a thousand can tell a real diamond from paste.

When moving into our present home I found a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm left by a former tenant. On the label I found the statement that it was good for cuts and burns. I can testify to the truth of this. Nothing in all my experience has found its equal for treating blisters or burns. F. E. Barrett, manager Le Sueur Sentinel, Le Sueur, Minn. Pain Balm is also a sure cure for rheumatism. For sale by Parker & Armstrong.

Door-keeper Frazer says that nine years ago this season the birth rate in Talladega must have lead everything before or since; that no less than 750 boys and girls went to Chautauqua this year who were "just nine years old, yes," according to themselves and often their own parents. There is a vein of sarcastic truth in the remark, though it seems strange that persons who wouldn't lie for any consideration would be tempted to do so for a free show. After all, if Mr. Frazer is not mistaken, these people simply spoke falsely for a quarter. Seems strange, doesn't it?.—Talladega News-Reporter.

My boy was taken with a disease resembling bloody flux. The first thing I thought of was Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. Two doses of it settled the matter and cured him sound and well. I heartily reccommend this remedy to all persons suffering from a like complaint. I will answer any inquiries regarding it when stamp is inclosed. I refer to any county official as to my reliability. Wm. Roach, J. P., Primroy, Campbell Co., Tenn. For sale by Parker & Armstrong.

Notice.

I will be at the court house on Monday and Tuesday, the 19th and 20th of August, 1895, for the purpose of assessing the city tax of Columbiana for the year 1895. All persons living within 2½ miles of the court house are requested to attend and list their property.

C. W. O'HARA,
Clerk and City Tax Assessor.

Market Price of Wives.

A man in Hackensack, N. J., recently purchased another man's wife for $50, the money to be paid in installments of $6 per month, the payment of the eighth month to be $8, to balance the account. The difficulty of obtaining a list containing the market price of New Jersey wives renders it hard to discover whether the Hackensack man bought a bargain or not.—Boston Herald.

Getting Even.

Kullack, the famous pianist, was once invited to dinner by a wealthy Berliner, who was the owner of a large boot manufactory and had been a shoemaker in his time. After the repast, Kullack was requested to play something, and he consented. Not long afterwards the virtuoso invited the boot manufacturer, and after dinner handed him a pair of old boots.

"What am I do to with these?" inquired the rich man. With a genial smile, Kullack replied: "Why, the other day you asked me after dinner to make a little music for you, and now I ask you to mend these boots for me. Each to his own trade."—Ex.

A Pleasant Occasion.

Music, refreshments and conversation furnished the evening's enjoyment and the moments sped by as on golden wings until the time for saying adieu.

There was no feature of the evening that eclipsed the singing of Miss Helene Oliver and her brother, Mr. Robert Oliver, whose whose sweet voices charm wherever heard.

A FRIEND.

Does a Good Business.

A quaint and decidedly original healer who does business on one of the Puget Sound islands advertises in placards and posters as follows:

"Childbirth and tumors a specialty."

"No odds asked in measles, hoopincoff, mumps or diarrear."

"P. S.—Terms: Cash invariably in advance. No cure, no pay."

"N. B.—(Take notice.) No coroner never yet sot on the remains of my customers, and eny one having me doant haf to be laying up money to buy a grav stoan. Come I, come awl."

The writer adds that this man does a good business, although you would not expect it, and his patients say that he cures disease thoroughly and quickly.— Exchange.

Deacon Easy's Opinion.

'At's tryin fer to keep it hot, it's fadin every day.
The place where sinners sizzled in the tortures o' the damned
Has kinder been made over like, and sort o' cooled and ca'med.
The pit o' burnin sulphur over which they uster shake
A feller every Sunday so's to keep 'im wide awake,
An the awful smell o' brimstone, an the imps 'at shricked 'ith glee,
They ain't one-half so terrible as what they uster be.
Some pious people say it's wrong to let the fires die;
They'd ruther keep 'em goin jest to hear the sinners fry.
"What good is heaven goin to prove," they ask "for me er you
If everybody else gits in to share the glory too?"
I'd ruther 'at the Lord 'd save us all among the blest,
Ner damn a soul, not even his who wants to damn the rest.
I'm glad the fire's dyin out, jest awful glad, an yit

A Household Treasure.

D. W. Fuller, of Canajoharie, N. Y., says that he always keeps Dr. King's New Discovery in the house and his family has always found the very best results follow its use; that he would not be without it if procurable. G. A. Dykeman Druggist, Catskill, N. Y., says that Dr. King's New Discovery is undoubtly the best Cough remedy; that he has used it in his family for eight years, and it has never failed to do all that is claimed for it. Why not try a remedy so long tried and tested. Trial bottles free at Parker & Armstrong Drug store. Regular size 50c. and $1.00.

Miss Naldo Christian, after a visit to Bessemer, for two weeks returned home Sunday with the tint of the rose and lily upon her damask cheeks.

Notwithstanding the success of the base ball game at Selma, our young men returned sorely depressed because they had to foot their hotel bill and railroad fare.

Miss Helen Oliver was indoors several days last week because of an attack of fever. We are happy to announce that she attended Sabbath school last Sunday.

After an absence of eight weeks to visit relatives at Bridges and Benton, Ala., Miss Isla Averyt returned, bringing with her Miss Bettie Traylor who will make a prolonged visit.

Through the liberality of our urbane young men a "watermelon party" was given at Mrs. P. B. Harrel's on the 5th. It was a happy gathering and time passed most pleasantly. The young ladies highly appreciated the intertainment.

Three of our gallant young men honored themselves by visiting three amiable and winsome young ladies of Columbiana on Thursday last. Most assuredly the young gentlemen enjoyed themselves hugely, we can't say as for the young ladies.

The Sidney Lanier circle met at the residence of Mr. A. H. Averyt with the view to reorganize until Prof. Franklin's school opens. The following officers were elected: President, Mr. C. F. Witherby; vice president, Prof. C. E. Franklin; treasurer, Mr. Roy Christian; secretary, Miss. Eloise Bell.

LETTER FROM TEXAS.

DALLAS, TEX., July 27, 1895.

EDITOR CHRONICLE: Not being able to be up and can only read or write, owing to broken knee, which was caused by a runaway team July 15th, I will try and write you for the readers of The Chronicle, or the waste basket, as you think best.

This state, almost universally, has the finest corn, fruit and melon crop it has had for years, enough to supply her for two or three years, with a small average of oats and very small crop of wheat. Cotton prospects very good. We have had too much rain this summer, more than for many years, some say since 1854, hence cotton has gone too much to weed and has too many other weeds for its good.

Health good; times improving; new buildings being erected; old ones improved; towns and cities growing, more than at any time in the last four years, notwithstanding the cry of the free silver calamity howlers. I am in favor of the coinage of silver, but I want 100 cents worth of silver put into each dollar. When we make a dollar that requires the backing of the government to make it pass for a dollar let the government make it of something that does not cost fifty cents, but of paper or something that only costs one cent or less.

In the last three months I have been over a great deal of Texas, as much as twice the size of Alabama, and I find the only exception to fine crops is wheat, that is very short in northwest Texas where wheat is the staple. After cattle it is a failure, but grass is as good as before the great herds of cattle ever thinned it down, and there are but few cattle now compared to what there was some years ago, they having moved farther west into New Mexico, Arizona, etc.

I was at the new town of Ringgold, in Montague county, and met Joe Harris, a Coon Town boy, and his estimable wife, Olivia Ringgold, who is the daughter of Captain Henry Ringgold, one of the early settlers of the Kingdom, on Beeswax creek, below the old Reeves and Strain places. Joe is one of the irrepressible cattle men; has made a small fortune and raised an honorable family of children, all but one having married and left the parental roof. Notwithstanding they have passed their three score years they are hale and hearty and have not ceased their labors to still add to their worldly accumulations nor to assist others in every needful way. I also met them 500 miles southeast of their home, at the great reunion of the veterans, where we looked for some Shelby veterans but found none, but found a number from Anniston and Birmingham, the nearest to old Shelby

Three weeks ago I spent a pleasant Sabbath day and night with Uncle Jete Baker and his amiable wife, Aunt Rachel (Teague) Baker. They look very lonesome in their old age with a large place with every convenience that an experienced and scientific farmer could want, all alone; the last child, Miss Blanche, having married and left the old home, as her husband is a druggist and in business in another part of the state. They have raised an honorable family and given all a good start in life.

It would do Aunt Rachel's brother, Dr. Teague, or her old beau, Jeff Elliott, good to ride over their 200 acres of cotton, corn, oats, sorghum, etc., and their 10 acres of apples, peaches, pears, plums, apricots, mulberries and the 600 acres of pasture, with grass enough to supply 100 head of horses or cattle for the summer, fall and winter, they would wonder how it would be all gathered and housed. Uncle Jete says he will have to either move the fence out to get more room for all or cover in his field. If he can get hands and gather and house all he will have enough for a seven years' famine.

Jete Baker's father, sterling Baker, moved to Shelby about 1832, lived first year on Coosa river, near Kymulga ferry, then settled near Spring creek, northeast of Harpersville about three or four miles, and died there at a ripe old age. He raised a worthy family and no one stands higher in the estimation of the Brown county people than Uncle Jete Baker and Aunt Rachel, where they have made on the same farm twenty crops with only four partial failures, notwithstanding Brown county is considered in the edge of the drouth district.

I was at Whitewright sometime since and saw your fellow townsman, jolly Dr. Joe Parker's brother, who tells me he had a fair name for veracity about your town when he left, but if he were to write the truth about the crops and farming in his vicinity he would not be believed and you peopeople would think he had got demoralized and lost his religion.

Whitewright is in a fine farming country while Ringgold is the edge of the stock country, a very great difference between the two counties.

Yours truly,
D. M. CLOWER.

Kenneth Bazemore had the good fortune to receive a small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy when three members of his family were sick with dysentery. This one small bottle cured them all and he had some left which he gave to Geo. W. Baker, a prominent merchant of the place, Lewiston, N. C., and it cured him of the same complaint. When troubled with dysentery, diarrhœa, colic or cholera morbus, give this remedy a trial and you will be more than pleased with the result. The praise that naturally follows its introduction and use has made it very popular. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Parker & Armstrong.

The Trust After No-To-Bac.

Chicago Special.—Reported here to-day that a large sum of money had been offered for the famous tobacco habit cure called No-To-Bac, by a syndicate who want to take it off the market. Inquiry at the general offices revealed the fact that No-To-Bac was not for sale to the trust at any price. No-To-Bac's success is marvelous. Almost every Druggist in America sells No-To-Bac under guarantee to cure tobacco habit or refund money.

Andy Lucas and Aunt Nancy Newton—They Tell the News From Over In the Hill Country and Down on Panther Creek—A Hard Times Wedding.

COPYRIGHT 1895.

Accordin to what I have heard from Andy Lucas they had a reglar hard times weddin over in the hill country one day last week. Andy he had went over there, you understand, in the hopes of bringin on a horse swap between him and Sam Nettles, and on his return back home he tarried around by my house long enough to give out the news to me.

They Mix Clothes Now.

"I rode by here, Rufe, in orderment to give in the latest news from over in the hill country," says Andy when I met him at the horse rack," which is to say that Joe Pete Willingham and Miss Pinkey Travis are now hangin their clothes on the same peg, you understand. But at the same time, Rufe, if that want a hard times weddin then such a thing never has come to pass in all our skirt of the woods. I don't mean by that Joe Pete and Miss Pinkey didn't have the necessary pocket waddin to buy some weddin garments and take out the documents and pay the preacher. But seems like everything piled up the wrong way and run dead acrost the grain from start to finish. I reckon no doubts accordin to your doctrines Providence had a hand in workin up the love scrape between Joe Pete and Miss Pinkey, but henceforwards after that it looks as if Providence turned the job over to the world, the flesh and the devil, and the weddin match come blame nigh bein busted up. They did git there finally at last, but they got there like the Dutchman got to heaven—by the hair of the head and the skin of the teeth.

"For years and years it has been as plain as a painted mile post to most everybody in the hill country that Joe Pete and Miss Pinkey was sweethearts, you understand, and lovin harder than a mule could kick backwards down hill with both feet. Anybody could shet one eye and see the lay of the land to that extent—anybody exceptin the girl's dady, old man Gus Travis. It was some three or four months ago when the old man first come to the conclusion that there was somethin dead up the creek, as it were, and then he put right in and tried his level blamdest to bust up the plans of Providence and stop the reglar run of the human machinery. Up to that time Joe Pete and Miss Pinkey had been courtin and carryin on and gallavantin around to beat six bits. But old man Gus got his back way up on his shoulders, you understand, and laid down the law without any Bible words to speak of. He wouldn't let Miss Pinkey leave home only when he could go with her, and he sent a letter to Joe Pete tellin him if he ever put his foot on the Travis place the next thing in order would be at least one second class funeral in the settlement.

"Mind you now, Rufe, old man Gus didn't have nothin in particlar to say agin the general standin of Joe Pete. He couldn't rake and scrape the earth and find anything bad that would stack up agin that boy. You know and I know and everybody knows that Joe Pete Willingham is perfectly all right. He is sober and honest, and a powerful clost, steady worker, and there jest simply aint no bugs on him, you understand. But he wanted Miss Pinkey for a wife, and right there is where the harness rubbed old man Gus. The old man lowed all the time that Joe Pete was good enough in his place, but he maintained at the same time that no livin man under the sun could go and git married to his daughter Pinkey. He made out like she was too smart and too pritty and too good to marry any man on the green earth.

"You know old man Gus wears a No. 10 shoe and a No. 7 hat and measures 48 inches in the girt, and it is the most strangest thing in the world to me to see a man built on such broad plans standin on such a narrow puncheon. But there he was and there he stood till the general risin tides of human nature swept him off. By-and-by he come to find out that his daughter Pinkey was also plain human flesh and blood, and no tremendius big sights better than any other bunch of ribbins and calico. He likewise also come to find out what everybody ought to know before now it seems to me—that whensomever a young man and a young woman, both in good health and medium well grown, set their heads together and take up a notion to git married along about this time of year, they are more than probable to git married. You mought as well to go on back home and send for the preacher, and grin and bear it as best you can."

The Hard Times Wedding.

"From all I could hear, comin and agwine, old man Gus, kept everything runnin his way till the third Saturday in July, when somehow or somehow else the machinery jumped a cog and Joe Pete and Miss Pinkey got together at a big picnic they had over at the old Strickland mill. They didn't have no time for foolin, and it looks as if they didn't fool off no time. They come right down to business and rock bottom and laid their plans to run away and git married. Last Thursday was the day they had sot for bringin things to pass, you understand, and they come to pass. Nevertheless and notwithstandin, Rufe, they had hard times and a heap of 'em before they got the knot tied for good and all.

"Now in them days it also come to pass that a young preacher by the name of Parson Wallace was carryin on a big Methodist meetin over at New Salem church, and Joe Pete soon cut the cards so as to stand in monstrous thick with the young preacher. Joe Pete is a Methodist, you understand, which at the same time he aint got no religion to hurt, but he made that count for somethin. And when at last he laid down his trials and troubles and tribulations in regards to Miss Pinkey before the preacher, Parson Wallace he was with him right or wrong. He told Joe Pete to go ahead and take out the necessary weddin documents and steal the girl, and then he would tend to the rest and close up the gaps if it busted the general government and bruke on another war.

"Accordin to the way they had things fixed up Miss Pinkey was to go on a visit over to see the Cross girls Tuesday mornin, whilst Joe Pete and the preacher went to meetin as usual. Miss Pinkey and one of the Cross girls would take a buggy ride in the evenin, whilst Joe Pete and the preacher followed suit, with everything headed for the railroad station. That looked perfectly all right, you understand, but it didn't work out right. Old man Gus drove over to the Cross place tolerable soon after dinner to take Miss Pinkey home, and when they told him that she had went out ridin with one of the girls he took the trail and put out after her.

"On the way over to the station Joe Pete was drivin so fast and furious like and reckless till he run into a tree and broke the buggy down. Then he had to do about and rustle up another horse and two saddles so him and the preacher could ride. In the main time, you understand, Miss Pinkey and the Cross girl had got to the station and waited and waited for the other pair. Presently here come old man Gus drivin his gray horse in a dead run and makin the air blue as he went. Miss Pinkey saw the gray horse comin and heard the thunder of the old man's voice, whereas the girls they lit into the buggy and pulled out for some other station. Some of the boys had caught on to the racket by this time and was hangin around the station to see the show come off. Whilst old man Gus was there cussin everything in sight and stickin fresh loads in his six shooter, you understand, the boys saw Joe Pete and the preacher come ridin up the road. But about that time Joe Pete must of saw the Travis gray horse, so him and the preacher skirted off and took a nigh cut through the woods. Nobody couldn't tell old man Gus anything about anybody, and finaliy at last he quit the trail and went on back towards home.

In the main time Joe Pete and the preacher both of them had rode their horses into a yallerjacket nest down there in the woods, which of all the snortin and cavortin you ever heard tell of I reckon they must of had it. At any rates when they come out of the woods they had on but powerful few clothes and looked like they mought of rode a thrashin machine through a haricane. But the boys stood by them all along the line, and it want so very long before they was rigged out in fresh duds and ready for the proceedins to proceed.

"Then they caught the trail onest more and went on after the girls. But the girls had lost their way, and Joe Pete and the preacher missed the trail and had to spile out two or three times and come back and start over. It was slap dark before they all finally got together over at the old man Billy Rainey's and before bed time the preacher had fixed things up so Joe Pete and Miss Pinkey could mix clothes henceforwards and forevermore as long as they live."

The News From Panther Creek.

Andrew Jim Newton went up to town one day this past week, and Aunt Nancy she went with him. On their return back to the Panther Creek settlement they drove by and stopped over at our house long enough to take out and feed. Aunt Nancy had a whole passle to say about the crops and the weather and the big meetins, and the like of that.

"Did you git the news about Mort Skinner fallin in the well over Possum Trot last week?" says the dear delightful old soul. We never had got the news, and consequentially Aunt Nancy went on to say:

"Man sir, we did have the most outdoinest confusionment down there you ever heard tell of perhaps. The big meetin was goin on at Bark Log, you recollect, and Mort he come up drunk and powerful bad behind on water. After the last sermont he went out foolin and fumblin around the well, and bless gracious the next thing anybody knowed he had fell head foremost into it. They couldn't tell for certain whether he was dead or alive, and I didn't stay to see. You know I had to hurry on home and stir round some, but I told the men folks they better git a move on and have Mort out quick as they could for fear he mought spile the water."

RUFUS SANDERS.

A WEEK or ten days is considered sufficient notice for dinner invitations.

GUESTS at a dinner always go in previous to the daughters of the host or hostess.

NO ATTEMPT at music or amusement of any kind is made in the interval before dinner.

A GENTLEMAN always offers his right arm to the lady whom he takes in to dinner and places her at his right hand at table.

WHEN there are more gentlemen than ladies present at a dinner party those gentlemen for whom there are no ladies follow the hostess to the dining-room.

IT is not now the custom, as formerly, for brides during the first months of their marriage to take precedence of other ladies at a dinner party, unless their rank or position entitles them to do so.

WHEN a dinner party is given by an unmarried or widow lady the gentleman second in social position should be asked by the hostess to lead the way to the dining-room, taking in the lady to whom precedence is due.

SCHOOL AND CHURCH.

—The old Brandywine Baptist church at Chadd's Ford, Pa., has just celebrated its one hundred and eightieth anniversary. Geo. Whitefield preached there in 1770.

—The Baptist year book shows the largest number of baptisms in any of the states during last year was in Texas, 24,501 being reported. Virginia comes next, with 16,000.

—The Greek Catholic (Uniates) church in the United States is larger than might be supposed, having fourteen organizations and 10,850 members. They own thirteen churches, the value of which is $63,300.

—Fong Foo Fing, a Chinaman of San Francisco, is an enthusiastic and efficient member of the Salvation Army. It is rumored that he will soon be sent to China to organize and lead an evangelistic movement of the army in that country.

—During recent revival services at Fultonville, N. Y., a saloonkeeper was converted and emptied his entire stock of liquors in the gutter. In the evening a huge bonfire was made of the barrels and fixtures, the evangelist preaching to a great crowd assembled from the top of an empty whisky barrel.

—At the university in Christiania, Sweden, all departments of study are thrown open equally to both sexes; and as public officials of the state women are given a fair chance, many having been appointed postmistresses. The only career absolutely closed to women in Christiania is the legal career.

—The Methodist church in Colorado voted recently to admit women as lay members of the general conference in future. There was a long and animated discussion over the proposal, but when it came to a vote the balloting was sixty in favor of admitting women and none against, but fifteen members refrained from voting.

—The last commencement at West Point military academy was attended by five thousand spectators. On the platform were generals who had fought in the Union and confederate armies. They were present to see their sons receive diplomas. Gen. Rugglee gave the address and delivered the certificates to the graduating class.

—Bishop Turner of Georgia, of the colored Methodist church, has returned from Liberia and other parts of Africa, where he goes regularly in the interests of his church. He reports that the 227 colored colonists who went from the south last spring to Liberia are doing well and are contented. He thinks more of the colored people in south should go to Africa.

Rev. Dr. Rufus L. Perry, who died recently at Brooklyn, was born in slavery in Nashville. He escaped to Canada at the age of eighteen, and there gained the rudiments of an education. Later he entered college at Kalamazoo, and after graduation studied for the Baptist ministry. He was one of the most learned preachers of his race, being a fine Hebrew, Latin and Greek scholar.

PRISONERS OF WAR.

A Century Ago These Unfortunates Were Brutally Treated.

Little more than a century ago prisoners of war were treated with systematic brutality. That gave John Howard his first task. Providence made him a sufferer in his own person, and thus pointed out the special field in which his philanthropic impulses were to find employment. Howard's pity was roused by the tales of wretchedness he heard from Lisbon after the great earthquake. He took passage on the Hanover brig, with the intention simply of helping those unfortunates. But the Hanover was captured by a privateer, which carried its prizes into Brest. Forty hours the crew, with Howard, lay in the bare and stifling hold. A biscuit each was thrown to them before the hatches were closed, but no drop of water did they receive. On arrival at Brest no one heeded their cries. They were thrust into a dungeon underground, damp and filthy beyond description, and "several hours" passed before the goalers brought food or drink. Opening the door then, they actually "pitched" a leg of mutton among the throng, to be scrambled for, and torn to pieces with the teeth.

Six weeks Howard remained in this fearful place with the sailors—men of peace, be it observed, following their lawful business, but in time of war. Relieved then on parole, he applied himself to ransom his fellow-sufferers, and afterward traveled to other forts and stations where Englishmen were confined. It seems impossible that any of them could have been more horrible than Brest, but Howard found such; at Dinan, for example, where thirty-six poor wretches were buried in one day. Returning home, he investigated the English arrangements for prisoners of war, and found them not less horrible. It is well to recollect that when Howard appealed to the royal commissioners for the sick and wounded, sending in a detailed report, without a moment's delay orders were issued to correct the abuse. Moreover, the commissioners transmitted his statement to France, and the French government was not less prompt in acting upon it. But for how many generations had that awful state of things continued!—London Standard.

A Shorthand Joke.

Lawley (expert shorthand reporter)—I say, James, the boy from the newspaper office has called for the report of that lecture. Is it finished?

James (a novice)—All but a short sentence in the middle of it, and I can't for the life of me make out from my notes what it is.

James acts on the suggestion, and the lecture is sent for publication with the doctored part reading: "Friends, I will detain you but a few moments onger. (Great applause)."—Tit-Bits.

The Defeat of Bony-Part.

Slowly the crowd melted, the purple-faced man blew the last note out of his bass tuba and silence reigned.

It is bound to rain when the circus is in town.

The fat woman haughtily shook her head.

"If you loved me as you say you do," she answered, in hard, cold accents," "you would go down on your knees to me."

The ossified man groaned aloud. It was twenty-three years since he had bent a joint.—N. Y. Recorder.

HOME HINTS AND HELPS.

—Strawberry Sirup: Take fresh strawberries and inclose in a coarse bag. Press out the juice and to each quart add one pint of water and six pounds white sugar. Dissolve by raising to the boiling point and strain. Bottle and cork while hot, then keep in a cool place.—Western Rural.

—Fish Salad: It is generally imagined that salmon is the only fish, except shell fish, that is good in salad. This is a great mistake, for nearly all kinds of cold fish can be used in this way, and cold turbot or cod is especially good. Take the fish, free from all skin and bone, and cut it into square pieces; arrange a salid prettily in a dish with the fish on the top, and over it pour a rich mayonnaise, or salad dressing. Garnish with slices of tomatoes, hard-boiled egg, and small pieces of pickled gherkins. A salid of this kind is very good, especially in the summer.—Leed's Mercury.

—Boiled Salad Dressing: Take the same quantity of mustard, sugar and salt as for mayonnaise. Melt a tablespoonful of butter and add to these ingredients; add two eggs well beaten, half a cup, or four ounces, of vinegar and half a pint of milk. Pour all into a graniteware double boiler, or a large bowl set in a pot of boiling water, and stir until it thickens like boiled custard. Remove as soon as it grows thick or it will curdle. If put in a wide-mouthed bottle or self-sealing jar, and kept covered, this dressing will keep for a fortnight or more.—Ladies' Home Journal.

—Potato Croquettes: Potato croquettes make a pretty dish to serve with cold meats of any sort. They are made from finely-mashed potatoes whipped with the yolks of eggs until very light, then seasoned with pepper, salt, a little onion juice, some finely-chopped parsley, and further moistened with a little cream. When thoroughly mixed, heat in a double boiler, and when cool enough to handle form into croquettes, dip in egg yolk and cracker crumbs, and drop into boiling lard. When brown, remove with a skimmer, place for a moment on a sheet of brown paper, and then remove in a hot platter; garnish with parsley and serve.—Farm, Field and Fireside.

—Mock Duck: Three good-sized veal cutlets trimmed into neat shape. Have ready a stuffing made of large cupful of bread crumbs and two tablespoonfuls of chopped pork, one small onion chopped fine, a tablespooful of butter, salt and pepper. Roll and tie up the cutlets, after having spread them with the stuffing. Put them into a baking pan with cold water to cover them; bake about three-quarters of an hour, covered closely. When nearly done take half a cup of gravy, half a cup of water, a tablespoonful of butter and let them come to a boil. Put the steaks on a hot dish, removing the thread carefully so as not to injure the shape of the roll. Pour on the gravy and cover them, adding a teaspoonful of catchup, a squeeze of lemon, a little salt and pepper, the last thing before taking up.—Chicago Record.

YOU SHOULDN'T DO IT.

Some Don'ts Laid Down by Those Who Set the Fashion.

You shouldn't carry a flower, lace or chiffon-trimmed parasol in town except for carriage use.

You shouldn't allow your dressmaker to stiffen your summer gowns except with the very lightest and most pliable material.

You shouldn't wear high stock collars with bows, which make you look as if your head was tied on—they are passee.

You shouldn't have your gown measure more than seven yards around the hem; five and a half if you are small, four and a half if you are sensible and small.

The girls can tell their brothers and beaux that they shouldn't wear cuff-buttons if they wish to be "English, you know." The latest fad is to fasten the cuffs with a bow of narrow black satin ribbon, leaving the ends about four inches long.

You shouldn't wear a cloth cap in the summer either for cycling, golf or tennis. It collects the dust and is very warm; straw or duck is more up-to-date and comfortable. You shouldn't ignore fashion altogether.

You needn't be in the fashion if you do not want to and happen to be an exceptionally pretty woman.

You shouldn't be extreme.

You shouldn't wear a floral collar if your complexion is faded or inclined to yellowness.

You shouldn't wear silk or velvet for travelling; washable materials or brillantine are the best.—Philadelphia Times.

Fashion Notes.

A handsome dress of soft satin has the wide, flaring skirt made with many gores. Each seam has a band of fancy galloon or passementerie extending the full length from braid to belt. The waist has an Eton jacket-shaped upper portion, made of passementerie. This curves away from the collar to a point just below the arm-holes. From this soft crape is puffed, forming a full front, which is in turn held in place by a passementerie corselet. The sleeves are of satin and crape, with points of passementerie set in at the shoulders and falling over the sleeve-tops. Skirts are showing more trimming with every new importation. One skirt has two fluted ruffles arranged in deep scallops, the points of the scallops finished with rosette bows. Another skirt has a ten-inch, flat, side-plaited ruffle. Another a four-inch band of Grecian embroidery at the hem. Another has wide bands of galloon just above the hem. And yet another a four-inch finish of embroidery just above the braid.—N. Y. Ledger.

Household Economy.

A woman noted for the good food provided for her family at a comparatively small cost says: "I found the outlay for meats the largest weekly item, and so I paid special attention to all those dishes made from meats that do not require the most expensive cuts. I buy oysters by the bushel, and open them myself; they will keep a long time in cool weather if you learn how to lay them on the cellar-bottom. I can my own fruits and such vegetables as corn and tomatoes."—N. Y. Post.

THOSE BULL FIGHTS

Which are to Take Place at the Mexican Village.

THERE WILL BE NO LETTING OF BLOOD

President Collier, of the Exposition Company, Asks Lief to Print, and Intimates That the Timid Need Not Be Alarmed.

ATLANTA, Aug 10.—The campaign of talk which William Hosea Ballou, vice president of the American Humane Society, has inaugurated against the bull fights which are to be a feature of the Exposition this fall, has called forth a statement from President Collier of the Exposition Company.

Yesterday he gave out the following statement: "There seems to be a great deal of unnecessary anxiety about the bull fight, and I think I can relieve a great many good people by simply stating the facts.

"In the first place, the bull fight is not an exhibit, but a part of the Midway. It is not the suggestions of the Exposition management, but originated with concessionaries for the Mexican Village. The performances will take place in an inclosure, which no one can enter without the payment of an admission fee, and it will only be seen by those who care to pay for the privilege.

"I have recently received a number of letters from persons exercised over this subject and in almost every instant the correspondent labored under the impression that the bulls were to be killed and the horses were to be disemboweled. I wish to assure the public that nothing of the kind will be tolerated and that not a drop of blood will be shed. Among other letters recently received is one from Mr. King, president of the Georgia Humane society, who had previously written protesting against what he conceived to be an outrage. I wrote to him stating the facts as here given and received from him a second letter in which he said he was satisfied that under this arrangement cruelty to animals would be prevented although he thought it was unwise policy to allow even a representation of a bull fight. To this objection the answer, that it is a historic performance, has already been given.

"I wish to say further that such a representation of a bull fight is not an experiment. The thing has been done before, and is now being done very successfully in Mexico. It was done in Paris during the last exposition there and gentlemen in this and other cities are witnesses of the fact that the performance was harmless, devoid of cruelty and as legitimately a historic representation of a tragedy as any performance on the American stage."

NEW COLONY NEAR AUGUSTA.

German Immigrants From Pullman to Build a Town, in Carolina.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Aug. 10.—A colony of German immigrants from Pullman, Illinois, are settling in Carolina on the Carolina Midland railroad, about forty miles from Augusta.

Twelve carpenters passed through Augusta last night on their way to the settlement to build houses for the colonists who are to come.

The colonists will engage in agriculture and many of them will run truck farms. Some purchased farms on the installment plan, while others have bought large plantations for cash. As soon as the houses are habitable, thirty families will come immediately.

Those who went to prepare homes are W. H. Tate, D. W. Tate, W. A. Mackhart, F. J. Miller, John W. Britton, W. S. Parker, Thomas Gauyo, Earl Lawrence, Ed McCrady, J. W. Ruberg, and two others.

Colonel Mike Brown, president of the Carolina Midland railroad, sold land to settlers cheap and on easy terms to encourage immigration.

A BOILER BURSTS.

One Man is Killed and Three Others are Injured.

RALEIGH, N. C., Aug. 10.—By the explosion of a boiler at Dick Parham's saw mill near Allensville, Person county, George Parham, about 18 years old, was killed. His skull was crushed and both legs were broken. Three other persons were injured. William R. Parham, head fractured, seriously hurt. John Parham, seriously injured, and one man scalded, not seriously. The water in the boiler was allowed to get too low. The firemen attempted to fill it, causing a terrific explosion, blowing boiler, engine and shed one hundred yards.

Blast Furnace Closed Down.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Aug. 10.—The Monongahela blast furnace at McKeesport, shut down last night by reason of a strike of twenty-four metal carriers. The men demanded an advance of twenty cents and two per cent. in wages per day. Five hundred men are idle at the plant. Repairs on the furnace were started today and work cannot resume for several days.

Barn and Contents Burned.

HUNTSVILLE, Ala., Aug. 10.—Near Gurley, Ala., yesterday, John Well lost his barn, with about 300 bushels of corn, a large amount of hay and all his farming implements, by fire. The fire is supposed to have originated from the smoking of his pipe by a negro man, as it was shown that he was the last person about the premises before the fire was discovered. The loss is estimated at between $1,500 and $2,000, with an insurance of $1,000. No live stock was lost.

Wages Increased.

IRON MOUNTAIN, Mich., Aug. 10.—The Pan Iron Mining Company, operating the east Vulcan, west Vulcan and Currie mines at Norway, have announced an increase of wages of ten to twenty-five per cent. to take effect immediately. The Oregon company have also raised wages in the same ratio.

RAILROAD TO BE SOLD.

MARIETTA, Ga., Aug. 10.—The Marietta and North Georgia road will be sold to the highest bidder today at noon, sale taking place at the passenger station here. The road is to be put on the block under foreclosure proceedings, in which the complainants are the Central Trust Company of New York and the Boston Safe Deposit and Trust Co. Messrs Robert J. Lowery and H. H. Taylor are special commissioners to conduct the sale.

In the conditions of sale it is provided that no bid will be received except for a sum greater than $942,000, the aggregate amounts of the separate bids for the five divisions of the property and a deposit of $125,000 in cash or certified check at the time of making the bid will be required from any bidder for the whole system of railway and equipment. If a bid of over $942,000 be made for the whole property sold as an entirety, it will be struck off to the purchaser, but if no bid for the whole property be made exceeding $942,000 then the several parcels shall be struck off to their respective purchasers. The balence of the purchase money not required to be paid at the time of sale may be paid in cash or otherwise, as provided in decree.

Ogdenburg, New York, Swept by a Conflagation Yesterday Morning.

OGDENBURG, N. Y., Aug. 10.—Yesterday morning fire started in the lumber piles of the Stillings, Whitney and Barnes Lumber Company in the eastern part of the town. The local fire department was inadequate to cope with the flames and at 6 o'clock the department from Prescott, Ont., arrived in response to appeals for assistance, but from ten to twelve million feet of pine lumber were destroyed. It is valued at $500,000. The present wind continuing will enable the fire fighters to save buildings, which with their contents are valued at $1,000,000. The warehouse, freight and manufacturing buildings and coal piles near the Central Vermont depot are also believed to be safe. Dwellings on Washington street caught on fire but hard work on the part of the firemen has saved them thus far.

This is the largest fire that has ever visited Ogdenburg. The loss is partially covered by insurance.

THE ALBAMA MINERS.

There are Now Over 500 of Them Out On a Strike.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Aug. 10. — One hundred and fifty white and colored ore miners working at Ruffner's mines, owned by the Sloss Iron and steel company, went out on a strike yesterday for higher wages. The men asked for an increase of 5 cents per car, which the company refused. The strike followed. The committeemen presenting the demands were discharged from the company's employ.

The situation at Brookside, Cardiff and Brazeal remains unchanged. Only a few men are at work, and they are said to be loading the coal dug out before the strike began. No trouble is anticipated. It was rumored about Brookside last night that Supt. Culverhouse would confer with a committee of the miners, but nothing came out of the conference, if it was held.

About 550 miners are now on a strike in this district.

ORDERED TO BE SOLD.

The Port Royal and Western Carolina Railroad to Be Closed Out.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Aug. 10.—In the suit of Charles Phinizy, Alfred Balser, et. al., against the Port Royal and Western Carolina Railroad, the Trust Company, et al., United States Circuit Judge Simonton yesterday filed a decree ordering the sale of the road by Special Master Theodore G. Barker at Greenwood, S. C., Oct. 17, proximo.

This road is now in the hands of John B. Cleveland, Spartanburg, S. C., receiver, and includes the Augusta and Knoxville road from Augusta to Greenwood, S. C., the Savannah Valley from McCormick, S. C., to Anderson, the Greenwood and Spartanburg from Greenwood to Spartanburg, and the Greenville and Laurens between Greenville and Laurens. The system includes about 208 miles.

ALLEGED TRAIN-WRECKER.

Ed Martin, Well Connected Young Man, Arrested at Charleston, Tenn.

CHARLESTON, Tenn., Aug. 10.—Ed Martin, about 21 years of age, was arrested yesterday for attempting to wreck the north-bound vestibule train two miles south of here a few days ago. On the day in question the track walker for this section caught Martin putting some bolts and rocks on the outside rail of a curve just about train time. He was tried before 'Squire H. H. Knox and bound over to circuit court.

Young Martin was reared near here and is well connected. But the evidence is very strong against him, and he will have a hard pull to keep out of the penitentiary.

GALLANT DRUMMER BOY.

Uncle Sam Awards a Medal for Gallantry on Mission Ridge.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—A medal of honor has been awarded to John S. Kountz, drummer of Company C, Thirty-seventh Ohio volunteers, for most distinguished gallantry in action at the battle of Mission Ridge, Tennessee, Nov. 25, 1863. A boy of 18 years, he dropped his drum, seized a musket and joined the charge, inspiring his comrades by his heroic conduct.

Prominent Lawyer Dead.

RUSSELVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 10.—C. H. Lindsey, a prominent lawyer of Mobile, died suddenly at Hayslope yesterday, of acute dyspepsia. He had been in bad health for several years and had come here hoping to be benefited. The remains were sent to his home this afternoon.

IMPORTANT DECISION

OVER 40,000 ACRES OPEN FOR ENTRY.

A Stir Created Among the Settlers—The Decision Includes All the Naval Reserve Lands Except the Pensacola Navy Yards.

GAINESVILLE, Fla., Aug. 10.—Register Barco and Receiver Wainwright, of the United States Land office, yesterday, rendered a very important decision in case of the naval reserve lands which have been the subject of much investigation of late. The order throws open for entry 44,260 acres of lands situated in Alachua, Levy, LaFayette, St. Johns, Suwanee and Santa Rosa counties.

A few months since all of the naval reserve lands in the state were transferred to the department of the interior for homestead entry and when the report reached this state there was a rush of settlers to procure lands. A large number of people staked off tracts of 160 acres and erected rude huts upon the same. This was done in order to secure the first privilege of homesteading in case the lands were declared open to entry. For some reason or other the secretrry of the interior did not declare the land open and nothing more was heard of the matter until a dispatch appeared in the Times-Union to the effect that a discovery had been made in the office of the assistant secretary of the interior, that the land alluded to had been ceded to the state under the Swamp Act of 1850.

This report caused considerable consternation among the squatters mentioned above as it deprived them of the right to the land. The register and receiver here at once instituted an investigation which has resulted in the above order.

The investigation showed that the land had not been selected under the swamp land act. Some of the land affected is the very finest land and is especially adapted to farming purposes.

The decision includes all of the naval reserve land in the state with the exception of the Pensacola navy yards.

KILLED IN MISSISSIPPI.

Hon. J. D. Marshall Kills R. T. Dinkins at Brandon.

JACKSON, Miss., Aug. 10.—Hon. J. Dabney Marshall, senator-elect from Warren and Hinds counties, shot and killed R. T. Dinkins, of Jackson, at Brandon, yesterday morning. Marshall and three friends, S. H. Coleman, R. P. Fox, and W. P. Valtens, kinsman and partners of Marshall, drove to Brandon in a hack and met Dinkins at the depot as he turned a corner of the building, opening fire on him at once and killing him almost instantly, shooting him fifteen times. Dinkins was unarmed but grappled Marshall's pistol from him as he fired the first shot. The shooting was caused by a sensational report circulated by Dinkins, against Marshall, which was damaging, and there was a clamor that Marshall be taken off the ticket for state senator. Marshall denounced the report as a lie but Dinkins stuck to it and everybody looked for a killing sooner or later. Marshall is a little fellow, who weighs about seventy-five pounds; is highly educated, a lawyer and man of letters, whose family is one of the most prominent in the state and has a host of friends at home and elsewhere. He has served a term in the legislature and was the nominee for floater senator for Warren and Hinds. Dinkins family is equally as good. He is a brother of W. L. Dinkins, of Madison, and Cleveland's United States marshal during his first term, and is closely related to many men in the state, being a cousin to Bishop Charles B. Galloway of this city. Marshall and his companions are under arrest at Brandon. The affair is deeply regretted here where both men are well known and highly respected. The body of Dinkins was brought to Jackson today.

TERRIBLE ACCIDENT.

A Runaway Horse Jumps a 30 Foot Embankment and Kills Three Ladies.

DECATUR, Ind., Aug. 10.—A fatal runaway occurred near here last evening. A party of ladies and children were returning from a picnic, the horse became unmanageable and jumped from a 30-foot embankment. Mrs. J. C. Patterson, Mrs. Erwin and Mrs. Noah Mangold, all prominent women of this city, were fatally injured, and Mrs. Duncan and two small children were seriously hurt.

SKIPPED WITH THE FUNDS,

While the Local Sports Discovered There Was no Fight.

TOLEDO, Ohio, Aug. 10.—A couple of hundred local sports drove to the Michigan state line early yesterday to witness a proposed finish fight between "Kid" Murphy, of Philadelphia, and Dan Bailey, of Sioux Falls, S. D., for a purse of $300. The principals were on the scene, but the stakeholders disappeared with the money. There was no fight.

Shot Four Times.

MARSHALL, Texas, Aug. 10.—Charles O. Polk, married, was shot four times and killed last night by Hugh Burford who has declined to make any statement. Polk was at one time foreman of the Texas & Pacific Railway freight shops. Burford is about twenty years of age and his father was superintendent of motive power and rolling stock of the same road when he died.

Two Steamers Collide.

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 10.—The steamers Britannic and Russia were in collision in the Detroit river just below Wyandotte last evening. The Britannic was sunk and one of her firemen drowned. The Russia was badly damaged but managed to keep afloat, until she reached the Detroit dry dock.

JUSTICE JACKSON'S FUNERAL.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10. — Arrangements for official participation in the funeral of the late Associate Justice Jackson at West Meade, Nashville, Sunday afternoon, owing to the widely scattered location of the members and officers of the supreme court necessarily have to be made by telegraph, and nothing has yet been decided. Chief Justice Fuller is at his summer home, Sorrento, Maine, and the associate justices are scattered over the country from the Atlantic to the Pacific. It is not probable therefore that there will be more than two or three in attendance. All of them have been advised of the death of their associate. As yet however, no response has been received from any of them. Marshall Wright, who is at his home in Louisville, will attend the funeral.

No response has been received from any of the other justices although it is supposed that Justice White, who is in Washington, and Justice Brown, who is in Jamestown, R. I., will also attend. There will be nothing official in the arrangements, it being the practice of the court not to invest the funeral of a deceased member who dies during recess with any official formality.

President Cleveland telegraphs sympathies to Mrs. Jackson.

HELP EXTENDED,

The Scourge Stricken, Helpless, Returning Negro Colonists.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—Surgeon General Wyman of the marine hospital service, by authority of the secretary of the treasury yesterday directed the collector of customs at Eagle Pass, Texas, to furnish the returning negro colonists from Mexico who are stranded at that point, four hundred cots and pillows and sufficient camp equippage to enable them to maintain life with some degree of comfort until the outbreak of small-pox with which they are suffering has exhausted itself. There are 115 cases among the nearly four hundred members of the party but so far no deaths have been reported. The marine hospital service also supplies the camp with disenfecting material and medicines. Dr. Percy Mehoons of New Orleans and Past Assistant Surgeon J. M. Rosenau of Washington have been detailed to take charge of the medical arrangements at the camp. The state health authorities of Texas applied to the service for this aid.

THE MAYOR ACTS,

At Last, and the Miners are Going Back to Work at Spring Valley.

PRINCETON, Ills., Aug. 10.—Mayor Delmargo, of Spring Valley, has just announced that he will increase the police even over its present proportions and will make every effort he can to see that the riots do not break out afresh. All day yesterday the roads between Spring Valley and Seatonville were travelled by teams hauling back the household goods that were taken away during the two days following the murderous riots of Sunday. State's Attorney W. A. Johnson is in Spring Valley but as yet nothing has been decided upon in regard to making any arrests of the law breakers. It is doubtful if any arrests will be made and in this case, the citizens will be as restless as ever. Yesterday afternoon 450 men are at work in No. 3 shaft, part of whom are colored people. In No 2, about 700 are at work. Shafts Nos. 1 and 4 will not bo started up for a few days.

COMMITTED SUICIDE,

By Getting on His Knees and Putting His Head on the Track.

ZANESVILLE, O., Aug 10.—Jacob Sigax, a retired banker, who has been suffering from an illness for a long time and was so weak he could hardly walk, tottered to the depot of the Cincinnati and Muskingum railway yesterday morning. Horrified spectators saw him get down on his knees beside the track before the train started and placed his head on the rail, and before any one could reach him the wheels had passed over his head, crushing it and severing it from the body. Sigax was 76 years old, and a native of Switzerland.

MRS. TALMAGE'S WILL.

She Bequeaths $166,000 to Rev. Dr. Talmage, Her Husband.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—The Rev. T. Dewitt Talmage filed for probate yesterday, with the Surrogate, of Kings county, the will of his late wife, Susie. The document bore the date of September 30, 1876.

The will gives the estate of the testatrix absolutely to her husband, who is made sole executor of the will without bond. A schedule annexed estimate the value of the estate to be $30,000 in real property and $136,000 in personaltiy a total of $166,000.

TWENTY INJURED,

As the Result of a Misplaced Switch in Indianapolis.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Aug. 10.—Nearly twenty people were injured in a street car accident near Crown Hill cemetery yesterday. The most seriously injured are residents of this city. The wreck was the result of a misplaced switch, a heavy motor plunging into a trailer loaded with people returning from the Old Settlers Reunion. The injured will probably recover.

Found Hanging to a Fruit Tree.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Aug. 10.—James Glifford, a prominent citizen of Granger county, Tenn., living near the town of Russellville, was found dead yesterday hanging to a tree in his orchard. Glifford was a well to do farmer and a consistent church member and had a devoted wife and family. No cause is known why he should commit suicide.

A DECIDED STAND

Against Liquor is Taken by Catholic Total Abstinence Union.

EVEN ST. VINCENT'S BEER CONDEMNED,

As "The Humiliating Scandal" and Strong Resolutions are Adopted Next Meeting to be Held in St. Louis, August, 1896.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—The third day's meeting of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union convention, began at 9:30 o'clock yesterday morning. Rev. Jas. M. Cleary, president of the union, presided. Rev. Alexander P. Doyle read letters and telegrams from all over the country expressing greeting and bidding the convention God-speed. Among the telegrams read was one from 520 Keely gold cure graduates who are at present in convention at Plainfield, N. J. When the communications had been read, the Rev. P. O'Brien, chairman of the committee on resolutions, mounted the platform. It then developed that there was a majority and minority report. Father O'Brien read the majority report which was a bitter attack on the liquor sellers and asked those engaged in it to give up the business. It also advocated the strict Sunday excise law. The resolutions also thanked the press, Archbishop Corrigan and Monsignor Satolli, but made no mention of the beer brewed by St. Vincent's Abbey, which, it was expected, the convention would condone.

Father O'Brien referred to the matter of St. Vincent's beer. "The humiliating scandal," said he, "is now before Monsignor Satolli and we thought it better not to do anything in this convention to influence the judicial decision."

Father Zurcher, in reply said the people of America would respect them all the more if they dealt with the question of St. Vincent's beer and took a bold stand in the matter.

Father Walters, of Ohio, said the matter should be brought fair and square before the convention.

Delegates Magee, of Minnesota, colored was the next speaker. He was received with cheers and was escorted to the platform.

"The darkey," said he "has been smoked out of the woodpile. It seems to me that this disgrace has been tolerated too long. Can this convention compromise this wrong? It cannot, and on the occasion of its silver jubilee it must speak out against St. Vincent's beer."

The majority report was finally put and adopted after much discussion. It was as follows:

Whereas, The Catholic church in the United States is doing everything in its power to lessen the evils of intemperance, and

Whereas, She has through her bishops in the plenary council assembled, approved and heartily commended the laudible practice of total abstinence and

Whereas, To avoid all cavilling from any source the Holy Father commended the prelates of the United States for their action on the question of temperance, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of America in its twenty-fifth geneneral convention assembled in New York, reiterates its loyal obedience to the church and renews its allegiance to the holy cause of total abstinence.

Resolved, That in accordance with the advice of the third plenary council of Baltimore, we, ourselves, totally abstain from the use of intoxicating drink in order that we may thereby with good grace, ask co-religionists to follow our example.

Resolved, That we give the weight of our influence to every legitimate movement that tends to abolish the sale of intoxicants on the Lord's Day; and we urge the necessity of the closing of the saloons on Sunday and on Saturday night; we urge the closing of them at as early an hour as possible.

Resolved, That we urge everywhere by votes and influence the enactment of such laws as the "screen law," the "single entrance" law and all laws which may in any way help towards the strict enforcement of the present excise laws.

Whereas, There is one platform upon which all Americans can stand irrespective of religious belief, therefore, be it

Resolved, That we co-operate with our non-Catholic fellow citizens in every legitimate effort to restrict the evils of intemperance.

Resolved, That we are pleased to notice the absence of intoxicants at many of the banquets given by Catholics and we respectfully request Catholics societies to discountenance the use of liquor at their entertainments.

Resolved, That we respectfully request Catholic journals to aid our cause by refusing to publish liquor advertisements.

Resolved, That we urge the formation of total abstinence societies among women, girls and boys, we urge men's societies to give them every encouragement in their power.

Resolved, That we have reason to thank God and rejoice on this day of our silver jubilee. For 25 years we have labored to promote the cause of total abstinence. Encouraged by the success that has attended our efforts in the past, we will continue our labors with even greater energy in the future.

The next business was the selection of a meeting place for the next convention. Mrs. Lake proposed St. Louis, Mo., and Rev. Father Malone proposed Denver. A vote was taken and St. Louis was seleeted by a big majority. Its selection was afterward made unanimous and the date fixed was the first Wednesday in August 1896.

THE GUILTY CHINAMEN

To be Arrested and Punished for Massacreing Missionaries.

LONDON, Aug. 10.—An official telegram received here states that imperative orders have been issued from Pekin to the viceroy of Fukien, directing him to instantly dispatch troops to Kucheng to protect the remaining missionary buildings. He was also instructed to inquire into the origin of the outrages there and arrest the guilty persons as quickly as possible. The viceroy obeyed the order as soon as it was received and sent 1,500 troops to Kucheng at once.

Paid the Penalty for Murder.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Aug. 10.—Fremont Smith was hanged at San Quentin prison this morning for the brutal murders committed near Colusa, in December 1893. Smith and two companions known as Dolph and Charley were fishermen and lived in a cabin together. The murderer chopped Dolph to pieces with an axe and shot Charley. He then robbed them both and made his escape, but was caught three days later.

VERY ENCOURAGING

Is the Outlook for Fall Trade and Business in all Sections.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—Bradstreet's today says: The features of the business week are a continuance of the remarkable strength in demand for, the increase in the production of, and the advance in prices of steel and iron, practically all first class producing plants having been put into service, and not a few of the cripples.

Prices have shown no great change this week, cotton, leather and prints being noteworthy for advances, and copper for its strength after its sudden upward rush in price. Business failures as reported to Bradstreet's numbered 209 throughout the United States this week against 221 last week, 197 in the week one year ago and 474 two years ago.

At larger eastern centres the only noteworthy change is in increased confidence in a large volume of business in the fall, though as yet no material progress has been made in that direction, although improvement in sales of commercial travellers is reported from most cities covered. The strike of nearly 15,000 clothing operators at New York, appears to have been a success and nearly all are again at work.

There have been moderate changes in general trade in the southern states, the most striking being at Dallas and in general throughout Texas. Crops of cotton and corn there are large and country merchants are buying more freely. Building is quite active in Texas and has had the usual effect on the lumber and building materials of trades. At Memphis there has been a slight gain in the volume of merchandise distributed and at Nashville business is quite active with an improvement in collections, owing to the marketing of wheat. Jacksonville and Savannah merchants announce moderate gain but at most other cities only the midsummer trade is reported, though with prospects of an active fall business. Continued delay of the payment of the sugar bounties continues to act as a drag on general trade in sugar west of New Orleans. Sales at New Orleans are small and prices unsatisfactory. With the free movement of cotton crop southern merchants are confident that the general trade will respond.

The resumption of commercial activity at the west follows a line drawn from St. Louis through Chicago, St. Paul and Minneapolis, with an improving demand also shown along the Ohio river valley.

Reports of large crops of Indian corn and spring wheet continue a feature and although corn will not be beyond danger for more than a month, interior merchants at many points are beginning to discount the outlook by purchasing more freely for fall delivery. Wholesalers at Chicago and St. Louis report receipt of good orders for dress-goods, hats, caps, clothing and shoes, to a large degree the result of personal election by interior merchants.

General trade on the Pacific coast has improved within a month. One of the features is the recent importance of the foreign trade of Seattle and Tacoma. The development of our interchange of commodities with Oriental, Mexican, Central and South American countries is having a marked effect upon the cities named. San Francisco authorities wire that the wheat crop in California is admittedly below the normal and that fruits in that state are ripening faster almost than the canneries can handle them.

KNOXVILLE'S NEW SHOPS.

Three Thousand People at the Southern's New Buildings.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 10.—Three thousand people visited and inspected the new shops of the Southern Railway at Lansdale yesterday. The crowds were carried out on free excursion trains, which left the city every thirty minutes. Third Vice-president Baldwin, Superintendent of Motive Power Wade and Assistant Thomas, and Chief Engineer Hudson were among the railway officials present.

The shops cost over half a million dollars, and will give employment to 500 hands. Over 200 engines will be repaired at the Knoxville shops, while over forty per cent. of the passenger service repairing will be done here.

EXPOSITION RATES.

The Lowest Rate Adopted—Only One Cent a Mile.

CHICAGO, Aug. 10.—At yesterday's meeting of the Chicago and Ohio River Association the only interesting feature was the recommendation made Thursday by the southern lines of rates to the Atlanta Exposition. It was decided to adopt the lowest proposition, which is a cent a mile, tickets to be sold every ten days only, for the month of September only. Class A Rates were also adopted.

TROOPS FOR CUBA.

Spain to Send 33 000; 600 Will Go From Buenos Ayres.

MADRID, August 10.— Thirty-three thousand troops will go to Cuba this month and 20,000 more will go in October if they should be necessary to aid in quelling the rebellion there.

BUENOS AYRES, Aug. 10.—Six hundred Spaniards have enrolled themselves at the consulate here for service against the insurgents in Cuba.

Protect American Citizens.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—Minister Denby has been instructed by Acting Secretary Adee to secure protection for American citizens at Pan Yang, China, a place about forty miles from Foo Chow, where the American mission is reported to have been looted by the natives. No additional outrages have been reported to the state department.

Schooner Sunk in Port.

LONDON, Aug. 10.—A dispatch from Humburh states that the German schooner Johanne from Charleston for Cuxhaven, while lying at anchor, was run into by a Bremen lighter. The Johanne began to take water and sank while trying to put into port.

THROUGH ALABAMA

Interesting News That Has Occurred During the Week.

FIVE HUNDRED MINERS ON A STRIKE.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Aug. 10. — One hundred and fifty white and colored ore miners working at Ruffner's mines, owned by the Sloss Iron and steel company, went out on a strike yesterday for higher wages. The men asked for an increase of 5 cents per car, which the company refused. The strike followed. The committeemen presenting the demands were discharged from the company's employ.

The situation at Brookside, Cardiff and Brazeal remains unchanged. Only a few men are at work, and they are said to be loading the coal dug out before the strike began. No trouble is anticipated. It was rumored about Brookside last night that Supt. Culverhouse would confer with a committee of the miners, but nothing came out of the conference, if it was held.

A MINE SALTED.

Several Prominent Alabamians Caught in the Scheme—In Arrest.

SCOTTSBORO, Ala., Aug. 9.—Excitement is still high here over the Langston gold fraud. The principal stockholders here are Capt. J. R. Harris and Virgil Bouldin. George W. Hunt also put money into it. Dr. May and others who were the founders of the deal were arrested near Langston by Sheriff Robinson and brought here. Dr. May is one of the oldest doctors in north Alabama, and has always been highly respected. The second stockholders and B. F. Shook and Milo Moody. Dr. Haralson and others owned shares but sold out. It is expected they will be indicted. Many cases for the recovery of money obtained under false poetenses were entered yesterday. The whole thing is a fraud. These hills have no gold except what was brought to them. The results will be interesting. Dr. May has made bond.

ALABAMA EMBALMERS.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Aug. 8.—At a meeting of the state board of embalmers held at Blount Springs yesterday, thirty-seven applicants, were licensed to practice the art of embalming.

The embalmers and funeral directors association of Alabama was organized with the following officars: L. W. Kold, of Ozark, president; T. S. Bagby, of Oxford, vice president; J. D. Brislin, of Selma, secretary; A. W. Woodliff, of Gadsden, treasurer, and P. B. Dixon, of Mobile, representative to the National Association which meets in Atlanta, Ga., October .

The association unanimously endorsed the governor in his appointment of the board of examiners, they being men well quoilfied to fill the position on said board. After transacting routine business, the association adjourned to meet in Montgomery at the call of the president.

One Boy Kills Another.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Aug. 7.—Noah Mask, a 7 year old boy, was shot and almost instantly killed by Willie Bearden, 17 years old, at the residence of the latter's parents on Cahaba river, about ten miles from this city last afternoon. They were playing with other children in a room and Willie drawing an old gun from under a bed, put to his shoulder and playfully remarked, "Now watch me kill Dock," and fired, the entire load entering Noah's left temple, producing instant death.

Barn and Contents Burned.

HUNTSVILLE, Ala., Aug. 10.—Near Gurley, Ala., yesterday, John Well lost his barn, with about 300 bushels of corn, a large amount of hay and all his farming implements, by fire. The fire is supposed to have originated from the smoking of his pipe by a negro man, as it was shown that he was the last person about the premises before the fire was discovered. The loss is estimated at between $1,500 and $2,000, with an insurance of $1,000. No live stock was lost.

Dr. Henry M. Caldwell Dead.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Aug. 9.—Dr. Henry M. Caldwell, for many years president of the famous Elyton Land Company of this city and one of the most prominent and influential citizens of Birmingham, died last night. Several days ago he suffered a stroke of paralysis and never regained consciousness. He had been in failing health for a long time and had to resign the presidency of the company on that account.

BROWN CHEMICAL CO. BALTIMORE, MD.

THE * CHRONICLE.

C. C. DuBOSE, Editor and Proprietor.

COLUMBIANA, AUGUST 15, 1895.

THIS is certainly going to be a year of great prosperity. Perhaps even farm lands will look up in value before it is ove.

SENATOR TILLMAN, of South Carolina, has been arguing the liquor question in New York. Tillman ought to be well posted on booze, as he ran a barroom, or rather a series of them for several years.

BOSTON is not the original hub of the universe. The name is a borrowed one. More than 2,000 year ago Delphi, the Grecian city, the seat of the oracle of Apollo, was called exactly the same—the hub of the universe.

IN face of the rumors of ill-feeling and the increase of armaments among the nations of Europe, it is a hopeful sign to find the French chamber of deputies adopting a resolution asking their government to confer with that of the United States in regard to the establishment of a permanent commission of arbitration.

THE supreme court, as now constituted, contains one member from New England, Gray; one from the Pacific states, Field; four from the northwest and central north, Fuller, Harlan, Brewer and Brown; one from the middle states, Shiras, and one from the south, White. The whole south and southwest have one justice in nine. Surely we are something more than the ninth part of our country. Why, the territory represented by Brewer is part of the great Louisiana purchase and the judge is in all his ideas, methods and instincts an eastern man. Certainly the south ought to have an additional member of the court, and he ought to be a southern lawyer in all that the term implies.

THE monthly report of the statistician of the department of agriculture at Washington, shows a decrease in the condition of cotton during the month of July from 82.7 to 77.9 or 4.8 points. This is the lowest average for July ever reported, being a half point lower than the average for August, 1893. The reason for the low condition generally given by correspondents is excessive moisture, though in South Carolina drought seems to be the principal cause of injury. There is much complaint of grass and not a little of rust, blight worms and insects. The state averages of the condition are: Virginia, 81; North Carolina, 74; South Carolina, 81; Georgia, 87; Florida, 92; Alabama, 81; Mississippi, 83; Louisiana, 67; Texas, 71; Arkansas, 80; Tennessee, 89.

THAT electricity will be the motive power on several trunk lines of railway, by the end of the century, there can be little doubt. A vast deal of terminal work and several branch lines are now operated by electric engines. The Pennsylvania company is experimenting with a newly discovered storage battery motor. The New York, Hartford and New Haven is preparing to run more of its branches—it has one now so run—by electricity. And we have no doubt but the use of electricity on railroads will work as conspicuous a saving of operating expense over steam, as it does in the case of city tramways, compared to horse and mule power. But for the tremendous sacrifice on existing machinery that a sudden change would involve, the revolution from steam to lightning would be very rapid. A low valuation of the 37,000 locomotives in use on our 176,000 miles of road would be $222,000,000; and to reduce all this vast amount of machinery to mere scrap iron, in a year or two, would impose a great tax on the roads, to say nothing of the cost of replacing the engines with other motors, adapted to the use of electricity. All the same, however, the steam machine is doomed; its days are numbered, and they are not very many.

ONCE UPON A TIME.

Mobile Register.

Once upon a time, in a land on the other side of the world, there lived a people, who, owing to a series of misfortunes, were not as prosperous in their domestic affairs as they had been aforetime. It seems that some of their neighbors, with whom they had been accustomed to trade, had been extravagant in their business operations and were bankrupt; and the people themselves had not wisely governed their own operations and had on hand a great deal more of products than they could sell. It is true, some of these products were food stuffs did not belong to everybody but only to those who raised them, so that although these latter had plenty to eat of a certain kind of food, there were many of them who had no money with which to purchase clothes, and many of their fellow citizens, who had raised no food stuffs, who had no money to purchase food. Thus it happened that, in the midst of an apparent overproduction of food stuffs, there were some people who were suffering for food. The trouble lay in the lack of employment. There was no use continuing the production of goods so long as there was slow sale for the goods already producted. So, in the midst of an apparent prosperity, there was much want and distress--a strange situation—so strange as to be by some incomprehensible, but one that has been observed from time to time as an incident in the history of all nations.

Then there arose a prophet in that country who said that what the people needed was money. This was to most of the sufferers a self-evident truth. They had little or no money, they were hungry or they lacked clothes, and money would supply these things. If every person were given a pocketful of money, prosperity would be the immediate result.

There is no question that the prophet was right. The people did need money, and if, in saying that, he had also said truly how the people were to get the money, he would have done his people a service indeed. Here is where he failed as a prophet. He pretended to explain the case by saying that it was one involving no difficulty. All to be done was for the government to make more money. As the gouernment, however, was but a committee of the people, his scheme amounted to nothing more than this: Let the people make the money they need.

The absurdity of the proposition was manifest when the people asked him to tell them just how they were to make the money. He replied that they were to take silver pieces worth 50 cents and stamp them worth a dollar, and that then every man who had 50 cents in silver would at once find himself in possession of 100 cents, thus would the money held by the people be of twice its former purchasing power, and would practically be doubled in amount.

Most of the people laughed in his face when he said this, but some few very serious people, who are almost religious in their method of looking upon every phase of life, were inclined to ask him another question, namely, whence would come the power to thus increase the value of the 50 cent pieces? He replied that the power would be found in the people as a whole. If they declared a thing so it would be so; no one would or could question the declaration.

This sounded large and even glorious Quite a number of the listeners exclaimed that the patriotism of the prophet was admirable. "He believes in his country!" they said. "He believes we are strong enough to do anything, and certainly strong enough to lift a little 50-cent piece up to the value of one dollar. He's a great man! He ought to be our president!" But a still, small voice, like that which spake to Elijah in the Wilderness, asked this question: "Can one man do it?"

"No," was the reply.

"Can one man do even a little bit of it?"

"No. It would be useless for him to act alone. He has no power to do it."

"Can one man have any influence whatever in changing the value of the 50 cent piece?"

"None."

"Well, tell us this, Mr. Prophet. If a man, acting alone, has not the least bit of power to effect a change of value, and no influence whatever in effecting a change, how can 70,000,000 of such men, each without the least bit of power, do it? If, for example, a man is lame and cannot walk, how many lame men who cannot walk will it be necessary to get togehter in order that all of them may be able to walk as well as men who are not lame?"

The prophet still goes on talking, but he has not answered this question; and every day there is an addition to the number of people who believe the prophet does not know what he is talking about.

How They Kept Him Quiet.

I went to see a woman last Tuesday morning who has a young son; I think he's not much over a year old, in fact. He's the noisiest little fellow I ever saw but this morning he kept still so long that the mother and I rushed into the nursery to see what the nurse had done to him. She had simply found a way to keep him quiet and out of mischief. He had little bits of raw cotton stuck to his hands with molasses and he was trying to pick them off. He was too busy to cry, and for the first time since I've known him, he was absolutely quiet for a quarter of an hour.—Wasington Post.

It is always pleasanter to give than to receive, especially when the thing transferred is an opinion.

GREAT POSSIBILITIES.

Montgomery Advertiser.

Alabama is rich in raw material. While we can offer advantages to cotton manufacturers that are superior to those of any other state in the union, we have inducements to other industries fully as attractive as those offered by the white staple. Our iron and coal resources are seemingly well known, but there are but few people that have any idea of their immensity. The supply of coal and iron is not only inexhaustable, but the veins lie side by side. We are not compelled to haul the coal to the iron or the iron to the coal, as or less favored localities, and can therefore, utilize them at a very low cost. There is not another of these United States that can produce iron as cheaply as Alabama, and the quality of it is the best.

Although our state has made a reputation as an iron and cottou producer there is but little known of her other resources. The vast forests of the most desirable hard woods that are here almost in their virgin purity will some day bring great sums of money into the state. Our pine forests have been worked to some extent but there are still hundreds of thousands of acres of fine timber awaiting the woodman's ax. The opportunities for the manufacture of fine furniture, railroad cars and other things where choice varieties of fine woods are necessary, are superb and and we doubt if there is a state that can equal them.

Thus far, iron and coal have been our principal mineral products, but they are far from being our only ones. Gold, silver, tin and various other metals are more are less abundant, the finest clays for both pottery and brick are found in profusion and there are good indications of oil. Our mineral resources, aside from iron and coal, have been but slightly developed, and little is known of their extent. Enough has been done to show that they are valuable, however, and that money invested in development would yield profitable returns.

The facilities for manufacturing here cannot be excelled. In addition to the wealth of raw material, its great variety and accessibility, we can offer excellent opportunities to reach the markets of the world. Our numerous railroads furnish quick transit to all North American centres, our navigable rivers insure moderate freight rates and our magnificent sea port enables us to reach the foreign markets. Alabama cotton and iron manufacturers can easily meet the competition of the world in the Central and South American markets and can make themselves felt in the European ones.

Alabama is destined to be a great manufacturing state, and the possibilities for development in that direction are practically limitless. All that is needed is capital, and now that confidence is restored and money is seeking investment, it will be but a short time when our manifold attractions will succeed in drawing it here, if proper steps are taken to make them known.

EFFECT OF THE BICYCLE.

New York Times.

Now that half the world has taken to riding the bicycle, reports are beginning to come thick and fast from an amazing number of trades and industries upon which the sudden popularity of this new form of locomotion is having most serious effects. Livery stable men are not the only ones who are uttering loud cries of pain, and otherwise expressing poignant dissatisfaction with the present order of things. A large number of people cannot suddenly change their habits without disarranging the whole course of busines to a greater or less extent, and, although matters get to running smoothly again after a while, there is always a period of transition, during which much inconvenience and some real hardship are suffered. At present it is everybody who has had anything to do with the horse, either directly or indirectly, that feels the stress of circumstances, and, as the animal was a very pervasive feature of civilization the victims are to be found in numberless quarters. The makers of carriages, harness and saddles find their trade materially diminished, with consequences that reach into scores of minor connected industries. Farmers complain that not only has horse raising ceased to be profitable, but also that hay and oats no longer bring the old prices. Hostlers and private coachmen go about with long faces looking for jobs. The dividends of railway corporations show marked diminution in many places. Factories where the utensils of old-fashioned games and sports were made are either deserted altogether or only give employment for short hours to few workers. Fewer books are read, it is reported, and that brings in the whole army of writers. The list might be continued almost indefinitely. It is a real revolution that the bicycle has worked. The mere riding of bicycles is only a small part of it.

Kenneth Bazemore had the good fortune to receive a small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy when three members of his family were sick with dysentery. This one small bottle cured them all and he had some left which he gave to Geo. W. Baker, a prominent merchant of the place, Lewiston, N. C., and it cured him of the same complaint. When troubled with dysentery, diarrhœa, colic or cholera morbus, give this remedy a trial and you will be more than pleased with the result. The praise that naturally follows its introduction and use has made it very popular. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Parker & Armstrong.

CHANGES IN MAN.

Startling Developments in the Physical Structure.—Undergoing a Mental Metamorphosis as Well.

It is a fact we are assured of by paleontologists and anthropologists that primeval man not only had four more teeth than men now have but had fewer bones in the skull, and less foldings or convolutions of the brain. The skull, too, has changed according to environments and use from an oval to a globular shape, or to a compromise of the two.

The jaw has retreated as the front brain has protruded. The tearing teeth have shortened up, and are neatly and gently enclosed in the mouth.

Ears, from being pointed and movable like horses' ears, have become rounded and firmly fastened to the head. They are no longer the most important organ, as they were to the river driftmen to enable them to hear the approach of danger from all sides.

The nostrils from being open and alert, have closed up to outside affairs to a great extent, and serve mainly as conduits and as indicators of mental emotion. The eyes are shortening in their range of vision, and adapting themselves to a studious race. All the senses were once intensely more acute, and the tendency is now steadily to lose more and more of their capability to gather in the world of sounds and sights, except as these are correlated into logic—that is, we can no longer tell poisons by taste and track our enemies by scent, or distinguish dangers by the rustles in the air.

Occasionally a child is born with peculiar gifts of an organic sort, and can move his ears freely or shake his scalp. He does not use this faculty as it was originally designed, to shake off flies or dust; indeed, it seems to be a useless reversion to a generally disused type.

Such changes in our general physical frame, says the Boston Traveler, are startling and suggestive, but no more important than the mental and moral changes that are as demonstratable. Our ancestors were indubitably carnivorous, to the degree of cannibalism. The instinct for savage beasts and revelry, involving bloodthirsty disregard of human suffering, may lurk in us yet.

The history of the Stanley expedition suggests that positive savagery is latent in us, in such degrees that the absence of restraints of civilization may cause it suddenly to blaze with ferocity; yet we certainly are transformed to a deep abhorrence for customs that our forefathers lived up to without a qualm.

Changes in customs are simpler than changes in organic structure, but both are easily possible. The rudimentary tail is still in our possession, and I have no doubt that if advantage could be found in its development we could get back to this appendage in its fullness. It would not be impossible to develop a race of men with tails if tails could be used. Certainly highly civilized races have lapsed in moral and intelligence to savage and animal conceptions of life. Such changes grow together and are interlinked.

As the eye and the ear are less occupied in detecting the approach of dangerous foes, they are more occupied in listening to the sorrows of our fellows. The pathos and sympathy of a noble eye, the keen intellectuality of a student's nose, are part of the evolution; the organ changes, and at the same time exchanges purpose and power.

Darwin says man may be excused for feeling some pride at having risen, though not by his own exertion to the very summit of the organic scale; and the fact that has thus risen, instead of having been aboriginally placed there, may give him hope of a still higher distiny in the future.

Proverbs About Rain.

Evening gray and morning red,
Put on your hat or you will wet your head.

A piece of kelp or sea-weed hung up will become damp previous to rain.

When rain comes from the west it will not continue long.

Rain from the south prevents the drouth,

When the walls are more than usually damp rain may be expected.

A lump of hemp acts as a good hydrometer, and when it is damp, prognosticates rain.

A coming storm your shooting corns presage;
And aches will throb, your hollow tooth will rage.

Rain long foretold, long last;
Short notice, soon past.

If it rains when the sun shines it will rain the next day.

Trees grow dark before a storm.

If it rains before sunrise expect a fair afternoon.

If it rains before seven,
It will cease before eleven.

If rain ceases before 12 at noon it will be clear the next day.

If rain ceases after 12 at noon it will rain the next day.

If rain begins at early morning light,
It will end ere day, at noon is bright.

When the sun appears of a light pale color, or goes down in a bank of clouds, it indicates the approach or continuance of bad weather.

If the sun goes pale to bed,
It will rain tomorrow, it is said.

QUEER QUESTIONS.

Riddles Which Used to Be Asked by Philosophers in the Last Century.

There are a half a dozen collections belonging to the last century of questions and answers, says the London Queen. They are called the Athenian Oracle, the British Apollo and other titles. Both the questions and answers are most curious and interesting. Of course a large part are religious, or, rather, Biblical, but many illustrate old beliefs and superstitions. For instance, here are certain Biblical questions:

How long did Adam and Eve continue in a state of innocency?

Why did not Adam name the fish?

Why do angels have wings?

Who was Cain's wife?

Were there other floods besides that of Noah?

Why were ignorant men chosen as apostles?

What was Eve's fruit?

Where did the cock stand when he was heard by all the world?

Where was Job going when he was twelve years of age?

Were these rainbows before the flood?

And here are certain secular questions:

Why do elephants have no joints?

What becomes of the flame when the candle is blown out?

Why do drowned man float on their backs and drowned women on their faces?

Is it a comfort to feel that there are others quite as unhappy as themselves?

What is a Phœnix?

Is there a race of Pygmies?

Is it true that men have one rib more than women?

Do swans sing before they die?

What is the will o' the wisp?

Why are wits always cowards?

These questions the books treat solemnly, and provide learned answers for them.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

THE PLAN.

Each county is organized into a separate organization. Get a policy for thirty years for five dollars per thousand dollars without renewal. You only pay your pro-rata share of the loss of a brother member in your own county. In Kentucky, South Carolina, Georgia and Virginia the average cost has not been more than two dollars per annum in each thousand dollars of insurance.

CURED BY USING

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

"Several years ago, my blood was in bad condition, my system all run down, and my general health very much impaired. My hands were covered with large sores, discharging all the time. I had no strength nor energy and my feelings were miserable in the extreme. At last, I commenced taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla and soon noticed a change for the better. My appetite returned and with it, renewed strength. Encouraged by these results, I kept on taking the Sarsaparilla, till I had used six bottles, and my health was restored."—A. A. Towns, prop. TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS.

Don't forget the concert tomorrow night.

County court convenes Monday, August 26th.

William Thomas is visiting his mother at J. L. Peters.

There are seven prisoners in the county jail—all colored.

I. D. Mason spent Tuesday and Wednesday in Anniston.

Ed Lyman, of Montevallo, was a caller in our burg Tuesday.

Mrs. I. W. Bailey, of Calera, spent Monday and Tuesday in town.

Miss Mattie Hand, of Jemison, is visiting her aunt, Mrs. B. L. Moore.

Mrs. Hubbard, of Anniston, is visiting her daughter, Mrs. E B. Nelson.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Newton, Wednesday morning, August 14th, a son.

Women's fear of mice will cease to be charming when bloomers come into vogue.

Miss Louie Longshore, who has been visiting in Calera, returned home Saturday.

Misses Ola Edwards and Anna Cosper, of Childersburg, are visiting Miss Essie Mason.

You will miss a grand treat if you do not attend the young ladies' concert tomorrow night.

A. B. Milner and Miss Ethel Greek returned from a visit to Renfroe friends last Saturday.

Mrs. T. K. Tierce, of Attalla, arrived in town today, where she will spend a few days with friends.

A little child of Mr. and Mrs. Bud Morgan is very sick, and no hopes are entertained of its recovery.

Have or have not the masculine bicyclists who wear bloomers appropriated women's garments to themselves?

Mrs. D. R. McMillan and Mrs. Henry Milner spent part of last week with their aunt, Mrs. Robert Carter.

Miss Lucie Leeper returned from a visit to Columbiana relatives Friday, accompanied by Miss Myrtle Swain.—Anniston Hot Blast.

Quite a number of our country friends were in town this week in attendance upon the board of equalization, which is in session.

According to the tenth census out of a population of 60,000,000 over 20,000,000 were bread winners, being a percentage of 34.8 of the whole.

The smallest city in the world is the miniature place place known as Steward City, Alaska, its three inhabitants being respectively, mayor, chairman of the board of aldermen and president of the common council.

The young ladies' concert tomorrow night promises to be one of the best entertainments Columbiana has had in a long time. Be sure and be there.

Eighteen cars of pears and grapes were shipped from Cullman to Chicago. That is more than Columbiana will ship of either fruit or produce in eighteen years.

R. R. Roberson, who lived near Harpersville, was so severely injured last Saturday that he died on Sunday, by the running away of his team and the wagon passing over him.

The Wilsonville ball team came down Friday and played a return game with our club last Friday. They were badly beaten, the score standing 36 to 10 in favor of Columbiana.

Mr. J. W. Johnston lays claim to the first cotton of the season. He says that in his field he has cotton all opened out nicely, and that the entire field is very early. So much for progressive farming.

F. W. Gist, of Calera, who has a position in the government printing office at Washington, is spending his vacation with relatives and friends in this county. He was a pleasant caller at our sanctum last Friday.

The Young People's Society of Christian Endeaver will give an "Alabama" entertainment at the Congregational church of Shelby, on Thursday evening, August 22nd, at 7:30. All are invited to attend. Admission 25 cents, children 15 cents.

Don't forget to attend the entertainment Friday night, admission only 25 cents. We expect a large crowd from Shelby, Wilsonville and surrounding country. Now don't disappoint. The procedes will go for a most excellent purpose, the church.

In order to introduce Chamberlain's Cough Remedy here we sold several dozen bottles on strict guarantee and have found every bottle did good service. We have used it ourselves and think it superior to any other. W. I. Mowrey, Jarvisville, W. Va. For sale by Parker & Armstrong.

Last Sabbath was the regular preaching day at the Baptist church, and it was also communion day. An impressive and eloquent sermon was preached by the pastor, Rev. Dr. Teague, after which the communion services were held, which were participated in by a large number of communicants.

For the 26th Triennial Conclave, Knights Templars at Boston, Mass., August 26th-30th, the Southern Railway will sell tickets at one fare for the round trip. Tickets will be good until September 10th, but upon application to ticket agent of terminal line at Boston, they will be extended until September 30, 1895. For detailed information apply to any agent of the Southern Railway.

When moving into our present home I found a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm left by a former tenant. On the label I found the statement that it was good for cuts and burns. I can testify to the truth of this. Nothing in all my experience has found its equal for treating blisters or burns. F. E. Barrett, manager Le Sueur Sentinel, Le Sueur, Minn. Pain Balm is also a sure cure for rheumatism. For sale by Parker & Armstrong.

The man that penned the following knew just exactly what he was talking about: "A newspaper is always printed in a rush. There is always something in it that should have been left out, something left out that should have been put in. It is sometimes too quick to act, but with all its faults and short-comings there is more education in a bright, newsy paper than there is in a novel. You will find the brightest boy on practical, sensible every-day questions, is the boy who reads the newspaper."

My boy was taken with a disease resembling bloody flux. The first thing I thought of was Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. Two doses of it settled the matter and cured him sound and well. I heartily reccommend this remedy to all persons suffering from a like complaint. I will answer any inquiries regarding it when stamp is inclosed. I refer to any county official as to my reliability. Wm. Roach, J. P., Primroy, Campbell Co., Tenn. For sale by Parker & Armstrong.

In the September number of The Delineator which is called the autumn announcement number, the display of Fashions for the coming season is exceptionally large, and the Styles are handsome enough to suit the most exacting taste. The issue is also notable for the variety and quality of its reading matter. Mrs. Pryor's articles on The Social Code continue, and this month The Debutante is considered in a most interesting way; Amy Rayson, a famous graduate of Girton College, writes of a girls life there and at Newnham, the two best known English Colleges for Women: Edith M. Thomas, in connection with Dr. S. R. Elliott, talks of Woman as a Writer, and Mary Schenck Woolman practically treats of Plain Needlework as an employment. Mrs. Sara Miller Kirby continues her valuable series on Kindergarten Work, and Harriet Keith Fobes gives further instructions in Burnt Decoration. The Household Departments are well represented in The Choosing and Preparation of Meats, Seasonable Cookery, The Housekeeper, and Preservation and Renovation. Instruction and Entertainment are provided in Around the Tea-Table and Some Novel Amusements, and The Newest Books are reviewed. In Knitting, Netting, Tatting and Crocheting new designs are illustrated, with descriptions for making.

Insurance Agent Wanted.

In every county, city and town in Alabama to represent the South and North American Lloyds, New York and Chicago Lloyds, Bankers and Merchants Lloyds(first-class underwriters) Liberal commissions paid. Reduced rates. Address, W. S. Monteith, General Manager, Columbia, S. C.

A Grand Concert.

The young ladies of Columbiana will give a concert the school house, tomorrow (Friday) night. They have been meeting daily and practicing together for some time past, and now consider themselves proficient enough to appear in public, and there is no doubt, but those who attend will be well entertained. The admission fee will be 25 cents, children over eight years of age 10 cents. The proceeds of the entertainment will be devoted to a worthy object, so all should attend. The following is the

A Quiet Marriage.

Our friend, Mr. Rufus Lester, has generally been considered a pretty sly sort of a fellow among the girls by his associates, but his last performance in that line has simply dumbfounded the boys, so to speak, as well as the old people.

On the the night of April 3d, when all the Central Hotel had retired, with the exception of the very few who were in the secret, he was married to Miss Nora Jackson, an estimable young lady living on Yellow Leaf. The ceremony was performed in the parlors of the hotel, Judge Leeper officiating, in the presence of four witnesses, and the marriage was not known to any others until last Sunday, when Mr. Lester brought his bride to the hotel and proclaimed her his wife.

Mrs. Lester was attending school here at that time and was a boarder at the hotel, and no one was more surprised than the host, Mr. Weaver, when he learned that two of his boarders had been married at the hotel and he knew nothing of it. That was once where his better half fooled him.

Rufus seems to forget that he is married, so strong had his bachelor habits become, that he takes his meals at a private house and sleeps in the new home he has prepared, leaving his wife at the hotel, but he will become accustomed to the life of a benedict next week, as he will go to housekeeping then.

The Chronicle wishes Mr. and Mrs. Lester a happy married life, and may they find more flowers than thorns in their pathway of life is our earnest hope.

Mining and Matrimony.

All the fortunes in gold are not discovered in the far west even yet, nor all the romances exhausted in the American Eldorado, as the following recital from the New York Tribune reveals: The gold mine said to have the largest output of any in the world is the Little Johnny, of Leadville, Col., owned by John F. Campton. He went to leadville and took up the Little Johnny after four other miners had abandoned it because they could not find a trace of carbonates. When he was a poor prospector, two years ago, he became acquainted with a school teacher, Miss Nellie May Daly. He could not marry her because he was too poor, but with an income of thre hundred thousand dollars a year, which he now has, that obstacle has been removed and they were married in Denver on Monday last. He has ordered the construction of a residence there to cost one hundred thousand dollars.

Wm. Walker, after an absence of three weeks, was welcomed home by his many friends.

C. W. Bowles gathered a tomato from his garden that weighed two pounds. Who next?

E. P. Owens, who has charge of a foundry in Bessemer, visited his family and many friends on the 11th.

Mrs. D. R. McMillan and Mrs. Henry Milner spent several days of last week with their aunt, Mrs. Robt. Carter.

After spending several weeks most pleasantly in Verbena and Jemison, Miss Jessie Carter returned home Friday.

John Mosely, who has been indoors for the past week from an attack of fever has recovered, to the pleasure of his friends.

Sunday was communion day at the Methodist church. Bro. Wilson preached two very attractive and entertaining sermons.

We regret that Miss Stella Mattison has departed for her home in Oxford. She has been the guest of Miss Mamie Glenn for several weeks.

Mr. P. B. Harrell has returned after an absence of about two weeks. The price of those hounds alluded to was from $100 to $500. He let them remain in Kentucky.

A. M. Piper, assuming the responsibility of deputy sheriff, arrested Sam Reinhart, colored, who was accused of an assault with a gun, stealing a hog, etc. Sam broke aloose, drew his pistol and fired at the said deputy; the deputy returned the fire. Sam made good his escape.

On Thursday night, the 8th, at the Dannemora Hotel, which is nestled amid the towering live-oaks, surrounding by many different hued flowers, after a gentle shower had fallen, those flowers emitted their sweetest and purest odor. On that night there gathered the young, the fair, the gay, the elite, to attend an ice cream festival, where peace, joy, hilarity reigned supreme. The social feature, under the watchful azure eye of Miss Naldo Christian, was artistically arranged and enforced with military exactness. In that same social circle, sparkling wit and repartee were indulged to their heart's content. Thence to the tables so beautifully decorated with flowers and evergreens, and laden with ice cream and cakes prepared by deft hands. After chiding the hasty-footed time for parting them they returned to their homes recreated and refreshed. Many thanks to Mrs. Dr. DuBose for her hospitable reception.

Prof. C. H. Florey is visiting Womack Hill this week, and rumor is afloat that he is to teach our next school commencing in September.

A very interesting meeting is in progress this week in Vincent at the Baptist church. The new church has been completed and is quiet an ornament to the town.

The bridge at Morgan's mill has been completed and accepted and is pronounced by good judges as being the sorriest bridge ever built in this part of the county.

Last Saturday R. R. Roberson's mules, hitched to a wagon, ran away, the wagon running over him and injured him so badly that he died Sunday and was buried here Monday. He leaves a wife and several small children, father, mother, brothers and sisters to mourn his loss. To the bereaved family we extend our sympaties in their sad bereavement.

Our friend Allen Jennings, of Vincent is one of the strongest free silver men we have struck up with in a long time. He is right in some things and in somethings he is wrong, and the great trouble with Allen is the elections don't come often enough and he changes too many times from one side to another, and we never know where to find him at on election day—I mean what side. He is now fixing up his sorghum mills, three or four in number, ready for the fall trade, which will be very large and of which he fully understands.

Advertising Notes.

Here is what Peter Cooper said of a newspaper: "In all towns where a newspaper is published every man should advertise in it, if nothing more than his card, stating his name and the business he is engaged in. It does not only pay the advertiser, but lets people at a distance know that the town in which you reside is a prosperous community of business men. As the seed is sown so the seed recompenses. Never pull down your sign while you expect to do business."

It is not too much, says the New York Sun, to say that the development of modern civilization has been so powerful as the newspaper and the progress of all trade, enterprise and invention, which has distinguished this century, and more especially the last generation, has been accelerated by no means more effectual than newspaper advertising. The advertisement brings together the seller and the buyer, the supply and the demand, as in former times, and to a comparatively limited extent, they were brought together by the fairs and market days. By thus facilitating and vastly increasing their means of communication, it has helped to reduce prices, to stimulate competition and emulation from which comes improvement in production and to multiply the demand for the materials and the appliances which contribute to the advancement of civilization.

COPYRIGHT 1895.

If it ever comes to pass that you mought need somebody to make a horse swap or drive a land trade, there are two men down in the Rocky Creek country that you can send for or call on and git what you want—and their right and proper names are respectfully Blev Scroggins and Andy Lucas. They don't wear so very many clothes and powerful plain ones, you understand, but at the same time you can't always take the measure of a man by the clothes he wears. But not speakin of general appearments, it mought be well enough for you to keep it in mind that Blev Scroggins aint gone nowheres, and fits don't run in the Lucas family.

"As the Hair Stands."

After supper one night last week Blev rode over and hitched his horse at our front gate and come in to smoke and talk and swap lies a few stanzas with me. Blev has been makin himself powerful few around my house for sometime past, and after passin the reglar compliments touchin the weather and the crops he put in to tell me the whyfores and the whenceness thereof.

Now my friend and fellow servant Blev Scroggins is a plain, blunt American citizen, you understand, and he most in generally plain United States language in givin out his opinions. He don't even sorter make out like he was born and bred and brung up in purple and fine linen, and he has got a mighty reckless and pecurious way of flingin in a whole passle of ugly extries in a runnin talk. But God Almighty and Mother Nature made Blev Scroggins, you understand, and I can't make it my particlar business to take out the kinks and smooth over the rough places. Whereas and consequentially, whensomever I turn Blev Scroggins loose to talk by gracious you will have to take him as the hair stands—scars, brands and all. It maybe mought not be so with everybody everywhere—for sometimes it will ask the courage of lion—but down in the Rocky Creek country the people are always honest enough and brave enough to be natural and true. But in our little confabulation the other night Blev he put in to do the talkin, and I reckon we will have to play the game out that way.

"In a Dog Walk."

"There aint nothin particlar the matter with me, Rufe, exceptin that my wife's husband is dead weary with the storms and trials and tribulations of this wide and wicked old world. In durin of the past three weeks I have helt a most hellatious full hand with all the odds agin me. I had to lay down and let the other fellow beat me out and clean me up on a cold bluff, or either stay in and take my chances like a man. So finally at last I stayed in and played the game wide open, and by gatlins, Rufe, I handled the documents for all there was in 'em. And if it hadn't been for Andy Lucas hangin around clost by with one card up his sleeve, you understand, I reckon no doubts I would of got the livin socks beat off of me in spite of hot weather and high water.

"Hold on, Rufe, till I can give you the general pints of the game, and then you can maintain your own private opinions as to whether you will go and take out papers of compellment to send Blev Scroggins to the Poor House or the crazy Siloam.

"You recollect no doubts the Turner track of land which lays alongside of my place over there in the red flats. There is fifty-one acres and a half, more or less, in the cut, and every blame foot of it is as level as your garden spot and rich as the Brazos bottoms. Well, up to sunrise this mornin that land belonged to old man Steve Turner, but tonight it belongs to a horny-headed, silve-tongued idiot by the name of Blev Scroggins. I have got all the papers of entitlement right in my inside pocket, you understand, and by gatlins I win in a dog walk."

"To tell the naked, unwashed truth about it, Rufe, I have been keepin my weather eye on that Turner strip of dirt for lo these many years, as it were, but old man steve had his figgers way up yonder and his backbone as stiff as a gun stick. Along last spring his good wife aunt Millie (may her tribe forever increase) she took down sick abed with the slow fever, and about six weeks ago she shet her eyes on all the sights and scenes of this vain and fleetin life. Me and Andy Lucas we went over to the graveyard to the buryin that day, and on our return back home that evenin after they had put aunt Millie away I says to Andy, says I:

"The day and hour of which I have sometimes spoke to you before has now come to pass, Andy, and if the hamestring holds and the traces don't break and the breeches don't fly up, you understand, I will buy the Turner strip of dirt this summer. Old man Steve has right lately planted his third wife, his children are all grown up and married off, and he is now standin on the border land with one foot in the grave—rockin and swingin betwixt life and death—and waitin for the cat to die. But in the maintime he will git monstrous lonesome presently livin over there on the old place by himself, and I calculate that he will soon come around to the pass where he will sell out and quit, and sell at figgers to suit the times. He knows good and well that I would love to own the land, and he will come to me to sell. Then I will back down and shy off and send him to you as the man that wants it and can pay for it in spot cash. When the cards run your way you can back down and shy off and send him back to me. In that way we are probable to beat him down to where I can see him and stand his figgers. You must likewise also recollect that when aunt Millie took down sick old man Steve had to rent out the land to niggers, which they have botched and butchered and butcherwhanged over it and made the worst sorriest crops in the settlement. When you strike up with old man Steve you mought poke some fun at the crops and let the land down all you can convenient with the truth.

"Andy lowed by the livin and the dead he would stand by me in the game, cause old man Steve was nothin but a tick on the face of creation anyhow, and he couldn't move his washin any too soon to please the Lucas family."

The Hook Was Set.

"I had now spit on the bait and set out my hook, you understand, and all I to do was to lay low and wait for old man Steve to bite." Blev went on in his own pecurious way. "And by gatlins, Rufe, it want more than a week before I got a nibble. The old man come over to my house one Sunday mornin and groanin to beat six bits about aunt Millie, and presently give it out to me that he would love to sell out and move his washin, whereas he thought I mought want to buy that track of red land. I told him times was too hard and money too infernal skeerce for me to pay taxes on any more dirt. But the news was goin the rounds to the extent that Andy Lucas had win a fresh pile on a cooked horse race the 4th of July and no doubts he would be glad to tie it up in a piece of good dirt.

"Old man Steve then left for his sad and lonesome home, as he put it, but I knowed durn well he was headed for the Lucas place. He went right on over there and bantered Andy for a land trade. But Andy was as shy and colty as a school girl and wouldn't bite worth a cent. He told old man Steve that he would raly love to buy another piece of land, but he didn't need no dirt over in the red flats. The bottom had teliterally fell out of that land and it want good for nothin in particlar but to grow grass and hold the world together.

"In that way me and Andy kept the old man between a night sweat and a buck ager, you understand, till we had got him jest about ripe and mellow for a trade. But in the main time somethin had broke loose in a fresh place, and we didn't have no pitch hot."

"Andy Lucas was the first man as usual to find out that there was somethin dead up the creek, you understand, and he come a curlin over to my house one mornin before breakfas spreadin of the news.

"If we don't do somethin right away immediately in regards to old man Steve Turner the jig is up and its Charlie at the rat hole, says Andy to me. Naturally you mought not think it, but the dadblamed old thing has started out courtin all of a suddent, and he is now courtin the widder Biggers to beat six bits. He has planted three wives and the grass aint sproutin on the last new grave. By gollys, you can go right now and find aunt Millie's tracks out in the garden, but that don't make a continential durn bit of difference with old man Steve. He will take the widder if he can git her, and in case of a pushency—if she is rale bad off to marry—she mought take up a fool notion to mix clothes with him. In that case he won't sell out, and you will have to wait for another death in the Turner family before you can tote the papers to that strip of dirt over there in the red flats."

"Well, by this time the cards had got tolerable bad gummed up, you understand, and luck was runnin from me like a shot. But two heads are most in generally always better than one, Rufe—particlar if they pull the same way and pull all together.

"So it come to pass the very next day that Andy Lucas took a soon start and made a horse back trip over into the hill country, and when he come back he brought a letter with him for old man Steve Turner. The letter was supposed to come from a buxum young widder by the name of Ada Singleton, which I raley have my doubts if there is such a woman in the whole entire human family. But at any rates it was a scandlous sweet and lovin letter, and it is none of my business who had writ it or where it come from. Andy made it sorter late comin in, and consequentially he rode in by the widder Biggerse's place and left the letter with her. He told the widder as best he could where he had been and who sent the letter.

"From all I can hear, comin and a gwine, Andy went on to tell the widder, the old man is more than probable to be over here bright and early in the mornin and you can deliver the letter over to him when he comes."

"Now you must recollect, Rufe, that they was out of scalin wax where that letter come from, and there want nothin but a little piece of red ribbin tied in a double bow knot to keep other people from perusin of it. Mind you now I don't even make out like the widder Biggers done any perusin, but at any rates when old man Steve went over there the next day he didn't find the latch string danglin around on the outside by a whole tremendius big lot. I can't say for certain—and neither can Andy—that the widder ever give him the letter, but by gatlins she give him his walkin papers right then and now. Henceforwards since then he couldn't touch her—dadblame him—he couldn't touch her with a fifty foot pole.

"Inside of three days old man Steve was ready to sell out and move off. He come at me onest more for a land trade, and by this time—between me and Andy—we had beat his figgers down from $500 to $300, and finally at last I closed the deal at $250—half cash and the balance in one and two years.

"That old man by the name of Steve Turner is out after a fresh bunch of calico, Rufe, and calico he must have. He maybe mought make up with the widder by-and-by, but if he don't—and you will only work and wait and handle the documents right—durned if you can't buy everything he has got for next to nothin on a credit. It takes me and Andy Lucas to cook 'em, you understand, and by gatlins when we cooked Steve Turner we cooked him to a cracklin."

TRIALS with an aluminum torpedo tube on board the British torpedo boat Scourge have proved very successful, and the tubes are to be tried now on one of the destroyers. They require far less attention than the steel tubes, and are, of course, much lighter.

A SLAVE FROM BOYHOOD.

(From the Red Wing, Minn., Republican.)

"I am now twenty-four years old," said Edwin Swanson, of White Rock, Goodhue county, Minn., to a Republican representative, "and as you can see I am not very large of stature. When I was eleven years old I became afflicted with a sickness which baffled the skill and knowledge of the physician. I was not taken suddenly ill, but on the contrary I can hardly state the exact time when it began. The first symptoms were pains in my back and restless nights. The disease did not trouble me much at first, but it seemed to have settled in my body to stay, and my bitter experience during the last thirteen years proved that to be the case. I was of course a child, and never dreamed of the suffering in store for me. I complained to my parents and they concluded that in time I would outgrow my trouble, but when they heard me groaning during my sleep they became thoroughly alarmed. Medical advice was sought but to no avail, I grew rapidly worse and was soon unable to move about and finally became confined continually to my bed. The best doctors that could be had were consulted, but did nothing for me. I tried various kinds of extensively advertised patent medicines with but the same result.

"For twelve long years I was thus a sufferer, in constant agony without respite. Abscesses formed on my body in rapid succession and the world indeed looked very dark to me. About this time when all hope was gone and nothing seemed left but to resign myself to my most bitter fate my attention was called to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. Like a drowning man grasping at a straw, in sheer desperation I concluded to make one more attempt—not to regain my health (I dare not to hope so much) but if possible to ease my pain.

"I bought a box of the pills and they seemed to do me good. I felt encouraged and continued their use. After taking six boxes I was up and able to walk around the house. I have not felt so well for thirteen years as during the past year. Only one year have I taken Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I am able now to do chores and attend to light duties.

"Do I hesitate to let you publish what I have said? No. Why should I? It is the truth and I am only too glad to let other sufferers know my experience. It may help those whose cup of misery is as full to-day as mine was in the past."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are also a specific for troubles peculiar to females, such as suppressions, irregularities and all forms of weakness. They build up the blood, and restore the glow of health to pale and sallow cheeks. In men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork or excesses of whatever nature. Pink Pills are sold in boxes (never in loose bulk) at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, and may be had of all druggists, or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

FOR FRENCH DOCTORS.

The Law Permits Experiments With Men Condemned to Death.

"Over in France," said a gentleman recently from Europe, "the criminal procedure permits people condemned to death or to long terms of servitude in the penitentiaries to give themselves up to scientists for the purposes of experiment. While recently in Paris I was told by a medical friend of three convicts who submitted themselves to the diet prescribed by a French physician. They were all condemned to death, and the tests he made were meant to determine how long human life might be sustained on a special and limited diet. To one he gave nothing but coffee, to the second chocolate, while the third received simply tea. The chocolate man lived only a few weeks, and died from a general degeneration of the tissues. The coffee man was longer in meeting his end, and expired more from nervous disorganization than from actual want of nournishment. The tea man was described as living about a year with nothing to sustain life but a decoction of black tea. His skin became almost transparent, while the patient himself fell away in flesh, until he was but little better than a skeleton. He drifted into the grave on a tide of tea rather than died.

"Some few months ago," the gentleman went on to say, "a medical man, who was also much of an electrician, made an experiment on himself, which is of some interest. He had a theory that the term 'mother earth' had a better basis in fact as a statement than a mere attempt to compliment the earth. His notion was that every day and every hour in the day we sucked, unnoticed, nourishment from the earth in the way of stores of electricity, and it was his opinion that if one were cut off from this electrical food supply he wouldn't last long. To the end that he might put his theory to the test, he resolved to insulate himself as much as possible, and had made a pair of shoes with soles of plate glass. Then he arranged so that every article with which he came actually in contact was also insulated—his dinner table was raised from the floor on glass supports; so also was his bed. In fact, he took every care to cut himself off from all possible earth currents of electricity. He maintained this insulation only five days before he became aware of a distinct change in his bodily health. He was languid, indifferent, careless, what you might term lazy, and, to put it in his own words, 'felt as if his steam had all run down.' Indeed, he felt so disagreeable that at the end of five days he declined to carry the experiment any further, and pulled off his Cinderella boots and placed himself in active communication with the earth again.

"In two days he felt completely restored to his old self, and gave it as his opinion that, cut off from the natural contact with the earth, insulated as it were, he would have died in less than a month. He expects to resume his experiments as soon as he can get the French government to hand over to him some convict, under death sentence, on whom to make this anti-electrical test.—Washington Star.

White Elephants.

Knighthood is not an honor that you can obtain in Siam as easily as you can in many other countries. You have to qualify for it by capturing a white elephant, which is, by all accounts, a good deal more difficult than to write indifferent poetry or to start an anti-publishers' league. The white elephant is the national emblem of Siam and all the specimens that can be caught are kept in the royal stables and live on the fat of the land. There are five of them at present in honorable captivity. All the work they ever have to do is to take part twice a year in a state procession and to support the king by their majestic presence whenever he has to receive a foreign ambassador. Besides being knighted their captors receive large money rewards. The more white elephants there are in the king's mews the lighter does he reckon himself likely to be.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

SOUTHERN GLEANINGS.

"The Sun Do Move" Preacher.

A correspondent writing from Richmond, Va., to the Boston Transcript, says: It is hardly an exaggeration to say that since the death of Frederick Douglass Rev. John Jasper, pastor of the Sixth Mount Zion Baptist church of Richmond, is the most influential colored man in the south. He is a typical negro from his retreating forehead to the soles of his ample feet. Had not Rev. John Jasper been requested eighteen years ago by a member of his congregation to expound the text found in Exodus xv., 3: "The Lord is a man of war; the Lord is His name," he would in all probability never have been known outside of his native state; but on account of the theory developed in this sermon, that the sun moves around the earth, he has received a notoriety that is almost world-wide. He is fond of using big words—the bigger the better—and is not at all particular as to whether he uses or misuses them; but Mr. Jasper is possessed of simply dignity and evident earnestness, and these command respect even when he propounds his theory that "de sun do move." He was born July 4, 1812, in Fluvanna county, Va., being the youngest of twenty-four children. His father was a noted exhorter in his old age. "De Doctor," as the members of his church delight to call him, is still an active man, in spite of his 83 years. He has preached his famous sermon hundreds of times, the first delivery having been in his present church, a neat brick structure, bought by his flock in 1868. It is never exactly the same except in the main point. Mr. Jasper, it is said, at one time baptised 300 people in two hours, being a average of one in twenty-five seconds. His church has a membership of 2,000, and is free of debt.

Want Mrs. Nobles Hanged.

The people of Twiggs county, Ga., in mass meeting have passed resolutions calling upon the governor not to interfere with the hanging of Mrs. Debbie Nobles, who has been convicted of the murder of her husband. Several weeks ago women in many states, who had become imbued with the idea that Mrs. Nobles had been driven to her crime by the actions of her husband, sent petitions to the governor to commute her sentence. Letters have been received from Massachusetts, New York and Illinois protesting against the death sentence for a woman. In order to counteract this the male citizens of the county in which the offense was committed held the mass meeting and adopted resolutions as above stated.

There have been three women executed in Georgia—a husband-poisoner, about 100 years ago; a girl accomplice in a murder, about twenty years ago, and a colored woman, who was concerned in the celebrated Eastman riot.

Dead Barber Leaves Seven Widows.

E. A. Smith, a barber, who dropped dead at Jacksonville, Fla., turns out to have been a regular Mormon. From telegrams received it develops that seven women claim to have been married to him. One of his wives is in New York city, one in Columbus, Ga.; one in Atlanta, Ga.; one at Brunswick, Ga.; two at points in south Florida, and one at Jacksonville. The New York wife, who claims to be No. 1, wired for the body not to be buried until she arrived, but the wife in Jacksonville insisted on immediate interment. The undertaker was in a quandary, but, as the body was fast decomposing, he decided to bury it. A lawsuit will result over property left by Smith, as all of Smith's wives have sent telegrams in reference to it.

Wife Uses an Ax on Her Rival.

At Clarksville, Tenn., on account of an alleged intimacy between Eliza Hale and Emanuel Wisdom, the Hale woman was mortally wounded with an ax by the jealous wife. Wisdom's wife broke open the door to Hale's room and began to cut her in a fearful manner with the ax she had effected her entrance with, and before she could be made to desist had dealt the Hale girl a number of deadly gashes, several in the face and on the head and arms. When arrested Wisdom's wife was taken before Magistrate Caldwell, who bound her over to the criminal court under a bond of $1,000, and in default she was lodged in jail.

Charged with Stealing One Dollar.

At Austin Harry N. Schintz, charged by W. H. Tobin with the theft of one dollar, was held under $200 bonds for trial in the district court. The case was somewhat sensational on account of Schintz having sued Tobin and J. L. Hume for large damages for alleged constraint to get him to acknowledge his guilt. Schintz was until lately employed in the Tobin drug store.

The Governor Summoned.

Gov. Foster of Louisiana has been summoned by the United States supreme court to show cause why the sentence of a condemned murderer should not be set aside.

Thousands of women, especially in the spring of the year, are nervous, tired, have headache, sick stomach, fainting spells, dizziness, scanty or profuse menses, weak back, constipation; their sides, shoulders and limbs ache constantly—in fact, they suffer from general debility of the whole system. The superior tonic qualities of McElree's Wine of Cardui makes it the leading remedy for this class of troubles.

Mrs. P. C. Adams, Chattoogaville, Ga., writes: "Two years ago I was taken sick with indigestion, fainting spells, constipation, falling of the womb, and various other symptoms, and kept getting worse and worse. After taking four bottles of McElree's Wine of Cardui in connection with Thedford's Black-Draught tea I am able to do any kind of work that a woman can do."

D. L. Coker, Calvina, Fla., says: "McElree's Wine of Cardui has brought rosy cheeks back to one of my cousins after she was given up to die by two of the best physicians.

NO LONGER MINISTER

Of the United States to Mexico, So Decides the Attorney General.

RANSOM MAY YET BE RE-APPOINTED.

A Provision in the Constitution Prohibits a Senator or Member of the House of Representatives Holding Office Under Conditions.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—Hon. Matt. W. Ransom, of North Carolina, is no longer minister of the United States to Mexico. That office was practically declared vacant today by a decision rendered by Mr. Holmes Conrad, solicitor general of the United States and Acting Attorney General. Mr. Ransom's incumbency was declared to be contrary to the federal constitution, and Acting Attorney General sustained the action of Mr. Thomas Holcomb, auditor of the treasury for the state department, in decling to pass favorably upon Mr. Ransom's vouchers for salary and expenses.

The decision of the Acting Attorney General was based on a question raised by Auditor Holcomb as to the legality of Mr. Ransom's appointment to the Mexican mission, in view of the existence of Section 2, Article 6, of the constitution, which declares that "No senator or representative shall, during the time for which he was elected, be appointed to any civil office under the authority of the United States which shall have been created or the emoluments whereof shall have been increased during such time."

This provision apparently fitted the case of Mr. Ransom for he was nominated by President Cleveland and confirmed by the senate before his term of office as senator from North Carolina had expired, and during that term the salary of the Mexican mission had been increased $5,000 a year.

Another Matter Disposed of.

The decision rendered by the acting attorney general also disposes of another matter in which Mr. Ransom was pecuniarily interested. Nearly three months ago he returned to the United States quite ill, having obtained sixty days leave of absence. He spent most of the time recuperating in the North Carolina mountains and then obtained an additional leave of thirty days. Under the regulations of the diplomatic service Mr. Ransom was entitled to sixty days annual leave and to thirty days sick leave additional, a total of ninety days. There is no provision for a further extension for any reason and diplomatic and consular officers who have exceeded this quota, have not received pay for the period they remained from their posts. Mr. Ransom's ninety days are nearly up and last week he came to Washington to ascertain if his continued ill health would secure for him a further extension with pay. That question was not disposed of and there is now no necessity for an opinion on it, in Mr. Ransom's case, at least, as the acting attorney general's decision disposes of everything relating to his emoluments.

May Be Re-appointed.

The constitutional provision through which Mr. Ransom has been deprived of office does not bar him from being re-appointed to the Mexican mission. He could have been appointed without violation of the law or constitution at any time after the hour of noon on March 4, last, when his senatorial term expired. It is believed that President Cleveland will, upon being officially notified of the condition of affairs, re-appoint Mr. Ransom to the office which nearly every senator united in asking the president to do last winter.

LAWYERS FIGHT.

Col. T. M. Burkett and W. L. Kinsen Come Together and the Former Disfigured.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Aug. 17.—An extremely sensational episode barely escaping the magnitude of a tragedy was witnessed yesterday in the circuit court room at Athens, Tenn., during a will contest case in which much bitterness has been manifested. Col. T. M. Burkett and W. L. Kinsen opposing counsel engaged in a knock out fight in open court and as a result Colonel Burkett will be disfigured for life. The fight was brought on by language of Col. Burkett relative to Kinsen's wife, who was a party to the suit at issue.

YELLOW FEVER AT SANTIAGO.

Thirty-one Deaths Among the Negro Colonists—Treasury Balances.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—Surgeon General Wyman of the marine hospital service yesterday received a cablegram from Havana, announcing the outbreak of yellow fever at Santiago Espirito. The disease is prevalent at many places in the island and seems to be increasing.

General Wyman also had a report from Eagle Pass, Texas, where negro colonists returning from Mexico are quarantined because of an outbreak of small pox. To date one hundred and thirty-seven cases and 31 deaths have been reported. Most of the cases were mild in form and the per centage of deaths is not large when it is remembered that these colonists had suffered great deprivations and were made physically in a condition to withstand the attack of the disease. All the colonists have been vaccinated and have the best of food and medical attention and it is believed that the disease has been checked and that there is no danger of the contagion spreading.

The treasury department has been advised that $300,000 in gold was withdrawn at New York yesterday for export to Europe. This reduces the treasury gold reserve to $102,151,000.

FAT CATTLE FOR EUROPE.

Degan's Plan of Shipping Was a Gratifying Success.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—Samuel Degan, a cattle shipper of Chicago, who recently sailed for England with 308 fat cattle, has returned here and reports that not a single one was lost on the trip.

When the cattle arrived in England they were in a better condition than when shipped, averaging about 1,360 pounds. The cattle, were as a rule, well graded. The Polled Angus grades brought the highest price. The whole 308 averaged $97.50 a head.

It is stated at the agricultural department that the Polled Angus grades are more in demand in Europe than any other cattle. Hersfords coming next and Durham last.

MANGLED TO DEATH.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Aug. 17.—While Mary Davis, a young woman, was walking on the tracks of the Tennessee Coal & Iron railroad, one mile from the city yesterday she saw a coal train approaching and stepped over on the Kansas City, Memphis and Birmingham railroad track, which parallels that of the Tennessee Coal and Iron railroad company. Just then the express from Memphis dashed around the curve, and striking her hurled her body under the wheels of the coal train, which mangled her to death. The coroner is investigating.

BLACKBURN CLAIMS IT.

But Sound Money Men Say He May Find Himself Mistaken.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Aug. 17.—The returns today show that Senator Blackburn has enough pledges of votes to secure his re-election, provided the counties and districts heretofore carried by the democrats give their usual results. Many of those pledged to Blackburn are opposed to free silver views and his opponents claim that a majority of the democratic nominees for the legislature are sound money men and when the time comes for the election of senator, Blackburn may find the situation changed.

ACID'S DEADLY WORK

Two Killed and Several Injured in a Railroad Wreck.

ALL FROM A MISPLACED SWITCH.

The Fluid is Scattered in All Directions Killing and Burning as it Went. Escaping Steam Adds to the Horrors of the Scene.

AURORA, Ill. Aug. 17.—A Chicago & Northwestern passenger train ran through an open switch one mile north of the city last evening crashing into a freight car loaded with carbolic acid. Seven boys playing on the car were either killed or frightfully injured. The powerful acid was scattered in every direction doing more fatal work even than the mash-up and the escaping steam. Tom Rosh, a 10-year-old boy was killed outright. Charles Chilvers had his skull fractured and was so badly burned by the acid that he died. Fred Robinson, and J. Munch were also burned by acid. Mrs. Nancy Smith, of Chicago, 84 years of age, was thrown against a seat in the car and her nose broken. The passengers was badly shaken up and brushed. Conductor Charleston, of Aurora was injured in the back, and Brakeman William Farrell had a gash cut in his head. The engineer and firemen stuck to their posts and escaped. The engine cylinder head blew out and escaping steam added to the deadly work of the acid. A switching crew had been operating on the track an hour before the passenger train pulled in and had left a switch unlocked.

ARRESTING THE ITALIANS.

Warrants for 34 of the Rioters and the Sheriffs After Them.

PRINCETON, Ill., Aug 17.—Sheriff Clark with ten deputies arrived at Spring Valley yesterday with warrants for the arrest of 34 Italians and four Lithunians. The accused are charged with assaulting, shooting and driving the entire colored population out of Spring Valley. The complaint is signed by Charles L. Martin, colored, who upon examination was found to have forty-seven shot in his back and twelve in his head and neck. The sheriff has stationed a few deputies at the top of each shaft, the intention being to arrest the men as fast as they come up. Among the number wanted is seven men of the Spring Valley Italian band who are alleged to have led the mob in the assault upon the negroes.

AN OLD MAN KILLED.

Was He Murdered for His $30 Pension Money Just Drawn?

ABBEVILLE, Ga., Aug. 17. — Dock Wade, an aged and industrious Confederate veteran, was brutally murdered at the house of one Sam Wallace on the outskirts of Abbeville, at an early hour yesterday. Sam Wallace's wife and brother, Rush, a half-witted boy, are now in jail, the former being strongly suspected of the murder.

Wade was a state pensioner and had just received $30 from the state. It is supposed that he was killed for the purpose of robbery.

THE PRESS COMING

To Make the Exposition Medals—Large Exhibit of Coins and Medals.

PHILADELPHIA, PA., Aug. 17.—Chief Coiner Morgan, of the Philadelphia mint, is preparing to ship to Atlanta, Ga., the press that was sent to the Chicago World's Fair, and on which so many souvenir medals were struck off.

The press will be used in making bronze medals for the Atlanta Exposition. The design for the proposed souvenirs is now being engraved at the mint. The Philadelphia mint will send a large exhibit of coins and medals to the Exposition.

ARBITRATION CONGRESS.

An International Arbitration Court Recommended—Next Meeting at Buda Pesth.

BRUSSELS, Aug. 17.—The international parliamentary arbitration congress, which has been in session in this city, concluded its labors yesterday. The next meeting will be held in Buda Pesth.

King Leopold, in response to a telegram sent to him by the conference, expressed a wish that their labors would be successful.

They recommended an international arbitration court.

THREE PEOPLE BURNED.

Was It Foul Play, or Was It Simply an Accident?

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Aug. 17.—Last night near Arlington, Tenn., the log house of Mrs. Callie Harrell, was destroyed by fire and she and her two daughters were burned to death and their bodies entirely consumed. The son who slept in the rear of the house escaped with his life. Foul play is suspected and the sheriff has left for Arlington with bloodhounds.

Deputy Marshall Killed.

MASHALL, N. C., Aug 17.—Deputy United States marshall Zebulon Whitt, was shot and instantly killed on Banjo Branch, in this county last night by Lon Mollowe, J. F. Mace, Newton Mace and John Flashy. No arrests have been made. The cause of the shooting is unknown.

He Paid the Penalty.

MOUNT STERLING, KY., Aug. 17.—John Johnson, colored, who murdered Policeman Charles Evans, June 15th, of this year, was hanged at 11 o'clock yesterday. Twenty-five minutes later he was pronounced dead. The scaffold was in an enclosure. Ten people witnessed the execution.

Accepts a Professorship.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—Hon. W. D. Dabney, solicitor of the state department, will resign during September to accept the position of professor at law at the University of Virginia. His present office pays $3,500 a year.

SUMMER DULLNESS

Prevails, Though in Spite of it Trade and Business Hold Up.

NEW YORK, Aug. 17.—R. G. Dun & Company in their weekly review of trade today says: It is a belated season; a frost may set everything back. The heavy business which ought to have been done in May and June was pushed into July so that the midsummer decline due in July comes in August. With this in mind, one is not surprised to find the shrinkage from July to August rather more conspicious than usual. Financial events are used in speculative markets to create apprehension. Exports of gold have continued this week and while the syndicate has deposited enough in the treasury to keep the reserve intact the impression grows that another sale of bonds may be made. Exports are falling below last year's in two weeks of August $3,300,000 or 20 per cent., while imports show a small increase of 5½ per cent. Government receipts for half of August are $7,171,836 less than expenses. The disappointing crop reports of last Saturday though evidently distrusted, lessen confidence in regard to the future of trade, even while some speculators gain by them.

Back of all doubts is the fact that the industries are doing better than anybody could have expected. The output of pig iron August 1, was 180,525 tons weekly or 176,505 by another report in either case close to the largest output in 1893, though surpassed 15,000 tons in the spring of 1892. Unsold stocks are 88,078 tons smaller.

The great steel companies having made heavy purchases in advance of needs, but the actual consumption is large, and prices rise in the face of the increasing output. Bessemer iron is $14.15 at Pittsburg, plates have advanced, $1, per ton, though other prices are in some cases shaded in the east. Woolen manufacturers find in their way large sales of foreign goods at prices whice cause official investigations. The imports were 32,000,000 pounds of cloths, dress goods in the first half of the year against 6,900,000 last year. The sales of wool indicate that domestic wool is largely held for speculation at prices about a cent higher than manufacturers feel able to pay. Few strikes in woolen mills occur but the carpet workers about Philadelphia are still idle. Shipments of boots and shoes have fallen almost to last year's figures for Aug. thus far and orders are as yet scanty for the new season, but prices are firm and leather does not change, though tanners decline to pay current quotations, 9 3-4 to 10 cents for western buff hides.

Failures for the week have been 196 in the United States against 259 last year and 37 in Canada against 45, last year.

COWBOYS RACING SOUTH.

CHICAGO, Aug. 17.—Four cowboys will start from the '49 mining camp in a race to Atlanta, Ga., at 8 a. m. today. Friendly rivalry is the cause of the race of 906 miles. The contest is for a purse of $2,000, and is between H. G. Payne and Harvey Campbell, representing the stock yards, and Henrico Schultig, a Spaniard, and Arthur Bingham, alias "Billy, the Kid," a Chileno, representing the '49 mining camp. The rules of the contest provide for registration at the various postoffices en route and the telegraphing such certificates to the city.

NEW COTTON MILL

Is Exempted From Taxes for Five Years. By Legislative Authority.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Aug. 17.—The county commissioners have passed a resolution exempting from taxation for five years the cotton mill which is to be put up and operated by J. B. Cotton and associates This action of the commissioners was taken at the suggestion of the Commercial Club.

An act passed by the general assembly of 1892-3, authorizes the exemption from taxation for a certain period of new industrial plants erected in the state.

A STRUCTURE COLLAPSES.

SEYMOUR, IND., Aug. 17.—Four men were severely injured yesterday by being carried down with a falling scaffold on the Strauss building. They are:

John Holmes, contractor, leg smashed and back injured; Henry Barkman, workman, injured in back and on head; Andy Heyob, workman, cut on head, also injured internally; Capt. Joseph Balsley, hip mashed and hurt internally. Balsley is the architect of the building and mayor of the city.

She Committed Suicide.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Aug. 17.—Mrs. Emil Franke, the young and pretty wife of the window dresser of the Globe clothing store, committed suicide yesterday by taking an overdose of morphine. Her husband is said to be the cause. While out cycling with a companion she took the drug. Her maiden name was Josie Davis, formerly of Kansas City. She passed here as a fortune teller and materialistic spirit medium.

Six Men Killed by a Premature Blast.

ALTOONA, Pa., Aug. 17.—This evening at 6 o'clock a blast prepared on the Pittsburg & Eastern railroad, in Clearfield county, near Mehaffy, was exploded prematurely. Six men were killed and as many more badly injured. Further particulars are unobtainable.

They Did Not Read the Papers.

JEFFERSONVILLE, Ga., Aug. 17.—A large number of country people assembled here yesterday to witness the execution of Mrs. Nobles and the negro Gus Fambles. They were incensed upon hearing that both of the condemned had been respited.

Cholera Becoming Serious.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 17.—The Novoe Vrenya publishes a dispatch from Vladivostock, showing that the outbreak of cholera in China, Corea and Formosa is becoming serious.

THE SUPREME BENCH

The Discussions as to the Man to Fill the Vacancy.

WHO WILL BE JACKSON'S SUCCESSOR?

The President is Offered Much Advice, But Will Make His Own Appointment—New York's Claim—Senator Linsay's Chances.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—There is no little discussion here as to the successor of Justice Jackson on the supreme court bench. It would appear from the number of names proposed and the variety of considerations suggested that great difficulty attaches to the task of filling the vacancy on the supreme bench. The president is advised on the one hand not to permit sectionalism to enter into the question; to sweep the country with his official eye and take the man, regardless of locality, best suited to the office and its duties. He is informed on the other hand that the place of right, belongs to New York, and that a New Yorker should be selected to fill it. He is advised on the other hand that there is a growing sentiment in the country in favor of non-partisanship in judicial appointments, and he is assured that he could not do a better thing than to follow General Harrison's example in appointing Judge Jackson and go outside of politics altogether. On the other hand that suggestion is laughed at. And for names, the list is so long it runs all the way from local judges never before heard of outside of their limited circuits to those lawyers of national reputation, whose merits have been canvassed in connection with every supreme court vacancy in the past dozen years.

In Favor of a New Yorker.

The argument offered in favor of a New York man is not new, but eastern men think it strong. These men put their finger on the map and point out that all the vast empire, teeming with people and containing thousands of large manufacturing and commercial plants, between Pittsburg, where Mr. Justice Shiras resides, and Boston, where Mr. Justice Gray resides, is without a representative on the supreme court. The bulk of the business of the court comes from this section, now neglected. The knottiest of legal questions arise out of the clashing interests of this great hive of commercial industry, and justice, it is held, requires that in deciding them the highest court should be assisted in its deliberations by a member altogether familiar with local statutes and practices. This is supplemented by the fact, nowhere disputed, that the field of selection contains some of the best equipped lawyers in the country.

Senator Lindsay.

Outside of New York the most prominent name mentioned in connection with the office is that of Senator Lindsay of Kentucky. Mr. Lindsay is regarded as being more partial to the law than to politics. He served one term of eight years as a member of the highest court in his state, and for part of the term was the chief justice. If this appointment should be made it would greatly simplify the political situation in the blue grass country. The next legislature of the state would have the choosing of two United States senators instead of one. The difficulty in the state at present relates to Mr. Blackburn, who is a free coinage man and and wants to succeed himself in the senate. The sound money democrats are opposing him, and there is some danger that in the strife the seat may be captured by the republicans. But if another senatorship should be thrown into the scale the two democratic factions, by agreeing each to take one, could be brought to work together to make both certain. By this arrangement Mr. Blackburn could succeed himself, and a sound money democrat could be elected to succeed Mr. Lindsay.

No Need for Hurry.

The best opinion is that the president has not given the matter a thought as yet. He need not hurry. The new man's presence on the bench when the court meets in October is not regarded as a matter of necessity. Had judge Jackson survived he would not have been in attendance. If the president chooses, therefore, he may take until December to decide upon his man. Only two things in connection with the appointment would appear to be certain at present. The new member of the court will be a democrat. His views as to money will bear the very closest scrutiny and meet the thorough approval of those who agree with the president on that subject. When the nomination comes before the senate that body, it is probable, will want to know something about the nominee's views on the subject or an income tax.

EVANSVILLE TRAGEDY.

Mrs. Browning Kills Her Husband and Then Herself.

EVANSVILLE, Ind., Aug. 17.—Mrs. Wm. Browning killed her husband and then herself last night. The couple had been quarreling, and Mrs. Browning ended up the misunderstanding by shooting her husband. He died instantly and then she killed herself.

Educational Boom On.

FALKVILLE, Ala., Aug. 17.—Falkville is erecting a magnificent three-story college building. A grand educational rally and picnic will be given here today. Gov. Oates, Prof. Jas. K. Powers and many other distinguished men will speak. A wonderful enthusiasm has been worked up by Prof. J. B. Sherrill, late of Sherrill college.

Bulgarians Still Massacreing.

SOFIA, Aug. 17.—It is reported here that 100 villagers were killed in the attack on August 9, by Bulgarians in the village of Janakli, in the Kirdjali district. The insurgents lost 16. No women or children were killed.

GENERAL MAXEY DEAD.

EUREKA SPRINGS, Ark., Aug. 17.—General Samuel Bell Maxey, ex-United States senator, died here yesterday. The remains were taken to Paris, Texas for interment.

General Maxey was born in Tompkinsville, Ky., in 1825, of a Huguenot family. He graduated from West Point in 1846 and was assigned to the Seventh Infantry. He fought in all the principal battles of the war with Mexico. He resigned in 1849 and the following year began the practice of law at Albany, Ky. He retired in 1873 and four years later removed to Paris, Texas. He raised the Ninth Texas Infantry during the civil war and organiled and commanded all the forces of the Indian Territory. He was made Major-General for his military achievements. He was elected to the United States senate from Texas in 1874 and 1881.

IS IT RAILROAD BILL?

A Man of His Description is Killed, But Identification Not Established.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Aug. 17—Yesterday a negro was killed near Chipley, Ga., by young Willis Garner, one of the sheriff's posse, who came upon him in a deserted house. The negro opened fire upon Garner with a pistol, shooting him in the abdomen, and after falling to the ground, dangerously wounded, the young man returned the fire, one of the bullets penetrating the negroe's chest, coming out at the back of his neck. "Railroad Bill" if it is he, lived about six hours, and when asked by the sheriff: "Are you 'Railroad Bill'?" he replied, "I may be and I may not." This is all the satisfaction that could be obtained from the then dying man. Several persons viewed the corpse, and while the size, color, clothes etc., correspond, none was quite certain it was "Railroad Bill."

FATAL FIRE AT FINDLAY

Smoke From Burning Oil Obscures the Heavens For Miles.

TOLEDO, O., Aug. 17.—An explosion and resultant fire entirely consumed the plant of the Peerless refinery, Findlay, with $60,000 loss, half insured. A benzine tank first exploded, cause unknown, and in an instant the building was wrapped in seething flames. Two stillmen, William Adams and William Bemiss, were probably fatally burned. Ten oil stills caught next, and one after the other exploded, sending flaming oil over the surrounding buildings and ground. Next two tanks of crude, containing 12,000 gallons, caught fire, sending up red columns of flames 200 feet into the air. A mammoth tank of 30,000 barrels was fired into with a cannon letting the oil run out, where it caught fire. The oil is still burning and the smoke obscures the heavens for miles.

A FATAL ACCIDENT.

An Elevator Breaks and Six Men Are Seriously Injured.

UTICA, N. Y., Aug. 17.—At 7 o'clock yesterday morning, six men stopped work on the elevator in course of construction in the Marvin block in this city. The engineer started the engine and the elevator was drawn to the top of the building. Just as one of the men was about to step on the temporary floor, the rope holding the pulley to the iron girder on the roof, broke and the elevator and its six passengers fell to the cellar, 55 feet below. Jeremiah Hess, taken to city hospital, was dead when he reached there. His neck and left arm were broken and his forehead crushed. Albert McLay and Emery Wood were injured so seriously that they may die. The other three men will probably live.

DOUBLE HOMICIDES.

One Is That of a Tramp, and the Other an Imitation of Cain.

MADISON, Fla., Aug. 17.—There were two homicides committed in Madison county yesterday. At Cherry Lake, J. L. Wyche, a prominent farmer shot and killed a white tramp named White. White tried to assault Wyche and the latter fired in self-defense.

Near Lee, Cæsar and Zach General, brothers and negroes, quarrelled, and Cæsar threatened to whip Zach. As Cæsar approached, Zach fired, tearing his brother's head off.

An Old Feud Ends in Two Deaths.

GADSDEN, Ala., Aug, 17.—Jim Thornton shot and is thought killed Dolphus Coats and fatally wounded the latter's mother who stepped between them, at Coats Bend, Etawah county, about 18 miles above the city. It was the culmination of an old feud, Thornton not intending to shoot the woman. It is thought both will die. Thorton skipped and has not been arrested.

The Sun's Cotton Review.

NEW YORK, Aug. 17.—Cotton fell 7 to 8 points, recovered most of this and then reacted and closed barely steady at a net decline of 7 points, with sales of 208,000 bales. Liverpool declined 1-32d on the spot, with sales of 8,000 bales; futures declined 3 points and closed quiet and steady.

Roller Mills Burned.

WINSTON, N. C., Aug. 17.—The Heltor roller flour mills in Ashe county were destroyed by fire yesterday. The loss to the owners, Perkins Brothers, is several thousand dollars, with no insurance. The mills at the same place were destroyed one year ago.

Twenty Years For Killing His Sweetheart.

WINSTON, N. C. Aug. 17.—Bud Cunningham gets twenty years hard labor in the penitentiary for killing his sweetheart, Lenora Bailey, last May. Sentence was passed yesterday. The jury returned its verdict in the morning of murder in second degree.

Wages Increased.

LAPORTE, Ind., Aug. 17.—The Haskell & Barker Car Co., at Michigan City, employing 1,000 men, has given official notice of an increase of 10 per cent. in wages. The advance dates from July first.

THROUGH ALABAMA

Interesting News That Has Occurred During the Week.

A YOUTHFUL JAILOR OVERPOWERED.

Escape of Five Desperate Prisoners From the County Jail at Center, Alabama. The Treasurer of Sumter County Suicides.

CENTER, Ala., Aug. 16.—Four prisoners escaped from the jail at this place by overpowering the boy jailer, and three of them are still at large. Tip Wright was recaptured within a short distance of the jail. One of the three is Jim Williams, colored, under a twenty-year sentence for an assault on the Misses Sewall, near Howell's crossroads, last month. Another one is Horace Pierce, reputed to be a dangerous character. His home is near Rock Run, and he had just finished one term in prison, when he murdered a man named Powell, for which he was in jail at the time of his escape. The third was Lloyd Lewis, charged with murder.

ALABAMA'S REPRESENTATIVES.

Governor Oates Announces the Women Managers for His State.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Aug. 17.—Governor Oates has announced the following as the board of lady managers for the women's department of the Alabama exhibit at the Atlanta exposition: Mrs. John M. Martin, Mrs. Jack W. Johnson, and Miss Margaret O'Brien, of Birmingham; Mrs. Price Williams and Mrs. E. L. Russell, of Mobile: Mrs. M. B. Bibb and Miss Jennie Cromelin, of Montgomery: Mrs. R. M. Nelson, of Selma: Mrs. Fannie V. King, of Scottsboro: Mrs. N. C. Eiting and Miss Julia O'Neal, of Florence; Miss Mattie Hundley, of Swancote: Mrs. L. L. Langhorn, of Uniontown; Miss Kate Coleman, of Union Springs and Miss Celia Seton Wilder, of Decatur. The governor's selection are believed here to be exceedingly happy ones.

STRANGE TRAGEDY.

G. Pearson Shot by Hines Reid for no Apparent Cause.

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Aug. 16.—"Give me the gun. I want to shoot him" were the words addressed to Walter Samuels in his room Wednesday, by Hines Reid, and the man to be shot was George Pearson, a young business man of the city, who was reclining in a hammock in a room reading from a book. Samuels gave him the pistol playfully, when Reid shot Pearson sure enough, inflicting what is thought to be a mortal wound, and then made his escape.

Absolutely no cause for the act can be imagined, and the shooting was a shock to the whole town. The gentlemen were close friends and seemed devoted to each other.

TIRED OF LIFE.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Aug. 13.—Robert A. Barnes, treasurer of Sumter county, suicided yesterday at his residence in Livingston. His health had been very poor for some months, and for two weeks he had been confined to his room.

His wife, who was watching over him, left him for a few moments and went into the next room to prepare his medicine. While she was gone he arose from bed, got down from the wall a loaded shotgun, placed the barrel just above his heart and fired, death being instantaneous. Deceased leaves his widow and two children. He stood high in the town and county and it is believed his books are correct. Disease had evidently overthrown reason and caused him to take his own life.

MANGLED TO DEATH.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Aug. 17.—While Mary Davis, a young woman, was walking on the tracks of the Tennessee Coal & Iron railroad, one mile from the city yesterday she saw a coal train approaching and stepped over on the Kansas City, Memphis and Birmingham railroad track, which parallels that of the Tennessee Coal and Iron railroad company. Just then the express from Memphis dashed around the curve, and striking her hurled her body under the wheels of the coal train, which mangled her to death. The coroner is investigating.

THE DOCTORS PUZZLED.

A Case Reported Where A Woman Sleeps for Three Months.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Aug. 16.—A special to the Advertiser, from Guntersville, Ala., says Mrs. James Rutherford of this county was brought to town yesterday. About six months ago this woman fell into a deep sleep from which she awoke at long intervals, but it has now been three months since she was awoke. Twice a day food is put in her mouth which she swallows ravenously, but the action is purely mechanical. The doctors are puzzled over the case and do not know what to do.

Educational Boom On.

FALKVILLE, Ala., Aug. 17.—Falkville is erecting a magnificent three-story college building. A grand educational rally and picnic will be given here today. Gov. Oates, Prof. Jas. K. Powers and many other distinguished men will speak. A wonderful enthusiasm has been worked up by Prof. J. B. Sherrill, late of Sherrill college.

THE CHRONICLE.

C. C. DuBOSE, Editor and Proprietor.

COLUMBIANA, AUGUST 22, 1895.

In the mining war in Illinois between Italians and negro laborers it would be interesting to know with which side a majority of the white people of the state sympathized.

If the Cuban revolution is not suppressed before congress meets, it will certainly be in the interest of humanity and civilization for the United States government to recognize the Cuban republic.

"Corn," says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, "is not the only product which is breaking all records. The iron output these days is the largest which the country has ever had at this time of the year. Moreover, it is steadily growing. This is one of the most striking evidences which could be found that a period of business activity exceeding any which the country has yet known is close at hand." The woolen and cotton mills are also on a boom of production.

The Georgia peach has become as popular in the East as the Georgia melon. They are displacing the Delaware and Jersey peaches, being decidedly superior in flavor, and some earlier. As for the tasteless beauties of California, they are nowhere compared to the big, rich flavored, juicy Georgians. The state sent several million dollars worth of this splendid fruit to the eastern and northern cities, in the season just closing.

Some papers abuse Gov. Oates for borrowing $100,000 in New York to pay the teachers in our public schools. The constitution authorizes the state to borrow that amount, and certainly the object was a worthy one. Besides the governor was able to procure the loan at 5 per cent. per annum; which speaks well for the state's credit. There may be some fault somewhere for the state treasury being empty, but we can certainly see no just cause of complaint against the governor for borrowing the money.

The four states of Illinois, Iowa, Indiana and Missouri produced, in 1891, 912,000,000 bushels of corn. The condition of the crop in those states now is 7 per cent above the normal; they may therefore be expected, present conditions continuing to the end, to harvest about 1,000,000,000 bushels this year. Add the probable 300,000,000 bushels of Kansas, and we will have in the five states, more, by considerable, than half of the banner crop of 1889, which was 2,112,000,000 bushels. Nobody need be surprised if this year's crop "shells out" fully 2,500,000,000 bushels, or even more than that, or 70,000,000 net tons of clear grain. The figures are so large that they are hard to comprehend. We will have a ton of corn—shelled, no cobs in it,—for every man, woman and child in the country—and a few millions to spare.

The account of the last illness and death of George Washington, written by his private secretary, has recently been published. It is related that the great man had caught a pretty violen cold, by riding in a December rain. He woke at 3 a. m. in a chill. The fires in the house were out, and he would not have any of the aroused, not deeming himself at all seriously ill. In the morning he used some domestic remedies and his overseer took from him a half pint of blood. Then came the doctor and bled him again. Another doctor was called in and the blood letting was resorted to for the third time. Then the case began to look desperate, and by way of doing something for their distinguished patient, the doctors bled him a fourth time, soon after which he died. The doctors called his disease laryngitis, and said he died of it; but a physician of today would probably say he died of the homicidal treatment of the scientific butchers, who literally bled the man to death.

THE GOLD MAN SAYS.

Mobile Register.

"The gold men tell us that it is dishonest for a silver miner to be allowed to go to a government mint and have fifty cents' worth of silver coined into a dollar and in the next breath they tell us that a silver dollar is worth only fifty cents. And they can't see the contradiction."

This paragraph made its first appearance South in the columns of the Memphis Commercial-Appeal, was copied by an Alabama free silver paper, and is now circulating as original matter in the state weeklies. It is apparently a very attractive paragraph, and the editors who use it believe it is conclusive; yet it contains a fallacy the same as does every free silverite argument. There is a saying that if you scratch a Russian you will find a Tartar; and equally true is it that what seem the most polished arguments of the free silver men are at heart deceptions, having a falsehood for their basis.

The "gold man" referred to in the paragraph, is a man of straw. There never was such a gold man. Were there one such, he would be an absurdity, and therefore easily shown to be so. Having set up this man of straw, the paragraphist knocks him down in a jiffy and all the silverite papers throw up their hats and cry, "hurrah!"

The true gold man says: It is dishonest for a silver miner to be allowed to go to the government mint and have fifty cents in silver coined into a dollar. It is dishonest because the silver mine owner is the only one who has silver bullion; he alone can take his product and sell it to the government at twice its value. The farmer has not this privilege. The farmer, however, has to pay his taxes and it is out of the accumulated taxes that the silver mine owner is paid for his bullion. Money is taken out of the farmers' pockets in the shape of taxes and paid over to the mine owner in the form of bounty; and this the gold man will tell you is dishonest. Is it not favoritism shown to the few at the expense of the many? Is that fair? Is that honest? What farmer can truthfully say that it is fair or honest?

But stop! says the paragraphist: In the next breath the gold man tells us that a silver dollar is worth only 50 cents; so the silver mine owner, when he is paid a dollar for his 50 cents' worth of silver, gets but 50 cents after all.

He is mistaken. The gold man does not say that a silver dollar is worth only 50 cents. He knows the dollar is held at a parity with the gold dollar and that it will buy as much as a gold dollar, and therefore it is worth 100 cents in gold; but he knows also that the reason this is so is because the government has pledged its word that the parity shall be maintained between its silver and its gold dollars, and that the government will maintain this pledge by every means in its power. The government has a gold reserve and it has a power of borrowing gold, and, with the aid of congress, it has a taxing power. All three sources of gold supply will be devoted to the sustaining of the parity, because the party and the government have declared that it is the right thing to do. So long as there is gold in hand and gold obtainable, 50 cents' worth of silver bullion in the shape of a silver dollar will be worth 100 cents in gold "in the markets and in the payment of debts." This is what the gold man says.

When the gold man speaks of a silver dollar worth only 50 cents he means that its intrinsic value is but 50 cents, and that should the gold supply and the gold borrowing power of the government be exhausted, the silver dollar, having no gold to support it, would have no greater purchasing power than it has bullion value.

It may be very easily seen therefore how, under present conditions, a silver mine owner may by legislative enactment obtain a 100 cents dollar for 50 cents' worth of silver, and yet eventually, and resulting from the same legislative enactment, the silver dollar will be worth but 50 cents. There is no contradiction.

What is more, there seems to be no doubt that if the independent free coinage idea prevail, the gold supply and gold borrowing power of the government will be exhausted. For a little while the owners of silver bullion will have a bonanza. They will exchange 50 cents' worth of silver for 100 cents' worth of gold or its equivalent, and such will be the rush for this gold that it will disappear like snow under the rays of the sun; then there being no more gold, silver will slump, and silver dollars will lose one-half their value. The silver dollar will be worth only 50 cents. If you want that sort of money you can have it by voting enough votes for it, but you ought not to want it, for it means your ruin.

The First Ratio.

A corresponcent asks us the following question: "When, by whom, and under what circumstances was the ratio between gold and silver first established?" It was not established by any government. It grew. The historian, Mommsen, tells us that gold was the first metallic money in Greece, and silver the first in Asia Minor. The necessities of trade required that there should be some ratio between the two, but it was fixed by the custom of merchants, not by governments. Both kinds of money drifted into Italy with the Greek migration, but there the earliest money was copper, and there was a ratio between silver and copper, a ratio established by custom, which was liable to frequent change. The modern conception of a ratio between silver and gold after the Middle Ages, in the thirteenth century.—N. Y. Post.

THE FUTURE OF THE NEGRO RACE.

The driving out of the negro miners at Spring Valley, Ill., in which proceeding Italian miners are the aggressors, is another proof that the conflict between white and negro labor in this country is unavoidable, and that it cannot be settled in the law courts. The trouble at Spring Valley is described as a race war, and superficial observers are apt to say that prejudice of the whites against the blacks is at the bottom of the affair. We think it may be demonstrated, however, that the conflict is a wages trouble; that if the blacks worked for the same wages as the whites and complied with the rules of the labor unions, there would be no dispute. Prejudice and race antagonism there certainly are, particularly as between American negroes and foreignborn whites; but these forces are not sufficiently strong to induce the shedding of negro blood by the whites. When, however, the black man steps in between the white man and his food, between the white man and his opportunity to earn a living for his wife and children, the struggle for existence begins. The negro, by reason of his simple habits, his preference for cheap food and his ability to live under conditions that would be intolerate to the white man, can afford to offer his services at a wage much cheaper than will support the white man. The white man has his wife and children to support; the black man's wife usually supports herself and children, and sometimes the husband also. It is an unequal contest so far as the economies of life are concerned; and the white man, recognizing this, falls back upon physical force, wherein he is the superior of the black man.

The contest is sharp and decisive. As in New Orleans so in Spring Valley, the negro is thrown out. If he resists he is shot down or chased into the river and drowned. We may deplore this but we cannot shut our eyes to the existence of the facts; and this is but the beginning. Everywhere the negro is coming in closer and sharper contact with the white man; everywhere the flame of antagonism is being fanned to a dangerous point. In the South we have the horrible crimes of the negroes to contend with; in the North the negroe's demand for social recognition is arousing intense resentment. These are but symptoms of a discontent that breaks out into furious demonstrations of hatred whenever the provocation is afforded. So far, fortunately, the provocation is not general; but once let the wages dispute become widespread, as it is sure to do, and we shall see a war which cannot but have disastrous results for the weaker side. The outlook for the negro race is not pleasant to contemplate. The race is forced by natural causes into competition and conflict with the stronger, more aggressive and absolutely pitiless white race. We read in the history of the Red Indian and the more recent history of the Chinese immigrant, what the negro must expect in the future.

NEEDLESS FEARS ABOUT GOLD.

The abnormal sensitiveness of the security market to even the slight exportations of gold that have always been usual at this season, is a reminiscence of the panic of 1893. The outflow of gold was the marked symptom of that period of collapse, and now every lot of bullion exported causes a cold shiver on the street.

It is just as well to remember that the conditions are by no means the same as before the repeal of the silver purchase act, when the currency was undergoing a constant inflation by the issue of Treasury notes, with the effect of paying out gold in exchange for silver bullion. That such a policy would drain the treasury of gold was inevitable. But that disastrous policy has been stopped and the conditions that preceded the panic of 1893 no longer exist. Gold exports, therefore, cannot have the same significance now as then.

The truth is, our exports of gold have been much smaller than usual this summer, and their aggregate will be found far below the current product of our mines. This point, to which Mr. Leach, formerly Director of the mint and now a bank officer in New York, has lately drawn attention is one that is generally overlooked. Mr. Leach estimates this year's gold product of the United States at $45,000,000, besides some five millions in ore from Mexican mines and two millions from the British possessions and Alaska, all of which come to our mints. And yet people fall into a fright when they hear that a small fraction of all this product has been sent abroad.

Of course this sensitiveness is due to the unscientific and abnormal relations of the United States Treasury with the currency of the country. This year's experience must have shown to the dullest comprehension that the protection of a paper currency is a part of the business of banking and not properly a function of government. Some day congress will learn enough to legislate in recognition of this fact, and then we shall not need to worry ourselves about the gold reserve.

Old People.

Old people who require medicine to regulate the bowels and kidneys will find the true remedy in Electric Bitters. This medicine does not stimulate and contains no whiskey nor other intoxicant, but acts as a tonic and alterative. It acts mildly on the stomach and bowels, adding strength and giving tone to the organs, thereby aiding nature in the performance of the functions. Electric Bitters is an excellent appetizer and aids digestion. Old people find it just exactly what they need. Price fifty cents per bottle at Parker & Armstrong's drug store.

THE HOWLERS AND THE SYNDICATE.

One wonders what the Vests, Morgans, et id omne genus, would find to scream about, if, suddenly the bond syndicate should cease to be needed for the protection of the reserve in our big, absurd, ill-contrived bank, which we call the sub-treasury. Certainly, in such an event a lot of noisy and pestilent traitors to American honor would be sore puzzled for a text, though they'd soon find another, we suppose. In this connection it were well we remembered that the clumsy banking business which is at the bottom of our woes, was not the work of Cleveland's administration. That administration should be given the credit of having used all its influence with congress to rid the government of the perpetual menace to its credit that lurks in the institution mentioned. Then we should recall the fact that Vest, Morgan & Co. voted and labored to defeat every proposition calculated to put the currency on a safer and more stable basis, and relieve the treasury of the danger of gold depletion, though the redemption law requires the country to take on itself the superfluous burden of maintaining a great amount of uncovered paper at par. All the populists joined Vest and Co., in defeating all efforts to remedy this condition. They are now engaged in furiously denouncing those who tried to fix a remedy which the denouncers defeated, out of abundant perversity and unpatriotism.

But there are some crumbs of comfort left to those who respect their country and honor the men who ably administer its government. The bond syndicate is denounced today for having gone back on its bargain and left the president helpless; this was great glee in the columns of the Atlanta Constitution and its satelites, but the perverse syndicate sends to the subtreasury some millions of gold and takes currency in exchange. Whether the malignants can tell the truth or not, the syndicate shows the country steadily that it can, and means to carry out its pledges to the letter.

And while this is being done the able financiers of the country should give their most careful attention to some plan they may agree on for reforming entirely our currency system. This can be done in time of prosperity far more easily than at any other; and surely we have had abundant proof out of the panic just shaken off, but vividly remembered, that it needs to be done, must be done.

If the Bill Was Genuine He Had Enough to Spare.

New York Tribune.

Recently a bishop of the Methodist Episcopal church returned from a tour of the South and made his headquarters at one of the big hotels uptown. To those who called upon him at the hotel he told a funny story about his experience among the negroes of the South. He went down with a party to one of the fashionable winter resorts along the coast. One Sunday he was told of a service that was to be held at a colored Methodist church several miles inland. It was suggested that the party attend these services, and accordingly carriages were ordered and the drive was made. The rest of the story is best told in his own language. He said:

"When we arrived at the church we found that it was to be a sort of special service to raise money to pay off a church debt. They had recently erected a new church and it was only partly paid for. The local bishop had been summoned and a great effort was being made to get the money. When we had taken our seats a colored brother came around and asked us if we would not go to the front, but we declined.

"In the course of his remarks, the bishop dwelt upon the good work that had been done in the name of the Redeemer, and called upon everyone present to contribute something toward paying off the great debt that the church had assumed in building a new house of worship. He said that the debt was $142.35, and that it must be met. His eloquent plea reached our hearts and we made up a little purse among ourselves and raised $100. The money was handed to me, and I, when the plate was passed around, laid a crisp hundred-dollar bill on the plate.

"While the money was being counted a song service was held. It was plainly evident to us that something unusual was going on and there was a subdued air of excitement among those counting the money. Finally the bishop stepped to the front and raised his hand. The music ceased at once. He began to speak very gravely, and imagine our astonishment when he said:

"'Brethren, we have met with remarkable success in our efforts today. We have received enough money to pay off the debt, and a surplus of $14.12—that is, providin' the bill which the gentleman from the North gave us is genuine.'"

Kenneth Bazemore had the good fortune to receive a small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy when three members of his family were sick with dysentery. This one small bottle cured them all and he had some left which he gave to Geo. W. Baker, a prominent merchant of the place, Lewiston, N. C., and it cured him of the same complaint. When troubled with dysentery, diarrhœa, colic or cholera morbus, give this remedy a trial and you will be more than pleased with the result. The praise that naturally follows its introduction and use has made it very popular. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Parker & Armstrong.

Mrs. Gordon DuBose and Miss Emma DuBose returned home Saturday from a visit to relatives in North Alabama.

Col. John K. Milner, of Anniston, who, we are told, is the "prepared mustard," paid our town a call this forenoon.

Columbiana defeated the Shelby base ball club Tuesday, the score standing 11 to 8. We are informed that another game will be played here tomorrow.

James Dyke left this morning for his father's house, three miles west of this place, to nurse a very sore hand which has been giving him a great deal of trouble.

W. E. Knox, the genial superintendent of the Mineral division of the L. & N. system, spent two days here this week looking after the interest of his road.

MARRIED.—Wednesday evening last, Aug. 21, near Columbiana, at the residence of David Ray, by Rev. C. W. O'Hara, James S. Collum and Tincey Jane Ray, also John B. Collum and Lily Leeper Ray.

Attention is called to the card of the Wilsonville Institute appearing in this issue. Prof. Kilpatrick has made quite a reputation as a teacher, having given entire satisfaction to all his patrons. See the inducements he offers.

Our people very much under value the turnip as an article of food for cattle. They can be raised in large quantities and with little labor or expense. They are easily kept through the winter and constitute a very valuable food product for man and beast. It is neglect of what are considered the small items on the farm which in a great measure, keep our farmers continually behind hand.

For the 26th Triennial Conclave, Knights Templars at Boston, Mass., August 26th-30th, the Southern Railway will sell tickets at one fare for the round trip. Tickets will be good until September 10th, but upon application to ticket agent of terminal line at Boston, they will be extended until September 30, 1895. For detailed information apply to any agent of the Southern Railway.

My boy was taken with a disease resembling bloody flux. The first thing I thought of was Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. Two doses of it settled the matter and cured him sound and well. I heartily recommend this remedy to all persons suffering from a like complaint. I will answer any inquiries regarding it when stamp is inclosed. I refer to any county official as to my reliability. Wm. Roach, J. P., Primroy, Campbell Co., Tenn. For sale by Parker & Armstrong.

The entertainment at the academy last Friday night was a complete success in every sense of the word. It was gotten up by Mrs. J. R. White, who was assisted by Mrs. M. Cruce, Mrs. M. M. Johnston and several other ladies. The program was excellent and most entertainingly rendered. Miss Nannie Roberts, of Sylacauga, by her superb singing and recitations, added largely to the pleasure of the evening. The neat sum of $13.70 was taken in, and will be used for charitable purposes. We heartily congratulate all of the participants, and hope we may soon be given another opportunity to enjoy the display of their talent.

Items from Sterrett.

A. B. Allen returned to Atlanta last Friday, accompanied by his little girl, Mary.

Joel Falkner has carried two cars of jugs to Birmingham in the last two weeks.

We are sorry to announce the severe illness of Bob Black, but we hope he will soon recover.

We feel sorry for "Reporter" that he can't keep his identity a secret if he wants to keep it so.

A protracted meeting is in progress at Vandiver this week, and several of our people are attending it.

Matison Byers went to Branchville the latter part of last week. We expect he has a touch of the Green disease.

Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Cosper left on Monday evening to take a few days recreation visiting relatives at Jemison.

The infant child of Mr. and Mrs. C. Adams was buried here last Sunday. We extend our sympathies to the bereaved parents.

Oh, Mr. Editor, all the fools are not dead yet, for we heard of a great large fool a few days ago, but I don't think he resides in this community.

Mr. Frank Lynn and family, of Tennessee, who moved away three years ago, have returned and will make their future home near here.

A game of ball was to have been played last Saturday at Mt. Tabor grounds between Sterrett and Liberty teams, but was knocked up on account of rain.

A game of ball was played here the second Saturday between the Sterrett school boys and the Sterrett professionals. The school boys beat the professionals too bad to talk about, 40 to 23.

A very pleasant musical entertainment was given to a select crowd of young people at the home of Mr. Jobe Falkner on last Friday night in honor of the 25th birthday of our estimable friend J. L. Falkner. A very pleasant time is reported. May he live to see many more birthdays, and may they all be as happy as his last one.

Mr. C. Butler has removed his saw mill down on Yellow Leaf creek between Weldon and Wilsonville. We wish him much success at his new location. BONAMI.

Man is not banished from God's presence by what he does, but by what he is.

Shelby Siftings.

Two thousand tons of iron were shipped from the yard during the month of July.

W. R. A. Milner, was in town Friday. Miss Naldo Christian returned with him to attend the concert.

The young people are looking forward with pleasing anticipation to the concert to be given at the Congregational church on the 22nd.

Messrs. Levart and McRoy Christian returned from a visit to Bessemer to their brother. The latter gentleman, we regret to say, has an attack of chills and fever.

Messrs. F. H. Spears and J. M. Mosely hastily left our city in the direction of Columbiana on the 16th inst., where they were admitted to the concert, because of the excellent company with whom they were associated.

Tom Jones caught four sturgeons, not more than thirty feet apart on the line, which averaged thirty pounds. He ate one, and brought three to market Saturday. Who can equal that catch.

Miss Mollie Glenn is absent at Fayetteville for the purposes, first, to attend the quarterly meeting conducted by Rev. Newman, and secondly, to meet and associate with her cousin, Miss Wood, from Texas.

Mr. P. B. Harrell had a pretty race after a red fox. He halted his hounds during the race so as to give reynard a chance to escape; finally the dogs became overheated and sought a bath in the creek. The shy animal is still free.

Mr. Abner Smith has on exhibition at Mr. Glenn's store a stock of corn with three well developed ears of corn on it with a nubbin besides. He has an acre, and some of the stalks have five ears. The seed corn was sent to him from Mechanicsville, Penna.

Gus Perryman, the negro that handles snakes, is here at Mr. Bates. He caught seven lately including a cotton mouth moccasin that struck him several times on the hand and arm. The wound from the venomous reptile effected him no more than a pin scratch. I submit if that is not a mystery for medical science to investigate. What is there in his economy that resists or neutralizes poison?

Harpersville Echoes.

There was another big rain fell here Saturday evening.

Rev. Mr. Giles preached a most excellent sermon at the Baptist church Sunday.

Mr. Giles brought his family over Saturday with him to spend a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. Burks, of Kelley's Creek, attended preaching here Sunday.

Their honor's the two B's of Columbiana passed through Harpersville last Saturday en-route to Vincent to "handle law."

Notwithstanding the long drouth I believe that there will be enough corn made in our community to do, and some to spare.

Last Sunday was conceded by some as being the hottest day of the season.

Rev. Willie Elliott came up from Montgomery last week to assist in the meeting at Vincent, but was called home immediately by a telegram announcing the serious illness of his wife.

Rev Thomas Henderson, of Childersburg, assisted Mr. Kidd in his meeting at Vincent last week who did some fine preaching. Sinners were made to tremble, mourners to rejoice and the church was greatly revived. May the good work go on.

The third quarterly meeting of this circuit will be held here next Monday and at which time they will protract their meeting.

Did you ever see or here of so many watermellons and peaches to beat the world. We are surely favored with the garden spot and why not be contented. Go to church more, pay the preacher better, give more to missions quit cursing Cleveland and the administration, and let that money question which we hear so much talk about and of which so many of us knows but very little about settle itself. Mr. Cleveland has the reins in his hands and he is going to hold them.

Died, on Tuesday night the 20th in Birmingham, infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Barney Russell, aged about 10 months. It was buried here on Wednesday evening. No doubt the fond parents hated to give their darling little baby boy up, but Him who doeth all things well have said "Suffer little children to come unto me and forbid them not, for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven." To the bereaved parents we extend our sympathy.

"JAKE."

When moving into our present home I found a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm left by a former tenant. On the label I found the statement that it was good for cuts and burns. I can testify to the truth of this. Nothing in all my experience has found its equal for treating blisters or burns. F. E. Barrett, manager Le Sueur Sentinel, Le Sueur, Minn. Pain Balm is also a sure cure for rheumatism. For sale by Parker & Armstrong.

How the Meaning of Words Have Changed in 400 Years.

St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Daisy was originally the eye of day, or day's eye.

Hag once meant any old person, whether male or female.

Gallon was originally a pitcher or jar, no matter of what size.

Voyage was formerly any journey, whether by land or sea it did not matter.

Polite at first meant polished, and was applied to any smooth, shining surface.

Good-bye is an abbreviation of an old English form of parting. "God be with you until we meet."

A vagabond was originally only a traveler or person who went from place to place with or without a definite object.

Peck at first meant a basket or receptacle for grain or other substances. The expression at first had no reference to size.

Starve was once to die any manner of death. Wycliffe's sermons will tell how "Christ starved on the cross for the redemption of men."

The word miscreant formerly signified only an unbeliever, an infidel. Joan of Arc, in the literature of her time was called a miscreant.

Acre once meant any field. It is still used with this significance by the Germans, who speak of God's acre, alluding to the cemetery.

Meat once meant any kind of food. In one old English edition of the Lord's Prayer the well-known petition is rendered, "Give us this day our daily meat."

Town originally signified a farm or farmhouse. It is used by Wycliffe in this sense, "and they went their ways—one to his town, another to his merchandise."

Tariff was the name of a Moorish chieftain, Abou al Tarifa, who had a fortress near the Straits of Gibraltar and levied toll on ships and merchandise passing through.

Libel once meant a little book, but as many small tracts in the early days of printing were personal and offensive in character, the word acquired its present significance.

Yard was once any stick, rod or pole. The expression is still used with this meaning when applied to various parts of a ship's equipment, as yardarm, sailyard, and the like.

Imp once meant a child. Shakespeare, speaking of the children in the tower, calls them imps. Jeremy Taylor, in one of his sermons, speaks of "the beautiful imps that sang hosannas to the Saviour in the temple."

The expression blackguard originally indicated the scullion, kitchen boys, and pot-washers, who brought up the rear when a great man's household was moving from place to place. As these persons were by no means choice in their language or elegant in their deportment, the word was soon applied to those who in speech or action resembled them.

Tribute to the Kicker.

Abbeville Times

Here's to the kicker, the treacherous kicker, the kicker who never is true; who always is crying and never is trying some good for his own town to do. No use to correct him nor need you to expect him to get to the front like a man, while others hustle he'll sit down and rustle objections to raise on each plan. But when the brute dies, we'll pause with dry eyes, on his fortunate condition to dwell, and we'll envy the devil that will handle the shovel, when he roasts the rank kicker well.

In order to introduce Chamberlain's Cough Remedy here we sold several dozen bottles on strict guarantee and have found every bottle did good service. We have used it ourselves and think it superior to any other. W. I. Mowrey, Jarvisville, W. Va. For sale by Parker & Armstrong.

WHERE IS HADES?

The ancient philosophers were of the opinion that the infernal regions were located at an equal distance from all parts of the earth's surface, which may be the foundation for the modern idea which locates hell at the center of our planet. This belief in a centrally located place of torment, or utter annihilation, appears to have existed among the Jews at a very early date also. According to their belief, there were three passages leading to it—the wilderness, by which route Dathan, Korah and Abiram descended; the sea, because it is written that Jonah cried to God out of the belly of hell, and a third passage, which last was at Jerusalem.

This third and last idea of the mouth of hell being located in the capital of Palestine, is founded upon the Biblical passage which says: "The fire of the Lord is in Zion, and his furnace is in Jerusalem." The Mohamedans, who are noted for their superstitious regard for the number seven, declare that hell is provided with seven gates, each intended for the followers of the different religions. The first is for recreant Musselmans; the second, very wide and with shutter always standing invitingly ajar, is for Christians only; the third, located near the second and almost as wide and roomy, is reserved for Jews; the fourth gate is the one through which the spirits of the Sabeans will enter the land of torment. Like the last two, it is wide enough to do a wholesale business without crowding. The fifth is a small loophole of a gate intended for the sect of Maji, a sect so insignificant that the Mohammedan's hell idea apparently grudgingly allowed a separate opening for their spirits when on the way to eternal punishment. The sixth gate, the one circular opening in the walls of hell is the gate by which the pagans will enter. Why the pagan gate is believed to be circular I have never seen explained. The seventh gate in the walls of the Mohammedan hell is reserved for the hypocrites of all religions. Strange to say, it is one of the smallest of the gates.

Whiston, the English astronomer, believed hell to be located on a comet, and that one moment the damned were suffering in the blistering rays of the sun and the next in cold hundreds of degrees below zero.

The Christian idea of hell, old as it is, gives but a very dim outline of the probable location of the "lake which burneth forever and ever." Also, there is a controversy as to whether it really burns "forever and ever" or only has effects which are everlasting in their nature.—St. Louis Republic.

Every reform that comes to stay, has to begin in the heart.

Two Lives Saved.

Mrs. Phoebe Thomas, of Junction City, Ill., was told by her doctors she had consumption and that there was no hope for her, but two bottles Dr. King's New Discovery completely cured her and she says it saved her life. Mr. Thos Eggers, 139 Florida St., San Francisco, suffered from a dreadful cold, approaching consumption, tried without result everything else then bought one bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery and in two weeks was cured. He is naturally thankful. It is such results, of which these are samples, that prove the wonderful efficacy of the medicine in coughs and colds. Free trial bottles at Parker & Armstrong's drug store. Regular size 50c and $1.00.

Advices just received at the Northern Pacific offices, St. Paul, Minn., from Mr. W. F. Howe, in charge of the lunch station at the Upper Geyser Basin, state that the Geysers are playing better than ever, and are much finer than last year. The Giant, one of the finest in the park, plays to the height of 250 feet. Last year its eruptions took place once in about five days and continued for 90 minutes. This year it is playing oftener. Mr. Howe is taking the temperature of the Giantess, another of the large Geysers. It is also playing frequently and its temperature at the time ranges from 193 to 198 degrees Fahrenheit. By sending six cents to CHAS. S. FEE, Gen'l Pass. Agent, St. Paul, Minn., you can obtain a beautiful Tourist Book that describes the Park.

Tells About "Big Meetins" and the Like of That.

COPYRIGHT 1895.

In the drowsy, dreamy summer—right in durin of the season when the days are long and sweltry—whilst the weather is so scandlous fervid, hot and dry and dusty till you couldn't say for certain whether you will melt and run off, or dry up and turn to nothin—when the katydids are singin reglar every night and constant without tellin anybody whether Katy did or didn't—when the fruit and watermelons, and the roastingears and chickens are all ripe unto the harvest.

Now that's the time for meetins—for these big protracted meetins in these plain old country churches, where there aint so everlastin many frills and fancy trimmins—where they seek old-time religion whilst they sing old-fashion music.

"High Flyin Religion."

It stands to reason with me that a man born of woman never could git any too much religion—providin of course that he went and got the right sort. But nevertheless and notwithstandin at the same time, in the run of my day and generation I have struck up with some men that had too tremendius much religion such as it was. Whensomever you see a man runnin his religion too deep and too steep—on the high and holy plan, you understand—it will pay to keep your off eye on him continually all the time. The man which wants everybody to understand that he is a—hole tremendius big sight better than the man that hewed the logs and split the puncheons and built the first church—he has got more religion of a sorry and pecurious sort than the law allows. Cause Why? Well, I have seen the thing tried, and it is a mighty poor go no matter how you turn the water on. Old Deacon Joiner is one of your high-headed and holy sort in regards to religion. He has went and took up a fool notion that if it want for him the world, the flesh and the devil would bust up the plan of salvation right now presently, and turn the earth into a waste howlin wilderness inside of three weeks, you understand. The Deacon has got so everlastin much of this skin-deep, milk-and-cider, high-flyin religion till by gracious it does a sight more harm than good for him, as well as other people.

"Too Much is Stuff."

Enough of a good thing is enough, and too much is all stuff. And all the fools in this vain and fleetin world don't wear boots and breeches by a long jump. I have seen some women that had it, and had it jest about as bad as Deacon Joiner. I reckon by this time no doubts you have heard me tell about "Savin Sukey Sellers." Now she was what you mought call a dead match for Deacon Joiner exceptin that her clothes was cut and made some different. She carried jest as heavy a stock of high-flyin, fool religion as the Deacon, and showed it off in public as free and promiscus like as he ever did. At the time I am now tellin about I was nothin more than a cotton-headed, hatchet-faced piney-woods boy, and I had scraped up acquaintance with Miss Sukey whiles we was all livin down there in the old Panther Creek settlement. It looks like Miss Sukey had took it into her head that she was called and sent for the particlar business of redeemin the country and savin the whole entire human race, and she blazed away on that line so constant and steady till she come to be known for miles and miles around as "Savin Sukey Sellers."

To the best of my recollection when I first got old enough to take notice Miss Sukey she was then considerable past the marryin age, but still as spry and actious as a cat. She was forever and eternally on the pad, trapsin around from house to house, prayin and cavortin amongst the neighbors to beat six bits. She didn't make out like she was a preacher, you understand, but she was an exhauster from wayback. It had to rain tadpoles and bullfrogs big end foremost to keep her at home all day, and nothin couldn't happen in the settlement out of the right and proper way but she would find it out on the next round. If there was any news in the settlement—particlar somethin personal and private that hadn't ought to be talked outside of the family, you understand—you could most in generally always git the word from Miss Sukey whilst it was still hot and fresh.

I never can disremember how Miss Sukey use to bother herself about the boys and girls of the settlement. We couldn't git up a picnic, or a candy pullin, or a corn shuckin, or a weddin match, or nothin of the sort and run it into a dancin party but what she would be there in person, or git the news bright and early the next mornin. Then she would put her foot in the big road and call around to see all the old heads of the settlement moanin and weepin and wailin and prayin over the wild and wayward and reckless doins of the young folks. To hear her tell it, it was a plum sin to do anything, you understand, exceptin to eat and sleep and work. We couldn't even hands all round and play them good, old-fashion games like "twistification" and "steal partners," and "walkin on the green grass," but what Miss Sukey she would make a terrible kerdo about it and hold a few prayer meetins to pray our sins away. She didn't think it was right for a boy to whistle any une that went faster than "Old Hundred," and jest a few stanzas of good fiddle music would make her faint and fall over in it in a pair of minits. After I found out what a powerful effect a little good music would have on her, I use to slip my old fiddle out in the next room and drag off somethin quick and devilish like "Cotton-eyed Joe" or "Soapsuds Over the Fence," jest to see the poor thing take a duck fit and go on home.

The Trouble With Sukey.

The mainest trouble with Savin Sukey was that she didn't have no business of her own to stay at home and tend to. I never did wish nobody no harm—particlar the women folks—if I could help it, but many and many a time when I was a boy I use to wish in my soul that Miss Savin Sukey Sellers was married and had some fifteen or twenty children to keep her busy durin the day. I remember till this blessed hour how she finally at last got her foot into it with my good old grandmother onest upon a time, when she come over to our house on a weeky day and give it out that she had come to hold a special family prayer meetin for that "gang of godless, hopeless, devilish set of boys," as she were wont to call us. On Saturday night before that we had all went to a big breakdown dance over in the hill country, and we didn't come up at home till a little past sun rise Sunday mornin. And somehow or somehow else, you understand, Savin Sukey she had got wind of that scandlous and lurid frolic. So about 10 o'clock on Tuesday mornin followin here she come a bilin to have a general family straightenin amongst us.

"I reckon you mought as well to put off your prayer meetin for the present time," says grandmother, as she pulled out from under the bed one of these here hamper baskets about half full of old socks that needed darnin for the winter. "To start on the boys are now scattered around over the plantation—clearin newgrounds, and sowin my fall oats and layin new fences and the like of that," she went on, "and as for me I am too monstrous busy to hold any prayer meetins this time of day in the middle of the week. More than that, my boys aint so mighty much more worser than other people's boys nohow. By the time you live as long as me, and raise up as many boys as I have, and nurse 'em, and feed 'em, and wash 'em, and spank 'em, and hustle 'em off to bed, and do the family darnin and patchin into the bargain, I think maybe you will quit tryin to make angels outen strong, healthy human beins—and boys in particlar. You would better run along home now I reckon Sukey, and trust my boys to me and the good Lord."

Well, Miss Sukey she went on back home where she belonged, and henceforwards after that she had to give up the Sanders family as a lost and ruint concern.

The Deacon's Plain Prayer.

Now that brings me around to aunt Nancy Newton and the Spring Hill campmeetin.

"You will remember, Rufus, what a scandlous big family fend they worked up between the Weatherford's and the Hasseltines," said the dear, delightful old soul. "Well everybody thought that the old heads would come together at the campmeetin and spit on the slate and spile out and start over. Old Davy Hasseltine had pulled out of the church in durin of the rucus, but it seems like he was comin back to the fold till Deacon Joiner fell down with the jug and spilt the molasses.

"You will have to excuse me for plain talk, but Deacon Joiner aint got any more sense than a Philadelphia lawyer would need in his business nohow, and it is nothin uncommon for him to let his tongue slip and land him slap kerdab in the middle of a bad mess.

"Now it so happened when old man Davy came forth to the mourner's bench the preacher called on Deacon Joiner to lead in a special prayer for brother Hasseltine. Down went the Deacon on his knees and right beside old Davy and put in to prayin at the top of his voice.

"The Lord be praised for the return of our weak and wayward brother!" says the Deacon, and there was a mighty response from the amen corner.

"God bless brother Davy Hasseltine right now," says the Deacon and all hands said amen.

"He has been one of the terriblest and most meanest sinners that ever trod shoe leather," says the Deacon, and a dead silence fell upon the amen corner.

"He has been the gonebyest and most ungodliest liar in forty mile of Panther Creek," says the Deacon.

"It will take a mighty stretch of thy lovin kindness and amazin grace to save him from the orful torments, but save him, Oh Lord, save him by the hair of his head and the skin of his teeth, as it were," the Deacon went on.

"By this time old man Davy had the all overs, you understand, and was foamin at the mouth like a steer calf roped off from his mammy for the first time, and there was a mighty fear and tremblin goin on over in the amen corner. Somethin was liable to happen at any minit.

"He has sinned agin thee, O Lord, with the uplifted hand and the outstretched arm," prayed the Deacon, "by bearin false witness, by cheatin, and slanderation, by cussin and drinkin, and lyin and stealin, and"—

"But it come to pass right then and there. Old Davy had helt still and took and swallowed a little bit more than he could stomach without hittin back. He went down after Deacon Joiner like a ton of hot bricks, and by the time the brethren could pull them apart the Deacon looked like he mought of rode a buckin mule through a black jack thicket.

"What will they do next? There aint no tellin for certain. Deacon Joiner put in a law suit agin old Davy for assault to murder, and old Davy turned in then and put in heavy claims agin the Deacon for slanderation of character. It is a monstrous ugly mess, Rufus, and bless gracious I aint got no finger in it." RUFUS SANDERS.

THE REVIVAL AND IMPORTS.

A Natural Result of Returning Commercial Prosperity.

The republican press continues to groan daily over the increase of imports. Catching at every straw which they think may serve to keep them and their McKinley tariff issue above water, our republican friends point to the difference between the imports of the last few months and those of the corresponding months last year. They refuse to compare the recent figures with those of the corresponding period in the fiscal year 1893, but persist in telling their readers that the country is going to ruin because we are importing more goods now than were imported in the depths of the panic.

It is true that the imports during the months which have elapsed since the enactment of the new tariff have been larger than the imports during the corresponding months of last year. It is encouraging that this increase has taken place. Our republican friends should bear in mind the fact that at the same time the country has been experiencing a remarkable revival of business activity and confidence. Has the increase of imports paralyzed domestic industry? Let the great and growing demand for consumption, the extraordinary list of increase of wages, the resumption of work in hundreds of idle factories, the advance of prices, and the many other proofs of returning prosperity, answer this question. It was inevitable that recovery from panic depression should be accompanied by an increase of imports, and this increase would have taken place even under rates like those of the McKinley act. Republicans know, or ought to know, that the imports of dutiable goods were considerably larger in the fiscal year 1893, when the McKinley duties were in force, than they have been in the fiscal year just ended, although raw sugar was free from duty then and has been dutiable since August 28 last. The following table shows the value of the imports during the eleven months ending on May 31 for the last three years, the last three figures of each number having been omitted:

TOTAL IMPORTS.

	11 Months, 11 Months, 11 Months,
	1895. 1894. 1893.
Dutiable	$337,816 $253,819 $389,671
Free	331,496 349,591 407,055
Total	$669,312 $603,410 $796,703

It will be observed that the imports for the eleven months in the last fiscal year were less by 15⅓ per cent. than those of the eleven months of 1893, under the McKinley duties, although the free imports in 1893 were swollen by $105,000,000 worth of raw sugar, while the dutiable imports of 1895 included about $40,000,000 for raw sugar transferred to the dutiable list. It is encouraging, and it is a sign of returning confidence and prosperity, that the imports of 1895 are larger than those of 1894. The McKinley rates did not prevent the purchase of foreign goods by the people of this country, who shipped to foreign lands last year $550,000,000 worth of the products of agriculture, with other exports amounting to about $250,000,000. During the panic, however, their foreign purchases were abnormally small; now they are increasing again.

But the increase has not brought the totals up to the level of 1893, and to this fact—so carefully avoided or ignored by them—we direct the attention of republicans and republican journals. The following table will enable them to compare the imports under the leading schedules during the eleven months ending on May 31 of this year with those of the corresponding months in the fiscal years 1894 and 1893. They always stop with 1894, because the figures for 1893 (a year during which the McKinley tariff was in full force) make their partisan pleas and arguments ridiculous. For convenience in tabulation we have cut off the last three figures of each number:

IMPORTS COMPARED.

Woolen goods	$32,750	$18,432	$35,360
Iron and steel	21,214	10,401	21,803
Silk goods	29,309	23,374	30,232
Cotton goods	31,441	21,244	31,709
Glass and glassware	6,031	4,753	7,349
Crockery	8,158	6,419	8,614
Animals	2,588	2,331	4,367
Books, engravings, etc	3,085	3,239	3,840
Cement	3,020	2,925	3,270
Chemicals	40,458	34,208	48,802
Fruit and nuts	15,673	16,706	21,551
Hides and skins	22,290	15,432	26,220
Leather	5,900	4,109	7,018
Manufactures of leather	6,547	4,743	7,284
Paper and manufactures	2,628	2,401	3,527
Spices	2,825	1,995	3,106
Textile grasses	12,34	11,157	20,131
Manufactures of the same	24,385	17,870	26,270
Wines	6,598	6,110	9,214

During nine of the eleven months of the fiscal year 1895 the new tariff was in force; during the entire period of eleven months in the fiscal year 1893 the tariff law in operation was that of McKinley. As in the case of the totals in our first table, so with respect to every one of these items, the value of the imports has been less in 1895 than it was in 1893. We have repeatedly urged our republican contemporaries to admit the existence of this difference, and to comment upon it, but we have urged in vain.—N. Y. Times.

Coy Dr. Harrison.

Undoubtedly a square, honest declaration by Harrison that he would accept the nomination if it were offered by the convention would help him. Nobody supposes he is actively seeking it, or that he will engage in any undignified scramble for it, but everybody believes he wants it, and a candid acknowledgment of this fact would raise up new friends for him. The people like frankness among men holding or desiring public station. Office seeking is creditable if pursued in a manly, open way. The desire to gain the presidency, even by one who has already held it, is a praiseworthy ambition. Some of the most illustrious men of the country spent a dozen or a score of years in seeking it. They told their fellow citizens that they wanted it, and their fellow citizens honored them for the avowal. On the other hand, the coyness, the mystery and the evasiveness affected by many of the presidency seekers of the present day anger and disgust the people.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

——Tom Reed's new plan to bring the republican party into prominence as an anti-monopoly organization, friendly to labor, will be taken with a great deal of salt along the Pacific slope, where they have not forgotten that a republican president vetoed a bill to prohibit Chinese immigration, and will be greeted with bitter derision at Homestead, where under a republican administration good American workingmen were compelled to repel an alien invasion of Pinkerton detectives.—Detroit Free Press.

IT HAS BROUGHT MURDER

Dire Consequences of a High Protective Tariff.

No strife is so bitter and relentless as that engendered by racial prejudice or by national jealousies. Nineteen hundred years of Christianity have not been so potent for the inculcation among the peoples of the Christian doctrine of the brotherhood of man as to counteract the continued impeachment in favor of so-called patriotism, which often is argument in favor of national hatreds and racial bitternesses.

This land has often been the scene of bloody encounters between persons of alien birth, who, unmindful of the hospitality shown them by these shores, have carried their old country feuds across the water and have disturbed the peace and order of parts of the republic for the gratification of their own deadly hatred. The orange and the green have become one red at times, fighting like fanatics over occurences of bygone ages. Such savagery as extended itself among various aliens has been promoted by native Americans in their own fanatic patriotism, their own demand that whoever has come from beyond the seas shall conform in the waving of flags, in the observance of a New England Sabbath, in regulating their personal habits to a fanatical American standard. This situation has been deepened and intensified by the utter dishonesty of the republican party in maintaining high protective tariff laws exclusively for the benefit of the manufacturer.

That policy has maintained free trade in labor while making a closed market for American products. It has resulted in driving distinctively American labor from all the paths of industry and has supplied its place systematically with aliens who have been coaxed hither by the promise of high wages to be given them by protected manufacturers, who wish to have the benefit of free trade in labor. All the while Americans were told by preachers of tariff legislation that the one purpose was to dignify, enrich and ennoble the American laborer, and all the while the real beneficiaries were bringing the cheapest labor of the world into this market—labor with all its racial prejudices, all its savage promptings and all its willingness to underbid native labor.

The Hun and the Slav have taken the place of the American laborers at mines. Tumult and disorder have arisen in various places as the result of lockouts and of strikes and of encounters between contending savages. The real responsibility for such exhibition of barbarism in America lies at the door of the republican protective policy, that has steadily sought to discourage or forbid importations of fabrics, but has opened wide the ports of America to the least enlightened peoples of the earth and has brought them here for no other purpose than to drive out intelligent American labor as being too high-priced for the greedy corporations that would have a tariff law benefit them in both ways by giving them cheap labor and a monopoly market.

The inevitable fruit of McKinleyism ripened in bloodshed at Spring Valley. Everywhere in the land it has repeatedly borne bloody fruit.—Chicago Chronicle.

CAUSE OF THE DEFICIT.

Republican Extravagance Dissipated the Democratic Surplus.

In spite of all the prating of republicans with reference to the deficit in the revenue, the fact remains that it began under the McKinley bill. It is equally indisputable that the Harrison administration and the Fifty-first congress were anxious to get rid of the surplus, because it had been used as an argument for tariff reform. When Tanner, as commissioner of pensions, sarcastically remarked: "God help the surplus," he was applauded. As a matter of fact, various sorts of extravagance were resorted to in order to dissipate the surplus, but the increase of pensions was a very large factor. The following table shows how this increase went on, chiefly in consequence of laws passed by the Fifty-first congress:

Year.	Pensioners.	Amount.
1890	537,944	106,936,435
1891	676,169	124,416,981
1892	876,668	134,583,053
1893	966,012	159,357,558
1894	992,544	141,177,285

	Excess of Revenue
1888	$111,541,000
1889	87,761,000
1890	85,040,000
1891	26,858,000
1892	9,914,000
1893	2,340,000
1894 (deficit)	70,025,000

These tables show that from 1889 to 1894 the yearly pension charge increased $52,000,000, while the surplus of $111,000,000 in 1888 was converted into a deficit of $70,000,000. This deficit was reduced under the Wilson bill to a sum considerably less than the increase in pensions, not to mention the other items of republican extravagance. —Louisville Courier-Journal.

THE WAR IN CUBA

Goes on With Increased Fierconess and Barbarity.

THE FIRST POLITICAL EXECUTION.

Seventy-Four Rebel are Put to Death—It Is Feared That the Rebels Will Retaliate by Killing All Spaniards Captured in the Future.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Aug. 23.—A cablegram to the Times-Union from Key West, Fla., says: Passengers by steamer Mascotte, report that the first public political execution took place at Matanzas on the 20th inst., at six a. m. The insurgent, Captain Domingo Majica, was captured a few days ago about three miles from Jovellench, court martialed and shot as a traitor to Spain. Majica was a young man about 28 years of age, and came of one of the best families in the province of Matanzas. His execution will, it is feared, cause the insurgents to follow the example set by Spanish officials, and in the future all Spaniards falling into their hands will meet with Majica's fate.

Captain Carrido, a Spaniard operating in the district of Santiago de Cuba, discovered an insurgent where seventy-four wounded rebels had taken refuge and put them to death, using the machette. Such barbarous acts causing many prominent Cubans, heretofore loyal, to the government, to join the insurgents.

It is reported in military circles that the insurgents are in possession of that part of the island lying between Colon and Cape Maysi; amounting to about two-thirds of the island, and that Spain may as well call her troops. They are not able to cope with the insurgents, who are gaining strength every day. The town of Sancti Spiritus is almost completely deserted. The able-bodied men have left and joined the insurgents under Roloff and Sanchez.

It is reported that Martinos Campos in an interview with Gen. Arderius, his brother-in-law, stated that he feared Cuba was lost. Campos said he did not have the money necessary to carry on the war and that his troops were poorly fed and were completely demormoralized. Spanish officials realize that their days are numbered and are taking all they can get their hands on.

Yesterday only two steamers were in the port of Havana—the Mascotte and Aransas. All others are reducing their schedules and still sustaining heavy losses. Business throughout the city is stagnated and a financial panic will result at an early day. There is but little tobacco in the market and the prices charged are exorbitant. Merchants realize the fact that no matter which way the war may turn, the outlook for Havana is very gloomy for business to come.

Private letters received in this city from Havana contradict the report of the battle between Sanchez and Planca as published in the Havana papers. The letter states that the battle took place on the 18, at Placetas. The insurgents lost sixty-two and the troops three hundred killed and wounded. When the news of the battle reached Havana many who had enlisted to go to the front refused to go.

All telegraphic communication between Trinidad and Sancti Spiritus has been destroyed. The insurgents under the command of Bermudez, in the early part of last week entered the town of Lomacruz, las Villas district, captured the garrison, and after sacking the town set fire to it.

On the 16th the insurgents burned the celebrated sugar plantation Eustaguio, about a mile from Puerte Principe. Martinez Campos arrived at Canta Clare Sunday morning and will immediately fortify the town.

Saturday, Roloff attacked a body of troops near Sancti Spiritus, the details of which are not known, Campos refusing to allow them to be published.

The insurgents in Las Villas district are concentrating near the town of Quemados Deganinez, with the object of attacking the same.

A Late Battle.

HAVANA, Aug. 23.—A disatch from Santa Claragites an account of a battle which was fought yesterday in the streets of the village of Barajagua. A large band of rebels nnder Chief Rego made an attack upon the village which was stoutly resisted by the detachment of troops stationed there. There was a heavy exchange of firing for two hours when the insurgents retreated after setting fire to a number houses. The fire spread rapidly and the entire village was burned. The rebels lost forty killed and wounded on the field.

Colonel Oliver reports from Remedios that the rebel leader Benigno Rodriguez was killed and and the leader Quintin Bravo seriously wounded in the action which took place in that vicinity on August 17th and 18th.

An Elopment Ends in Murder.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 23. — An elopment followed by the murder of the bridgegroom, is reported from Montgomery county. The 16-year-old daughter of a farmer, named Haliburton, went to prayer-meeting, where she met a young man named Hite, who had been forbidden to visit her by her parents. They eloped and were married, but the father of the girl pursued the couple and killed the husband.

To Camp at Fort Hall Reservation.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—General Coppinger has ordered two companies of infantry to encamp at the Fort Hall reservation in the Aannock Indian country. This action was taken at the request of the Interior Department, which is of the opinion that a force of troops will be required in the Bannock country for some time to keep the Indians quiet.

INDUSTRIAL PROGRESS.

In Spite of Mid-Summer Dullness, There Is a Considerable Activity.

BALTIMORE, Md., Aug. 23.—Special reports to the Manufacturers' Record show that the general yield in the interest of the south continue to exhibit a fair degree of activity notwithstanding the fact that the fall season has not yet opened. There has been no special increase in the number of new enterprises, but the last reported for the week shows that throughout the entire south considerable progress is being made even in midsummer in the extension of the industrial matters. Only three cotton mill companies have been reported this week. One of 8,000 spindles to be built at Henderson, N. C.; one at Poulan, Ga., and a $100,000 company at New Orleans; a $25,000 company has been organized in Arkansas. A large corn mill, lumber mills and coal mining company in Alabama.

In Mississippi a $75,000 lumber mill and an ice plant. In North Carolina, a $400,000 gold mining company, an oil mill, a barrel factory and a quarry. In South Carolina a cotton seed oil mill of $20,000 and another of $25,000 capital, an electric line plant and furniture works. In Tennessee a cotton compress and a fifty-barrel flour mill.

In Texas a $2,000,000 cotton compress manufacturing company $15,000 brick works and water works. In Virginia a $100,000 brewry and $35,000 electric light company, brick works, coal mines and a 25-ton ice plant.

GONE UP IN SMOKE.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Aug. 23.—At 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon a serious fire broke out in the Union Steamboat dock and warehouse on the Menominee river. The dock and warehouse are leased by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company. The wind was blowing almost a gale and the fire spread to the Anchor warehouse and then to the freight houses of the company. The wind spread it rapidly to freight cars, loaded and empty, many of which were moved away by engines as soon as they could be reached. All the warehouses for six blocks along the west side of the river, which were mostly frame were burned with contents, including much freight.

Before 2 o'clock the fire was under control. The loss will foot up probably $300,000 to $500,000. A boy named McManus was run over and killed by a coal supply wagon of the fire department during the progress of the fire.

TRAINS COLLIDE.

PETERSBURG, Va., Aug. 23.—Yesterday a material train on the Norfolk & Western Railroad, while standing on the side track near Pamphus Station was run into by a west bound freight train. The collision was caused by the spreading of the rails. The locomotive of the freight was overturned and the engineer, W. H. Wysong, was instantly killed and his fireman so badly mangled that he died shortly after being taken from the wreck. Several cars were wrecked and their contents scattered promiscously about. In consequence of the track being so badly torn up all trains were delayed.

THE END OF THE RIOT.

Seventeen of the Winston Negroes Sentenced to Work the Roads.

WINSTON, N. C., Aug. 23.—Seventeen negroes connected with the Winston riot were sentenced to hard labor on the county roads, yesterday afternoon. The three leaders for twelve months, eleven for four months and three for three months. One was fined $50 and costs, and several others were discharged upon the payment of cost. The latter plead guilty. Judge Brown, before passing sentence, notified the negroes that had they dispersed on the night of the riot, when ordered to do so, they would not have been indicted.

IN DEFENSE OF DUTY

Detective Powers is Shot and Will Probably Die.

THE TRAIN ROBBERS THEN ESCAPE.

The Desperate Deed of Desperate Men, Who Are Now Fully Identified and Are Being Pursued by Determined Michiganders.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Aug. 23.—Detective Powers was perhaps fatally shot in the head while arresting two of the train robbers who held up the Chicago and West Michigan passenger train Tuesday night, near New Richmond in a smoker of the north bound Grand Rapids and Indiana train last night.

Word was sent to police headquarters last night that two strange men got aboard a Lakeshore train at Dorr station yesterday morning and came to this city. They were spotted on the outgoing train yesterday evening for all trains had been under surveilance for the suspects. As Detective Powers was going through the train, he saw two men in the smoker who tallied with the description given.

He grabbed one and at the same time blew his whistle for aid, as other officers were going through the other cars. The moment he blew his whistle, one of the men drew a revolver and shot him through the head, and he fell to the floor. As other officers rushed in in reponse to the whistle, the two men fled and jumped from the train and escaped in the darkness.

It was learned beyond question that these were two of the men wanted, and the wildest excitement prevailed among the passengers when they learned the cause of the shooting, many of them having supposed it was another hold-up. The description of the men is now known, and no efforts will be spared to run them down.

The whole detective force was at once called ont and every available policeman was detailed to search the country for the desperadoes. Detective Powers was removed to the hospital. The physicians cannot state whether he will live or not.

DISPENSARY TROUBLES.

New Arrests Made—Contempt of Court Cases.

COLUMBIA, S. C., Aug. 23.—Following the raid of the Columbia Club last Saturday, a dozen members of that organization were arrested yesterday for violating sections 21 and 22 of the dispensary law, "By combining with each other to keep and maintain a club room in which intoxicating liquors were received and kept as a beverage, and they did assist and abet each other in receiving alcoholic liquors, at a place where persons were permitted to resort for the purpose of drinking alcoholic liquors as a beverage."

Among them were some of the leading business and professional men in the city.

Last night in answer to the prayer of A. E. W. Ganzales, whose liquor in the original packages in which it was imported into the state and marked "for personal use," was seized by the constables in the Club, Judge Simonton, of the United States circuit court, granted a rule against state liquor commissioner Mixson, three liquor constables and two Columbia policemen to show cause before him in Greenville September 4th., why they should not be attached for contempt of the order of this court of May 8, protecting liquor imported under the inter-state commerce law.

A TRIVIAL INCIDENT,

According to the Ministers Account—Will Bear Investigation.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—A statement received at the state department from Mavroyeni Bey, the Turkish minister to this country, indicates that the reported attack on St. Pauls college, an American institution at Armenia, was erroneous and based on nothing more than a trivial incident. According to the ministers account which was furnished him by his government, some Turks quarrelled with a servant employed by Professor Christie, formerly of Baltimore, Md., who is connected with the school and the servant was attacked and beaten by the natives. Havroyeni Bey says in his statement that the offenders have been arrested and will be promptly punished.

EXHIBITS ARRIVED.

ATLANTA, Aug. 23.—Dr. Neidelinger, the commissioner of the Cotton States and International Exposition, from the Argentine Republic, has arrived in Atlanta with five car loads of the exhibit which that nation will make at the Exposition, this shipment being the advance guard of the Argentine's exhibit. A large part of the exhibit of that country will be of its forest resources, in which line it will make a magnificent display.

A Big Strike On.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—The first important strike in the cloak trade took place yesterday. Twelve hundred men and women employed by Freedman Brothers, Prince street and Broadway, and the contractors who act for that firm, quit work yesterday morning. The strikers demand an advance of about twenty-five per cent on piece work and the usual union rules shall be adopted.

Date of the First Race.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—The announcement is made by the American cup committee that September 7th, had been fixed as the day for the first of the international yacht races. This is the date originally set and the announcement sets at rest rumors of a postponement.

A TERRIBLE LOVE AFFAIR.

NEW ORLANS, La., Aug. 23.—A young man named Louis Gervais, aged 28, attempted to kill Miss Eugenia Pethancourt and her father about 12 o'clock esterday on Villere street because of the refusal of the young lady to marry him. He has been courting the girl for more than two years, and claims that they were engaged to be married but her father interfered and prevented the marriage.

Yesterday he called at the home of the girl and demanded that she marry him at once. On her emphatic refusal to comply he went away but soon returned and renewed his demand. Again the girl refused and Gervais becoming crazed with disappointment drew a revolver and fired twice at the young lady. Her father rushed in on hearing the shots and Gervias shot him three times.

Making his way from the house he met a young sister of the girl and knocked her down with the butt of the pistol. He then ran to the Old Basin, with the intention of committing suicide but after jumping in he changed his mind and swam out and was captured by the police. Miss Bethancourt's wounds are slight but her father is seriously hurt.

ANOTHER CHINESE OUTRAGE.

The American Mission Chapel and School House Burned.

HONG KONG, Aug. 23.—Another outrage has been committed on the missionaries near Foo Chow. The American mission has been attaked by a large and infurated mob armed mith various weapons. The chapel and school house of the mission were wrecked and four of the native scholars were wounded. The foreign teacher, however, escaped injury.

A strong anti-foreign local feeling prevails at Foo Chow and it is spreading among the populace who are parading the public thoroughfare with cries of "Drive out the foreign devils."

The News Confirmed.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—A dispatch to the Times to Hong Kong confirms the dispatch from Hong Kong announcing the attack upon the American mission near Foo Chow and the critical situation there.

According to the Times' dispatch the American school was situated just outside of the west gate of Foo Chow. The dispatch adds:

"The situation at Ku Cheng is unchanged. Captain John S. Newell, of the United States cruiser Detroit and Dr. Hart have gone there from Foo Chow."

GARMENT WORKERS STRIKE.

Over 3,000 Out and Say They Will Return When Their Demands are Granted.

BOSTON, Mass., Aug. 23.—The strike of the garment workers of the city is on full force yet. Upwards of 3,000 of the workers, according to the statements of their leaders, quit work yesterday in obedience to the vote of the combined unions and will not return until the contractors or bosses are ready to concede their demands. The strikers do not anticipate a long struggle and are confident that the strike will be at an end by the concession of their demands before a week has expired. The strike, it is asserted by the strikers, includes about 100 shops engaged in the making of ready-made clothing and unless their claims are acceded to every shop in the city will be affected.

BESSEMER STEEL IS HIGHER.

Situation the Strongest in Several Weeks, Says the Iron Trade Review.

CINCINNATI, O., Aug. 23.—The Iron Trade Review says: Advances in Bessemer pig iron, gray forge, steel billets, and wire rods have taken place in the past week.

Considerable Bessemer iron has been taken up and the price has advanced 25 cents, transactions ranging from $13.50 to $14.00 in the valley, while sales of upwards of 25,000 tons have been made in the Cleveland district. The situation is the strongest in several weeks. Forge iron is higher, sales having been made at $12 to $12.25 at Pittsburg, while $11.75 is the lowest valley quotation. The meeting of bar iron manufactues in Cleveland Tuesday made no change in prices.

CHINESE SOLDIERS RIOT.

Had Not Been Paid, So They Killed More Than 100 Persons.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—A special dispatch received here from Shanghai says that the Chinese soldiers stationed at Tien Tsin revolted yesterday and assembled outside the gates of Li Hung Chang's yamen, clamoring for their arrears of pay. Late they attacked a number of shops in this city and killed over a hundred persons.

SILVER IN NEBRASKA

They Practically Endorse the Last Year's Platform.

THE STATE TICKET IS NOMINATED.

The Free Silver Plank is Adopted, Practically, Unanimously—Only Six Voting Against It—Ex-Congressman Bryan Speaks.

OMAHA, Neb., Aug. 23.—The democratic state convention here yesterday elected for associate justice of the supreme court Charles J. P. Phelps, of Colfax; for regents of the state University, A. T. Blackburn, of Holt county and Robert Kettle, of Dade county.

At 10 o'clock the state central committee met. There was only one contest. John C. Thompson, of Fremont, was selected for temporary chairman, and F. G. Morgan, of Plattsmouth, for temporary secretary.

When Chairman Smyth called the convention to order, at 2:40 o'clock, Mr. Thompson declined to be temporary chairman, and Hon. F. N. Davis, of Beatrice, was named for the position. He said he did not have his extemporaneous speech prepared and asked for the pleasure of the convention. Temporary secretaries and the committees on resolutions were appointed.

A free coinage resolution offered by ex-Congressman W. J. Bryan, chairman of the committee on resolutions was adopted by an overwhelming majority, only six votes being cast against it.

The matter of resolutions caused a great deal of discussion. While all were in favor of the free and unlimited coinage of silver, there was a difference of opinions as to the way the silver plank should be worded. Half a dozen planks were formulated and all had strong supporters and just as strong opponents. All of them were based, or supposed to be, on the plank adopted at the democratic state convention last year and there was a strong sentiment of simply adopting them over again, which was practically done.

The convention adjourned sine die at the close of the afternoon session. In the evening there was a public meeting and an address by A. E. Denham and ex-Congressman Bryan. Both speeches were well received. The audience cheered Mr. Bryan throughout his eloquent address.

OSCAR WILDE AGAIN.

He Ascribes His Insolvency to a Suit He Expected to Gain.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—A statement of the condition of Oscar Wilde's finances which has just been issued, shows his liabilities to be 3,391 pounds, with no available assests. His insolvency is ascribed by him to the failure of his action for libel against the Marquis of Queensbury, who is now a petitioning creditor seeking the payment of the costs of his defense, which the court ordered Wilde to pay. Wilde's income has averaged £2,000 a year, chiefly derived from his literary and dramatic work. He has been insolvent two years, his expenditures having greatly exceeded his income.

MYSTERIOUS CASE.

An Alabama Man is Found in His Yard With His Throat Cut.

TUSCUMBIA, Ala., Aug. 23.—About 3 o'clock yesterday morning the body of Elmo Abernathy, was found in the front yard of his residence with his throat cut. He and his wife had been up with a sick child until midnight, when he went out of doors and his wife went to bed. About 1 o'clock she woke up and missed her husband, and on searching for him found him dead. No reason can be given for the deed as he was always a jovial husband.

The Sun's Cotton Review.

NEW YORK, August 23.—Cotton advanced 5 to 7 points but lost this and declined 1 point, closing easy with sales of 240,400 bales. Liverpool advanced 3 points, but reacted and closed quiet at a net advance of 1 to 1¼ points; spot sales 12,000 bales, at a rise of 1-16.

IN A WARM PLACE.

DENVER, Col., Aug. 23.—A special to the News from Spokane, Wash., says: "Passengers on the west-bound Great Northern train had a narrow escape from death last night. The train had passed through a fierce forest fire for a distance of ten miles, and when it reached the Little Spokane river, about twenty miles east of this city, a huge tree fell across the track from the mountain above, just as the train was passing. The engine struck it, causing the train to stop so suddenly as to throw the passengers violently from their seats.

The burning tree was dragged partially under the cars, and for a moment the train toppled to one side, until it almost went into the 150-foot chasm on the other side. So intense was the heat from the forest fire that the coaches blistered and almost took fire. The burning trees set fire to the mail and baggage cars but the flames were extinguished with water from the stream. With axes the track was cleared and the train succeeded in reaching here badly damaged.

THE INCOME TAX.

WASHINGTON, August 23.—Less than one-third of the claims for the return of the $77,000 income tax paid in by about 1,400 persons, firms and corporations, have been passed through the auditor's office of the treasury. The is no delay in that office but there is with people who have so far neglected to file their claims with collectors of internal revenue.

It is said that probably one-third of those who paid the income tax did so that they might hurry over to Europe and desired to comply with the law before their departure. Most of them have not returned yet.

The treasury department is represented as anxious to close up the income tax matter and officials are rather surprised at the remissness of those who paid in not filing their claims for its return.

SMASH-UP AT CARTERSVILLE.

W. & A. Passenger Train Runs Into a Freight Train.

CARTERSVILLE, Ga., Aug. 23.—The mail train No. 3, on the Western & Atlantic, from Chattanooga, due here at 5:12 a. m., yesterday came in during a heavy rain storm and crashed into the rear of a freight train. The mail train was slowing up for the depot and the air brakes were applied and engine reversed in time to prevent a complete wreck of the engine. The fireman and Engineer Welch both jumped, the latter sustaining slight injuries. The tender was driven entirely through the end of the mail car, and the trucks completely demolished. A postal clerk who was asleep in his car had very narrow escape. The mail pouches were put in the baggage car and taken to Atlanta without any delay.

MONEY TO MOVE THE CROPS.

The Treasury is Supplying Small Bills Which Will Help the Gold Out.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—Considerable demand is being made on the treasury from New Orleans, St. Louis, Chicago and other western and southwestern points for small notes for which to move the crops. The treasury is well supplied with these denominations and will furnish the points asking for them as rapidly as demanded. The effect will be not only to distribute money among the people but at the same time to build up the treasury gold reserve by the exchange in which these small notes invariably take part.

TAMMANY SENSATION.

Bold Move of the New York's State Executive Committee.

MINERS OF THREE STATES TO MEET

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Aug. 20.—A movement has been begun in this district to effect a tri-state organization of the coal miners of Alabama, Tennessee and Kentucky, in which states about 20,000 free miners. This will be done to meet the combine just formed by the operators of these states, which the miners regard detrimental to their interests.

A meeting of representative miners from every mine in the three states concerned is soon to be held in Chattanooga or Birmingham to perfect the organization and outline plans to cope with the operators' combine. The call as published in the Labor Advocate here says:

"The combine that the miners of the south can form will not interfere with the present system of organization. The cause of the miners in the south is the cause of the miners in the north. If the southern miners succeed in keeping up wages in the south, so also will it assist in keeping up wages in the north. Heretofore the axe has cut the other way."

CONVICT HOSPITAL BURNED.

The Patients are Removed in Time, Tho One May Die From It.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Aug., 24.—The convict hospital of the Tennessee Coal, Iron, & Railroad Company, at shaft No. 1, Pratt Mines, was consumed with it's contents yesterday.

While some of the convicts were scrubbing the floor and cleaning up in the hospital the fire was discovered and an alarm was given and the work of taking out the patients was begun and successfully accomplished with the exception of a negro life-timer, who was overcome by the heat and may die.

The main building was 75 feet square and the wing 25 feet. The former was the hospital ward and the latter was occupied as the apothecary shop, sleeping-room of the physician, dining room and kitchen. All the drugs and surgical instruments were consumed.

BRIDGE COLLAPSES

At Brookside, Ala., and Women and Children Injured.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Aug. 21.—While a pleasure party of twenty persons were crossing a bridge that spans Five-Mile creek at Brookside yesterday, the bridge gave way—with a crash and precipitated its occupants into the creek fifteen feet below.

Albert McPherson, aged 20 was probably fatally hurt by falling beams.

James Colling, aged 25, sustained serious injuries.

All the others were more or less bruised, among them being several women and children. Fortunately the water in the creek was shallow; otherwise several of the injured might have been drowned.

REMID R. HARLOW DEAD.

His Body Found Near Montgomery, Ala., Where He Was Murdered.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Aug. 24.—The decomposed body of a young man whose papers identify him as Remid R. Harlow, a railroad ticket agent from Clifton Forge, Va., was found in a plum thicket one mile from Coosada station near this city yesterday. A coroner's jury decided that he had been murdered with a dull instrument, a bludgeon of some sort, in the hands of party or parties unknown. Officers are investigating the case but as yet have made no headway.

THE * CHRONICLE.

C. C. DuBOSE, Editor and Proprietor.

COLUMBIANA, AUGUST 29, 1895.

PETTY politicians seek notoriety by various methods. For instance, Congressman M. W. Howard, populist, is in the East slandering the people of Alabama.

THE brutal butchery of one hundred invalid insurgent soldiers by the Spanish troops at a hospital in Santiago de Cuba is about the surest indication of a coming Cuban republic that has been developed by the rebellion thus far.

THE Chicago doctors have reached the conclusion that fast bicycle riding is very dangerous and that it will produce fatal nervous dsseases. Very true, as may be seen in the total collapse of the man who is run over by the fast rider.

AN abundant harvest will bring contentment and happiness to our people, and that is what we are in the midst of. The golden grain and white cotton patches tell the tale of the year's labor, and from all appearances it has not been in vain.

THE Coosa River News makes the following diagnosis: "We repeat what we have said before. When a man goes wild for free silver, the next dash out of the box we see him in arms with a populist shouting red ruin, and abusing the democratic administration.

THE Chicago Chronicle seems to know what it is talking about when it says: "Ohio cannot afford a dollar to pay for an Atlanta exhibit. McKinleyism in the governorship is as disastrous to financial solvency in the state as it was to prosperity in labor and industry for the nation."

THE report of immigrants landed in this country during the month of July shows 27,133 arrivals against 17,889 for the corresponding month of 1894. It has always been the case that immigration was less in years of business depression than in years of business prosperity and the above figures are another evidence that the hard times are behind us.

THE last notable North Dakota case of lightning divorce and re-marriage, was that of a man 57 years old. He took number two along with him to Fargo, kept her there to cheer him during his enforced ninety days' stay, before he could get a decree, and married her within ten hours of the time the divorce was granted; and let us hope they will be happy, ever after.

THERE was a little boy amusing himself with a small cat. He held the animal by the fore feet with one hand and by the hind feet with the other and was jerking the extremities apart with all his might, and with each jerk crying in an indignant tone of voice: "Why don't you come in two! Why don't you come in two!" This boy reminds us of the calamity howlers. They have the prosperity of the state in their grip and are doing their best to drag it down to ruin, and with every effort we can hear them shout: "Why don't you come in two!" We pray God that the good old state may have strength to resist their abominable attacks and that the honest people of Alabama will remember these demagogues and in due time punish them.—Mobile Register.

WORTH NOTING.

It is interesting to note that gold exportation thus far this year has been only $21,000,000, as compared with $72,000,000 in the same time in 1894, $32,000,000 in 1893, $47,000,000 in 1892 and $71,000,000 in 1891.

The outflow is practically over in view of the decline in sterling exchange and the crop movement about to set in.

This fact is especially stated for the benefit of the howler of the "more bonds" species.

WASHINGTON AND THE THIRD TERM.

The following is all Washington said about a third term or any term of the presidency in his address:

"The period of a new election for a citizen to administer the executive government of the United States being not far distant, and the time arrived when your thoughts must be employed in designating the person who is clothed with that important trust, it appears to me proper, especially as it may conduce to a more distinct expression of the public voice, that I should now apprise you of the resolution I have formed to decline being considered among the number of those out of whom a choice is to be made. I beg you at the same time to do me the justice to be assured that this resolution has not been taken without a strict regard to all the consideration appertaining to the relation which binds a dutiful citizen to his country, and that in withdrawing the tender of service which silence in my situation might imply I am influenced by no diminution of zeal for your interest, no deficiency of grateful respect for your past kindness, but am supported by a full conviction that the step is compatible with both.

"The acceptance of and the continuance hitherto in the office to which your suffrages have twice called me have been a uniform sacrifice of inclination to the opinion of duty and to a deference for what appeared to be your desire. I constantly hoped that it would have been much earlier in my power, consistently with motives which I was not at liberty to disregard, to return to that retirement from which I had been reluctantly drawn. The strength of my inclination to do this previous to the last election had even led to the preparation of an address to declare it to you, but mature reflection on the then perplexed and critical posture of our affairs with foreign nations, and the unanimous advice of persons entitled to my confidence, impelled me to abandon the idea.

"I rejoice that the state of your concerns, external as well as internal, no longer renders the pursuit of inclination incompatible with the sentiment of duty or propriety, and I am persuaded, whatever partiality may be retained for my services, that in the present circumstances of our country you will not disapprove my determination to retire.

"The impressions with which I first undertook the arduous trust were explained on the proper occasion. In the discharge of this trust I will not only say that I have with good intentions contributed towards the organization and administration of the government the best exertions of which a very fallible judgment was capable. Not unconscious in the outset of the inferiority of my qualifications, experience in my own eyes, perhaps still more in the eyes of others, has strengthened the motives to diffidence of myself, and every day the increasing weight of years admonishes me more and more that the shade of retirement is as necessary to me as it will be welcome. Satisfied that if any circumstances have given peculiar value to my services they were temporary, I have the consolation to believe that, while choice and prudence invite me to quit the political scene, patriotism does not forbid it."

Electric Travel.

One hundred miles an hour a very short time ago was considered a speed utterly beyond realization on a railroad. That limit has been touched and even passed by the steam locomotive, and electrical engineers have lately been declaring that 150 miles an hour is possible with an electric motor on a specially constructed road. And now, just as the mind is getting familiarized with this amazing assertion, comes an engineer with the plans for a car that is to shoot through space at the rate of 400 miles an hour, "or more if necessary." The device is simple—a single-rail track, with a channel bar on each side a few feet higher than the rail; a steel cylinder-shaped car, pointed at both ends, supported on two doubly flanged wheels running on the single rail and kept in position by little friction wheels along the sides, running in the channel bars; finally electric motors on the axles, picking up the power from a rail or from iron pins in little boxes along the track. Result: Passengers step into a luxurious vehicle; whiz! New York to Pittsburg in an hour, Chicago in two hours, San Francisco in eight hours; no possibility of derailment, for the car can't get off, and hence no danger in fast running; no use for sleeping cars or dining cars, for the ordinary trip will be done almost as soon as begun; no smoke, no cinders, perhaps even no train newsboy! This sounds advanced just now, and yet why not? Only suppose a passenger should let go his breath en route would he ever catch it?—Exchange.

Kenneth Bazemore had the good fortune to receive a small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy when three members of his family were sick with dysentery. This one small bottle cured them all and he had some left which he gave to Geo. W. Baker, a prominent merchant of the place, Lewiston, N. C., and it cured him of the same complaint. When troubled with dysentery, diarrhœa, colic or cholera morbus, give this remedy a trial and you will be more than pleased with the result. The praise that naturally follows its introduction and use has made it very popular. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Parker & Armstrong.

Fanaticism is the froth on the courage of convictions.

ALABAMA.

Alabama, "Here we rest."
Beauteous land by Nature blest,
From out whose depths of virgin soil
Mineral wealth rewardeth toil,
And noise of plant and rolling mill
Re-echoes over vale and hill.
While waters pure and Southern skies
Quench the thirst and feast the eyes—
Oh, Alabama! here's to thee,
Fairest child of Liberty.

Alabama, "Here we rest."
Land where labor thrives the best,
Where killing frost and sudden hail
Never causes crops to fail;
Where dreadful blizzard and cyclone
Sand storm and sun stroke are unknown
Whose climate, pure and healthy air
But typifies her women fair—
Oh, Alabama! here's to thee—
Land of Southern chivalry.

Alabama, "Here we rest,"
Where waving fields with snowy crest
Yield forth the cotton for her mills,
Propelled by waters from the hills,
Whose noisy wheels and ceaseless hum
Proclaim that better days have come,
Inviting settlers far and near
To cast their lots with others here—
Oh, Alabama! here's to thee—
Hope of our prosperity.

DEADLY WEAPONS.

Montgomery Advertiser.

The reckless use of deadly weapons must be stopped. The habit of appealing to arms to settle the most trifling disputes is essentially brutal and denotes in those who do it an innate savagery that generations of gentle influences have not succeeded in eradicating. A man who can deliberately attempt to take the life of another for some fancied insult or slight wrong, is either brutalized or his mind is unbalanced. If the first, he should be removed for the same reason that we kill a savage beast; if the second he should be confined where it would be impossible for him to do harm.

Many of the assaults with deadly weapons can be traced to one of two causes; first, the carrying of concealed weapons in direct defiance of the law, and second, the lack of punishment, both judicial and social, for the taking or attempting to take human life. Our laws in regard to concealed weapons are ample to suppress the practice, if our judges had the courage to enforce them. The penalties can be made so severe that a determination upon the part of our judges to break up the practice would do much to discourage it. If it was known that our peace officers would make arrests for carrying concealed weapons whenever an opportunity offered, and that such arrest would be followed by a severe punishment, the pistol and knife would cease to be so common.

While the concealed weapon is responsible for many attempted murders and murders committed, the lack of swift, certain and severe punishment is also an important factor. If it was demonstrated that a high position in society, instead of acting as a palliation of the offense, would be considered as an aggravation, and, other things being equal, the punishment meted out to the educated would be more severe than to the ignorant; if it was known that no one would be allowed to escape punishment through some legal technicality, that had no bearing on the merits of the case; if adequate punishment was sure to follow upon conclusive proof of guilt and if assurance was given by our judges that they would rigidly enforce the law without fear or favor, deadly assaults would be rare.

In society, if the man who persisted in always having deadly weapons at his command, who considered that a human life was nothing that could not be ruthlessly destroyed and who could conceive of no way of resenting an insult or wrong, real or fancied, other than with a pistol ball or knife thrust, was thrust beyond its pale, ostracized and plainly shown that, so long as he held those barbarous ideas he would be looked upon as a half tamed beast that needed constant watching, it would undoubtedly bring about a change, from policy if not from conviction.

So long, however, as a portion of our people, even if it is but a minority, consider those who are quick to use the knife or pistol as men of high courage; so long as our citizens by their apathy countenance the practice; so long as our judges continue to inflict the minimum punishment in all cases of carrying concealed weapons brought before them, and so long as judges will allow guilty men to escape punishment on frivolous technicalities the pistol or knife will be ready to appear upon the slightest provocation.

It is a sad criterion upon our humanity, our christianity and our education that the pistol and knife is looked upon as an arbiter in many of our quarrels and that the man who is always ready to commit murder is often considered a good citizen. The man who habitually carries a pistol or other deadly weapon, does so for the purpose of taking human life, and only needs the opportunity to become a murderer.

Love Makes a Man Bold.

A man in love, with few opportunities, doesn't care how many people are watching him. Under a tree at Forest Park yesterday there sat a girl with a pink dress trimmed in blue ribbons, and a young man who felt very awkward in his best clothes. Their love story was evidently new, as they didn't see a thing going on around them, and within the space of forty minutes had kissed each other thirty-seven times by actual count. Fully fifty people kept tally. They were first seen under the tree at 9 o'clock in the morning, and were still there long after milking time. They had nothing to eat or drink all day, but looked contented and happy. The balloon passed right over their heads, but they didn't see it. We wonder if they are still there, and if they know that it rained.—Atchison Globe.

PLACE FOR SOME REFORM.

Mobile Register.

With Hixson gone into the interior of China without so much as a by-your-leave asked of the American government or of China, with Denby in a huff and unapproachable because his idea of what should be done in China does not agree with that of the United States secretary of state, and with Eustis paying more attention to social functions in Paris than to the distressed cry of an American citizen for help, there seems reason to believe that a reform is needed in our diplomatic and consular service.

There is no doubt that what we need and what is greatly lacking is some sort of training for our foreign representatives before they are sent abroad.

Under our system we are lucky if we get the right sort of men to serve our interests abroad; for there is no preparation made by which we can be assured in advance of getting the right sort. Political influence is the ruling factor in placing the consular and diplomatic agents of this government, whereas in most other countries diplomacy and commercial representation are, so to speak, trades, for which men who are naturally adapted are specially prepared. The reason British diplomacy is in the ascendancy wherever tested is because it is a trained diplomacy; the reason why British trade is fostered, extended and protected in the most remote parts of the earth, is because British consuls and consular agents have known rules to guide them in the performance of their duties, and are themselves men who have received instruction in the performance of the delicate duties devolving upon them.

With us how different! The prevailing idea of what should constitute a minister abroad is a schemer like Stevens, who misused our naval power to overthrow the government of Hawaii, with which we were at peace, and of a consul, Mr. Hixson, who, with an enthusiasm which speaks better of his heart than his head, flies to the rescue of persecuted missionaries in China without assuring himself beforehand that he can accomplish anything and without providing that his action shall not prove detrimental to the steps that his government is taking in protection of the missionary interests and in securing the punishment of those who have murdered the missionaries.

Whatever may be said for or against the civil service and its application to all departments of the civil administration, there is very little doubt that the civil service rules ought to be introduced in the consular department, and that even the diplomatic branch would be none the worse for a little systematic training in diplomacy, and particularly in the seeming little-practiced art of obedience and subserviency to the central power which they have been chosen to represent.

THE SOUTHERN PROSPECT.

Chicago Inter-Ocean.

The highly representative gentlemen from Alabama, whose opinions on commercial matters were narrated yesterday by a reporter for the Inter-Ocean say many things that are of interest to the people of Chicago. Firstly, they say that the common interest of the Southern people with those of Chicago in the construction of the Nicaragua canal begets a mutually kindly feeling. Secondly, they say that the generous tone and temper of the press and people of Chicago relative to the erection of a monument to the confederate dead has aroused a sentiment of esteem in the Southern heart. Thirdly, they say that the enterprise and liberality of the Chicago merchants appeal strongly to the Southern imagination, and putting these forces and circumstances together, the impulse of the South now is toward the metropolis of the West. It long has been toward that of the East. It will be the fault of our capitalists and of our public men if a large part of the trade of the South be not diverted to Chicago, and it is not likely to be their fault.

The Chicago delegates to the Atlanta exposition will be met by one hundred representatives of the good city of Birmingham, and will be invited to become their guests for a few days, during which time the enterprises and resources of the great iron and coal district of Alabama will be displayed.

One of the purposes of the gentlemen who are present with us is to interest Chicago capital in the erection of steel works in Birmingham. It is strange that that city, in which iron can be produced so cheaply, has not a single plant for the conversion of iron into steel. It is understood that Chicago capital is likely to be vested in such a plant, and when once steel is produced in Alabama factories for the production of tools and implements made of steel will follow in due course.

But the most pleasant feature of the prospect is the intermingling of interests of which it gives promise. The Chicago man will be a partner of the Alabama man; they will meet as friends; the Chicago man will spend much of histime in Alabama; the Alabama man will be a frequent visitor to Chicago. Their sons and daughters will inter-marry. The Northern farmer will buy Southern land for his younger sons; the Southern mechanic will spend years in learning the ways of Northern shops; the Northern artisan will be tempted southward. The people will get to know each other, and when they know each other they will like each other. The words "Northern" and "Southern" will have geographical signification only. The Union will be as complete in sentiment as it is in law.

CHINA has distinctly and unequivocally told John Bull and Brother Johnathan to keep off the grass.

My boy was taken with a disease resembling bloody flux. The first thing I thought of was Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. Two doses of it settled the matter and cured him sound and well. I heartily reccommend this remedy to all persons suffering from a like complaint. I will answer any inquiries regarding it when stamp is inclosed. I refer to any county official as to my reliability. Wm. Roach, J. P., Primroy, Campbell Co., Tenn. For sale by Parker & Armstrong.

An Industrious Clerk.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher, That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS.

W. A. Weldon, of Weldon, gave us a pleasant call Monday.

Ed. Hendrix, of Munford, was a visitor in our city Sunday.

H. E. Reynolds, of Blocton, spent Sunday in town with friends.

Robert Oliver and John Moseley, of Shelby, were in our city Monday.

Mrs. J. S. Leeper is spending a while with her sister Mrs. Long, in Bessemer.

J. L. Riddle, a prosperous farmer of Four Mile, is attending court this week.

W. S. Cary, Esq., of Montevallo, transacted legal business in our city Monday.

Mrs. Smith, mother of Mrs. A. P. Longshore, is visiting friends in South Alabama.

J. M. Scott and family, of Leeds, spent last week with the family of W. R. A. Milner.

County court is in progress this week, and as usual has attracted quite a crowd to town.

Miss Nora Leeper returned Saturday from an extended visit to North Alabama friends.

Prof. B. F. Giles, of Howard college, was here Tuesday and Wednesday looking up pupils.

Rev. T. M. Wilson is assisting Rev. T. P. Roberts in a meeting at Childersburg this week.

Col. C. L. Meroney, of Montevallo, was on our streets Sunday bubbling over as usual with good humor.

Miss Mattie Hand, who has been visiting Mrs. B. L. Moore, returned last week to her home in Jemison.

Mrs. J. R. Hill returned last week to her home in Jemison, after a visit of several days to the family of W. G. Parker.

The many friends of A. D. Wortham will regret to learn of his illness. He has been quite sick for a week or longer.

Miss LaValle Perry, who has been spending the summer with her aunt Mrs. Leeper, left Tuesday for her home in Bessemer.

The Pauline DuBose Missionary Society will give a "Tea" next Monday evening, at the residence of Hon. W. B. Browne. All are cordially invited to attend.

We learn with regret that J. H. Newton, our jolly, clever L. & N. depot agent, will soon be transferred to Sylacauga. He has made a host of friends here whose best wishes will go with him.

E. W. Bell expects to leave today for Blocton, where he will continue in the mercantile business. He will take only a small portion of the goods in the store here. The remaining stock will be left in the care of Ed. Walls, who will continue the business at the old stand.

John Porter, we are informed, has secured a position in the store of H. C. & W. B. Reynolds at Blocton, and will leave next week for that place. The Messrs. Reynolds are to be congratulated upon having secured him, as he is not only thoroughly reliable and honest, but a splendid salesman and is universally liked and respected. Good luck to you, John.

We are reliably informed that one of the furnaces at Shelby will be blown in Monday, Sept. 9th. This is good news for our sister town, for having enjoyed (?) a season of rest for several months, they are now ready and anxious to resume active work again, and we hope, now that the clouds are rolling away, that they may be blessed with a long and prosperous era.

Wilsonville Waifs.

Miss Ethel Kidd is visiting in town this week.

Will Kidd, of Vincent, spent Sunday with Mr. Pope and family.

Mrs. Fluqua, of Birmingham, is the guest of her brother, Dr. Boyer.

Miss Rosa Wallace and her "bud Wales" attended church here Sunday.

There never was so much sickness in this community as there is now, especially among the children.

Dr. DuBose, of your city, is administering to Mr. Pennington, who has been quite sick, but is convalescing now.

Our base ball team has hollowed "dead, down and dejected." Will some one please write an epitaph to its memory.

Rev. McCord preached here Sunday morning and night, and on Sunday afternoon four were added to Christ's kingdom in baptism.

Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Bradley, of Brown's Station, came up Sunday to spend a week with kin folks and also recuperate from a seige of sickness.

Mrs. Simpson, of Memphis, arrived here last week from a lengthy visit to Jacksonville relatives. She is the guest of Mr. McGowen and family this week.

The brick makers are manufacturing brick very fast for "our new store," and the contractors say if they can have good weather they will complete the house by the middle of October. Watch out, Columbiana, we don't propose to be classed with the denizens of Sleepy Hollow any longer.

BUTCH.

Items from Lewis.

J. L. Riddle is preparing to erect a gin house.

Mr. and Mrs. Sim Shaw visited relatives in this place Friday.

Mrs. Alonzo Cross has returned home from a visit to relatives at Pelham.

Mrs. J. Heartsfield, of Yellow Leaf, is visiting relatives on Four Mile this week.

W. J. Jackson and J. Heartsfield are in the majority. They have gone to peddling.

Messrs. L. A. Bradley and Glev. Jackson left Wednesday night for parts unknown.

The farmers are now busy pulling fodder, but on account of rain little has yet been saved.

Prof. S. S. Crumpton has a very large school, which will close with an exhibition Tuesday night, Sept. 17th.

There is a great deal of sickness in our community at present. Among whom are Prof. J. A. Spearman and L. B. Riddle.

The first question a young man asks upon being introduced to a young lady on Yellow Leaf is, "Are you married?" We think some of our young people have been imposed upon by the new married people.

Death has invaded the home circle of Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Burgess, and took from them their precious daughter Martha. On last Sunday morning at 7 o'clock, August 18, 1895, death laid his withering hand upon one of earth's fairest flowers, Miss Martha Burgess, aged 18 years. Her sickness was of three weeks' duration, slow fever being the destroyer.

The subject of this sketch was young, beautiful and cheerful, possessed of many lovely traits of character. Always so happy she made all around her feel that life was worth living, yet she was positive and faithful in all the relations of life that concerned her. She was delirious for several hours before she died. The last words she said was to repeat the verse

When the mists have roll'd in splendor
From the beauty of the hills,
And the sunshine warm and tender
Falls in kisses on the rills.
We may read love's shining letter
In the rainbow of the spray,
We shall know each other better,
When the mists have cleared away.

And as the mist cleared away Sunday morning she went to her home among the angels, where there is no mist, to await the coming of the dear ones left behind. She leaves father, mother, a brother and four sisters to mourn her loss besides many relatives and friends. We extend our sympathy to all the bereaved.

Martha lived with her parents one-half mile north of Sylacauga, Ala. On the 27th of July she visited her aunt, Mrs. J. L. Riddle, at Lewis, Ala.; she was sick upon her arrival, and as she did not get better she returned home on the 30th, from which she never again left.

SUNFLOWER

It May Do as Much for You.

Mr. Fred Miller, of Irving, Ill., writes that he had a severe kidney trouble for many years, with severe pains in his back and also that his bladder was affected. He tried many so-called kidney cures but without any good result. About a year ago he began use of Electric Bitters and found relief at once. Electric Bitters is especially adapted to cure of all kidney and liver troubles and often gives almost instant relief. One trial will prove our statement. Price only 50c for large bottle. At Parker & Armstrong's drug store.

A FREE SCHOOL AT LAST.

And It Will Open Next Monday Certain.

All Reports to the Contrary Notwitdstanding.

GLORIOUS NEWS THIS FOR OUR CITY.

Our city is young yet, only a few months old, but even in the short time that has elapsed since our city council was elected we have met with many perplexities and trying experiencies. The sole object of the law incorporating our town was to enable us to establish a free school. In doing this, however, many obstacles had to be overcome. People, as a rule, take hold of innovations slowly, and a great deal of time had to be consumed in acquainting the people with the new law, and it is with pardonable pride that having overcome all obstacles, we can announce that the free school is now an assured fact and will open next Monday.

Prof. Greek, who has had charge of our school for the past two years, has been elected and has accepted the position of principal. He will be ably assisted by Misses Mary Liles and Lacy Smith, both accomplished and experienced teachers.

All the preliminaries having been arranged, nothing remains to be done but to take advantage of the facilities offered and to fill the commodious academy with pupils. The opportunity is offered to all without money and without price. No tuition will be charged any pupil living within a radius of two and a half miles of the court house. Send the children, big and little, and we will have a rousing school.

This is the best news we have had the pleasure of publishing since we took hold of this paper nine years ago, and we feel highly elated at the prospect. This school means more for our town than either the erection of an iron furnace or a cotton factory. It means an educated, refined, moral community, and is that not ample reward for all the energy expended in securing it?

The "Alabama" Concert at Shelby.

The "Alabama Concert" on last Thursday evening, as far as the efforts of the young people who participated in it were concerned, was a veritable success, but as an audience-attractor it was a failure from some mysterious cause. The members of the Society of Christian Endeavor had put forth more than an ordinary amount of energy; they had been assisted, too, by Mrs. Witherby, whose skillful training and ample experience has so frequently been infused into the attractive programs that have been given at the Church of the Covenant. They had chosen the unique plan of gathering both songs and recitations from the pens of our own gifted writers, and honored their entertainment with the name of our proud Alabama, but from some unassigned cause there were but few who witnessed the well-prepared presentation of the evening's exercises. Notwithstanding these things the fact was fully demonstrated that from the writings of our own native geniuses there could be served a literary potpourri which was as pleasing as many that are seemingly more pretentious. Messrs. E. T. Witherby and A. H. Avery assisted largely in making the occasion enjoyable by their experienced elocutionary skill. The former opened the program with a sketch of two old Southern negroes who had purchased the portrait of their "old master" at an auction sale in Birmingham, and the incidents attendant thereon. It was happily rendered. Mrs. Martha Young, of Greensboro, is the author of the piece, and is familiar with the ante-bellum life of the former Southern slave.

Mr. A. H. Avery read a description of "the negro and the mule," by a Southern writer. It was inimitably spoken, with characteristic delineations vernacularly and braynacularly.

The entire corps of young ladies and gentlemen did themselves great credit in rendering the productions of home authors, equaling similar entertainments with their world-famed compositions.

The song, "Swinging in the Grapevine Swing," has in all respect the rich melody and pathos of Glover's and Foster's best ballads. This song was sung by a male quartette, whose voices blended in full harmonious accents, such as would have done credit to the minstrelsy of Barlow, Primrose & West's troupe.

A duet was also given which brought out the rich interweaving of the soprano and alto voices of the singers. Several solos were sung with considerable eclat.

To allude to each effort would be a task very unenviable for it would be difficult to discriminate when all did so commendably.

The society realized several dollars as the result of their endeavor in this line. With this they propose to purchase some more books. No institution of a religious character has reached the proportions and is similarly increasing in members, as the Endeavor Society. So formidable has been its augmentation that an inquiry has been instituted in Europe to know whether its growth is regarded as hurtful to the church. Out of three hundred or more letters addressed to those whose surroundings were of such a character as to enable them to speak authoritatively, only three were of the affirmative opinion. The general concensus was that no appendage of the Christian religion was of more assistance than this organization in the upbuilding of the faith. We earnestly hope that any future undertaking of the Society of Christian Endeavor will be crowned with success.

O. HY. O.

THE BUSINESS SITUATION.

St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

"Those who habitually hunt for clouds on the horizon must go outside of the iron trade now." This is what the Iron Age says in speaking of the iron market. The capacity of the furnaces at present at work throughout the country is 180,525 tons a week, as compared with 156,554 for the furnaces in operation three months ago. Production is at a higher mark than was ever reached before in August, and almost as high as the highest ever touched. It is increasing steadily, and an entirely new record is likely to be made before the fall months end. Moreover, though production is growing, the stocks on hand are decreasing. Demand keeps ahead of supply. This means, of course, a further advance in prices, even though production be considerably increased for railroad purchases, which are thus far light, are expected to be heavy in the next few months.

The crop outlook continues to be flattering. Ten days more of absence of frosts will put corn out of danger in Illinois, Missouri and Kansas, and a week or two later it will be beyond the reach of injury from that source in the more northerly tier of states. Spring wheat's condition, according to the figures of the agricultural department, is 95.9, as compared with 67.1 in 1894 at this time and 67 in 1893. This crop has already passed the danger point. Rye, oats, barley, potatoes and almost all the other important productions of the soil, except cotton, are scoring a larger yield than in the past few years. The agricultural department figures are for August 1, and would be still better if taken now, for the conditions in the past three weeks have been unusually favorable.

Gold exportation continues, but the syndicate is carrying out its agreement to protect the treasury, and the reserve continues well above the $100,000,000 line. The treasury deficit, which was $8,000,000 in July, will not, the government officials predict, go much above $5,000,000 in August. The treasury situation is the only speck in the business sky but here, too, an early improvement is looked for with the growth in trade and the general increase in the country's prosperity. Bank clearances maintain their long lead over last year's figures, and railroad earnings, which were slow in responding to the general business improvement, have recently been nearing the highest level of the past. In all the great productive industries the activity is fully up to the figures of normal years. Commercial failures are decreasing coincidently with the great increase in commerce. More business is done at present throughout the country than was done at any previous time since 1892, and it is carried on under sounder and safer conditions.

A Notice to Our White Friends.

EDITOR CHRONICLE: Will you please allow me space in your most worthy paper to say that the North Alabama Annual Conference of the African Methodist Church will hold its annual session with St. James A. M. E. church, in this city (Columbiana), November 27, 1895, Bishop A. Grant, D. D., presiding.

This being a quadriennial session, we are likely to have with us the following dignitaries: Bishop H. M. Turner, D. D., LL. D. bishop of Africa; Rev. L. J. Coffin, D. D., editor A. M. E. Review; Rev. H. T. Johnson, D.D., Phd., editor Christian Recorder; Rev. J. H. Armstrong, D. D., financial secretary; Rev. W. B. Derrick, D. D., secretary of missions and silver-tongued orator, and a goodly number of other distinguished prelates will be here to grace our city.

Our white friends, with all the pastors of the city and contiguous vicinities are cordially invited. Come and see what the sons of Ham are trying to accomplish, religiously, morally, intellectually, socially and financially, deo volent.

Any favors from our white friends thankfully received. Yours for success.

What a Boston Writer Does When He Wants to Be Funny.

Boston Globe.

Sarah Smith stands sorrowfully solus; she sees splendid spruces surrounding shady spots; she sees summer shining; she smells sweet savor; sweet songsters singing silvery strains serenade Sarah. Still she sighs. Sunset's soft shades settle silently; still she stands silently sighing.

Suddenly she started. She saw some stranger strolling silently southward.

"Stop!" she shouted. "Stop, stranger; Sarah Smith says so!"

Stately she stood, sternly she shouted "Stop!"

Samuel Slocum, successful statesman, smooth speaker, started, saw Sarah, seemed surprised, soliloquizingly said:

"Strange; seemingly scarce sweet 16; so sweet, so simple, still so singularly suspicious! She seems strangely sad. Say something sweeter, Sarah."

So strolling silently stranger-ward, she said:

"Sarah Smith scorns suspicious scandals; she seeks sympathy. Seeks she successfully?"

Still shone silvery streams slantingly southward. Samuel Slocum sat sweetly smiling—Sarah Smith seated suspiciously somewhere. Sunset's serene splendor suggested supper. Still she sat.

She sought sympathy successfully; supper seemed superfluous.

Stories From Everyday Life in the Woods and Hills—How One Preacher Broke Up the Meeting at Flat Rock. Too Many Trimmins.

COPYRIGHT 1895.

Everybody for forty miles around in the Rocky Creek country—all them of my own day and generation at any rates—can remember the time when Reverent Dave Hanson busted up the big Methodist meetin over at old Flat Rock church. Poor Dave is now gone the common way of all human flesh; you understand, and it ain't for me to say for certain which way he went. But I can shet my eyes to-day and see Dave Hanson as he looked that mornin when he rode by to tell me the news concernin that dull and dreadful times they had over at Flat Rock.

Giving Out the News.

"One of two things has got to come to pass, Rufe"—says Dave in givin out the news to me—"I have got to go on home and change my riggins, or the Lord's work will have to suffer. That want none of my meetin over there at Flat Rock; you understand, and neither was it my fault that the thing got busted wide open on the second day.

"You see I had been away up in the hill country to a little railroad town runnin of a big meetin up there, and we had such a tremendius big outpourin till remained over and stayed in the fight for about two weeks hand runnin. In the maintime the weather it was so scandlous hot and I had to sweat such terrible drops of perspiration to keep the pot a bilin, you understand, till bless gracious all the clothes I had along with me was wet and dirty. So in that way it naturally come to pass that some of the sisters called a meetin of the society and sent out a committee to git me some new riggins. They lit out they did and got me a three-story beegum hat, a ruffle-bosom shirt fried in starch and a brown linen duster as long as the moral laws. Man sir, I could lay back and hang the tail of that duster out over the back of my buggy and it would all but sweep the earth as I drove along the big road, whilst my shirt had ruffles and frills and fancy fixments on it from Dan to Habersham.

"Whereas, on my return back home I got wind of the big meetin of days goin on over at Flat Rock, and I thought I mought as well to swing around by there about dinner time, and take out and feed, and rest over till along in the shank and cool of the evenin. But I was drivin old Ball, you understand, and I don't think he felt plum lazy about the general appearments of my new turnout. At any rates, he had got a reglar waterbury movement on him and we pulled up at Flat Rock before they opened up on the first sermont. There was three or four good preachers on hand—which that was a gracious plenty for one big meetin and some to spare—but when I driv up they all come out and lit in with one voice to make me preach.

"No brethren," says I, "this aint the time nor the place for me to preach. I aint fitten right now to preach to these good people of Flat Rock. I would ruther not try to preach and I aint goin to try it if there is any way to back out.

"But you recollect, Rufe, I use to swap horses and play the fiddle and gamble with the pasteboard documents and the like of that, and some people have took up a notion that Dave Hanson can cover all the ground and travel all the gaits till yet. I told them that I had but only drove by to let them know that I was with them in the flesh as well as the spirit, and to rest over durin the heat and burden of the day. And still nothin would do them but I must go forth and stand up and preach to the world.

"Look at me brethren," says I, "and take a good look at the duds and riggins I have got on, and then remember what I tell you. It aint the Lord's will for me to speak forth the words of truth and soberness here today, and if you pitch in and make me preach I will bust the meetin wide open. I can feel it comin on, and I know it. I know these good people around Flat Rock as well as any man on the grounds and a whole lot better than some of you, and I tell you, brethren, if you trot me out today, with all these fancy trimmins on you will quench the fires as with a wet blanket and break up the meetin into the bargain. I give you the truth as it has been given unto me to see it an feel it, and when the worst comes to worst shake not your hoary heads at me.

"But it want no kinder sorter use of talkin. I recken maybe they had already come to the conclusion that they hat forgot more about runnin of a big meetin than I would ever learn, and all that I could do was to cut the pack and then let the game go their way."

The Mill Wouldn't Grind.

"So finally at last in orderment to keep down trouble in the amen corner, I braced up and let the proceedins proceed. But it want my time of year for preachin, Rufe, and the mill jest simply wouldn't grind no way I could turn the water on. I stood my three-story bee-gum hat big end up on one end of the sacred desk, and whilst the congregation sung two or three familiar hymns I was tryin to pray and fumblin around lookin for a text. By some unhappy hook or mercrook I took my text from right along there where the good Book says, "He giveth His beloved sleep." Mind you now, Rufe, I don't think the Lord had anything to do with me or the text or the sermont I tried to preach that day. I felt like the devil was chairman of the meetin from the jump. I went right out into deep water at the very first lick, and of all the stumblin and flounderin and confusionment you ever heard tell of, I had it. I couldn't tell for certain whether I was preachin the Word or makin a stump speech, and I didn't know whether to turn loose and sink or flounder back towards the shore.

"Man sir, it was the gonebyest most up hill road I ever tried to travel. The spirit want in it, Rufe, and I raley have my doubts if the spirit was anywheres around in the Flat Rock neighborhood that day.

"In the outstart I had buttoned up that long linen duster so as to hide the fancy front of my shirt as best I could, but as I warmed up to the struggle I unbuttoned that long earth-sweeper and stood forth in full bloom. Presently I took notice of some of the amen members gazin through the windows with a far-away look. And let me tell you now, Rufe, whensomever it comes to that pass where you can't keep people right up in the amen corner from gazin off through the window, you mought as well to take out and quit. But I floundered about to the best of my ability till I could see that the Lord had give some of his beloved sleep, and them that didn't go to sleep had to look out upon the world in orderment to keep awake.

"Well, I never did get to where I could wind up the sermont, but after so long a time I jest naturally broke it off and quit. Then one of the brethren tried to lead in prayer, but it was a mighty sorry substitute for a prayer, Rufe. The congregation then tried to sing a song, but the man that pitched the tune raised it with a step ladder, you understand, and swung the solo so high till nobody couldn't jine in and help. One of the visitin preachers had to make a few scatterin remarks in conclusion, and I am here to tell you, Rufe, he did scatter scandlous. Even to the paster he tipped and stumbled like a blind calf in tall oats when he went to adjourn the meeting for dinner. Let me tell you, Rufe, it was a freezeout, and a freezeout from start to finish.

"To be certainly of course I had to remain over to dinner and then I hooked up and pulled out for home. But before I left I told the brethren that the meetin was busted exactly like I said, and they mought as well to take out and quit for good. It wan't none of my fault and they couldn't blame me, but the naked unwashed truth was I had killed the meetin, and killed it too dead to skin. They went in and pulled through with one more sermont and then I give it up as the biggest and most coldest failue that had ever come to pass at old Flat Rock church."

The next time I met up with the Reverent Dave Hanson he went on to say:

"Soon as I could after I busted up the meetin at Flat Rock and went home I sold my new three-story beegum hat to a nigger preacher for six bits on a credit, you understand, Rufe, and now I have likewise turned over my ruffle-bosom shirt and that long linen duster to the women folks for dish rags and baby duds and quilt pieces."

The "Most Mindfulest Man."

Old man Mose Cranby that use to live over on Huckleberry Ridge was about the meanest, and yet the most mindfulest man that ever had his day and generation in this green and wicked world. He was tough white people—tough enough for wedge wood in regards to his general character. He never was fitten to keep company with the right and proper sort of people, and so he lived and died a wayward and wicked and rebellious old bachelor.

When finally at last it come his time to die several of the neighbors had come to set up with him and keep him company durin his last remainin hours on the earth. In the mornin of the very day he died I took his tremblin old hand in mine and told him that the last shower would soon come and he would have to go in. I then went on to ask him if he wouldn't love to be buried over at Pilgrim's Rest church, where his sainted old father and mother had slept the last sleep for lo these many years.

"Who, me, Rufe?" says old man Mose. "You know I aint fitten to be buried out there at Pilgrim's Rest along with my father and mother and all them Christian people, and I reckon it is too late now to git fitten. No, Rufe, that would never do—never in creation. When I am dead I believe I would ruther for you to take me down to Pine Top and bury me there in the nigger graveyard—that is—you understand, Rufe—providin of course the niggers don't object.

A New Thanky Bag.

In so far as I can see and hear there ain't no particlar news stirrin in the settlement here of late—nobody sick or dead or run away or got married. But Aunt Nancy Newton has bloomed out all of a suddent with a bran-spankin new thanky bag. She has throwed away here old "dominecker," as the boys have been wont to call it for years and years, and the new one is solid black and soft and shiny as the fur on a cat's back,

RENEWING THEIR YOUTH

A Strange Story from a Nebraska Village.

The Villagers Excited Over the Increased Health and Vigor of the Older Inhabitants—The Experience of Two "Vets."

From the World-Herald, Omaha, Neb.

A World-Herald reporter was attracted by the evidence of renewed activity of some of the older inhabitants of the village of Bruce, a suburb of Omaha, Neb., and enquired the cause. Mr. Andrew Finkenkeler, who was a member of Company B of the First Iowa Volunteers during the war, made the following explanation so far as he himself is concerned:

"In July, 1866, while my company was on the march through to Austin, Texas, I was attacked with rheumatism of the worst kind in one leg at Alexander, La. Being weak I was sunstruck and remained unconscious for several hours. Every summer since I have been unable to stand the heat of the sun, and have been compelled to give up my work. There was in my head a bearing-down feeling which increased until it seemed my head would burst, and it caused a ringing in my ears, and palpitation of the heart set in, so that the slightest noise would set my heart thumping. Several times it has rendered me unconscious for from seven to ten hours at a time. In addition to this the rheumatism extended up my entire side until it drew my head down on my shoulder. I lost my strength and flesh and was totally unfit for work.

"For twenty-eight years I have consulted physicians and taken their prescriptions without deriving any material benefit. My ailments increased in intensity until I was assured that there was no hope for me. During last year I went into the butcher business, but the dampness from the ice used increased my rheumatic pains to such an extent that I was not only compelled to quit the business, but was confined to my house and bed for nearly six months.

"In November last I read in the World-Herald a case of a man who had been entirely cured from the ailments from which I was suffering, by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. On November 28, I purchased a box. In a week I was astonished to know that I felt better than I had for six months past, and before I had used half a box. The ringing in my ears began to lessen in volume and finally left me. The pain from the rheumatism gradually left me, so that within one week from the time I took my first pill I was able to sit up in bed. On January 1st, I was able to go out and walk around a little. The palpitations of my heart entirely ceased. On February 9, I was so thoroughly cured that I accepted a position as night watchman in the Forest Lawn Cemetery, remaining out of doors from 6 P. M. until 6 A. M. I have gained in weight from 144 pounds which I weighed in November last, to 172 pounds which I weigh now."

For nerve building and for enriching the blood Pink Pills are unexcelled. They may be had of druggists or direct from the Dr. Williams' Medical Co., Schenectady, N. Y., for 50 cents per box, or six boxes for $2.50.

—Mrs. Mary Jean Bradford, of Boston, left a will in which she showed her love for a favorite parrot. One clause reads thus: "I give $4,000 in trust to G. H. Pierce, to be invested in good mortgage or mortgages, and the income thereof to be paid to the person who may take care of my poll-parrot."

—A funny young man in Milledgeville Ga., rigged himself up as a ghost, and in the midnight gloom visited the house of a neighbor, to frighten him, and have a laugh at his expense. The ghost interrupted a burglar at his work, and the burglar turned the laugh against the ghost by robbing him of his watch and twenty dollars.

—The word prevaricator is from the Latin, and originally meant a straddler with distorted or misshapen legs. In the Roman courts of law the expression was applied to one who in a suit was discovered to be in collusion with his opponent to compass some dishonesty. As falsehood was the necessary part of such a performance, the word by and by came to have the significance at present attached to it.

—Mlle. Pauline de Grandpre probably knows more of the prison life of French women than anyone else in France. She lived in the St. Lazare prison as the housekeeper of her uncle, who was chaplain there during the empire. In the twenty-five years that have elapsed since he died she has devoted herself entirely to visiting female prisoners and obtaining situations for them when they have undergone their sentences.

—An enthusiastic admirer of Victor Hugo has made a collection of all the black and white and colored portraits of the poet that he could find. Altogether they number nearly 4,000, of which about 2,500 are caricatures and cartoons. The collector, M. She stands high in the profession and has built up a good practice. She is the daughter of one physician and the widow of another.

SERVIAN CARPET WEAVERS.

Although Wretched Peasants, Their Work Is World Famous.

Herein is described the low ebb of life of the population at Pirot in Servia: These wretched people are so fanatical and ignorant that they imagine they are accomplishing a great and good work by fasting for about six months in the year. They are so little accustomed to good food that the recruits from this district can not eat and digest the military rations. Their physical stamina is reduced to so low an ebb that the death rate is very high, and they can not resist even slight illnesses. They are content to sleep on the damp earth floors of their cottages, and have so little sense of enjoyment that, even when entertainments are organized in the town, none of the natives attend. Such, in a few words, are the principal facts I described in detail in my previous correspondence.

Yet it is this population, these miserable people, who produce the renowned and beautiful Pirot carpets. Several efforts, as yet totally unsuccessful, have been made to improve their condition, and the industry is still pursued in the primitive manner it first originated. I was taken by Mr. Michel Mihailovitch, who was the leader of the Bosnian insurrection against the Turkish occupation, to see several cottages where the carpets are made. The work is done outside under the shelter of a protruding roof or extemporized veranda. The framework of the carpet is of the rudest description, for it is made with the unshorn trunks of small trees or shrubs or branches of larger trees.

A flax thread warp is fastened across this frame and it is bent up against the outside wall of the cottage. The worker seizes so many threads of the warp with the fingers of her left hand, and with her right hand passes behind them a thread of colored wool which constitutes the weft. No shuttle is employed; human fingers play the part of the shuttle. When a certain number of weft-woolen threads have been thus passed in and out across the flaxen warp, the worker takes a piece of wood, roughly shaped to imitate four bent thin fingers of a hand. Introducing these wooden fingers between the warp threads, the weft threads are sharply pushed downward and tightly jammed together.

Such is the process in all its simplicity; easy, but slow. The difficulty arises in the making of the designs. Strange to say, the women have no drawings, nothing to help them; but evolve the designs out of their own minds as they work; making the figures as memory, tradition or imagination suggests. The result is not unlike tapestry, only in the pirot carpets the colored woolen thread is always laid horizontally over the colorless vertical warp, which it, of course, conceals. In tapestry the colorless groundwork consists of a weft as well as a warp, and the colored wool is drawn over both vertically and horizontally. Thus in tapestry we have minute squares of color, whereas in the pirot carpet we have the color lying in horizontal lines.

Pirot carpet can be bought at Pirot from 5 to 14 dinars the square meter. Two dollars in gold might be considered the average price per square meter. To make a carpet about a kilogramme of wool is required per square meter. The cost of wool just as it comes from the sheep is 1.80 dinars or francs in silver. When carded and washed the best qualities are worth 2.60 dinars the kilo. The dyeing of the wool costs 1.80. dinars, so the total cost for the wool is 5.20 dinars. This is for the first quality, long-haired wool. The short-hair wool is much cheaper. There are in Pirot six exceptionally skilful workers, and they are capable of making a square meter in three days.

All the other workers require five to seven days to make a square meter, and the day's work is from sunrise to sunset. For a day's work the fully-qualified weavers earn 40 to 50 centimes, or in American money 8 to 10 cents. But, attached to these fully-qualified workers are a number of other workers who, under different pretexts, are made to work for very much less. At the first cottage I visited I found a bright pleasant young girl, 14 years old, who only earned 10 centimes, a penny or 2 cents, a day. She said she was a learner, was living with her parents and was working so as to earn enough money to get married. Of course I inquired how much money she required to get married; that is to say to possess a sufficient dowry to be able to marry some one in her own station in life.

She replied that about 120 dinars, or $24, would be a suitable sum. Though this sum was modest enough, it represented 1,200 days' work at 2 cents, on the supposition that she never spent a single cent of her earnings on herself. Then it was explained that the marriage portion need not be all in cash, but the greater part was generally in kind, and I was forthwith shown a number of knitted woolen socks already made for the as yet unknown husband. A girl, I found, is generally expected to present her husband, on marriage, with a some twenty pair of hand-knitted woolen socks with elaborate colored designs over the instep, and some one hundred and fifty to two hundred meters of hand-woven cotton material for underclothing. Thus girls are hardly in their teens when they begin to make this provision for their marriage.

As they generally have no idea who is likely to be their husband when they begin this work, I wondered how the socks would fit the unknown foot. This, however, was considered a trivial difficulty, and I was told that the socks, being made the average size, usually gave satisfaction. Then the Servians do not wear boots and shoes, and there is plenty of room for an ill-fitting sock in the loose sandals with which they protect the soles of their feet. A considerable number of women are also employed in spinning the wool, and for this they are paid about ten cents per day and their food; but if the people for whom they work are poor, the food consists only of onions, bread and the paprika fruit, or pepper. A woman can spin from five to ten kilogrammes of wool in a day.—Cor. Philadelphia Telegraph.

big bulky pills were in general use. Like the "blunderbuss" of that decade they were big and clumsy, but ineffective. In this century of enlightenment, we have Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, which cure all liver, stomach and bowel derangements in the most effective way.

If people would pay more attention to properly regulating the action of their bowels, by the use of these little "Pellets" they would have less frequent occasion to call for their doctor's services to subdue attacks of dangerous diseases. The "Pellets" cure sick and bilious headache, constipation, indigestion, bilious attacks and kindred derangements of liver, stomach and bowels.

THE WORLD AT LARGE.

Summary of the Daily News

WASHINGTON NOTES.

A DISPATCH from Washington stated that readings of sensible temperature, or that actually felt, would hereafter form a feature of the weather bureau charts. All other temperature readings would be subordinated to the new system, which it was expected would be put into operation within a month.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND has commuted to life imprisonment the sentence of Cephas Wright, a full-blood Choctaw Indian, convicted of murder in the eastern district of Texas. The president cited as his reasons for the commutation Wright's ignorance of the English language and laws and lack of realization of the enormity of the offense.

PREPARATIONS were in progress at the war department at Washington to secure the incorporation of another star on the United States flag to represent Utah. The flags having the additional star are not authorized to be used until July 4, 1896, the date of the admission of Utah as a state, and an official order will be issued requiring the change to take effect on that date.

THE white house mail on the 27th bore the commission of ex-Senator Ransom to be United States minister to Mexico, thus ending the complication by which he was declared ineligible by being appointed when he was a senator.

AN important order giving full protection to foreign consumers of American meat products was issued by secretary Morton at Washington on the 28th. It will prevent the exportation of any beef that is not inspected, and will cause the exporters of horse meat so to mark the packages that the nature of the contents shall be apparent. The order goes into effect September 16.

THE report of the board of engineers appointed by the secretary of war to examine and report the probable effect of the Chicago drainage canal upon lake harbor levels was made public by Secretary Lamont on the 28th. The board suggested that the canal was not solely a state affair, but said that as soon as it was used for navigation it would become a national waterway and that federal supervision must be extended to it. The board discussed at some length the water levels of the great lakes, pointing out that these levels were a delicate matter and subject to many changes.

A RECENT dispatch from Washington said that the utterances of E. C. Benedict on the subject of retiring greenbacks was being considered of much significance in political circles there. It was thought that he expressed the views of President Cleveland on the matter. Senator Hill, of New York, was also said to favor the idea. Silver men were anxious to know what the probable new departure was in its entirety.

THE secretary of the treasury has extended the time for filing sugar bounty claims from September 1 to October 1.

THE Rome correspondent of the London Standard telegraphs that Mgr. Zalewski, apostolic delegate to India, was destined to succeed Mgr. Satolli at Washington.

GENERAL NEWS.

THE New York World said that the attorney-general of that state had brought suit against the American Tobacco Co. to drive it out of the state, trusts being illegal in the Empire state.

THE Dawes commisssion will meet at South McAlester, I. T., September 4. It was the general opinion of the members of the commission that an arrangement would be secured with the Indians that would lead to the ownership of townsite property. This would for a basis for limited taxation for those living in the towns and afford some schools and other advantages of civilization. The whole plan had not been worked out by the commission in detail, but the idea will be perfected when on the ground.

ELMER J. SCHLINK and Jacob Altweis, both aged about 10 years, were caught by a belt in a flour mill at New Riegel, O., and hurled against the ceiling. Young Schlink's arm was torn from the socket and his brains dashed out, producing instant death. Altweis' arm was broken in several place and he received injuries which will probably prove fatal.

THE convent of Riordavibo in Italy was partially destroyed by fire and eight men perished and four others were severely injured.

HEZEKIAH ROBERTS, a young farmer in Butler, Ky., cut his wife's throat on the 29th and then cut his own. He died instantly. His wife was fatally hurt. He was supposed to have been insane. The bloody deed was witnessed by their three children, aged from 1 to 4.

WILLIAM LONG, a cowboy and a whisky smuggler, killed a mounted policeman at Sweet Grass, Mont. The two quarrelled after some drinks and the killing resulted. Long then went to Toole's ranch and killed Ira Brown, the foreman, who, before dying, managed to shoot Long, killing him instantly.

IN the Cumberland mountains, on the Kentucky-Virginia line, bands of men of the Boyd and Thomas families with Winchesters met at an illicit distillery and engaged in a conflict. Four men were killed and several wounded. The fight was the result of an old feud.

LENA DAHL, daughter of a farmer living near Westfield, S. D., wanted to gain the love of Henry Halseth, a neighbor, and she gave him a love potion which she got of a medium. The young man became seriously ill, the medium decamped and the girl did not get the man's love. The potion contained strychnine.

THE steamers Christopher Columbus, the whaleback, and John A. Dix, both heavily loaded with passengers, collided at the mouth of the river at 11 o'clock on the night of the 30th. A panic ensued, in which many were more or less injured. The John A. Dix had her sides broken in, and every passenger on board was thrown from his feet.

CLEARING house returns for the principal cities in the United States for the week ended August 30 showed an average increase as compared with the corresponding week last year of 18.9; in New York the increase was 2.5; outside New York the increase was 11.8.

A SPECIAL from Boston said that Knights Templars were planning the establishment of a great national university for both sexes, to be controlled by and in the interest of all masons, with a permanent endowment of $50,000,000. The scheme contemplated the erection of buildings to accommodate 10,000 students.

THE joint debate between Col. W. O. Bradley and Gen. P. W. Hardin at Eminence, Ky., on the 30th was called off on account of the noisy demonstration of the crowd when Col. Bradley began to speak.

JAMES KEIR HARDIE, the English socialist, spoke to a small audience at Chicago on the 30th. M. J. Carroll, editor of the official organ of the Illinois Federation of Labor, said the trades unions of Chicago were not in sympathy with Mr. Hardie's teachings.

JUSTICE BREWER'S speech was the main feature of the American Bar association's meeting at Detroit, Mich., on the 29th. He appealed for much-needed changes in the administration of justice. The committee on patent law reported adversely to any general revision of acts in that line, but recommended various specific amendments. The committee on law reporting urged more simplicity and uniform in methods, and state supervision of the making of reports was recommended.

RECENT cable advices from Minister Denby stated that Chinese officials were lending their aid in the investigations into the massacre of Christians at Ku Cheng, and already several convictions had been made.

FULLY 12,000 people gathered at Fleetwood, N. J., on the 29th to witness the great pacing race between Robert J., Joe Patchen, Mascot and John R. Gentry. The purse was $5,000, and Robert J. won in three straight heats. Best time, 2:04½.

AT Buffalo, N. Y., recently, an evening paper declared that ex-Postmaster-General William Bissell had been offered by President Cleveland the place on the United States supreme court bench made vacant by the death of Judge Jackson. The paper added that it was not likely that Mr. Bissell would accept.

AT Louisville, Ky., Theodore B. Gillum, supreme organizer of the Oriental league, was stabbed in the neck and instantly killed by James Burnett, who attempted to gain admission to an entertainment without a ticket and was ejected by Gillum.

AN accident occurred on the St. Clair river, near Marysville, Mich., on the 28th, during a squall and rainstorm, in which four persons lost their lives. A picnic was being held at Stag island, opposite Marysville, and Frank Derufg and three ladies rowed over early in the day. When the storm was seen coming up they started back for home, but when within 400 feet of the shore the squall struck the little craft and capsized it. All but one, a girl of 15, were drowned.

ONE of the most atrocious murders that has occurred in New York for years, was committed on the 28th, when Charles Postulka, a butcher, crazed with rage, because, as he claimed, his wife Annie had wronged him, butchered her with a knife.

IN the twenty-five round match at Boston on the 27th between George Dixon, the lightweight boxer of Boston, and Johnny Griffin, the "Braintree Lad," the bout was given to Dixon. The decision was rather a surprise, as both men were in good condition at the end of the twenty-fifth round, although Dixon had done the best work.

INSECT LIFE, the monthly entomological bulletin issued by the agricultural department at Washington, has been discontinued and two series of bulletins will take its place.

THE strike on the water works trenches at Wapakoneta, O., developed into a tragedy on the 27th and three men were shot, one of whom will die.

AT Newport, R. I., on the 27th, W. F. Hovey met R. D. Wrenn to decide the national tennis championship. Hovey won in three straight sets, the score being 6—3, 6—2, 6—4.

OPEN house was the order of the day at Boston on the 28th and the latch strings of all commanderies were on the outside. At the meeting of the grand encampment the grand recorder and grand treasurer made their reports. The total membership in the order of Knights Templar was given at 106,770. The drill at the baseball grounds drew a large crowd.

DETAILS have been received at Constantinople of the recent attack made by a band of Bulgarians upon the Mahommedan village of Dospat, across the Turkish frontier, in the Rhodope mountains. The attack, it appeared, occurred at dawn, and while the villagers were asleep. The Bulgarians used dynamite bombs and set fire to the houses when the inhabitants tried to escape. Men, women and children, it was claimed, were killed indiscriminately, and, according to one version of the affair, 300 persons perished.

PEACE has been declared in Brazil between the federal government and the Rio Grande do Sul revolutionists.

A NEGRO farm hand in Simpson county, Ky., who was charged with betraying the 14-year-old daughter of John Mulligan, was taken from officers by a mob and hanged to a tree.

THE failures for the week ended August 30 (Dun's report) were 186 in the United States, against 196 last year, and 42 in Canada, against 40 last year.

THE steamer Monowai arrived at San Francisco on the 30th and reported that she did not stop at the Hawaiian islands because a boat hailed her in sight of the port of Honolulu and stated that cholera had broken out there and that there had been eight deaths from the plague. It was thought that the steamer Belgic had brought the disease from China and as that steamer had landed some steerage passengers at San Francisco it created some little uneasiness that perhaps the infection might have been brought to the Pacific coast.

THE republican state committee at Harrisburg, Pa., on the 28th indorsed Senator Quay by re-electing him chairmain of the state committee. The resolutions reiterate the financial plank of the republican national convention, denounce the democratic administration's tariff and foreign policies and the Wilson law, declare for high protection and praise Senator Quay for his course in the last congress. The final plank was Senator Quay's reform resolution calling for the purification of politics and civil service in all branches of the public service.

JAMES GETTY, an ex-councilman and a wealthy wholesale liquor dealer, was shot and killed at Pittsburgh, Pa., on the 28th by Alexander Hutchinson, formerly proprietor of the Merchants hotel of that city. Getty was the owner of the Hotel Willey and the murder was the result of a dispute over the leasing of the hotel to Hutchinson.

GEORGE HACKATHORN, aged 20, ran amuck at East Liverpool, O., with two revolvers, firing at five different persons, none of whom were hit, and then attempted to swim the Ohio river. Officers pursued him in a skiff and finally captured him. He was not intoxicated and his escapade was attributed to his desire to figure as a desperado.

IN the Montana Methodist conference at Helena the question of admitting women to the general conference on the same footing as men was decided in favor of the women by a vote of 34 to 4.

AT the meeting of the American Bar association at Detroit, Mich., on the 28th United States Circuit Judge William H. Taft, of Ohio, made an address on "Corporations." He referred in detail to the relations of federal courts to organized labor, especially to their action in issuing injunctions in the American Railway union strike. He strongly criticised the attitude of Gov. Altgeld, of Illinois, in maintaining that a conspiracy described in the Debs case was not unlawful. Said he: "A public nuisance more complete, in which Debs et al. were engaged in furthering, cannot be imagined."

IN a cottage on the outskirts of Indianapolis, Ind., said to have been rented by H. H. Holmes, in prison at Philadelphia on suspicion of having murdered many people for their life insurance money, detectives found the charred bones of a boy, supposed to have been Howard Pietzel. The body had been burned in a stove. The neighborhood was considerably excited over the discovery.

ESTANLISLAS TAMAREZ, a noted Mexican bandit chief, who was captured by government troops, was hanged at Parral. This was the first execution by hanging, the usual manner of deaths being by shooting in Mexico.

WILLIAM COMPTON, Joseph Roberts, Joseph Tessuer, David Boyd and John Michuer were lodged in the federal jail at Guthrie, Ok., on the 28th, on the charge of counterfeiting. The officers believed they had captured part of the gang that has been flooding the whole northern part of the territory with counterfeit silver coins for several months.

THE village of Huatingo, in Mexico, was visited by a waterspout recently, causing a loss of life and property. many of the houses were washed away and eight persons met death by drowning. The flood also destroyed all the crops in the little valley.

IN "Yellow row," a notorious building on Second avenue in Pittsburgh, Pa., an unknown man, who had been enticed into a room, was killed and his body thrown into the street from the second-story window. His neck was broken and his skull fractured by the fall. William Boyer and wife, who were detected wiping a bloody knife, were arrested.

TROUBLE has again broken out between the Kalispell Indians and settlers along the east side of the Pend d'Oreille river in Idaho over the possession of what the Indians claim is their reservation, but which is in reality government land.

OVER 25,000 Knights Templar paraded at Boston on the 27th. It was pronounced the grandest pageant ever witnessed in that city. All of the arrangements were perfect. The lines of parade were formed in thirteen divisions, Missouri commanderies being in the twelfth and Kansas commanderies in the thirteenth. An immense crowd witnessed the march.

THE Eastern Iowa league having disbanded, the announcement was made on the 27th that Dubuque would be admitted to the Western association. Dubuque won the pennants in both eight and six club Iowa leagues this season.

DR. VON HERFF, of New York, who recently arrived from Cuba, said that he found business of all kinds on the island at a standstill. Some of the merchants had closed their doors waiting for better times. Almost every sugar planter was threatened with ruin if he did not contribute money to the insurgent cause, and they will have to pay enormous taxes to the government. The great sugar industry was in danger of destruction, in fact.

LIGHTNING entered the telegraph office of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad Co., at Whitewater, Wis., and instantly killed the operator Joseph O'Malley.

TRADE CONDITIONS BETTER.

Faint Hopes for Good Prices Give Way to Surprises at the Activity Manifested.

NEW YORK, Aug. 31.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: Improvement in markets and prices continues, and whereas a few months ago everybody was nursing the faintest hopes of recovery it has now come to be the only question in which branches, if any, the rise in prices and the increase of business may go too far. A strong conservative feeling is finding expression, not as yet controlling the markets or industries, but warning against too rapid expansion and rise. In some directions the advance in prices clearly checks future business. But encouraging features have great power. Exports of gold continue, but are met by syndicate deposits and expected to cease soon. Anxieties about the monetary future no longer hinder. Crop prospects, except for cotton, have somewhat improved during the week.

Important steps toward reorganization of great railroads give hope to investors. Labor troubles are for the moment less threatening and some of importance have been definitely settled. The industries are not only doing better than anybody expected, but are counting upon a great business for the rest of the year.

Wool has been speculatively hoisted, so that sales have fallen below last year's, in August 23,200,400 pounds, of which 10,902,900 were foreign, against 25,748,850 last year, of which only 4,539,200 were foreign. The demand for dress goods is still large, and some cancellation of orders for men's foreign cloths are reported, because goods do not come up to samples. At the same time the receipts from abroad continue heavy, and the outcome is so far in doubt that manufacturers are not buying beyond their actual needs.

The prospect for wheat has hardly improved this week, although the price has fallen ¼ cent. Western receipts have decidedly increased, but are only 3,905,905 bushels, against 6,428,294 last year, and Atlantic exports are only 1,373,356 for the week, flour included, against 3,271,113 last year.

Failures for the week have been 186 in the United States, against 196 last year, and 42 in Canada, against 40 last year.

PAID FRANCE FIRST.

China Gives Up 4,000,000 Francs as Indemnity on Account of Anti-Missionary Riots.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31.—State department officials say China's agreement to pay France 4,000,000 francs indemnity on account of the anti-missionary riots at Szechuan is due to the fact that France decided to prosecute her claim alone and independently of the United States and Great Britain. The French had large property interests in that section, and the sum agreed upon is considered as entirely reasonable compensation for the loss sustained. The authorities here are satisfied with the progress making in the settlement of the claims of this country and of England, which are being pressed jointly, but say the point has not yet been reached in those negotiations where the amount of indemnity could be suggested.

EASTERN STAR OFFICERS.

The Woman's Branch of Masonry Chooses Leaders for the Ensuing Year.

BOSTON, Aug. 31.—The forenoon's session of the eighth triennial meeting of the grand chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star was devoted to committee reports. In the afternoon the board of officers were elected for three years, as appended: Most worthy grand matron of the general grand chapter, Mrs. Mary E. Partridge, Oakland, Cal.; most worthy grand patron, Henry H. Hinds, of Stanton, Mich.; most worthy associate grand matron, Mrs. Hattie Ewing, of Massachusetts; right worthy assistant grand patron, N. E. Grearhart, of Minnesota; right worthy secretary, Mrs. Lorraine, of Pitkin, Ill.; right worthy grand treasurer, Mrs. Harriet A. Eranbrack, of Iowa; worthy grand conductress, Edna L. Hedges, of Montana; associate conductress, Laura B. Hart, of Texas.

CHOLERA IN HAWAII.

Natives and Chinese Stricken by the Dread Disease.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 31.—The steamer Monowai, wichh arrived last night from Australian points, did not stop at Honolulu, as usual. When off that port the steamer was hailed by the American consul, in a small boat, who announced that cholera had broken out in Honolulu. Among the natives and Chinese the cholera broke out soon after the steamer Belgic left on her last trip. It is presumed the disease was brought by that vessel. The Monowai did not enter Honolulu harbor, but steamed direct to San Francisco. Her passengers for Hawaii were brought here.

There had been eight deaths from the disease among the natives and Chinese.

Taylor Must Go to Prison.

PIERRE, S. D., Aug. 31.—The supreme court has handed down a decision remanding ex-State Treasurer Taylor to the sheriff, who will leave with him for the penitentiary immediately. The court held that the lower court, in giving sentence in excess of the general embezzlement penalty, did not exceed its jurisdiction, but that after Taylor shall have served two years he can test the validity of the five years' sentence.

Nihilism Active in Russia.

COLOGNE, Aug. 31.—The Cologne Gazette publishes a dispatch from its correspondents in St. Petersburg asserting that nihilism is now more active throughout Russia than at any time since the death of Czar Alexander II. The nihilists have gradually grown bolder since the accession of the new czar to the throne.

Judge Thomas Dead.

CHICAGO, Aug. 31.—Judge C. M. Thomas, of Deadwood, S. D., who was elevated to the bench of the First district of South Dakota by President Cleveland in 1887, died here yesterday.

FOR DEEP WATER.

TOPEKA, Kan., Aug. 31.—Gov. Morrill has issued a proclamation calling a conference of delegates from trans-Mississippi states to meet at Topeka, October 1, in accordance with the request of Gov. Culbertson, of Texas, who asks the co-operation of the people of the west in establishing a deep water harbor on the Gulf of Mexico. After reciting the request of the governor of Texas Gov. Morrill's proclamation concludes:

Now, therefore, I, E. N. Morrill, governor of the state of Kansas, in compliance with the foregoing request made by the governor of Texas, do hereby call a Western States conference convention, to assemble in Topeka, Kan., at 4 o'clock p. m., on the first day of October, A. D. 1895, for the purpose of securing the united action of the people of the great west in a movement to utilize the deep water obtained on the gulf of Mexico in the state of Texas, and to arrange the best plan for holding an inter-American exposition, to display what the great west can profitably produce and export, as well as what it will be to her advantage to import.

The following are hereby designated as delegates to this convention. The governor of each state and territory west of the Mississippi river shall be a delegate ex-officio, and he is hereby authorized to select twelve delegates at large, two of whom shall be its United States senators, and four delegates at large from each congressional district, one of whom shall be the member of congress or territorial delegate elect. The president of each chamber of commerce, or board of trade, or other commercial bodies, is hereby made a delegate, with authority to appoint an alternate, if such president is unable to attend. All members of the permanent interstate deep harbor committee are hereby made delegates. The mayor of each city west of the Mississippi river is a delegate, and is empowered to appoint one additional delegate for each 10,000 inhabitants or fraction thereof of his city, and the said mayor is authorized to appoint an alternate, in the event he is not able to attend. If the governor of any state or territory has selected delegates previous to the issuance of this call, under a request emanating from Galveston, then all such delegates are hereby made delegates, with all the rights and privileges thereof, the same as if appointed under this call.

The importance of this movement cannot be over-estimated, and I most earnestly request all officials or organizations in whom, under the call, authority is vested to appoint delegates, to act promptly, to the end that the representatives in said convention may, by investigation, be thoroughly prepared for intelligent discussion, deliberation and action.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto subscribed my name, and caused to be affixed the great seal of the state. Done at the city of Topeka, this 29th day of August, A. D. 1895.

(Signed) E. N. MORRIEL.

FILIBUSTERS ARRESTED.

WILMINGTON, Del., Aug. 31.—Twenty men were brought yesterday from Penn's Grove, N. J., and lodged in jail, charged with violating the neutrality laws in having organized a hostile expedition to Cuba. The men are from Philadelphia and New York and were arrested under orders issued by the treasury department. It was known beforehand by the authorities that the alleged filibustering party was to wait at Penn's Grove for a steamer to come from Philadelphia to take them to Cuba. The pursuing party therefore permitted the men they were watching to load their freight and embark their passengers without molestation and saw them sail in the direction of Penn's Grove, where some of the detectives had been sent to await developments.

Yesterday afternoon Marshal Lannan, with several assistants, Detective Gaylord and two of his associates and a squad of police under Capt. Kane, boarded the tug Media, and went to Penn's Grove. There they found the party who had chartered the Taurus lounging about the railroad station and put them under arrest. When they overhauled the freight in the hull of the Taurus they found that it consisted of twenty-seven cases of arms, a large quantity of ammunition, provisions, clothing, etc. All of this was seized and the party returned to Wilmington.

HARDIE SNUBBED.

American Labor Organizations Have No Sympathy for Foreign Agitators.

CHICAGO, Aug. 31.—James Keir Hardie is in Chicago. He came in last night, was warmly greeted by a committee and taken to the Great Northern hotel. There, in a banquet hall filled with chairs, he talked for an hour to twenty persons, two of whom wore scarlet ribbon bows in their coats, and one of whom gave the agitator a big bunch of red roses tied with scarlet ribbon. He said nothing, either in his speech or interviews, in any way different from what has already been published.

M. J. Carroll, editor of the Eight Hour Herald, the official organ of the Illinois State Federation of Labor, says the trades unions of this city are not in sympathy with Mr. Hardie or his teachings, nor are they co-operating with the socialistic element here who propose receiving and entertaining him.

CABANNE A WONDER.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 31.—The bicycle races opened at Fairmount park yesterday with a big crowd and ideal racing weather. L. D. Cabanne rode a mile against time with a flying start and broke the world's record for a quarter mile track, covering the distance in 2:02 2-5.

F. J. Titus won the big race of the day, the mile open, class B, with Cabanne second, in the fast time of 2:10.

The class A honors were divided between Joe Hocker, Kansas City; J. A. Woodlief, Ottawa, Kan.; W. F. Eberhardt, Salina, Kan., and Ernest Stade, of St. Louis, each of whom won a first.

STEAMERS COLLIDE.

CHICAGO, Aug. 31.—The steamers Christopher Columbus, the whaleback, and the John A. Dix, both heavily loaded with passengers, collided at the mouth of the river here at 11 o'clock last night. A panic ensued, in which many were more or less injured. The John A. Dix had her side broken in, and every passenger on board was thrown from his feet. A general commotion resulted, and it was in the after scramble that the most injury was done to those on board.

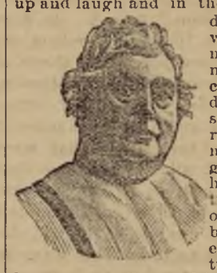
SQUIRE RUFUS SANDERS.

The Sage of Rocky Creek in the Presence of Death

Finds Quaint Humor, the Saving Clause of Human Nature—"Not Fitten and Not Ready"—A Loss to the Lord"—Elbow Room.

COPYRIGHT 1895.

Maybe you mought think it was wrong and wicked for a man to stand up and laugh and in the very jaws of death, as it were, but some monstrous funny things have come to pass under the most saddest surroundins. In my own day and generation I have seen the time—standin over the death bed—when I either had to turn loose and, laugh, or swell up and bust open.



The Wrong Time of Year.

Last spring a year ago I was off down in the Flat Woods and saw Felix Mayo—"Dandy Mayo," as everybody were wont to call him—stumble over the last final ditch. I had went down there after some seed potatoes, you understand—which the blazin cold weather had made mine rot in the ground—and whilst in the settlement I rode by to see Dandy. He was right tolerable nigh unto death when I got there. The doctors had already give him up as a a gone goslin and went on home. But the family and the neighbors were standin around the death bed cryin and takin on till it was a sad sight to see.

Dandy lowed it was the wrong time of year for him to die and he want ready. He made out like he want a blamed bit skeered, but at the same time he said if there was any way to back down, or snake out and dodge the question he would love to do it. But the laughin part came when Dandy put in to beggin his wife to take his place and go on ahead.

"You are the best and most purest human person I have ever saw, Tildy," says Dandy to his wife, which she was Miss Matildy Lucas before she took and married him. "You never did cuss and drink whisky and bet on cards like me, and so far as I know you never did do anything particular wrong. You are ready to die, Tildy, whilst I ain't sorter half way ready, and I do wish you would take my place so I would have more time to quit my meanness and git ready for the judgment bar."

What made it so particular funny to hear Dandy talkin and carryin on that way—everybody knowned that Tildy, as he called her, had been takin his place for years and years. Dandy want worth his room in this world to start with, and his good wife had took his place all along the line. She was jest simply the mainest man in the family. She took Dandy's place and run their little farm, and fed the stock, and chopped the wood, and kept the fenses up in general. But the time had now come when Tildy couldn't neither wear the breeches nor stand in his shoes, and so he had to face the music single-handed and alone. She was willin and more than willin, you understand, but she couldn't play his hand out for him in that game. Dandy had got things mighty bad mixed and muddled up anyhow. It was his time of year to die. It maybe looked to him like the wrong time, but in the general plans of creation it was the right time, and so there he was. At any rates, the general situation hit me all in a wad in a funny place, and I had to go out on the back porch and laugh it off.

A Loss to the Lord.

When old man Ebenezer Ashcroft had run slap out to the end of the rope and it come his time to die, he was like Dandy Mayo in regards to one thing—he want to say fitten and he want ready. He had travelled a long and rough and rocky road, you understand, but he had went all the gaits clean down to the finish. And then finally at last when the doctor give out the news that human help couldn't do no more and the end was clost to hand, old man Ebenezer looked up mighty serious like and sober and then went on to say:

"From the way you talk, doctor, this must be a case of great pushency, and I reckon it ain't for me to say whether I should or whether I shouldn't. But by George Washington, I have got one thing to say with my last fleetin breath. I don't make out like I have got any tremendius big sight of religion, you understand, but when Ebenzer Ashcroft dies God Almighty will lose the best friend he ever had in this country."

Now to be certainly of course old man Ebenezer was in cold, dead earnest, but to a man up a tree he had some powerful funny and pecurious notions.

Elbow Room in Death.

Joe Nick Stringer was about the most stirrin man that was ever turned out from the Rocky Creek settlement in his day and time. He went off to the city before he was good grown, and presently he got to be a lawyer and a banker, superintendent of a Sunday school and a standin candidate for congress all at the same time.

But in the regular run of things the bottom fell out with Joe Nick, you understand, and his general machinery run down and stopped. He had returned back home to die, and when the last day come he sent for me to drop over and see him. By that time Joe Nick was so terrible poor and pale and thin till it took two or three people to see him, though he told me himself that more than once he had helt such full hands till nobody couldn't see him.

"I jest only wanted to shake the partin hand with you once more, Rufe," says he, with that lonesome, far-away look on his face, "and then tell you about some personal, private business which I want you to tend to when I drop out of the game. You will recollect, Rufe, that the Stringers people for generations have been laid away to rest in the general graveyard over at old Smyrna church. Don't let 'em bury me there, Rufe, if you please. I would'nt mind it, you understand, exceptin from the fact that they have been buryin the dead there so long and so regular till they have got 'em planted too all-fired thick. If the graveyard was bigger it would sorter do, but all the land right around next to the church grounds belongs to Elder Newton, which everybody knows he is the gonebyest, rottenest and most meanest white man in seven states and territories. I wouldn't be buried on his land if I could, and he would rather die an orful death than to give an other inch of dirt to the church.

"No, Rufe, I want you to see to it that they bury me under that persimmon tree down there in the lower field, or either under the apple tree out there in the southwest corner of the garden. By gatlins, I have been crowded all my life—crowded in with a big family at home, then crowded out and crowded away from home, and forever and eternally crowed in the city till finally at last I will be crowded into my grave. But, Rufe, dadblame it, let me have elbow room in death—plenty of hand-roomance as we boys use to say in playin marbles and I reckon maybe there is room enough and some to spare down there under the hog weeds and the daisies. Give me your word, Rufe, with your hand in mine, that you will tend to that when I pass and quit, and may you live forever."

I reckon from what Joe Nick said he had helt many a better hand than mine, but I give it to him at any rates, and in less time than it takes me to tell it had went the way of every mortal man born of woman.

The next time you pass along by the old Stringer place if you will look right clost out there under a big apple tree in the southwest corner of the garden you will see a grave—jest one—and only one. The hog weeds and the daisies grow rank and promiscuous around there, you understand, but I reckon Joe Nick don't give a continental for that now. And to the bottom of my heart—to my last dyin day—I will be glad that we gave him plenty of elbow room in death.

Tony Bartley was a way yonder the laziest and most triflinest white man that ever breathed his last final breath in the Rocky Creek country, and when his time come he was lyin in a little cabbin over there on the old Lucas place. He lived right there alone by himself, and he would have died the same way if it hadn't been for a man by the name of Andy Lucas. Now, as everybody knows, Andy Lucas is sometimes tough and always rough, but in case of a pinch, you will find him white and brave, and to his friends as true a friend as ever man had. Him and Tony Bartlet had went to school togther, you understand, and cut summersets in the same sandbed, and built flutter-mills in the same old spring branch. And when Tony had let loose and went to the devil and the dogs—a blot on the face of creation and a scandalation on the whole entire settlement—when he was down flat on his back—helpless and hopeless and sick unto death—yet still there was one man on the earth—the onlyest one—that would take and hold his hand, look him in the face and call him "friend"—and that one man was ratlin, rowdy, reckless, Andy Lucas.

So when Tony come to die Andy want gone nowhere. He was right there with him, and from what Andy told me afterwards, in his last dyin words Tony spoke as follows below:

"Andy Lucas, if there ever was a man in all the human race that want worth his room in this world or anywheres else, you are right here with him now. I have wasted away my life and lived on what I could beg and steal and borrow. I have been as mean as any man could be without spillin human blood—a liar, a thief and a scoundrel. I have done a whole lot of harm in the world and narry durn bit of good. Now I don't want you to give yourself any trouble and worriment about puttin me away. You won't need no new clothes and no coffin for me. You can jest make the niggers pick me up like they find me and tote me off as I am—rags and all. And I wish you would please make 'em take me over there in the paster and dig a hole in the ground and shovel me into it. Don't let 'em plant me deep, Andy—bury me right close up to the top of the ground. Maybe I mought make a little spot of ground rich so as the grass will grow rank and make good grazin for the stock. I have done nothin but harm—and so much of it in this life—if it is so I can. I would love to do a little good in death. I know it is taken a dog's chances with the dumb beasts, Andy, but with the last rattle out of the box I am willin to try it.

So in them days it come to pass that they dug one lonesome grave dug way over in the paster on the old Lucas place, and Tony Bartley lies buried there. Andy Lucas maintains till yet that the grass grows rich and green and more fresher right there than anywheres else in that paster, but Andy swaps horses considerable between drinks, you understand, and you can't sometimes always take his mouth for a prayer book.

CAPRICES OF FASHION.

THE fashion of wearing white at the throat is not so prevalent as it was in the spring.

IT is quite safe to have any silk gown, or a light wool designed for early autumn wear, made with ruffled skirt.

SOME very elegant plaid silk blouses are being devised by fashionable modistes to wear with tailor-made costumes.

PLAIDS are very fashionable, and will be all the fall. They are made now in cottons and silks and every variety of gauze.

THE CHRONICLE.

C. C. DuBOSE, Editor and Proprietor.

COLUMBIANA, SEPT. 5, 1895.

Two hundred and one new textile factories have been started in this country during the first half of this year.

MISSISSIPPI claims to have solved the convict problem. The State bought a 10,000-acre farm and cultivated it with convict labor at a net profit of $50,000.

SAMUEL MINTURN PECK, who has written some charming poems, lives in the old family homestead at Tuscaloosa, Alabama. His father was once Chief Justice of Alabama and owns a large plantation.

THE total railroad mileage of the whole world is estimated at 406,416 miles, of which America has 218,910 miles. The United States alone has 228,852 miles, if sidetracks and elevated roads are included.

IT WILL surprise many people to learn that Rose Hartwick Thorpe, author of "Curfew Must Not Ring To-Night," is only 45 years of age. She wrote the poem that made her famous when only 16 years of age.

IT IS estimated that the South will raise 600,000,000 bushels of corn this season. This means that the cotton crop will be practically a surplus crop. And this means that the farmers of the South are moving in the direction of permanent independence and prosperity.

FRANCE has a prodigy in the person of Jules Zostat, of La Rochelle, who, it is said, knows by heart all the verses of the Bible. He has such a marvelous memory that when asked at random any verse, no matter if it begins a sentence or is a continuation of the preceding verse, he will recite the lines.

OUR navy is quite up to date, and there is considerable of it too. Our army will soon be up to date too. By the end of September all the infantry of the regular army will be furnished with the smokeless powder Kreig-Jorgensen rifle. What is more, the new rifles were made out and out at the United States army gun factory.

MARK TWAIN will merit the laurel for commercial probity as well as the chaplet he has won as a humorist and satirist, for he announces that at 60 he has determined to work four years continuously lecturing to pay the creditors of his bankrupt book publishing firm dollar for dollar. Then, at 64, he proposes to begin life over again with a clear conscience.

OF the $800,000,000 worth of exports from our country, in the fiscal year ended June 30, 1895, we sold $26,000,000, all told, to silver countries; that is to say, $15,000,000 to Mexico; $36,000,000 to China; $2,800,000 to India, and $4,600,000 to Japan. In the same year we sold Great Britain $387,000,000; Germany $92,000,000; Canada $52,000,000; France $45,000,000. We sold $5,000,000 more to little Holland than we did to all our silver nations together. Nearly all our trade with the silver countries is import. We bought $1,000,000 worth from the four silver countries here mentioned, and they took from us $26,000,000. We sold Great Britain $387,000,000 and she sold to us $159,000,000; balance in our favor $228,000,000. Now, do you see, silvery friend, anything in these trade figures, to hint that we ought to put our monetary system down beside that of China and Mexico? Don't you see in them proof that we should hold our standard up to the level of the one in use by those that give us 90 per cent. of all our foreign commerce?

GOV. O'FERRALL of Virginia, in an interview in the Richmond papers boldly declares for sound money. He says: "I am for a sound dollar, and what I mean by a sound dollar is one that will pass for 100 cents and be as good as any other dollar anywhere within the limits of the civilized world. Gold is that dollar now; silver may be also kept on a parity with gold."

AS REGARDS the gold reserve a New York banker said the other day: "We are now between grass and hay. Figuratively speaking, that's the situation in a nutshell. Gold will continue to cross the ocean until all the crops are harvested. Then, say in September, I firmly believe the tide will turn and gold will come back from abroad. The present dearth of gold is due, I think, to the immense number of Americans who are on the other side this summer spending their money on perishable goods and knicknacks."

TRIALS OF NEWSPAPER MEN.

"One of the great trials of the newspaper profession," says T. DeWitt Talmage, "is that its members are compelled to see more of the shams of the world than any other profession.

"Through every newspaper office, day after day, go all the weaknesses of the world; all the vanities that want to be puffed; all the revenges that want to be heaped; all the mistakes that want to be corrected; all the dull speakers that want to be thought eloquent; all the meanness that want to get its wares noticed gratis in the editorial columns, in order to save the tax of the advertising columns; all the men who want to be set right who were never right; all the crack brain philosophers with stories as long as their hair, and as gloomy as their finger nails in mourning because bereft of soap—all the bores who come in to stay five minutes, but who stay five hours.

"Through the editorial and repotorial rooms all the follies and shams of the world are seen day after day, and the temptation is to believe in neither God, man or woman. It is no surprise that in the profession there are some skeptical men; I only wonder that journalists believe anything."

THE LOCAL NEWSPAPER.

All things considered, the newspaper of the small city and town has a mission not equaled, even by that of the great daily in the largest of our cities. The newspaper in the small place reaches the heart of its readers and keeps in touch with local sentiment as the journal in the great city cannot hope to do. The editor is not a mysterious being, far removed from his fellow townsmen, who has to be reached by a bell-boy and a card receiver. His readers know him by sight; he is one of themselves; his interests are their interests.

Just now it is the chief interest of the country outside of the large cities to build up a noble local public spirit. This the local paper can do as nothing else can, and this it is at present accomplishing. The small cities and rural neighborhoods need to be made attractive as places of residence, so that they will be a joy perpetual and draw people away from the big cities instead of the big cities drawing people away from them.

Every small city, every neighborhood, needs good streets and roads, good libraries, beautiful landscapes, public improvement societies, first class schools, societies for the learning of civics, good citizenship and good local government. These are things in which every man, woman and child is interested. They are the things in the securing of which the local newspaper can and does aid more than any other agency. Whatever tends to increase the prosperity, refinement and intelligence of the region in which the majority of its readers dwell, that the local newspaper will be found to advocate every time.

It is not a mere medium for the circulation of gossip. It is the herald and promoter to the extent of its circulation of the culture, progress and prosperity of its readers.

An Enormous Corn Crop.

Mother Nature has been generous to the raisers of Indian corn this year, for she has caused to grow and ripen a crop such as was never seen before. Two billions three hundred and fifty millions of bushels will have been harvested when the last ears are shelled. The largest previous yield recorded, that of 1891, was 2,060,154,000—almost 300,000,000 bushels less than is expected this year.

In 1892 the crop reached only a little more than a billion and a half of bushels; in 1893 it fell a little lower even than that, and in 1894 it was almost three times as much below two billions of bushels as it will this year be above that enormous quantity.

Were all the corn of this year to be piled in a heap on a half a mile square the pile would be 419 feet high and would weigh 136,300,000,000 pounds and, estimating the crop to be sold at 50 cents a bushel it would be worth $1,175,000,000.

While in Chicago, Mr. Charles L. Kahler, a prominent shoe merchant of DesMoines, Iowa, had quite a serious time of it. He took such a severe cold that he could hardly talk or navigate, but the prompt use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cured him of his cold so quickly that others at the hotel who had bad colds followed his example and half a dozen persons ordered it from the nearest drug store. They were profuse in their thanks to Mr. Kahler for telling them how to cure a bad cold so quickly. For sale by Parker & Armstrong.

PRICES AND THINGS.

From the Chattanooga Times.

Pig iron has gone up an average of $3.50 per ton since May 1. No. 1 now stands in the South, at furnace, $10.25, other grades lower in the usual proportion; and the rise to those quotations has set the country to jubilating at a great rate. Yet, in any year from 1879 to 1890, had iron fallen to $10.50 per ton for No. 1, the result would have been "shut down or bankruptcy," for every furnace south of the Mason-Dixon line.

Furnaces now make as much money at $10.25, as they have made heretofore when prices averaged double that figure. They pay wages that are quite equal to if not above, in purchasing power, the wages paid in 1879-82. And they made a far better iron than that they produced fifteen years, or even ten years ago.

And these facts are not peculiar to pig iron; they run through the whole gamut of iron and steel and other mechanically produced products, including textiles, carpentry, building materials of all kinds—everything from foundry, furnace, mill and factory.

This being so, what right has the farmer to set up as the one unfortunate, for that prices of his crops and flocks and herds and colts have gone off, to some extent? We undertake to say that, in the darkest day for him, the farmer's corn or wheat, quantity for quantity would pay more of everthing but taxes than they did when the prices were 50 to 75 or 100 per cent. higher.

For instance: In 1872, when the average price of wheat was $1.97 a bushel, it took 3.2 bushels to buy a keg of iron cut nails. In the year of 1894, when the average price of wheat was 52 cents a bushel 1.7 bushels would buy a keg of superior steel nails. The same will hold in the case of hoop iron, trace chains, bar iron, castings—everything but woolens and shoes. The farmer has had the best of it, compared with the manufacturer and merchant. Fewer farmers have failed, than in any other class, taking a like number of each, indiscriminately, to make the test with. The late report of the statistical bureau of Minnesota conclusively proves this statement.

Farmers cannot hope to buy steel nails at $1 to $1.25 a hundred pounds, or about the price of high grade pig iron in 1890, and sell the man who makes the nails $1.25 wheat or $6.50 flour. He need not calculate on getting 7 cents a pound for beef on foot, and buy calico at 5 cents a yard, and sugar at 20 pounds granulated for $1. This is too much like the editor who loudly praised the steel nail makers, when they advanced their men's wages; and more loudly cursed them when they put nails up from 85 cents to $1.05 a hundred—the latter price being half the price of mean iron nails, ten years ago. The nail men were patriots, and all that was good, when they marked up wages. They were an infamous "trust" to swindle the consumers when they marked up products, although they left it and still hold it, at a price that would have ruined the makers of nails, in the decade ended 1890.

We ought to be at least half decent in dealing with the men whose business ability and capital make this the greatest of manufacturing nations. The Times is not of those who rate bankers as highwaymen, and successful manufacturers as truculent guerrillas, who plunder labor on one hand and loot the public on the other.

We believe that bankers, manufacturers, commercialists and professional men, average higher in real patriotism than any other classes; and this we believe is true because, having a deeper stake, material and moral in good government, than the others, they more highly appreciate the value of government.

And we believe the classes first mentioned rate higher in average honesty than any others—not so much because they are "better" than the "sturdy yeoman" or "simple rustic," but because the more fortunate and successful elements know the value of honesty and morality, in the happiness and lucre they yield.

What Populism Is.

St. Louis Republic.]

The populist convention at Syracuse, N. Y., last week declared for flat money; government ownership and management of all mines—coal, lead, zinc, stone, salt and iron as well as silver and gold mines; confiscation and operation of all railways and telegraph lines; and also the exclusive ownership and sale of all liquors. It is clear that populism is only another name for socialism and confiscation.

Irving W. Larimore, physical director of Y. M. C. A., Des Moines, Iowa, says he can conscientiously recommend Chamberlain's PainBalm to athletics, gymnasts, bicyclists, foot ball players, and the profession in general, for bruises, sprains and dislocations; also for soreness and stiffness of the muscles. When applied before the parts become swollen it will effect a cure in one-half the time usually required. For sale by Parker & Armstrong.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Dimendale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitancy in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist church, at Rives' Junction, she was brought down with Pneumonia succeeding La Grippe. Terrible paroxisms of coughing would last hours with little interruption, and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results." Trial bottles free at Parker & Armstrong's drug store. Regular size 50c and $1.00.

FROM SAM JONES.

If I was an editor I would want no better grounds for the discharge of a reporter than the fact that he misrepresented even a dog fight, much less a religious meeting. I believe in fair play, bless your soul, and I tell you it is bad enough to report me straight. The Lord knows it is tough enough. (Laughter and applause.) But it is terrific to go outside and put things in my mouth I never said and none of my kinfolks ever said. (Laughter.) It isn't right. But that is part of the program. It is free advertising. If I had to pay for all the advertising I get I would have been busted long ago. (Laughter.) I am like the old hardshell preacher. He said: "Brethrener hev just preached the gospeler for nigh onto forty yearser, and I hev been abuseder and slandereder, but he says I am about that like I was about my little fice doger. He barked and barkeder, and jumped upon the fencer, and what do you reckon he was barking at er? He was barking at the mooner. And, he says, "brethener, what do you reckon the moon was doiner? Why it was just a shining oner and a shining oner." And here is a fellow that is going through this world doing his duty and letting the dogs yelp and howl, and is jest a shining oner and a shining oner. (Prolonged applause and laughter.)

I think it is perfectly right for Presbyterians to keep quiet at divine services, but my idea of a Methodist is a great big, broad, stand-up-to-be knocked down fellow that will speak up anywhere. Now I like the Presbyterians. They are good. But when you go into the fundamental facts in this whole business a Presbyterian hasn't got any advantage of a Methodist. A Methodist knows he has got religion, but he is afraid all the time he will lose it; a Presbyterian just knows he can't lose it, but he is afraid all the time he ain't got it. (Applause) That is a fact.

Coming Our Way.

Everything seems to be coming the way of the American farmers this year. The crops in this country promise to be unusually bountiful, so that we will have a great deal to sell during the coming fall and winter. And, according to the cables, Europe will want all we have to spare. All forecasts of the English harvest are most dismal. Every crop runs far below the average, and in both Great Britain and Ireland the results of the season's farming are said to be less favorable than were those of 1893. The people must eat, and they will eat American products—Anniston Hot Blast.

John G. Mauger, editor of the Sunbeam, Seligman, Mo., who named Grover Cleveland for the presidency in November, 1882, while he was mayor of Buffalo, N. Y., is enthusiastic in his praise of Chamberlain's Cholic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. He says: "I have used it for the past five years and consider it the best preparation of the kind in the market. It is as staple as sugar and coffee in this section. It is an article of merit and should be used in every household." For sale by Parker & Armstrong.

The Wrong Sort.

Several young men holding down night jobs in Montgomery saw a white and black striped squirrel and after a great chase caught it. After the frisky young thing was caught he began to pay some attention to his captors and the boys had to go through a fumigation mill before they could appear again. We believe they are still in retirement.—Eufaula Times.

A. M. Bailey, a well-known citizen of Eugene, Oregon, says his wife has for years been troubled with chronic diarrhœa and used many remedies with little relief until she tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy, which has cured her sound and well. Give it a trial and you will be surprised at the prompt relief it affords. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Parker & Armstrong.

Four Big Successes.

Having the needed merit to more than make good all the advertising claimed for them, the following four remedies have reached a phenomenal sale. CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

THIRTY years' observation of Castoria with the patronage of millions of persons, permit us to speak of it without guessing. It is unquestionably the best remedy for Infants and Children the world has ever known. It is harmless. Children like it. It gives them health. It will save their lives. In it Mothers have something which is absolutely safe and practically perfect as a child's medicine.

Castoria destroys Worms.
Castoria allays Feverishness.
Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd.
Castoria cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic.
Castoria relieves Teething Troubles.
Castoria cures Constipation and Flatulency.

Castoria neutralizes the effects of carbonic acid gas or poisonous air. Castoria does not contain morphine, opium, or other narcotic property. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep.

Castoria is put up in one-size bottles only. It is not sold in bulk. Don't allow any one to sell you anything else on the plea or promise that it is "just as good" and "will answer every purpose."

PERMANENTLY CURED BY USING

Ayer's Pills

"My husband was subject to severe attacks of neuralgia which caused him great pain and suffering. The pains were principally about his eyes, and he often had to remain in a darkened room, not being able to stand the light. Ayer's Pills being recommended, he tried them, using one before each meal. They very soon afforded relief, followed by permanent cure. I am a strong believer in the efficacy of Ayer's Pills, and would not be without them for ten times their cost."—Mrs. M. E. TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS.

Miss Grace Walker is on a visit to Calera friends.

J. G. Parker paid Montevallo a flying business visit yesterday.

Isaac Woods of Fayetteville, is a pupil in our school this session.

Geo. Mason, we are informed, will leave Saturday for Auburn to attend college.

Miss Pearl Norris returned Saturday from a lengthy visit to Dadeville friends.

Mrs. D. B. McMath and Mrs. C. L. Meroney spent last week with Vincent relatives.

Judge Russell of Harpersville has been a guest in our city several days this week.

P. B. Harrell, of Shelby, took the train here yesterday for Montevallo to transact business.

Geo. W. Wilkes, editor of the Biloxi (Miss.,) Herald, came here Monday to enter his son in school.

I. D. Mason has been quite sick for several days, but we are glad to know he is on the up grade now.

Miss Earl Anchors returned last Friday from Oxford, where she has been visiting for two months.

J. T. Leeper arrived home Sunday from Charlottsville, Va., where he has been taking a law course in the University of Virginia.

Mrs. Eula Atkins left Monday for her home in Gainsville, Ala., after a pleasant visit of several weeks to her sister, Mrs. E. B. Nelson.

The "Tea" given Monday evening at the residence of Hon. W. B. Browne, was a pleasant affair socially, besides netting $9.39 to the missionary society.

Arrangements are being perfected to hold a Sunday school convention at Shelby, October 16th and 17th. The program and full particulars will appear next week.

Neill McMillan left yesterday for Baltimore, Md., to attend medical college. Neill is a model young man, and one that is sure of success. Our best wishes go with him.

Mrs. M. Cruce entertained the small children of the Methodist Sunday school, Tuesday afternoon, at her residence. Ice cream, cake, etc., were served, which tickled the palates of the little ones immensely.

A small party of young folks took a serenading tour of our city last Friday night. The music was delightful and we feel grateful to them for including The Chronicle domicile in their rounds. Come again; the oftener, the better.

It is being whispered around here that R. B. Posey has negotiated the loan of T. J. Martin's bee-gum hat to wear to Birmingham when he intends to take his seat in that dignified body known as the U. S. grand jury. We dare not credit the rumor until it has been substantiated.

W. W. McGowen, who has been our very efficient correspondent at Wilsonville, paid us a pleasant call Tuesday. He intends soon to enter college, but we hope before he leaves he will find us as good a correspondent as he has been to fill his place.

The first bale of cotton brought to this market last season was on September 5th, and sold for 6¼ cents. The first bale this season was brought in August 31st, by J. P. Harkins and was bought by Lester, Mason & Co., for 8¼ cents, and by them was shipped over the L. & N. to Anniston to the Howell Cotton Co., who paid 8 cents, it being the third bale shipped to Anniston this season.

City Council Doings.

The city council met in regular session last Monday. From the minutes we cull the following items of interest:

Mrs. M. E. McCarroll, who has been teaching the colored school was dropped, and E. F. McCarroll substituted.

A. M. Elliott was elected city road overseer until January 1st.

The city tax assessor's book was received and filed in the mayor's office, subject to correction for 20 days.

Two Bad Eggs.

To whom it may concern:

I will pay a liberal reward for the arrest or information leading to the arrest and delivery to the proper authorities of one Sam Brown and one John Irwins who after contracting to work for me and receiving payment in advance did decamp taking with them certain goods which I had delivered to them to be paid for in work. Brown is of medium height and dark complexion and weighs about 125 pounds. Irwin is of medium height, reddish complexion and weighs 150 pounds. Let good men beware.

JOHN T. WILLIAMS.
Zuber Ala.

The Columbiana free school opened Monday with 102 pupils. There are 34 scholars in the high school department presided over by Prof. Greek; 33 in the immediate which is in the hands of Miss Mary Liles, and 35 in the primary class in charge of Miss Lucy Smith. And yet this is only the beginning. So far only five pupils from abroad have entered, but there are quite a number to arrive later. When the crops are harvested the present enrollment will be nearly or quite doubled. Is this not a glorious starter, and are there not still more glorious things in store for us in future? Really our readers will have to excuse a little vanity on our part, for we do feel proud of our achievements in this line, and we don't care if the world knows it. Come to Columbiana if you would educate your children at a trifling cost. All you need to do is to press the button, Prof. Greek will do the rest.

The Shelby County Medical Society.

A goodly number of the medical gentlemen composing the Shelby County Medical Society, assembled at Calera on Tuesday last. After a sumptuous dinner provided by the local physicians, which was partaken of with great gusto by the attending medical staff, the meeting was called to order, and proceeded to business.

A most interesting paper on hemorrhoidal tumors was read by Dr. Cunningham Wilson of Birmingham, a visitor. The doctor described his favorite operation greatly to the pleasure and edification of those present.

Dr. Jeff Davis read a valuable paper on urethritis. The subject was handled in an able and exhaustive manner. The discussions following the reading of these valuable papers participated in by most of the members were both entertaining and instructive.

The Shelby County Medical Society meets monthly, with a good average attendance, considering the distance that many of the members live from the place of meeting, and it is accomplishing great good. The members are earnest men working assiduously in the cause of philanthropy—the grand work of finding the best methods for the prevention and cure of disease. Work on gentlemen—your reward will come hereafter.

Shelby Siftings.

Mrs. Dr. Chapman from Bessemer, paid Shelby a flying visit last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Finch from Anniston are visiting the family of F. B. Finch.

Miss Ethel Glenn has a spell of fever; we wish for her a hasty recovery.

Master Charley Avery has had a long spell of fever, but is recuperating rapidly.

Mrs. P. B. Harrell left Monday evening to visit her relatives in South Alabama.

Mr. Levert Christian has been sick with fever for several days; we hope for him a speedy recovery.

The Shelby boys anticipate playing ball with Montevallo at Calera, Wednesday. Hope our boys will be successful.

Capt. W. H. Bell has had an attack of chills and fever for a number of days; we are glad to say he is improving.

Mrs. T. H. Hopkins visited friends in town Wednesday. Nellie will remain several days with Miss Lucia Witherby.

Mr. P. B. Harrell was pressed into service Sunday evening. He was called upon to marry Mr. Will Collum. One of the witnesses said that Mr. Harrell was calm and performed the ceremony beautifully.

There was an interesting game of ball in Shelby, Monday afternoon, between the town boys and the "West Highland" boys in which the town boys were defeated badly. Smith is a player! The score was 17 to 7.

Harpersville Echoes.

Cotton picking.

Webb Martin has gone to Texas.

Miss Heacock, of Alpine, is visiting Mr. Caldwell's family.

Miss Zella Sparks, of Talladega, is visiting Harpersville relatives.

Rev. J. F. Parker left Sunday evening for an extended trip to Walker county.

Mr. Guss Bevil, of Birmingham, visited Harpersville Saturday and Sunday.

Prof. S. J. Strock was in town Saturday and Sunday. He is teaching school at Eden, St. Clair county.

We are sorry to state that Mr. Webb and his family have come to such a disagreement that his family have moved to Georgia, Mr. Webb remaining here.

There was a very severe wind here Saturday night. Several trees were blown down and a negro named Jones had a good mule killed by a tree falling on it.

The Methodist meeting closed last Thursday with three accessions. The pastor was ably assisted by Rev. Mr. Montgomery, of Wilsonville, who did some good preaching.

Mrs. Gorman is preparing to move with her family to East Lake, where she will enter her children in Howard College. We regret very much to see them leave us, but are glad to know that she is going to patronize such an able institution as the Howard.

High court was in session last Saturday, and a very interesting case was tried between Amos Glaze and Mr. Shelby Cross. The nature of the case was about this: Amos Glaze has the Woodruff farm rented and Mr. Cross sub-rented a part of it from him with the understanding that Amos was to furnish him; this Amos failed to do, and Mr. Cross gave his crop up and Amos tried to dispossess him of his house, but the court decided in Mr. Cross' favor.

Occasionally we see land-buyers and there is plenty of land for sale, but the trouble is that the farms are all too large. It does seem to us that if those people who have land to sell would cut their farms up in small lots, say 40, 60 or 80 acres and give those people who want land a chance to pay for it, that it would be better for both concerned. We had much rather see the poor people of this country own land than for those northern Yankees to come in here and settle among us. Gentlemen, those of you who have land for sale, cut it up in small lots and give the poor Southern man a chance. "Jake."

Wilsonville Waifs.

Never discourage anything or any one unless you can beat it.

Mr. DeArman, of DeArmanville, has entered the Wilsonville Institute.

Rev. W. A. Montgomery preached a very instructive sermon Sunday morning and night.

Mrs. Steadman and two grand children, of Montgomery, spent a part of last week with Mrs. Densler's family.

Jim Luckridge and Ed Roberts, of Wyneth, came over Sunday and spent the day with W. S. Guinn and family.

Miss Essie Mason and her brother George spent the middle of last week in our city, the guests of Mr. Hammond's family.

The Presbyterians are adding much to the beauty and appearance of their neat little church by the application of two coats of paint.

Our operator, Ed Williamson is off for a short visit to home folks. Mr. Stam is holding down operating table during his absence.

Jim Ray, who has been a resident for four months among the Indians, rolled in Saturday very unexpectedly to his many friends and relatives.

Prof. Kilpatrick's school opened this morning, Monday, with an enrollment of 41 scholars, which is very encouraging and considered a good "starter" for a country school. The enrollment will no doubt reach 75 by the first of October.

Two young men in Chapel settlement "slugged" a negro Sunday morning by the name of Ed Robinson, who they thought was another negro with similar resemblances. The negro is still living, but suffering much pain from the blow of a rock on the head.

John Weldon and Pat McGowen are in the habit of duding up every semi-occasionally and calling on the bridge watchman (so they say) near Montgomery, Coosa Station, Talladega county, Alabama." "BUTCH."

Items from Sterrett.

Miss Lula Jarrett who is teaching school near Vincent was up home Saturday and Sunday.

Messrs. A. C. Wilder and John Blackerby, of Weldon, attended divine services here Sunday.

Miss Ola Parker and Mr. Sim Donnell, of Harpersville, attended the meeting here last week.

Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Lawley, of Woodlawn, were over Sunday to attend the baptizing and other services.

Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Cosper have returned from their visit to Jemison and report a pleasant time.

J. W. Baker, who came home to recuperate in health returned to Anniston Monday to resume his job.

J. W. Goodwin, of Bessemer, was over the latter part of last week attending the series of meetings.

Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Cooper, of Anniston, who attended the protracted meeting at this place, returned home Monday.

Tobe Phillips, of Cobb, boarded the train here Sunday for Albertville, Ala., where he went to attend school another year.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Skinner, of Woodward, were over part of last week attending our meetings and returned Sunday afternoon.

We are more than glad to say that our friend Bob Black, after being at the point of death for several days is now improving slowly and will recover if he gets no relapse.

Miss Mattie McGinnis took her departure Sunday afternoon for Blocton and other points in Bibb county where she will visit for some time. We wish her a pleasant sojourn.

Since our last writing a very estimable old lady has been taken away by the grim monster death. Mrs. Nancy Perry who had been sick for more than a year, has gone to try the realities of another world. To the bereaved relatives we extend our sympathies.

A glorious protracted meeting which lasted nine days and nights closed here Sunday with grand results. Sinners were convicted, mourners converted, the church greatly revived to a sense of her duty and as a result on Sunday sixteen converts were baptized with a good prospect for several more. The pastor, Rev. S. V. McGinnis was ably assisted by two earnest energetic and devoted ministers of the Gospel Rev. W. G. Hubbard, of Scottsville, Bibb county, and Rev. C. J. Pike, of Easonville, Ala. Their labors were abundantly blessed as the last two mentioned did all the preaching. May we all be priviledged to meet them again this side eternity.

One of the members received at the meeting had staid out of the church 40 years since converson and another 28 years.

Items from Cresswell.

Miss Mamie Seabrook of Childersburg, came over last week.

Mr. and Mrs. I. K. Green of Laniers, are visiting relatives here.

There is a great deal of sickness through this community just now.

On account of a sick child, Mr. L. H. Cosper was called from Columbiana last week where he had been attending court.

Mrs. Morris of Columbus, Ga., who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Green of this place, for two weeks, returned to her home, Sunday.

Some of the girls have been complaining about not seeing their names in the paper, so I will say the music class that is being taught by Miss Hattie Coleman at her residence seems to be progressing very well, as Miss Jennie Bates and Miss Logan can sing "Two Little Girls in Blue."

On returning from church last Sunday night Prof. Willis' horse became frightened and ran away with his buggy and tore it up to some extent. As he had carried his girl home and was on the ground trying to hold his horse, no one was hurt. The bridle breaking was the cause of the run away.

Postmaster G. W. Wallis, Jr. has moved the postoffice about a mile from the railroad station on account of being refused a house at the station in which to keep the office. The Pitts clan fingered around until they got control of all houses at the station and thought by refusing to rent they would get a finger into the postoffice, but failed, and now have to go a mile from the station for mail. Mr. Wallis has obtained permission from the Postoffice Department to move the site of his office.

DOROTHY.

Whose eyes of brown glance shyly to and fro;
Her chin is tilted up
Like a cloven lily-cup.
And her cheeks have stol'n the poppies' crimson glow.

To keep the sun out spreads the circling rim.
But the caution is in vain,
It was donned too late, 'tis plain,
For he's tangled in her curls beneath the brim.

Every step she treads so quaintly in her tiny buckled shoes,
Takes her farther in the kingdom of my heart.
She's my gracious queen, so loyal,
And I'm her subject loyal,
And she rules me with a tender, loving heart.

O, gracious little sovereign, may the swiftly-passing years,
With their overflowing freight of joy and pain,
Lay the sorrow at my doors,
Lay the happiness at yours,
And the harvest moon of heartsease never wane!

THE AERONAUT'S STORY.

"Is Jack Tunnicliffe going with you to-morrow, Tom?" said my wife to me. "I wish you would take some one else."

"Why, Norah?" I asked.

"He's been stranger than ever in his manner since his wife died, I hear. In fact, I've been told by more than one person that he's quite insane at times. It's not to be wondered at if he is, poor fellow. I don't know a sadder case. He'd only been married a week. Such a horrible death, too! It's enough to turn a man's brain, and I must confess, Tom, I wish Jack was not going with you."

"Nonsense, Norah! People always exaggerate and make the worst of things, as you know. If a man's at all original or eccentric, it's at once assumed that he's non compos. Of course, Jack's low-spirited and absent-minded, and perhaps a bit peculiar at times. How can he help brooding over his terrible loss? He wants some exciting occupation to take off his thoughts from his trouble. He's fond of ballooning as I am, and a trip will do him all the good in the world."

The above conversation between my wife and myself took place on the evening before the day which I had fixed for a balloon ascent. Ballooning was my hobby. I had conceived a liking for it on my first ascent. This liking had become a "craze," for the novel experience and strange sensation of sailing over houses and trees, and of soaring into the clouds, had a peculiar fascination for me.

Recently, I had tried utility with pleasure, and had made some ascents solely for scientific purposes. I had found a kindred spirit in young Tunnicliffe, and we had had many delightful and successful trips together. Owing to the untimely death of my friend's wife, our aerial expeditions had been suspended for awhile. As several weeks had elapsed since that sad event, I felt anxious to resume these expeditions, and as Tunnicliffe had expressed his willingness to accompany me, a day had been fixed for our next trip. It was when I was talking to my wife about this self-same trip that she expressed her regret that Jack Tunnicliffe was going with me.

I had not much difficulty, however, in overcoming her objections and allaying her fears. She was not averse to my hobby, and had even accompanied me in one or two of my journeys in the air. Moreover, she sympathized with me in my desire "to make some useful discovery," and was therefore unwilling to damp my ardor, or hinder the progress of my observations. She had felt the exhilarating effect of a balloon ascent, and my reference to the benefit young Tunnicliffe would probably derive from the projected trip appealed to her experience as well as to her tender heart.

Accordingly, next day at the appointed time, everything being in readiness, we started on our aerostatic journey. Tunnicliffe, contrary to his usual demeanor, seemed a little excited, but this caused me no apprehension. His interest had apparently been awakened, and it was only natural that he should be animated on such an occasion. The balloon was set at liberty as soon as we had taken our seats, and the machine rose beautifully. There was a gentle breeze, which bore us slightly southward. We rose slowly at first, and so had plenty of time to gaze on the vast and extending panorama below us.

Presently we entered a huge bank or mountain of cloud of the kind called cumulus, and were surrounded by a chilling mist which induced us to put on the wraps we had brought. When we emerged from the cloud a scene of fairy-like beauty suddenly burst upon us. We were in a kind of basin surrounded by mountains of clouds of the most fantastic shapes, of enormous size, and of dazzling brightness. Now and then, as we rose, we caught sight also of wondrous ravines of curious shape and great depth. These mountains of clouds, with their silvery and golden sides, their dark shadows, their varied tints and summits of dazzling whiteness, presented to our wondering gaze a scene of surpassing beauty and grandeur.

This sublime spectacle evoked my highest admiration, while the silence and vastness of space inspired me with awe. I drank in these exquisite and varied delights with such avidity and with such absorbing interest that I had scarcely looked at, or spoken to, my companion since we had started. But an exclamation from him now diverted my attention, and, glancing at him, I was surprised to see that he had risen and was much excited.

"What is it, Jack?" I asked.

"Isn't it glorious?" he replied. "I wonder if Heaven is much more beautiful? How delightful it would be if we could reach it! I should see my Ada again, then."

"My dear fellow!" I interposed, hastily, somewhat alarmed—not so much by his words as by his excited manner and wild look; "you think too much of these things. You have been brooding over your loss more than is good for you. Will you—"

"At any rate," cried he, vehemently, "it's worth trying, so here goes," and seizing one of the sandbags he threw it over. The lightened balloon at once began to rise more quickly.

"What are you doing, Jack?" I shouted. "For heaven's sake keep calm. We are a good height already. We shan't be able to breathe if we go much higher. It's getting uncomfortable, as it is."

"Shan't we? We shall see about that. I'm going to try, anyhow. Besides, I don't care if I can't breathe. I want to see my Ada. That's all I care about."

I began to fear the worst. Was he going mad? Were the reports my wife had heard literally true, and not exaggerated after all? What a fool I had been not to be more cautious! Whether he was mad or not, he was in a dangerous mood, and my position was far from pleasant. To oppose him would evidently aggravate him and make matters worse. To humor him was undoubtedly the wisest course.

"Look here, Jack!" I cried. "You say you want to see Ada. I can tell you of a better and surer way of going to her than this. If you will listen to me—(here I involuntarily moved my hand toward the valve cord)—if you will listen to me I—"

"None of your blarney, man! I'm not to be wheedled so. I'm too old a boy for that. Leave the cord alone; can't you? I'm not going down again to-day. I'm going to see what's up there, and don't you try to stop me," and he glared fiercely at me.

The horrible nature of my situation was now only too apparent—there could no longer be any doubt of Tunnicliffe's condition. I was in a balloon with a madman, and about four miles from the earth. I felt the cold sweat on my brow, and my brain began to reel. But with a tremendous effort I pulled myself together, for my only chance of safety was in retaining my self-possession. To attempt to overpower him was out of the question—the strength of a madman is so well known. My only hope of escape was to outwit him. But how? Forced into unnatural activity as my brain was by my desperate situation, and by the necessity of prompt action, I could think of no device or ruse that would do any good; I was completely at the mercy of the madman.

The hopelessness of my case paralyzed all my energies. I felt unable to move or speak, and even the power to think was almost gone. In my despair I glanced at the valve cord. Owing to the rotary motion of the balloon it had unfortunately become entangled. To free it I should be obliged to leave the car and climb into the ring. But to attempt such a thing (even if I were physically capable of it) would be certain to lead to a struggle which would as certainly send one or both of us out of the car.

We were now at such a height that asphyxia was imminent. I could hear my heart throb quite plainly. I breathed with difficulty, and a horrible sensation like that of sea-sickness came over me. The cold was so intense that I shivered, notwithstanding my wraps. The mental strain was terrible. I was almost frantic. Knowing, however, that in a few minutes I should be unconscious, and that then all would be over with me, I nerved myself for one last effort.

As I rose from my seat my eye fell on the grapnel. Fortunately it was on my side of the car. A sudden idea struck me, here was a weapon to hand. It was an awful thought—it would be a terrible deed. But there was now no alternative, no time for delay. My senses were going. I stretched out my hand, but the madman, who never took his eye off me, had detected my purpose. With a sudden movement he darted forward and seized the grapnel, but in his eagerness to forestall me he had precipitated himself too far over the side of the car and almost lost his balance. He made a desperate effort to recover himself, but, seized with a sudden and irresistible impulse, I pushed him over, and with a horrible yell, which rings in my ears whenever I recall the occurrence, the madman disappeared from my sight.

Almost mad myself—I am not sure that I was not quite so just then—I climbed into the ring to reach the valve line. But my hands were so stiff and numb with the cold that I could not grasp the cord. By a kind of inspiration which seemed providential I seized the cord with my teeth, and after two or three tugs the valve opened with a loud clang, and the balloon began to descend. Thank heaven! I was saved. My hands being useless, I was obliged to throw up my arms and drop into the car, where I lay motionless and unconscious for awhile.

My swoon could not have lasted more than a few seconds, for when I recovered the barometer showed that I was still in a high altitude, although the balloon was descending rapidly. I rubbed and beat my hands until the circulation was restored. Then I set about taking the necessary precautions against a too rapid descent. But I acted more like an automaton than a conscious agent, for I seemed in a kind of a stupor or trance all the time.

How and where I reached the solid earth I cannot say. I have only a dim, hazy recollection of being surrounded by a crowd of people. Some were bending over me and seemed to be questioning me, but I couldn't make out what they said. I felt an awful pain in my head, and remember nothing more until I found myself in bed in a dark room and my wife bending over me. This was several days afterward, and I learned then that I had been brought home in a delirious state and had had brain fever.

When I recovered my friends congratulated me, and tried to persuade me that as my homicidal act was done in self-defense it was justifiable. I hope it was, but I can never recall it without misgivings and horror, and I have never made a balloon ascent since. —Tit-Bits.

Unknown and Known.

Charles Sumner once had an experience which taught him that he was both known and unknown, even in Boston. He was on his way, riding in a street car, to attend a social meeting at the Church of the Disciples, to which he had been invited by the pastor, Dr. James Freeman Clarke, when two suggestive incidents happened. While in the car he asked a gentleman the exact locality of the church. The gentleman told him, and then said: "Are you a stranger, sir?" showing that there was a Bostonian who did not know Mr. Sumner by sight. But a boy in the car jumped out when Mr. Sumner reached his destination, and said: "Mr. Sumner, will you please write your name in my album?" They stopped under a street lamp, and Mr. Sumner wrote his name.—Youth's Companion.

A Doubtful Compliment.

He—May I take the liberty of calling on you this afternoon, or do you prefer other company?

She—As far as that goes, no company is as desirable as yours.—Texas Siftings.

EXPOSED DECEPTION.

It is largely assumed by our republican friends that the rich of democratic antecedents who voted the republican ticket last fall will do so this year and next for the same reason. Hence they entertain very lively hopes of a victory in Kentucky this year and of sweeping the country next year.

This view omits several important factors. Last year the republicans told the people and made some of them believe that the democrats brought on the panic and were responsible for the depression in business. They told the people that the tariff bill which became a law last August would be followed by reductions of wages, suspensions of the mills and general distress. They also promised that if control of the house was given them they would put an end to tariff agitation.

In view of this plan of campaign, yet fresh in the minds of the people, Senator Lexow, of New York, recently said that the rise in wages must necessarily be temporary, for unless it was so the republicans "were wrong and had been wrong all the time." Yet the increase in wages has continued and now they are higher in some instances than they were before the panic. This is a revelation to more people than Senator Lexow. It must be especially a revelation to those who thought last fall that the democrats had caused the panic. What really caused the panic is thus told in an exchange:

"The reason for the passage of the Sherman act was stated long ago by Senator Jones, of Nevada, who was one of the conferees. The McKinley bill was sent to the senate by the house about the middle of May. Senator Jones served notice on his republican colleagues when the silver bill was in conference committee early in July that if the committee did not agree enough votes of republican senators from silver states would be cast against the McKinley bill, which had not been taken up for consideration at that time, to defeat it. That threat was effective, and the silver compromise bill was passed, and then the McKinley bill went through afterward. Every one can see now that it would have been far better for the republican party if that threat had been treated with indifference. Had the result been the defeat of the McKinley bill the democrats would have been deprived of the ammunition which enabled them to win the sweeping victories of 1890 and 1892 and to pass the Wilson-Gorman bill. There would have been no industrial panic in 1893-94. If there had been no legislation on the silver question there would have been no increased purchases of silver and no financial panic in 1894."

The candid and truthful statement is taken from that well-known republican paper, the Chicago Tribune, of July 6, 1895. In the light of the facts there set forth it is clear that the voters who hold the balance of power in the elections of last fall were buncoed by being made to believe that the depression in business, reductions of wages and general distress were due to the accession of the democrats to power and the tariff legislation that followed. Such republicans as Senator Lexow and the editor of the Tribune see clearly enough now that this is not the case, and it is not to be presumed that the democrats who were deceived last fall can be induced to vote the republican ticket a second time for the same reason.

The extract cited from the Tribune shows that the corrupt bargain by which the McKinley bill and the Sherman bill became laws was at the bottom of all the business troubles of the last two years. The Wilson bill, therefore, had nothing to do with them, and if business revival and advance of wages should not be permanent it will be due entirely to matters affecting the currency, and not at all to the revision of the tariff. The currency agitation is the only thing which now threatens the continuance of prosperity. Whether the republicans, when congress meets, will keep their pledge not to revive tariff agitation remains to be seen. At all events, it is pretty clear that they will not be able to work the tariff as the cause of business depression for any democratic votes at the coming election. That deception has been pretty effectually exposed by the "inexorable logic of events."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

COMMENTS OF THE PRESS.

——Politics just now is too dead to bury. Is it the calm before the storm? Is the republican ark built?—Albany Argus.

——Any calamity howler in the country can quit howling and go to work at better wages than were paid under the McKinley tariff.—Chicago Chronicle.

——McKinleyism is continually receiving punctures in its tire in the almost daily reports of wages advancing and the general resumption of factories throughout the country.—Toledo Bee.

——Instead of lying awake over the gold reserve, take another look at the corn fields, where tons and train loads of gold are being made ready for the enrichment of the nation.—St. Louis Republic.

——Ohio cannot afford a dollar to pay for an Atlanta exhibit. McKinleyism in the governorship is as disastrous to financial solvency in the state as it was to prosperity in labor and industry for the nation.—Chicago Chronicle.

——There never was a time in the history of the country when a man that toils was paid so many dollars for it, and when those dollars bought so many of the necessaries of life. This is under a democratic tariff.—Lewiston (Me.) Sun.

——The republicans have quit discussing the wreck of American industry and are now turning their attention to the monthly deficit, which, by the way, is not as great as it was during the last year of that great revenue-producing measure known as the McKinley bill. When the time for the fall and winter trade arrives they will also quit discussing the deficit.—Portland (Me.) Argus.

——The fact that coal operators in the Pittsburgh region are voluntarily increasing the wages of operatives is explained on the ground that the demand for labor in the iron mills has reduced the available supply and forced up the price. Perhaps when Mr. McKinley gets to be president it will be possible for him to stop such ruinous interference with home market laws of trade.—N. Y. World.

——Between four and five thousand furnace men had their wages increased ten and fifteen cents a few days ago—the third advance they have received in the past three months. With American iron winning a market on its merits in Europe and Asia, to say nothing of the vast market which has opened at home, it is no wonder that skilled labor is commanding a premium, or that prosperity is making all the furnaces fairly roar.—Philadelphia Record.

OUR TRADE ABROAD.

Returns Show the Wisdom of Tariff Reduction.

The total value of imports during the last fiscal year was $731,957,875, against $654,994,622 the previous year, an increase of $76,963,253. In view of the great industrial and commercial depression which prevailed last year the value of imports was large, it having been exceeded only five times in the history of the country.

On the other hand, the value of domestic exports was $793,397,890, against $869,204,937 the year before, a decrease of $75,807,047. Notwithstanding the large increase in imports and decrease in exports, the latter exceeded the former by $61,440,015. The exports of last year have been exceeded eight times in our history, and once—in 1892—by over $242,000,000.

In view of the fact that for ten months of the last fiscal year the imports came in under the new tariff law a comparison of some of the principal items with the same for the year before will be of interest.

Of art works, which were put on the free list by the new law, we imported to the value of $3,843,097 last year, against $1,724,394 the year before. Of chemicals, drugs and dyes, the duties on which were materially reduced, we imported $43,552,569 worth, against $37,553,170 the year before. Of cotton goods we imported $33,195,338, against $22,346,547 the year before; of earthen, stone and chinaware, $8,956,034, against $6,879,437; of iron and steel, $23,037,327, against $21,314,489; of leather and manufactures thereof, $13,819,019, against $9,416,145. On all these goods the duties were considerably reduced.

But while there was a decided increase in the importation of all these articles, the duties on which were moderately reduced, there was also an increase in imports of goods which were free under the old law and still remain free. Thus there was an increase from $90,314,676 to $96,129,326 in coffee, from $16,736,152 to $25,122,954 in hides and skins others than furs, and from $15,162,333 to $18,477,037 in unmanufactured rubber and gutta percha. And, again, there was a decrease in the importation of some articles the duties on which were reduced. For example, from $18,954,771 to $17,239,905 in fruits, including nuts; from $3,606,835 to $2,488,581 in lead and manufactures thereof, and from $18,154,073 to $17,813,854 in wool and manufactures thereof.

The imports of sugar and molasses fell from $126,914,104 to $76,492,392. This decrease of more than $50,000,000 was due in part to the enormous importations in anticipation of the 40 per cent. duty, and in part, and principally, to the great fall in the foreign price of raw sugars.

The value of wool, which was put on the free list, increased from $6,107,438 to $25,556,421, and the value of woolen goods, the duties on which were reduced about one-half, increased from $19,301,850 to $36,512,391. But the increase in these articles, as in the case of others the duties on which were considerably reduced, was in no small measure due to restriction of imports in 1894 in anticipation of lower duties.

On the whole the returns indicate that the reduction of the tariff has stimulated importations, but it is too early yet to make very confident deductions.—Chicago Chronicle.

A PUZZLING PROBLEM.

Protectionists Are Unable to Account for Increasing Prosperity.

If the average reader can divest himself of the anxiety induced by trouble between capital and labor at a time when their harmonious action would be so potent in the promotion of general prosperity, there is amusement in the efforts of some of the organs that are trying to make political capital out of the strikes now going on in the country. This disposition is especially noticeable on the part of those papers that think the republican party should make the tariff question the leading issue in the next national campaign and are doing all in their power to inflate the boom of Gov. McKinley. They may possibly be embarrassed by the fact that they are publishing their own inconsistencies broadcast, but there is a heroic effort to conceal this concession to common honesty behind a bold front and a reckless indulgence in unsupported assertion.

No explanation is attempted of their contradictory claims that prosperity has come because a republican congress has been elected, and that there are serious labor troubles because of unwise legislation on the part of the democrats when in power. Whatever pleases the people these organs credit to their party. Whatever is regretted by popular judgment they charge to the democrats. Pursuant to such policy they of course attribute the present strikes to a repeal of the McKinley laws. It would be sufficient answer to this absurd claim to recall the disastrous uprisings of labor when those laws were operative, but this would give an inadequate idea of the grotesque attitudes which these boomers are assuming.

Those who own the ore mines in the upper peninsula are still the beneficiaries of a protective tariff, which they acknowledge to be entirely satisfactory. The demand for their product is brisker than it has been for years, and if they are not bagging all the profits incident to advanced rates it is attributable to their own lack of business foresight. The carpet manufacturers of Philadelphia get free wool and hence pay less for their raw material. There is an ample demand for their products and it is difficult to see how a reduction of expenses would impair their ability to meet the demand of the weavers for better wages. The same fact has a like significance with the manufacturing clothiers of New York, and they are all the better off because of a market that is greatly extended since the Wilson bill went into force. There is no attempt on the part of the protectionists to tell what causes the conditions they affect to lament, but they go it blind and declare that there is safety only in the restoration of McKinleyism.—Detroit Free Press.

——"When the republicans are in power the treasury always takes care of itself," says the Globe-Democrat, referring to the assistance rendered by the bond syndicate. Yes, we all remember how it took care of itself during the administration of President Harrison. The gold reserve amounted to nearly $200,000,000 when he received it from President Cleveland, and only about $100,000,000 when delivered to him four years later.—St. Louis Republic.

The Onward March

of Consumption is stopped short by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. If you haven't waited beyond reason, there's complete recovery and cure.

Although by many believed to be incurable, there is the evidence of hundreds of living witnesses to the fact that, in all its earlier stages, consumption is a curable disease. Not every case, but a large percentage of cases, and we believe, fully 98 per cent. are cured by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, even after the disease has progressed so far as to induce repeated bleedings from the lungs, severe lingering cough with copious expectoration (including tubercular matter), great loss of flesh and extreme emaciation and weakness.

CURRENT COMMENT.

In a speech before the Salvation army encamped at Prohibition park, S. I., Mrs. Ballington Booth took radical grounds against the so-called "New Woman."

In order to make the armed peace of Europe a little firmer, the czar of Russia has sent to Prince Nicholas of Montenegro a supply of cannon, machine guns, dynamite, 20,000 modern rifles, and 15,000,000 cartridges.

Chicago has probably the finest and most commodious public schools in the country, but, large and numerous as they are, 11,000 children have been turned away this year because there is no room for their accommodation.

It was rumored at Washington that the absolute suspension of the issue of gold certificates, which has been several times recommended by Secretary Carlisle, will probably be recommended again by him in his annual report next winter.

A well-known English writer on zoology says the rapid opening of Africa means the destruction of many wild animals and he recommends that wild beast farms be established in civilized countries to preserve the most desirable species.

Cuba is far more heavily taxed and more sternly oppressed than the American colonies ever were. No Cuban is allowed to hold an office nor to teach in the schools and none can be a priest. They have no real share in the general government of which they are a part.

The attention of the United States fish commission has been called recently to the new industry—namely, the artificial propagation of alligators, the eggs being hatched in an incubator. In Jacksonville, Fla., alone from 8,000 to 10,000 alligators are sold to tourists annually—nearly all of them baby ones.

The London Daily Telegraph said Mr. H. N. Pillsbury, of the Brooklyn Chess club, winner of the Hastings (Eng.) chess tournament, at the Metropolitan club in London recently played simultaneous games with fourteen ladies, giving to thirteen of them odds of a knight. Mr. Pillsbury scored ten wins, two losses, one draw and one unfinished.

The Metropolitan Traction Co. of New York, which operates 130 miles of street railway in the city, are about to adopt the underground electric system, a change that will relieve 5,000 more horses from car service. It is believed that within three or four years not a horse will be used of the 43,000 formerly required to operate the street railways of New York.

The American Forestry association says that our great Forests are vanishing. Twenty years ago they covered 760,000,000 acres, and to-day their area is but 375,000,000 acres. In forty years Michigan has lost $40,000,000 by forest fires. Indiana has been stripped of 3,500,000 acres of forest in thirty years. The government estimate of the daily average cutting of timber in the United States is 27,500 acres.

Secretary Turner, of the Jacksonville (Fla.) Fruit exchange, estimated the crop of oranges in the state at not over 100,000 boxes, against 5,000,000 for the season of 1893-4. The greater portion of the crop this year will come from the Manatee river section on the gulf coast, where the freezing of last winter did comparatively little damage. Cincinnati fruit dealers have already bought the entire stock of the region.

The tin plate manufacturers in Cleveland, O., recently said that the big advance in the price of steel had killed the tin plate industry and that in a few months every mill in the country turning out that product would be closed. J. W. Britton, president of the Britton tin plate works, stated: "There is in the neighborhood of $10,000,000 invested in the 137 mills at present operating in this country, and from 27,000 to 30,000 men are employed. In four months from now not one of the mills will be running."

Leading architectural firms are condemning the erection of tall buildings. Mr. Edward H. Kendall, formerly president of the American Institute of Architects, said recently that he considered high buildings a menace to public health and comfort, on account of their cutting off light and air from adjacent buildings. Structurally they can be built to last with safety, but Mr. Kendall was asked about building a thirty-five story structure, and he would only undertake it upon the condition that he could go down to solid rock upon which to lay the foundations.

The New York Central's Empire State express has made 436½ miles in 425¾ minutes, and its time, taking into consideration the great difference in conditions existing between the British roads and the New York Central, is even more remarkable than was the fast time recently made from London to Aberdeen. The British roads run either above or below grade. The Empire State express runs past hundreds of grade crossings, and cuts through more than twenty cities in its passage between New York and Buffalo, and in these cases the speed must be reduced to 8 miles an hour.

The movement for the nationalization of the railroads of England has recently been put upon a popular basis, every one, without respect to age, birth or sex, having been invited to become a member of the Railway Nationalization league, and, according to a report issued by the secretary of the organization, the reform has enlisted a formidable array of supporters. The country has been flooded with handbills setting forth the enormous profits accruing to the holders of railway securities, and the benefits that would arise by the diversion of these profits to the public coffers.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Gleaned By Telegraph and Mail.

PERSONAL AND POLITICAL.

Secretary Hoke Smith had a debate with Judge Frank Longley, a bimetallist, on the money question at La Grange, Ga., recently, before a large audience. They both advanced the stock arguments of their respective sides.

Comptroller Bowler, of the federal treasury department, has promulgated his decision as to the sugar bounty question and holds that the part of the act of congress making an appropriation for the payment of sugar bounties is unconstitutional. He, however, decided that the papers could be sent to the court of claims.

The state department at Washington has been advised that the record in the Waller court-martial will reach Aden on the Red sea about the 12th and it will be some time before it can be transmitted to Washington from Paris. The record could not be demanded if the United States were to demand Waller's release and the demand was acceded to, and then it would be impossible to show that Waller had been unjustly deprived of his property. The authorities at Washington are using every effort not to fall into this trap.

Li Hung Chang, the viceroy of China, has issued a proclamation warning the Chinese to refrain from molesting the missionaries and speaking in terms of praise of the work done by them.

A New York paper announced that Pierre Lorillard, the tobacco magnate, had tired of America, and was going to England to live. Recently he sold part of his fine stable to William H. Vanderbilt and has also placed his magnificent houseboat on the market and it was said that he intended to dispose of his country seat at Johnstown, N. J., where he own thousands of acres.

A recent special from Clarksville, Tenn., said that Mrs. Carlisle had written to a friend in Christian county, Ky., that Secretary Carlisle was a candidate for the democratic presidential nomination and would have his name before the party as the present administration's favorite.

A dispatch from Newport, R. I., on the 3d said that the engagement of Miss Gertrude Vanderbilt and Moses Taylor, though not formally announced, was conceded. The great fortune of Miss Vanderbilt was almost matched by the millions of the prospective bridegroom.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Advices received from Moscow and St. Petersburg stated that 900 persons known or suspected to be nihilists had been arrested by the police of those cities, and large quantities of bombs, firearms and dynamite had been seized in their lodgings and haunts.

The Silver City and Delmar stage in Idaho was held up by three masked men near the point of previous hold-ups. The robbers got the treasure box, but there was nothing but a small package of jewelry in it.

The failures for the week ended September 6 (Dun's report) were 186 in the United States, against 219 last year, and 38 in Canada, against 47 last year.

The steamboat Vern Swain, between Clinton and Davenport, Ia., was caught in a storm and wrecked. The passengers were panic stricken and Stephen Church, who went out in a boat to cast anchor, was drowned.

The National Letter Carriers' association at Philadelphia on the 6th elected R. F. Quinn, of Philadelphia, president; John F. Victory, of Washington, secretary, and Alex. McDonald, of Grand Rapids, Mich., treasurer. A pension bill for carriers, to be presented to congress, was adopted.

Clearing house returns for the principal cities in the United States for the week ended September 6 showed an average increase as compared with the corresponding week last year of 15.1; in New York the increase was 28.0; outside New York the increase was 1.5.

The Lehigh Valley Coal Co., which seized the Morris Ridge (Pa.) colliery on executions issued because of arrearages in wages and coal royalties, has shut down the mine indefinitely. Four hundred men and boys are thrown out of employment by this move.

The banking house of Baron Alphonse Rothschild at Paris was entered by an anarchist on the 5th who attempted to light the fuse of a bomb from a cigarette he was smoking. The anarchist, seeing he was observed, threw down the bomb, but it did not explode. He was arrested.

Peck & Co.'s large furniture store at San Antonio, Tex., was destroyed by fire on the 5th. Loss, nearly $100,000.

Thirteen houses at Huntington, Tenn., were demolished by a cyclone on the 4th. One man was seriously injured. The Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis railway depot there was completely wrecked. The roof was blown from the main Southern normal university building. On the public square many large brick store houses were unroofed and their stocks damaged. The public square was almost impassable on account of the timber and debris. No lives were lost.

Fire broke out in Fleming's livery stable at Petersburg, Ind., on the 3d and twenty-five horses were cremated. The opera house and a hotel were also burned.

At Fayetteville, Tenn., Dock King, colored, arrested for attempting to assault Mrs. Charles Jones near Fayetteville, was taken from the jail by a mob of 200 men and hanged.

The Wild West show train of Pawnee Bill was dashed into by a wild car running down a grade at Pine Bluff, Ark., and about half a dozen persons were severely injured.

James Ward murdered his father-in-law, Aaron Hunter, and his brother-in-law, John Hunter, by cutting off their heads at Sullivan, Ind. He was pursued by a mob, but just as he was about to be captured took his own life.

Mrs. Nicholas Ohm, Jr., and her father-in-law, Nicholas Ohm, Sr., were killed by being run down on a crossing by the Cincinnati express on the B. & O. railroad near Reilly station.

Four Japanese belonging to the Christian mission in San Francisco, had a meal at a Chinese restaurant recently and were afterwards taken sick and the doctor pronounced them poisoned. After a few hours of agony one died and the lives of the others were despaired of. It was presumed that the enmity between the two nations was the cause of the crime.

An edict has been issued by the Chicago Telephone Co. forbidding the girls to report in bicycling costume at any hour of the day or night.

A merry-go-round at the Waverly (N. J.) fair went to pieces, throwing women and children in all directions. Four women were so badly hurt that they had to be carried on stretchers to ambulances.

Stella Johnson, the 16-year-old daughter of a widow who lives near Amilla, Fla., was kidnaped and the nude corpse of the girl, strapped to a log and horribly mangled, was found floating in a small lake about 6 miles from her home. The girl's neck had been broken and her throat cut from ear to ear. Her right arm had been severed from her body at the shoulder.

The propeller Christiana I. Forbes, running between Bay City and Saginaw, Mich., was burned to the water's edge on the 4th, a load of prairie hay on board taking fire. The passengers were safely landed, but they lost all their baggage. The boat was rated at $50,000 and was fully insured.

An engine used to supply the government building at Chicago exploded near midnight on the 4th and the employes were terror stricken for a short time, anticipating more explosions. Every one of the 2,000 lights went out. In fifteen minutes, however, they were at work again, another engine having been set going.

About 150 Indians, who have been working for Frank Vance at Deer River, Minn., gathering his hay crop, went on a strike on the 4th, and capturing Mr. Vance, threatened to burn him at the stake and scalp him unless he acceded to their demands. Mr. Vance, who was badly frightened, got away from the Indians and remained in hiding until the red men had gone back to their reservation. The Indians were hired by Mr. Vance to cut hay at a rate of $2.50 a ton and the Indians were of the opinion that they should have $4 per ton.

By the bursting of a gas main at the works of the Providence (R. I.) Gas Co. on the 4th five men were suffocated and a sixth narrowly escaped death.

At Philadelphia on the 4th John R. Gentry won the $4,000 race from Joe Patchen. Time, 2:08¼. It was claimed the driver of Patchen pulled his horse to let Gentry win the race.

Fire at Evansville, Ind., on the 3d destroyed the Heilman flour mill, an elevator and 100,000 bushels of wheat. The loss was estimated at $100,000, partly insured.

A big mass meeting of representative Choctaws took place at Atoka, I. T., on the 4th, there being 170 Indians by blood and about 1,000 non-citizens present. Resolutions were adopted memoralizing the Choctaw national council, to appoint an Indian commission to treat with the Dawes commission. The convention also adopted resolutions recommending the allotment of Choctaw lands.

The town of Abasolo, in Mexico, a place of 800 inhabitants, has been entirely washed away, but fifteen houses remaining. Three miles away at the village of Rodiquez, every house was also carried away.

The September crop report of the Chicago Prairie Farmer showed the condition of corn to be 90, against a condition last year of 65.2, being the highest conditional average for the time since 1888.

Nettie Vanator and Mr. B. M. Swahart went in bathing in Turkey lake, Indiana, on the 3d and the girl got beyond her depth. Swahart tried to rescue her and they both were drowned before help could reach them.

The medico-legal congress convened in New York on the 3d, a large number of leading scientists, lawyers and physicians, not only from this country but from Europe, being present.

The trial of Theodore Durrant, the young medical student, for the murder of Blanche Lamont in Emanuel Baptist church, commenced at San Francisco on the 3d, the prosecuting attorney making his opening statement to the jury, telling them what he expected to be able to prove.

The National Association of Letter Carriers opened its sixth annual session at Philadelphia on the 3d. Many resolutions, intended to improve their lot, were introduced and read.

The cricket match at Livingston, S. I., between the Oxford and Cambridge universities and all New York, was won by the Englishmen.

An actual reproduction was made of the side of the new battleship Iowa by the Washington authorities and experiments were made at Indian Head to test its capacity for resisting projectiles. The structure resisted shots weighing hundreds of pounds and striking with an energy of over a million foot pounds. Secretary Herbert was greatly rejoiced over the result.

Near Blackwell, Ok., William Knapp and U. S. Oller, well to do farmers, fought over some hay. Oller cut Knapp badly with an ax and Knapp broke both of Oller's arms and stuck a pitchfork through his abdomen. Oller died and Knapp cannot live.

FOUR POISONED.

Some Japanese Eat at a Chinese Restaurant with Fatal Effect.

San Francisco, Sept. 7.—Wednesday evening four young Japanese belonging to the Japanese Christian mission of this city went to a Chinese restaurant at Waverly place in the Chinese quarter. They received good attention and what was presumed to be a good meal was served. Shortly after they left the place they were all taken seriously ill and a doctor was hastily summoned. It was soon discovered that they had been poisoned and antidotes were administered but with little effect and after a few hours of agony one of the victims died. The doctors have despaired of the lives of the other three, as the poison used is of a very virulent nature, the dead man turning black and swelling to twice the normal size shortly after his death. It is presumed that the enmity which exists between the two nations at the present time was the cause of the crime on the part of the Chinese.

FATAL EXPLOSION.

Two Little Children Burned to Death and a Third Seriously Injured.

Independence, Kan., Sept. 7.—A fatal explosion of gasoline occurred here last night in which Eva and Roscoe Taylor were burned to death and Mary Taylor seriously injured. The two children, aged respectively 8 and 13 years, were alone in the house when the little girl attempted to kindle a fire by using kerosene. By mistake she got the gasoline can and, as there was probably a spark of fire in the store, a terrible explosion followed. The children ran screaming out of the house with their clothes a mass of flames, and were met by their sister, Mary, whose clothes also caught fire in trying to save the children. The two little ones died in a few hours and their older sister is now lying in a serious condition, having inhaled some of the flames.

JOPLIN BADLY FLOODED.

Severe Storms Damage a Church. Residences and Business Houses.

Joplin, Mo., Sept. 7.—Joplin was visited by a cloudburst shortly after 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Rain fell at intervals all the afternoon, culminating in a storm which was the worst known in twenty years. Water came down in streams. The rain was accompanied by a terrific electrical display, and by a high wind, which did great damage. The First M. E. church and several private residences were damaged by water. On Main street, for half a block, on each side of the Willow branch, several business buildings were flooded. In all the low lying districts the occupants were driven from their houses. The railways suffered much damage. Many mines were flooded, and the loss from this will be heavy. No fatalities are reported. A break in the water main has cut East Joplin off from supply.

OPPOSE BLOOMERS.

Doctors Solemnly Declare Against the Craze.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 7.—In the closing hours of their deliberations the section in general medicine of the Missouri valley medical congress discussed the mooted question of the effect of bicycling. The exercising was indorsed as a health promoter for both sexes, and even recommended for certain ailments, but the wearing of bloomers by feminine wheelists was put down as something outrageous. Several physicians talked upon the subject, and all agreed that temperate use of the bicycle is beneficial. Leggins and plaited skirts were recommended for women riders, but bloomers were unanimously declared to be an abomination and the cause of lowering their wearers in the eyes of spectators. After some further discussion of the subjects of technical interest, both sections adjourned sine die.

ANXIOUS TO BE HANGED.

A Murderer Wants to Get Away from the Tortures of His Conscience.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 7.—James McMullen, who is under sentence of death in the county jail for the murder of his wife last New Year's night, is extremely anxious that Gov. Hastings should sign his death warrant. McMullen says remorse for the deed has driven him almost mad, and he wishes to expatiate his deed on the gallows as soon as possible, so that he may get away, if possible, from his conscience. After the murder McMullen tried to cut his throat. The wound was healed and he was tried.

No Free Sheep for Colleges.

Washington, Sept. 7.—Acting Secretary Curtis has written a letter to Mr. C. F. Curtis, of the Iowa Agricultural college, in which he holds that there is no provision of law which would permit the free importation of sheep for "scientific investigation" by his college. The provision for the free entry of articles for colleges embraces "philosophical and scientific apparatus, instruments, preparations, etc.," but not living animals.

Forbidden to Wear Bloomers.

Chicago, Sept. 7.—An edict recently issued by the Chicago Telephone Co. has been conspicuously bulletined at headquarters, 203 Washington street, where 200 girls are employed, and bears the official signature of the general manager. It reads: "Operators will not be permitted to report at this building at any hour of the day or night in bicycle costume, or to assume that attire before departure for home."

Three Persons Drowned.

Greensboro, Ga., Sept. 7.—Three men were drowned in the Oconee river yesterday. Two negroes, Albert Cross and John Armor, started to the mill with some corn to get it ground. When they reached the ferry they found the river very high from the recent rains. Ira Caldwell, son of the ferryman, undertook to carry them across on a flat boat. When they reached the middle of the stream the boat was caught in the current and swept down the river ½ mile over the dam, 35 feet high. The boat was shattered on the rocks and the men were killed or drowned.

WEEKLY REVIEW OF TRADE.

Outlook Is Encouraging, and a Certainty That the Corn Crop Will Be Enormous.

New York, Sept. 7.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says: There is no real reaction in business. Gains which were recognized as temporary are vanishing, but there remains a decided increase over last year at date, although prices average 8.8 per cent. lower than a year ago. It needs no keen observer to see that the reaction against rapid advance in prices is strong. Hides were the first to rise, but a decided break has come. Wheat jumped over 20 cents to 84 cents, but is now slow of sale at about 65 cents. Wool was late in rising, but has lost about ⅛ cent in average price within the past fortnight. Iron still rises, the strike having hindered shipments of ore, but with troops guarding the ore begins to move. Cotton is strong, but has paused. The general tendency to curtail purchases where prices have notably advanced grows clearer in boots and shoes, in wool and in some products of iron.

The brightest feature in all the horizon is the certainty that the crop of corn will be enormous. Frosts now can only affect a small fraction, and the surplus will go into the manufacture of meats, because at 35.7 cents at New York, nearly 4 cents lower than a week ago, there is no other profitable use for corn. The latest reports of wheat threshing have induced the best western judges to raise their estimate of the yield over 40,000,000 bushels, and with 450,000,000 bushels added to 70,000,000 bushels brought over, the supply will exceed all probable demands. Atlantic exports have been only 1,347,352 bushels, flour included, against 2,799,860 last year. Pacific shipments continuing large.

PENSIONS FOR POSTMEN.

The National Letter Carriers' Association Resolve for a Service Pension.

Philadelphia, Sept. 7.—The election of officers for the National Letter Carriers' association was partially held at last night's session of the convention and the result thus far is as follows: President, R. F. Quinn, Philadelphia, 302 votes; William J. Hennessey, Boston, 193; vice president, James Arkison, Fall River, 355; E. S. Kessler, New Orleans, 133; secretary, John F. Victory, Washington; treasurer, Alexander McDonald, Grand Rapids.

A motion that the committee on legislation be instructed to get an appropriation through congress to pay the carriers in the twelve cities raised to first class by the census of 1890 and back salary due them was adopted.

The pension bill, presented by the Chicago delegation, was adopted as a whole amid great cheering. The bill which will now be presented to the next congress provides for the payment of a pension to all carriers who are injured in the service, and the retirement of carriers on half pay after twenty years' service. The money is to be obtained by deducting 2 per cent. from the salaries of active carriers each month and 1 per cent. from the pay of the retired carriers.

GOLD RESERVE SHORT.

The Gold Reserve Is Low, but No Alarm Is Felt by Officials.

Washington, Sept. 7.—A telegram received at the treasury department states that $1,600,000 in gold had been withdrawn for export from the subtreasury at New York. Slight gains, however, were made at Chicago and other points, aggregating $186,000, so the true amount of the reserve at the close of business was $98,513,529. The cash balance was $181,577,168.

The treasury officials maintain their usual reciticence on the subject, but there is no doubt that they were somewhat disappointed and surprised that the syndicate permitted the business day to close without making any deposit. From the first the officials have confidently believed $100,000,000 was the lowest point the syndicate would permit the reserve to reach, and hence their inaction at this time is not understood.

TO FIGHT FREE SILVER.

The Illinois Honest Money League Preparing for a Campaign.

Chicago, Sept. 7.—Democrats from all parts of the state attended the meeting yesterday of the Honest Money league of Illinois, held at the Palmer house for the purpose of preparing for the presidential campaign of 1896. Leaders of the party were present and after transacting routine business discussed the work of the coming year, and the means of combating the free silver element of the party. A committee was appointed to outline a plan of action and prepare a list of candidates, reporting at the next meeting, set for September 17.

YOUTHFUL CRIMINALS.

A Boy and Girl in Michigan Sentenced for Killing Their Grandmother.

Grand Haven, Mich., Sept. 7.—Mary I. Pierce, aged 13 years, who has been on trial for the murder of her grandmother, was this morning found guilty of manslaughter. Judge Padgeham sentenced the girl to the industrial school for girls at Adrian until she is 21 years old. This is the murder for which George Chesebro, the girl's nephew, was sentenced to life imprisonment at Jackson a month ago. Chesebro testified against the girl.

The Ottawa Encampment.

Ottawa, Kan., Sept. 7.—The eleventh annual encampment of the Second, Fifth, Sixth and Twelfth Kansas regiments closed yesterday with speeches by Col. Cloud, Surgeon D. H. Fisher, Lieut.-Col. Jenkins, of Chicago, Harrison Kelley, Maj. Scudder, Capt. Morse, Congressman Kirkpatrick and others. The Sixth regiment voted to organize for work for a monument for Kansas regiments.

An Ohio County's Funds Short.

Paulding, O., Sept. 7.—Ex-County Treasurer Finnan, whose term of office expired Monday, is declared by experts to be short $19,000.

THE DEMOCRATIC DOCTRINE.

The reaffirmation of the Ohio democracy of the democratic plank in the national convention of 1892 on the subject of gold and silver calls attention to something that has been overlooked by a good many of the talkers on the free coinage question. It has been assumed by many of these that the doctrine of the democratic party on the subject is in doubt, while some have not hesitated to affirm that the party is in favor of the free coinage of silver at the old rate of sixteen for one. It is worth while, therefore, at this time to recall that the only authoritative utterance of the democratic party on the subject is contained in the platform of 1892, which was indorsed by the Ohio democracy. The plank reads as follows:

"We denounce the republican legislation known as the Sherman act of 1890 as a cowardly makeshift fraught with possibilities of danger in the future which should make all its supporters as well as its author anxious for its speedy repeal. We hold to the use of both gold and silver as the standard money of the country and to the coinage of both gold and silver without discriminating against either metal or charge for mintage; but the dollar unit of coinage of both metals must be of equal intrinsic and exchangeable value or be adjusted through international agreement or by such safeguards of legislation as shall insure the maintenance of the parity of the two metals and the equal power of every dollar at all times in the markets and in the payment of debts; and we demand that all paper currency shall kept at par with and redeemable in such coin. We insist upon this policy as especially necessary for the protection of the farmers and laboring classes, the first and most defenseless victims of unstable money and a fluctuating currency."

As to what this meant there could be no real doubt. The friends of free silver had none at the time, for they moved through Mr. Patterson, of Colorado, to insert the word "free" before the words "coinage of both gold and silver" in the money plank. This motion was emphatically voted down, and the meaning of the plank, so far as free coinage of silver was concerned, was thereby put beyond the possibility of misconception or misconstruction. It is worth while to recall also what President Cleveland said on the same subject in his letter of acceptance. Starting with the proposition that the people are entitled to sound and honest money abundantly sufficient in volume to supply their business needs, he proceeded:

"Whatever may be the form of the people's currency, national or state—whether gold, silver or paper—it should be so regulated and guarded by governmental action or by wise and careful laws that no one can be deluded as to the certainty and stability of its value. Every dollar put into the hands of the people should be of the same intrinsic value or purchasing power. With this condition absolutely guaranteed both gold and silver can be safely utilized upon equal terms in the adjustment of our currency.

"In dealing with this subject no selfish scheme should be allowed to intervene and no doubtful experiment should be attempted. The wants of our people arising from the deficiency or imperfect distribution of money circulation ought to be fully and honestly recognized and efficiently remedied. It should, however, be constantly remembered that the inconvenience or loss that might arise from such a situation can be much more easily borne than the universal distress which must follow a discredited currency."

This is the national democratic doctrine to-day; and it will remain so until the democratic party in national convention sees fit to modify or change it. Its strong affirmation by the Ohio democracy indicates that it will not be essentially changed at the next assembling of the national democracy.—Detroit Free Press.

THE REPUBLICAN MISTAKE.

Chairman Manley of the national republican executive committee expresses with candor the opinion that his party made a great mistake about the force bill issue, and should have dropped it eight years before they did.

This is retrospective and historical, but it is interesting and undoubtedly true. We imagine Mr. Manley says no more than his former chieftain, the Hon. James G. Blaine, would say if he were living now, or would have said with entire frankness if questioned on the subject at any time within four years before his death.

We believe, furthermore, that the remark of Mr. Manley expresses the present convictions of Hon. Thomas B. Reed on the subject. The force bill issue in 1892 was primarily and peculiarly the creation of Gen. Harrison, and it defeated him and elected Mr. Cleveland.

There is no probability that the democratic campaign of 1896, whoever the republican candidate may be, will turn on the issue of federal interference in elections and negro domination in the south.

The disappearance of that issue from American politics was the greatest if not the only important result of the democratic victory three years ago next November.—N. Y. Sun.

——Gov. McKinley prophesies that the majority by which he was elected in the year of the great political landslide "will not be materially decreased" in the Ohio election this fall. Predictions of this sort may be expected all around. But with republican politicians generally it will be nothing more than whistling to keep their courage up. The fact is that the world has moved fast and far since November, 1894, and the conditions have altogether changed. That was a time of depression, low wages, poverty—a republican year. This is a time of business revival, of rising wages, of comfort and hope—a democratic year.—Boston Post.

——Some scattered republicans may talk free silver, but when the time comes they will be found voting against democratic candidates with all the delight of gratified hostility. Democrats will win or lose by what they do for themselves. If they cannot organize a straight democratic party behind a platform they cannot play winning politics.—St. Louis Republic.

——Nearly everybody except the Ohio governor himself sees that the joint debate between Maj. McKinley and General Prosperity is a one-sided affair.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

THE DEMOCRATIC NEED.

The Philadelphia Telegraph seeks to deny to the liberals in England and the democrats in this country the hope which the World found for them in the alternate defeats and triumphs of the past thirty years. It says that:

"The uprising of the electorate of the United States against the democratic congress' last year was for cause, and that cause still exists in the vicious and injurious legislation, not only in that which was effected but in that which was attempted, of the last congress. The people who have suffered so greatly because of the acts and the attempts of the late democratic majority in congress, and who are still suffering because of them, are not likely to forget what party it was that inflicted the long-continued distress upn them."

So every uprising in the past resulting in a defeat of the party in power has been for cause or supposed cause, but this has not prevented the swing of the political pendulum just as far in the opposite direction within two or four years.

The people's dissatisfaction with the last congress was not with the principal acts of legislation, but with the delay and faithlessness in some important particulars that marked the action of the senate. The surrender to the sugar trust and the "hold-up" of the Wilson bill by the sugar, iron, coal and transportation rings, angered the democratic voters, and justly. But the important extension of the free list and the reduction of duties on the necessaries of the people met the hearty approval of the great popular majorities that condemned McKinleyism in 1890 and again in 1892.

The "long-continued distress" of the people was not occasioned by anything which the democratic congress did or attempted. That distress was caused by the impairment of public confidence in our currency under the operation of the republican silver-purchase act. The foundation of a restored confidence was laid when the democratic congress and administration forced a repeal of this mischief-working law. The recovery was slow, as all recoveries from such panics and depressions are slow, but it came in due time.

That no injury was worked to any legitimate business interest by the partial measure of tariff reform finally adopted is abundantly proved by the present condition of all the great industries. Agriculture, manufactures, traffic and commerce are all thriving. Prices and wages have advanced, the volume of business has steadily increased and the high tide of prosperity has enveloped the land. The republicans are silenced. They have no policy. All the conditions exist for a popular reaction in favor of the democrats. Only wise leadership is needed to cause history to repeat itself in another swing of the pendulum. For the party's and the country's sake it is to be regretted that the leadership is not yet equal to the opportunity.—N. Y. World.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

——The eastern republicans are very much afraid that Ben Harrison's sonorous silence is silver.—Detroit Free Press.

——The gold surplus ran out of the treasury faster under Harrison's administration than it has any time since.—Chicago Chronicle.

——Mr. Foraker denies that good times are returning. Who says that Mr. Foraker is not loyal to Mr. McKinley?—Louisville Courier-Journal.

——The iron mills of this country are unable to fill their orders. This is one of the many beneficial results of the Wilson tariff and democratic rule.—Sioux City Tribune.

——Democratic good times are causing the republican managers more trouble and anxiety than are all the national issues combined. There is a growing desire to continue the policy which has relieved depression and restored prosperity.—Detroit Free Press.

——Maj. McKinley will please observe that the democratic tariff is doing some very vigorous talking in its behalf. And the best feature of the business is that the people applaud every additional increase of wages as a big point in favor of a continuance of democratic tariff reform.—Lafayette (Ind.) Journal.

——Until the McKinleyite press can satisfy the voters of the United States that they are better off when they pay forty dollars each for a suit of clothes than when they pay twenty-five dollars sheep and wool statistics will be produced in vain. The voters who wear clothes are fifty times more numerous than the voters who raise sheep.—Chicago Chronicle.

——Times of prosperity are democratic times. Just now the people are enjoying the fruits of the democratic victory of 1892, which established the conditions under which industry and trade have found a solid place to stand upon. It has taken a long time to get rid of the malign influences of the four years of republican rule under Harrison, but at last these are shaken off and the country is on the high road to the greatest prosperity ever known.—Boston Post.

——"The increase of wages," says the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, "has given Mr. McKinley great discomfort, but as a circus was attached in Ohio the other day he begins to hope that the business revival is only a spurt, and that the return to depression of last year may not be far off." The failure of that circus is not the only failure on which the governor can base a hope that the hard times are not yet over. There is, for instance, Gov. McKinley's own great and lasting failure to find out where he stands on the silver question.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

——Republican journals persist in saying that the woolen industry cannot be prosperous under the present tariff. But it appears that the productive capacity of the woolen machinery now in actual operation largely exceeds the productive capacity of the machinery in operation in 1892, before the national elections, a year before the beginning of the panic, and under the McKinley tariff. We have also shown that since last March wages have been increased in about fifty woolen factories.—N. Y. Times.

THE CHRONICLE.

C. C. DuBOSE, Editor and Proprietor.

COLUMBIANA, SEPT. 12, 1895.

THE Eufaula Times says: "The gentleman who took the position and maintained it that cotton and silver went up and down together has just now found out that he was pushing the asylum for the simple very close. Are we right?"

THE butter and cheese products of the United States now bring $900,000,000 a year, about three times the value of the cotton crop. When it is noticed that this does not include the milk sold, it is a pretty considerable item, says the Southern Cultivator and Industrial Journal.

CHIEF JUSTICE FULLER of the U. S. supreme court, is reported as having declared, in the conrse of a recent interview, that if we wish to live to a green old age we should keep in harness, as nothing on earth so eats out existence and consumes energy as the dry rot of an aimless, idle and purposeless life.

A POPULIST paper in Illinois is said to have suspended publication as soon as the editor satisfied himself that the corn crop was really immense. This report may be a mere flight of fancy, but it sounds plausible as an instance of cause and effect since the populist party is the only thing in the world that fattens and waxes strong on poor crops.

WHEN you begin to talk sound money to a free silverite, about the first thing he will say is, "yes, you are advocating John Sherman's republican financial policy," but when you tell him he is advocating populist doctrine it is a different thing, and he will tell you that you shouldn't talk that way to democrats. Be consistent, and willing to take what you give.

ONE of the best posted men in wheat and other grain statistics and prospects, said the other day: "The South will not have to import a peck of corn this year; in fact, the South will have some corn to spare." This is the second year in thirty, when the South raised more than her own corn, the other was last year. The farmers will do well to stick to it. It will pay better than all cotton and no hog and hominy.

THE Montgomery News has become philosopical, and says: "There is a grain of consolation in the fact that people never talk of their inferiors. So, if you hear of anything unkind being said about you, just attribute it to the fact that you are far superior to the one who made the remark, else nothing would have been said. What pitiful objects of charity are these tattlers who lay claim to true manhood and womanhood."

IT IS believed that lightning is visible at a distance of 150 miles, but it is still in controversy how far thunder can be heard. An astronomer who has made observations on the subject declares it impossible for thunder to be heard at a greater distance than ten miles; while another scientific authority, a meteorologist, has counted up to 130 seconds between the flash and the thunder, which would give a distance of twenty-seven miles.

A NEW YORK scientist recommends the eating of bones after they are ground fine. He holds that under our present diet the bones of the human frame are not properly supplied with the chemical elements needed to keep them in sound and vigorous condition, and that these elements can be most easily obtained by consuming the powdered bones of the animals ordinarily used for food. He would sprinkle a steak or chop with bone dust, after the manner in which it is sprinkled with salt and pepper, and he maintains that thus the taste of the meat may be greatly improved.

A DISTURBER.

From the Savannah News.

May be it was the bicycle microbe that deranged the liver of business. From time to time we have heard how much value has been knocked off the horses of the country by the wheel, and everybody can readily understand why it should be so. But it appears, from the accumulating evidence, that the loss of horse values is only a small fraction of the general derangement for which the bicycle is held responsible. One by one various lines of enterprise and endeavor are finding out that they are more or less affected by the wheel fever. The savings banks have reached the conclusion that they are in receipt of some millions less money in deposits than the former yearly average, and they account for the dropping off by the fact that thousands of young men and young women are buying wheels on the installment plan, and paying for them the money that they would otherwise put into the banks. The retail clothing trade finds that the sales of custom-made clothing have dropped off some hundreds of thousands of dollars from what they ought to be. Bicycle riders do not need so many clothes; those they do need are cheap, and while they are wearing them the more costly business and dress suits are not in use, and hence last longer. One business suit lasts the wheel rider much longer than a similar suit would last the same person before he became a rider. What applies to clothing applies also to neckties, shoes and hats.

The Tobacco Journal says that the wheel very greatly injures the cigar and tobacco trade. The half a million of male wheelmen in this country do not smoke nearly so many cigars and cigarettes when they ride as they would smoke if they were to walk. The Journal estimates that the wheel has decreased the cigar and cigarette trade by 700,000,000 smokes a year. Putting the average cost of each smoke at 1 cent, it can be seen what a puncture has been punched in the tobacco trade by the "bike." If the tobacco trade has lost $700,000 a year through the wheel, the saloons have lost seven times that much. Whisky and wheeling do no go together. Very few wheelmen drink liquor, and those who do so, drink sparingly.

A "professor of pugilism" in New Jersey complains that his athletic school has been all but ruined because everybody is riding now instead of boxing and wrestling. Maybe there are others like him. A Philadelphia paper says there is less demand for the chaperone for young ladies now than heretofore, because the chaperone and the "bike" are not good friends, and the girl who rides a wheel may generally be depended upon to take care of herself in the most approved manner. The laundries complain that the number of white and fancy linen and percale shirts and shirt waists to be laundried has fallen off greatly, with the effect of reducing their revenues. Most people who ride wheels wear negligee costumes. There may be still others who feel the effects of the wheeling custom, but enough has been said to show how wide its influence is. And it may grow to be still wider. It is estimated that 500,000 wheels will be sold this year, at a cost of $35,000,000.

A NEW LOCAL CURRENCY.

A new financial idea has been broached by Mr. Edward Atkinson, the well-known economist, who recognizes the need of a more abundant supply of local currency. He proposes that the banks should issue certificates of deposits made payable to bearer, and he believes that such certificates would be legal and extempt from the ten-per-cent tax imposed on state bank circulation. The Atlanta Constitution, commenting on the plan, says: "The certificates would serve as a local currency, and would be a great convenience, but the Wall street men would doubtless contend that they were an evasion of the state bank tax, and the chances are that they would obtain a ruling that would tax the new currency. No matter how the law has been construed heretofore, there is always a probability that new rulings will be made in the interests of the money power." The Louisville Courier-Journal is not sure that the issue would be held legal, but it adds: "It may be said, however, that a prima facie case has been made out for the legality of such certificates and that they could be used as money. In 1893 Attorney-General Olney gave an opinion that the tax on state banks applied only to promissory notes, and not to other negotiable or quasi-negotiable paper. Now a certificate of deposit could hardly be classified as a promissory note, especially as the supreme court has laid down the rule that if there is any doubt as to the meaning of a statute imposing a tax, the doubt must be resolved in favor of exemption."—Literary Digest.

While in Chicago, Mr. Charles L. Kahler, a prominent shoe merchant of DesMoines, Iowa, had quite a serious time of it. He took such a severe cold that he could hardly talk or navigate, but the prompt use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cured him of his cold so quickly that others at the hotel who had bad colds followed his example and half a dozen persons ordered it from the nearest drug store. They were profuse in their thanks to Mr. Kahler for telling them how to cure a bad cold so quickly. For sale by Parker & Armstrong.

HOWARD TALKS.

SAYS THE WHITE MEN OF THE SOUTH ARE RESPONSIBLE

For the So-Called Negro Outrages, for Which They Lynch Their Fellowmen—Read and Form Your Own Conclusions.

The following articles were taken from The Buffalo (N. Y.) Express. The first one appeared in Thursday morning's paper, August 22nd, and the other in Friday morning's paper, August 23rd. These articles have been withheld, thinking Mr. Howard would refute the charges, but we have failed to see where he has done so, and now publish them. Let the reader draw his own conclusions:

BUFFALO EXPRESS, AUGUST 22ND.

"The white men of the South are themselves responsible for the socalled negro outrages, for which they lynch their fellowmen. They have first stolen the negro's vote, then they have stolen the virtue of his wife, his mother and his daughter. When the negro sees these things, what can you expect of him but he will lose all respect for human nature? Why should he consider the virtue of white women any more sacred than that of his own race?

"I do not say that there are not many occasions where horrible crimes are committed by the negroes, but I do say that the responsibility for these crimes rests on the whites. I am willing to go on record as having said that, and I am willing to repeat it wherever I raise my voice."

These are the words uttered at Crystal Beach last night by Representative Howard of the 7th district of Alabama. Startling, because in all the history of the country no southern white man of any prominence dared to express such sentiments in public. Startling, because of the exact similitude between the reasoning of the speaker and that of that other reformer, Ida B. Wells, who in her lecture last week expressed the same views. Both are from the South, both understand the conditions and circumstances that govern the southern people. Miss Wells spoke from the viewpoint of an oppressed race. Mr. Howard from the viewpoint of the race of oppressors, and the conclusions they reach are the same.

"I suppose I will be the best-hated man in the whole South when the remarks I made tonight get back to my people," said Mr. Howard to an Express reporter, "but I have said many radical things down there, and the better element seem to agree with me. The time has come when honesty of purpose and speech commands respect. I have held the views I expressed tonight for a long time. Some time ago before my election to congress, I wrote a magazine article which embodied the same ideas. I showed it to my friends and they strongly urged me not to publish it. Out of consideration for their feelings I refrained from making my conclusions public. Now, however, for the first time, I have expressed these sentiments in a public address, because I know them to be true, and I do not think any good can be done by suppressing the truth."

BUFEALO EXPRESS, AUGUST 23RD.

"Mr. Chairman, Gentlemen and Fellow-citizens:—I am sorry that I detained you. It was unavoidable. The boat on which I came over got stuck in the mud. Before I get through with you, you, also, may think you are stuck in the mud.

"I come from Alabama, a country, where we make iron and steel for a living. (laughter.)

"My friends, we are fellow-citizens, I from the South, you from the North. But tonight I am here as a representative of the New South. The old issues are dead and past, and from them arise new principles and facts. One of these facts is that we have come to learn what our own interests are.

"I come in no spirit of unkindness tonight. I don't care what your party affiliations are; and so long as you do not belong to the capitallistic party we are brothers. Our interests are the same and we are striving to reach the same goal to bring about the same end.

"The time in this country has come when the trusts and monopolies control congress and the legislative bodies. When I see 4,000,000 wives put their children to bed at night with the prayer rung from the agony of their 'daily bread,' there is something wrong. When I see 1,000,000 girls as pure as your sisters or mine having to decide between starvation, suicide or shame, there is something wrong. When in New York city I see women toiling from 7 o'clock in the morning until midnight to earn 13 cents for such a day's work, I tell you my friends, there is something wrong. When, as was done in Illinois only a short time ago, 300 miners offered to sell themselves into slavery, that their wives, children and themselves might secure food, shelter and clothing, there is something wrong. When I see a man who in thirty years has accumulated millions of dollars, while poor women are working themselves into the grave for a bare existence, and when this man leaves his wealth, wrung from the poor, to universities and colleges where only rich men's sons may be educated, and leaves the poor man to starve, in the meantime, it is plain that there is something radically wrong.

"There are those who may say this is the wildest kind of talk, but 30 years ago Abraham Lincoln foresaw these events. I am from the South and I had 12 brothers who were killed in the war fighting on the side of the South and for slavery, but I declare that Abraham Lincoln was the greatest patriot this country ever saw. (Great applause.) Because I am opposed to slavery I am a populist today. Today we have a slavery worse than any ever known. I am a populist because as a populist I wish to break the chain that encircles 60,000,000 slaves in this land today.

"I am in favor of free silver because it gives twice as much money as we now have. Doubling the volume of money means doubling the wages. The $1 bill is worth 100 cents because of the government which is back of it; because it is a legal tender in the payment of all debts public and private.

"How absured it is to cry out against $600,000,000 going out of the country. The $60,000,000 would not go out if its value did not come in. When the gold is all out of the country the silver will rule, and when the silver rules the gold will come back again and there you are.

"I believe it is the intention of God Almighty that every man shall enjoy the fruits of his labor. When it was said, 'By the sweat of thy brow shalt thou earn thy bread' it was not pronounced as a curse, but as a blessing. The time has come to lay aside partisanship and prejudice. Let us be citizens of the United States and cast our lots together so that the laboring men may be the peer of any man."

Cure for Headache.

As a remedy for all forms of headache Electric Bitters has proved to be the very best. It effects a permanent cure and the most dreaded habitual sick headache yields to its influence. We urge all who are afflicted to procure a bottle, and give this remedy a fair trial. In cases of habitual constipation Electric Bitters cures by giving the needed tone to the bowels, and few cases long resist the use of this medicine. Try it once. Large bottles only fifty cents at Parker & Armstrong's drug store.

Even McKinley Admits It.

Mobile Herald.

Even Gov. McKinley, the great apostle of high tariff and protection, is just and candid enough to say of present conditions in Ohio: "Our industries are all growing and we have a bright outlook for the future." This is more than Democratic free silver papers are willing to admit.

The Discovery Saved His Life.

Mr. G. Cailloute, Druggist, Beaversville, Ill., says: "To Dr. Ring's New Discovery I owe my life. Was taken with La Grippe and tried all the physicians for miles about, but of no avail and was given up and told I could not live. Having Dr. King's New Discovery in my store I sent for a bottle and began its use and from the first dose began to get better, and after using three bottles was up and about again. It is worth its weight in gold. We won't keep store or house without it." Get a free trial at Parker & Armstrong's drug store.

Sound Sense.

Mobile Herald.

There is a great deal of sound sense in the following from the Birmingham News: "When a man tells you that he has not yet felt the good effects of returning prosperity investigate and you will find that he has not put forth sufficient effort to deserve it. In other words, it is his own fault."

John G. Mauger, editor of the Sunbeam, Seligman, Mo., who named Grover Cleveland for the presidency in November, 1882, while he was mayor of Buffalo, N. Y., is enthusiastic in his praise of Chamberlain's Cholic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. He says: 'I have used it for the past five years and consider it the best preparation of the kind in the market. It is as staple as sugar and coffee in this section. It is an article of merit and should be used in every household." For sale by Parker & Armstrong.

Coming Our Way.

Norfolk Virginian.

The Lowell (Mass.) News notes that although comparatively little has been said of the immigration into the South this year, it has been the largest ever known. The movement is not confined to any state, and the older ones, as for instance, are receiving thousands of new settlers.

Irving W. Larimore, physical director of Y. M. C. A., Des Moines, Iowa, says he can conscientiously recommend Chamberlain's PainBalm to athletics, gymnasts, bicyclists, foot ball players, and the profession in general, for bruises, sprains and dislocations; also for soreness and stiffness of the muscles. When applied before the parts become swollen it will effect a cure in one-half the time usually required. For sale by Parker & Armstrong.

Converse Through Their Madgear.

Knoxville Journal.

Mexico, our neighbor nation, has the free coinage of silver, and her common day laborers get 20 cents a day in Mexican money, worth only 10 cents a day in our money. Why don't some of these apostles of free silver emigrate to Mexico, if they want free silver so badly?

A. M. Bailey, a well-known citizen of Eugene, Oregon, says his wife has for years been troubled with chronic diarrhœa and used many remedies with little relief until she tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy, which has cured her sound and well. Give it a trial and you will be surprised at the prompt relief it affords. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Parker & Armstrong.

Chamberlain's Eye and Skin Ointment
Is a certain cure for Chronic Sore Eyes, Granulated Eye Lids, Sore Nipples, Piles, Eczema, Tetter, Salt Rheum and Scald Head, 25 cents per box. For sale by druggists.

TO HORSE OWNERS.

For putting a horse in a fine healthy condition try Dr. Cady's Condition Powders. They tone up the system, aid digestion, cure loss of appetite, relieve constipation, correct kidney disorders and destroy worms, giving new life to an old or over worked horse. 25 cents per package. For sale by druggists.

Sheriff's Sale.

By virtue of two fi fas. issued from the Circuit Court of Shelby county, and to me directed, I will proceed to sell in front of the court house door, in the town of Columbiana, on the 16th day of September, 1895, within the legal hours of sale, to the highest bidder for cash, the following described property, to wit:

The south half of section 35, township 20, range 3 west; the east half of the southeast quarter of section 34, township 20, range 3 west; the northwest quarter of the southwest quarter of section 36, township 20, range 3 west; the north half of the southwest quarter, north half of the south half of southwest quarter, section 1, township 21, range 3 west, containing 560 acres more or less; also, all that portion of the northeast quarter of the northeast quarter of section 2, township 21 range 3 west, bounded as follows: On the north by the southeast quarter of the southeast quarter, section 35, township 20, range 3 west; on the south by a line beginning at the South and North railroad on a line with north end of lime house of T. G. Holt, and running east until it intersects the west line of northwest quarter of northwest quarter of section 1 township 21, range 3 west; on the east by the west line of the northwest quarter of the northwest quarter of section 1, township 21, range 3 west; and on the west by said South and North railroad containing eight acres more or less.

Levied upon as the property of T. R. Wagner to satisfy said fi fas in my hands in favor of Fite Porter & Co. for the use of C. L. O'Neal and Hollins Sons & Co. for the use of C. L. O'Neal.

This 15th day of August 1895.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

THE PLAN.

Each county is organized into a separate organization. Get a policy for thirty years for five dollars per thousand dollars without renewal. You only pay your pro-rata share of the loss of a brother member in your own county. In Kentucky, South Carolina, Georgia and Virginia the average cost has not been more than two dollars per annum in each thousand dollars of insurance.

County Sunday School Convention.

The annual Sunday school convention of Shelby county, will be held at Shelby, Oct. 16th and 17th. It is earnestly hoped that each Sunday school in the county will be represented by the superintendent and three or more delegates. Shelby county is noted for the hospitality of its citizens, and all who attend will be taken care of. Let us by the help of God make this the best Sunday school convention ever held in our county. Program will appear in next week's issue of the county papers.

ISAAC D. MASON,
Chairman.

The following clipping from an Illinois paper will be of interest to many people in our county, as Mr. Charles Mason, deceased, once lived in our county, and has many relatives and friends living in and near Columbiana. "Charles Mason an old settler of this county died at his home in Elk Prairie Saturday night from the result of a paralytic stroke he suffered some days ago. Uncle Charley, as he was universally called, was born in North Carolina, Jan. 2, 1815, and at the age of nine years moved with his parents to Tennessee. From Tennessee they came to Illinois, and about 1842 he entered for a three years course in the college at Lebanon. In 1853 he was married to Miss Sarah Williams. In 1856 he settled in this county in Elk Prairie, where he has since lived, respected and loved by all who knew him. He died August 24th, 1895, in the 81st year of his age and was buried Monday a 4 p. m. in the family cemetery on his farm."

A Correction.

CRESSWELL, STA., ALA., Sept. 9.

ED. CHRONICLE:—Will you allow me space in your paper to correct a false impression attempted to be made in your issue of last week by Postmaster G. W. Wallis, Jr., in regard to the postoffice at this place. It would take up too much of your space to go into all the facts; suffice it to say that the attempt on the part of Mr. Wallis to lug other parties into this postoffice business in order to create sympathy is unmanly and only resorted to, to ease his conscience and deceive the public. Mr. Wallis knows that I alone am responsible for the removal of the office from our store. I had been attending to the office for him for nothing. I declined to do so longer and told him I would do the work for half the receipts. This he refused to give, but proposed to rent a cut-off place in the store for an office and I refused to do this as other sensible merchant would have done, but afterwards proposed to rent him a room in the old store in which the office had been kept since he had been in charge, for one dollar and fifty cents a month. The facts are that the receipts of the office will not justify him in paying house rent and board, and he wanted to move the office to his father's house 1½ miles from the station, the nearest route that can be travelled and half a mile from any public road. He may have obtained permission but by misrepresentation. I am prepared to verify this statement by affidavit and proof. Mr. Wallis will not make affidavit that I refused to rent him a house.

Respectfully,
R. G. JONES.

Tribute to Little Carson Boyer.

Died on the 26th of August, the infant son of Dr. and Mrs. J. B. Boyer, aged 9 months and 17 days.

The hush of death hath visited the home of our friends and nipped the bud of promise from the bosom of love and beauty, and as we dwell upon the funeral knell, we can only feel comforted by the words of a Blessed Savior, who uttered them, for the benefit and inspiration of all doting parents, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." The life of sweet little Carson was short but precious, and as his beaming face still greets our waiting vision, we can only bow in humble submission to the Providence which, tho' we cannot understand, we cherish the faith which ordained it. Oh! that we could fathom the solution of death, as we stand by the casket of a lovely babe, and catch a glimpse of the beautiful face wrapped in eternal sleep. We dwell upon the broken link, and feel the evolution taught by a wise and just Father—the new attributes, "the unrolling of angelic companionships" and we accept all earthly griefs and await the world beyond, to realize what we would know in this life. Fond parents, in the blast that has swept over your broken hearts, and extinguished the very light of your home, think of God's mercy, and the cup that is now handed you from the angelic host of heaven, and exclaim, "Even so Father, for so it seemeth good in Thy sight." You father, mother, and sisters, will never forget little Carson, whose face was a mirror of revelation in beauty, and sweetness, whose voice thrilled your ears with its harmony of purity, and whose very name was the synonym of life and cheerfulness. Deeply you feel the shadow across the floor where he played, but with the changing foliage of the seasons, you'll think of him and his voice will come from a throng of heavenly angels, and bid you be encouraged. View him in his babyhood, his boyhood, and his manhood matured by the hand of God, and ever to do his bidding, with a lease upon a life of eternal joys, bearing a crown of victory, a crown of grace, and a crown of glory. What a privilege to have a loved one in heaven. We sigh at the vacant chair, but that chair invites the soul to God. It is a ministration in disguise, and blends with other things to wean us from all earthly things to yon home in heaven, where the humblest footstool will be a conqueror's throne. A FRIEND.

Harpersville Echoes.

Wedding bells are ringing!

Hon. Sam Henderson of Ronoak, was here last week.

There is a large sorghum crop being made in this community.

Did you see the moon last week? The "Moonlight Party" was well attended.

The first bale of cotton was picked and sold last week by Waits & Bro. to T. J. Martin for 8 cents.

Prof. C. H. Florey will begin his school here on the 23d of this month, and he will teach a free school beginning Nov. 1st.

The sorghum crop which is being made up now is very large while the ribbon cane will be very short, as it was injured by the drought.

There was another drove of beef cattle carried from here to Birmingham, last week. This makes something over three hundred head since last November.

The case between Glaze and Cross was carried to the Harpersville supreme court last Saturday, and as the town clock struck two, his honor, Judge Russell, handed down his decision in favor of Glaze.

Just put your ear to the ground and see if you don't hear better times rolling this way. Good crops and a good price for cotton will do more towards settling the money question with our farmers than all the speech-making that can be done in the next twenty years.

The old bee makes the honey comb,
The young bee makes the honey,
But the man who sold guano to be paid for in Gets all the money. [cotton,

The building boom has struck Harpersville at last and Wall street is in the lead, while one or two new houses have been built down in the southern part of the city. Wonder if we can't get the county commissioners to have a dummy line built from here to Vincent. Harpersville has never called on them for anything yet. According to their last report they paid out a great deal of unnecessary money, and, if it continues thusly, watch my prediction, Shelby county will be bankrupt in less than ten years.

It seems to us that five or six years ago that there was an organization formed in this county known as the "Farmers' Alliance," and that no one but a farmer was allowed to join it, and it was to be non-partisan, nonsectarian and this organization was to bring about more brotherly love between those who joined it. One brother was not allowed to go to law with another brother but everything was to be peace and harmony, but very unfortunately for this organization a few one-horse lawyers, a few mayors, a few editors, one or two colored people and all the preachers without any standing got into this organization, and the consequence is it has been a curse and a terror to this country for a long time, and those people who joined, go to law a great deal more than those who did not. Probably if those lawyers, etc,, had of staid in their own places, the organization would have been a success; for we still maintain that the farmers ought to unite. JAKE.

Wilsonville Warblings.

Horace Hammond came up Saturday to spend Sunday with home folks.

Miss Rosa Wallace came down Thursday and organized quite a nice music class.

Mrs. Simpson, of Memphis, Tenn., left Wednesday after an extended visit to Mrs. G. W. McGowen.

Mrs. Steadman and grand-children, of Montgomery, after a pleasant visit here left Wednesday for Verbena.

Our school is progressing very finely. The house is already full, and we hear of many more who expect to attend.

"NELLIE BLY."

This is Curious.

Dayton Times.

Rhode Island's new state house is to be built of Georgia marble, at a cost of $1,576,000. Yet Georgia sent to Indiana for the marble of which her own state house was built.

Wilsonville Waifs.

Cotton picking is going on.

Road working is in progress.

John Brown has accepted a position at Oxmoor.

Sorgum making is the sweetest thing out, eh, girls?

J. F. Pope returned Friday from a business sojourn in northeast Alabama and other points.

Rev. J. M. McCord propounded the gospel to an attentive congregation at the Baptist church, Sunday morning and at night.

R. Self, of Mississippi, was over last week attending the bedside of his mother, of whom grave thoughts are entertained of her recovery.

Oscar Tinny will leave soon to assume control of the telegraph office for the L. & N. at Fayetteville. May his promotion be rapid until he reaches the top round of the ladder of fame and fortune.

Claude Jackson has arrived from the Birmingham business college, having completed his course instenography and receiving a creditable diploma to verify his efficiency as a first-class business young man.

Court was in session here last Saturday, before Justice Gwin by Hons. Brown and Cobb. The former was attorney for Prof. Pritchard, and the latter for E. O. Dawson's bondsmen. The bondsmen gained the suit.

Among the new pupils at the Institute from afar are Miss Maud Williams of Coatopa, Mr. Minor from near Shelby, and others are billed to matriculate soon. May the people realize what virtue there is in the sentence quoted by a learned man that, "Education only ends with death."

The report is current that Dr. Edwards will inherit a large estate in New York City left by his ancestors years ago. There are eighty heirs who will receive twenty millions ($20,000,000) apiece as their pro rata share. The doctor has identified himself as being a legal heir and is waiting for them to work up same, that is, if they (the lawyers) don't pick a flaw somewhere, thereby throwing the whole thing overboard.

The October Number of the Delineator.

Is called the autumn number, and contains a choice and varied selection of timely articles. It gives an authoritative exposition of Autumn Styles, illustrating a variety of novel, artistic and beautiful garments. Especially complete and valuable is its discussion of Mourning, Mrs. Roger A Pryor's paper on Etiquette of Grief's outward showing being supplemented by an instructive article giving patterns and designs for Mourning Attire. Every mother with the responsibilities of a household should study what is said about Fitting Out a Family, the season's costume needs of herself and her little ones being fully treated. The progress of Co-education in Great Britian is further explained by Amy Rayson. Bookbinding as an occupation for women is entertainingly described by Evelyn Hunter Nordhoff. Lucia M. Robbins describes a new and amusing form of Entertainment. The reopening of the Schools is remembered in an account of things suitable for the Children's Luncheon Basket, while A. B. Longstreet contributes a practical exposition of How to Carve. The return of cooler weather makes timely the admirably illustrated article on Draperies. The papers on the Kindergarten by Sara Miller Kirby, on Floral Work for October by A. M. Stuart and the designs for Burnt Work by Harriet Keith Fobes fully sustain the interest felt in these topics. Around the Tea Table has its usual admirable variety, and the Newest Books are sympathetically reviewed. Further contributions are given in Knitting, Netting, Tatting, etc.

Miss Brown of Dalton.

By the simple Wine of Cardui Treatment of Female Diseases, thousands of afflicted women are restored to health every year. It corrects the menstrual irregularities, from which nearly all women suffer, and is being universally used for that purpose now. Ask your druggist for McElree's Wine of Cardui. Speaking of this class of women diseases, Miss Laura P. Brown, of Dalton, Ga., says: "I have been suffering from excessive menses for two years, constantly getting worse, and I feel that McElree's Wine of Cardui has saved my life. I looked forward to each month and thought I could not endure such misery another time. I can't express my gratitude for the wonderful relief."

"WHAT is wisdom?" asked a teacher of a class of small girls. A bright-eyed little creature arose and answered: "Information of the brain."

In This Work-a-Day World

Brains and nervous systems often give way under the pressure and anxieties of business. Paresis, wasting of the nervous tissues, a sudden and unforeward collapse of the mental and physical faculties are daily occurrences, as the columns of the daily press show. Fortify the system when exhausted against such untoward events with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, that most helpful medicine of the weak, worn out and infirm. Use it in rheumatism, dyspepsia, constipation and malaria.

Tobacco Tattered and Torn.

Every day we meet the man with shabby clothes, sallow skin and shambling footsteps, holding out a tobacco-palsied hand for the charity quarter. Tobacco destroys manhood and the happiness of perfect vitality. No-To-Bac is guaranteed to cure just such cases, and it's charity to make them try. Sold under guarantee to cure by Druggists everywhere. Book free. Address Sterling Remedy Co., New York City or Chicago.

A Call to Preach That Came "Pon Tremendius Suddent"—Deakon Joiner and Elder Newton—A Lawyer Who Gets There Somehow or Other—Jule Nabors Raises Hay—Familiar Quotations.

(Copyright, 1895.)

Durin the past week the most tremendius big excitement you ever heard tell of perhaps has been goin on around in the Rocky Creek regions. Old man Nat Rugely has took and went to preachin. You maybe mought not see anything particlar strange and pecurious about that, but the great wonment amongst the people is owin to the fact that old man Nat was born and bred and brung up as a shoutin Methodist, and he is now preachin forth the word accordin to the doctrines of the Seventh Day Adventurers.

"Too Tremendius Suddent."

Now it may be that old man Nat and his new-fangled religion will come out all right in the washin, you understand, but I have some serious doubts about it. He is now already on the shady side of sixty, and he never got the call to preach till Wednesday mornin of last week. The Seventh Day people held a big distracted meeting somewheres over in the hill country, and old man Nat he was there and tarried round about as long as there was a pea in the dish. The meetin broke up on Tuesday evenin and about daylight the next mornin he got the call to go and preach. It looks to me like the call was ruther late in comin, and most too tremendius suddent when it did come.

"The chickens had jest put in to crowin and day was breakin acrost the eastern horizontal when I heard the call, Rufe," says old man Nat in tellin me the news. "Right at first I didn't know for certain but what I mought be dreamin, but presently oncst more I heard somethin sayin with a loud voice, 'Git up from there, Nathaniel Rugely, and go to preachin!' Naturally of course I then got up, and when I riz I riz a preachin. Everybody on the place was sleep at that time but me, but still I riz, Rufe, and I riz a preachin. I preached to myself till I could git my clothes on, and then I went out to the lot and preached a few stanzas to the mules. By that time the niggers had got woke up and I lit in, I did, and preached to them till breakfast. After breakfast I took my old Bible and put my foot in the middle of the big road and pitched out and went to preachin amongst the high ways and the by ways. From that time on I have responded back to the call with the best of my feeble abilities, and I haven't done a mortal thing, Rufe, but preach and eat and sleep, and then sleep and eat and preach some more."

If old man Nat aint makin no mistake in regards to the call, I reckon he is right in preachin so reglar and constant. He has lost a heap of time and got mighty bad behind with his work, you understand, and he will have to put in the licks fast and furious in orderment to come out even. Old man Nat is now the onlyest livin member of the Rugely family, and if he can manage so as to pay his way at preachin there aint nothin particlar to keep him at home. Here of late he has been holdin forth promiscus anywheres and everywheres around in the settlement, and from what I can pick up amongst the folks he never has went back home since he got the call and "riz a preachin."

Andy Lucas maintains that old man Nat is jest simply barkin on the wrong trail. He don't doubt but what the old man has got a call for somethin, but he thinks it was a call to the poorhouse or the crazy siloam instid of the pulpit. But as for me, I don't give myself no worriment in the case one way or the other. Supposin even if he don't do no good in his new line, he is now too old and feeble to do any harm exceptin to himself. If I am right the Seventh Day Adventurers can't be right, and likowise also if they are right I aint right, but for all I know the whole entire shootin match of us mought be wrong. Plain, reglar, genuine, old-time religion is the same thing every day and everywheres, and there aint no one set of people in this wide world that are good and pure enough to have it all.

The Deacon and the Elder.

You mought light out this mornin on a good saddle horse and it would take you three days of hard ridin to find two men that think they have got as much religion as Deacon Joiner and Elder Newton make out like they have got. To hear the Deacon talk and the Elder shout you would think they ought to take wings right now and fly away from this vain and fleeting world.

And yet the Deacon and the Elder have been mad and at outs for years and years. It takes their level blamdest to speak when they meet in the big road. No longer than last Sunday somebody called on Deacon Joiner to lead in prayer, and whereas the Elder left the church in a high huff and poked off down to the spring. And the last time they had meetin over to Bark Log. Deacon Joiner got his back up and wouldn't go in the house, because Elder Newton was runnin of the prayer meetin. As to the Deacon, he aint even willin for a Methodist preacher to come around oncst a year and preach in the Baptist church. The Deacon is a Baptist; he is—a reglar natural-born, blame fool Baptist—and Elder Newton is down with the same disease, only, if anything, a little more serious case of it. I reckon they have both got a little smatterin of religion—I hope they have at any rates—but they haven't got any sense to speak of, and sense is the mainest thing in all the relations of life. A man can have fits without any sense, you understand, but it takes sense to have religion of the right sort, or anything else that is worth the havin.

Jule Nabors has branched off into the hay business this year, and he is raisin stacks and stacks of it. He planted corn and cotton in the spring of the year, but when the fervid hot weather come on he let loose, he did, and turned the whole business into a tremendius big hay farm.

You must recollect that Jule Nabors is the most outdoinest man for foolin with figgers in all this skirt of the woods. And from what has come to pass this year the general stage of the weather has got somethin to do with the way the figgers run for Jule.

"It was way along there in June, the crops was comin monstrous slow and the grass was growin to beat six bits," says Jule in givin out his experience with figgers. "I went down on the creek one day to plow out a little cut of swamp corn, which the grass was then a whole lot higher and greener than the corn. I plowed three or four rounds and by that time, you understand, the sun bit was comin down at the rates of a hundred miles a minnit and as hot as the hinges on the lower gates. Presently I drove out in the shade of a big beech tree, unhooked the traces and went into a little figuration whilst I was restin. I soon figgered it out that there was more money in hay than I could make outen 5-cent cotton and corn at 40 cents a bushel. Naturally, of course, I took out and quit right then and there, turned my mule in the paster, and by granny, Rufe, I haven't stuck a plow nor bent a hoe from that day to this. But you can see with your own eyes that I have got the most bulliest crop of hay that was ever growed in the Rocky Creek settlement. If the weather want so scandlous hot I would be cuttin of it right now, but owin to the general circumference of the surroundins I will have to wait for it to break up and cool off."

No longer than yesterday mornin I saw Jule Nabors ridin along by my house with his stake-and-ridered shirt on, polin off down in the Flat woods to take in another big meetin. In the maintime his hay crop is ripe and ready and waitin for the harvest. The September gale is more than probable to come along next, and that will be the last of Jule Nabors and his fine hay crop.

But Jule won't give a continential for that. If you will only give him a lead pencil and a piece of paper it won't take him more than fifteen minutes at the longest to figger it out his way, and then I reckon he could show you that it pays better to take in big meetins and go squirrel huntin than to pull hay whilst the weather is so scandlous hot.

Got His Man Out.

The gonebyest best lawyer that has ever took a case in these parts is a man by the name of Web Dargin. No doubts but what you could go to the city and find plenty of lawyers with more sense and book learnin than him, but when it comes to pullin his man out of a bad scrape whether or no, Squire Daniel Webster Dargin is the stuff.

They worked up a big law case in the Justice Court over at the Cross Roads one day last week, which Tobe Fuller stood charged with stealin of a hog. Web Dargin was there to take up Tobe's side of the fight, and he read law books and speechified for three hours on a stretch. But it was a dead open and shut case, and all the law books and speeches in creation couldn't clear Tobe. Whereas he was bound over and locked up in the callaboose.

But that very night—way along in the still and solemn hours, as it were—Web Dargin took a crow-bar and went down to the callaboose, you understand, and made a slip-gap at one corner and got Tobe out. When the prisoner made his escape he hit the grit and hit it a movin, and the next day Web he went over to Tobe's house with papers of compellment and levelled on three acres of corn and one spotted steer for his fees and costs in the case.

Web Dargin is nothing but a piney-woods runt, without any book learnin to speak of, you understand, but if he can hold out at his present lick he will soon be famous as a lawyer. Sense and book learnin are good enough and all right for common, but with a jam-up, all-around lawyer in this present day and generation the mainest thing is nerve.

J. STONE RECOVERING.

From the Sun, Gainesville, Fla.

The many friends of J. Stone, of Palmer, Fla., will be pleased to know that that estimable old gentleman, who has for years been a great sufferer from rheumatism, is recovering. At one time it was impossible for Mr. Stone to use his right arm. The gentleman in question was in the city yesterday, and when asked by a Sun man to give some reason for his recovery, he said:

"Well, sir, you will not believe me perhaps, but my recovery is due to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. I think them an excellent remedy and must accept this opportunity, if you will permit me, to advise all who suffer as I have done to try them. I'll guarantee relief. Two years ago I was suffering from rheumatism; you know what condition I was in. I read an article in a Christian paper of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and I took seven boxes of them. The result was more than any human being could have expected. I grew better fast.

"Someone then advised other medicine, saying that I had taken enough of the pills. I heeded the advice and the result was I grew worse again and lost the use of my right arm. I could not move it a particle. Eight weeks ago I commenced to take the pills again and now I can use my arm without any pain whatever. They are a wonderful pill and I drove several miles to-day to purchase another box of them.

"I wish you would publish the following affidavit I swore to. I ask this of you as a means of displaying my gratitude as well as to endeavor to save some other poor sufferer."

The Sun man consented and the following is the affidavit which the happy man swore to yesterday before J. C. B. Koonce:

The above was sworn to and subscribed before me this 21st day of May, A. D. 1895.
[SEAL.] J. C. B. KOONCE, Notary Public.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effect of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions, all forms of weakness either in male and female. Pink Pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent post paid on receipt of price, (50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50—they are never sold in bulk or by the 100) by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

VARIETY IN DIET.

Effect of Different Foods Upon the General Health.

A number of facts conspire to throw a somewhat new light on questions of dietics, or at least to show that these problems are more complex than they have been by some supposed. It has been usual to speak of a "mixed diet," meaning thereby one composed in part of animal and in part of vegetable food, one containing proteins, fat and carbohydrates, approximately in such proportions as they are required by the organism; but when we see the effect upon disease produced by very small quantities of certain selected portions of animals commonly used as food, such as thyroid gland, suprarenal gland and bone marrow, the suspicion arises that these are but the more pronounced expressions of a widespread principle, and that such marked differences in therapeutic effect between certain organs may be associated with similar differences in nutritional value between the various portions and kinds of meat which we consume. We may surmise, too, that the modes of preparation may have a considerable influence, and that while good cooking may be, as it should be, a preparation for and an aid to digestion, certain processes in cooking may do much more harm to the nutritional value of our food than is explained by the mere change in its physical properties, the hardness, toughness, etc., which they produce. The destruction of the antiscorbutic properties of milk by condensing, overcooking and sterilization is a case in point, and we commend to the British farmer the interesting question whether and how far the prolonged freezing of meat may interfere with its finer nutritional value. Healthy men, who have a great reserve of digestive power, can derive nutriment from almost any food, but for people of feebler frame a mixed diet must mean one in which variety of substance exists of whose nature and of whose differences we as yet know nothing. The healthy man, by taking plenty, finds among it what he wants, but until we know much more than we do of the value of different foods and different modes of cooking we must at least afford variety to our invalids and protect them from a monotony in diet which may perchance be debarring them from the one thing needful for their nutrition.—British Medical Journal.

TO HIT THE BULL'S-EYE.

It Is Said to Be a Matter of Aim and Barrel.

"It's all in the barrel and 'holding on,'" was a famous sharpshooter's summary of the art of bull's-eye hitting.

But art in aim and dilletantism in the minutiæ of the implements used are widely apart. Relics of the days of Crockett and Boone show that sharpshooting to-day is as it was when the arquebusiers of the primeval forest sailed forth for deer meat with terrible hunting engines, some needing the crotch of a sapling for aim-taking, but the barrel was there, and so was the "holding on," and men to-day do not make truer shot at a black disk than did the backwoodsmen when rifles weighed from twenty to thirty pounds, and only "a shot behind the shoulder" was considered sportsmanlike.

The barrel, too, is the thing at the Thanksgiving shooting contests to-day. Given a rifled steel tube, bored true, and the gift of "holding on," and the stock, lock and other accessories are secondary in importance, and the farmer's son with his grandfather's "shooting-iron" is, if he can draw a bead, as likely to take a turkey home as the rival equipped with the most modern arm.

It is only a question of aim and barrel, after all. These principles will obtain a century hence, when, perhaps, the ammunition, stock fashions and lock mechanisms of to-day will be regarded as antiques. Even to-day, the old-fashioned muzzle-loader holds its own against the newest device in breech-loading rifles, just as the ramrod "scatter gum" in the brush, be it of pot metal or stub twist, will "wipe the eye" of the competing one thousand-dollar choke-bore if the sportsman with the less costly weapon "holds on."—N. Y. Times.

DEEP WATER-WAYS.

For many years the work of creating deep channels between Lakes Superior, Huron, Michigan and Erie has been going on. At length the work is done, or under contract to complete, so that from all the lakes twenty-foot channels may practically be said to exist. With the completion of the inter-lake channels, all the immense and rapidly increasing navigation converges to the common eastern terminus at Buffalo. The existence of the great lakes has made possible the so-called northwest, since it has permitted the products of the northwest to reach markets at a much lower figure than has been possible by all rail. From Duluth to Buffalo, eleven hundred miles, it costs about one third as much as it costs to transship and transport across New York state. Increasing competition from those countries of the world possessing cheap land and cheap labor makes it imperative on the producers, the farmers of the northwest, to search out, if possible, some way of getting their crops to the eastern markets at a lower rate than they have been getting. To every producer in the northwest it will be of interest to know that on September 24-26 there will be a convention held in the city of Cleveland for the purpose of developing in a large way the facts relating to this deep water navigation from Buffalo eastward. With a view to decreasing the cost, it is necessary to use the existing lakes and river, with supplementary canals, and to reduce the cost from Buffalo east in some such ratio as has been secured in the upper lakes. An eminent engineer, C. N. Dutton, who has given the matter a great deal of study, has prepared the following statements and figures, which I beg to present, without comment, simply asking that they be read and thought on:

"Sixteen great states, namely, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Kentucky, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Montana, Wyoming and Colorado, must ship their surplus agricultural products from the great lakes to the seaboard. Deep-water navigation would effect an immediate reduction in freight costs, and consequent increase in crop values of an average of five cents a bushel on grain and potatoes, four dollars a ton on hay and five dollars and upwards a ton on straw.

"In the sixteen states most benefited, the direct money gain, computed on the crop reports of 1895, will be as follows:

YEARLY GAIN.

CROP.	Yield, bu.	Value.	Av. per bu.	Gain at 5c per bu.
Corn	720,000,000	$259,363,000	$0.41	$36,000,000
Wheat	335,000,000	157,093,121	.47	16,750,000
Oats	500,000,000	153,376,798	.30	25,450,000
Rye	15,000,000	6,634,000	.44	750,000
Barley	40,000,000	17,143,000	.43	2,000,000
Potatoes	81,000,000	46,624,376	.55	4,.00,000
	Tons.		Ton.
*Hay	29,400,000	215,550,360	7.34	117,600,000
†Straw	45,000,000	....	....	2,5,000,000

Annual gain on agricult'l products $427,750,000

DOMESTIC ANIMALS (MEAT).

	Number.	Value.	p. ct.	Gain
Milch cows	8,455,817	$109,305,284	12	$22,836,634
Meat cattle	17,686,044	304,790,652	18	54,853,317
Sheep	10,265,947	44,588,119	24	10,005,146
Hogs	26,018,275	189,071,515	14	26,469,911

Gain in value of meat animals $114,174 998

"The sixteen states above referred to have a total area in improved farm lands of 199,326,876 acres. The increased value of the productions of these lands will be $165,380,000 annually, an increased annual earning of $2.33⅓ per acre. If the market value of land depends upon its earning power, and the ratio of increase of value be taken at four times the increase in yearly earnings, then the improved farm lands of these sixteen states will increase in value $9.33⅓ per acre, or $1,865,000,000 as the immediate result of the opening of the Maritime canal of North America.

"Vast as this sum appears, it is a partial statement of the gain to the west resulting from deep draft navigation to the seaboard, because it is based on the short crops of 1894, and does not take account of truck, fruits, small grains, dairy products, poultry, eggs, horses and mules, and wood, timber, bark, etc.; neither does it take account of mine products and manufactures, or the increase in values in city and manufacturing property."

This movement has received the indorsement of most of the United States senators from the west.

Last winter the legislature of Minnesota memorialized congress in support of this measure. Senator McCleary, of Mankato, is gathering data from Canada and the United States with a view to urging it in the northwest and in congress.

The east has no transportation question. Her manufactured goods, worth perhaps thousands of dollars a ton, are not perceptibly affected by a slight difference in freight. The farming districts of the west are vitally affected when all profit in their crops is eaten up by the carrying charges. As a national question it should be borne in mind that the manufacturing east receives her raw products largely from the west; also her cheap food supplies. In turn she finds her best market in the farming states of the west. It should also be remembered that the enormous cash balance annually required abroad to settle the foreign exchange must be provided in the main by the western and southwestern farms or by gold. The pressure is urgent. The navigation cannot be provided soon enough if commenced now. The convention at Cleveland will be marked by the presence of many specialists with specially prepared papers covering a wide range of public matters. As chairman of the executive committee, I respectfully request correspondence with commercial bodies, public officials and the papers, if in any way it may lead to fuller information and a quickened interest. In particular, I desire assurances of support which can be shown at the proper time as evidence of popular sentiment.
Address, A. L. CROCKER,
Minneapolis Board of Trade.

AMERICAN WARS.

THE Aroostook war with the Indians of this name lasted during 1838 and 1839; 1,500 men were required to restore order.

THE second Seminole Indian war began in 1856, and lasted until the close of 1858. The total number of men enlisted for this war was 3,687.

THE Creek war began May 5, 1836, and ended September 30, 1837. The total number of men who served while the trouble lasted was 13,418.

THE northwestern Indian wars lasted from September 19, 1790, to August 3, 1795, and involved the enlistment and actual service of 8,983 men.

THE grandest review ever seen in this country was that at Washington at the close of the civil war. Over 100,000 men were in line.

THE Seminole Indian war began November 20, 1817, and ended October 21, 1818. The total number of regulars and militia serving in this war was 7,911.

THE war with the bey of Tripoli began June 10, 1801, and ended June 4, 1805. The number of men engaged in the naval force against Tripoli was 3,330.

MISSOURI in 1890 had 1,676,706 acres sowed in oats, which produced 38,820,149 bushels.

THE farms of Kansas produced in the census year an estimated value of $95,070,080.

THE increase in fruit farms in this country has been mainly in the west and southwest.

NEVADA has the smallest number of farms of any state—1,277, with 1,061,416 acres.

GREAT BOOK FREE.

When Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., published the first edition of his work, The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser, he announced that after 680,000 copies had been sold at the regular price, $1.50 per copy, the profit on which would repay him for the great amount of labor and money expended in producing it, he would distribute the next half million free. As this number of copies has already been sold, he is now distributing, absolutely free, 500,000 copies of this most complete, interesting and valuable common sense medical work ever published—the recipient only being required to mail to him, at the above address, this little COUPON with twenty-one (21) cents in one-cent stamps to pay for postage and packing only, and the book will be sent by mail. It is a veritable medical library, complete in one volume. It contains over 1000 pages and more than 300 illustrations. The Free Edition is precisely the same as those sold at $1.50 except only that the books are bound in strong manilla paper covers instead of cloth. Send NOW before all are given away. PROF. WAYLAND, of Yale law school, has estimated the number of criminals at large in this country at 3,000,000.

THERE is a general complaint from nearly all the large cities that the public school facilities are not equal to the demands.

BOB INGERSOLL says that we have a land where 500,000,000 men and women and children can be supported and educated without any trouble.

SAN FRANCISCO is to have a building 310 feet high on a lot 70 by 75 feet, and New York a steel building 15 stories high on a site only 50 by 70 feet.

AN experimental train on the New York Central railroad recently made the distance from New York to Buffalo, 436½ miles, at an average rate of 64 1-3 miles an hour, thus beating the English record of 63½ miles an hour.

MRS. FRANCIS HODGSON-BURNETT, author of "Little Lord Fauntleroy," who has drawn so many pretty portraits of the happy side of domestic life, has at last to admit that marriage is a failure in her own case, and hereafter she will live apart from her husband.

MR. GLADSTONE, in a recent letter on the financial question, said that he regarded all bimetallic schemes as passing humors, doomed to nullity and disappointment, and that if London stood firm for the gold standard no power on earth could change it.

ONE of the problems with which Pennsylvania has to deal is the heavy immigration of Huns and Poles to its mining region. The county of Luzerne alone has 12,500 people of these nativities, and they are a dangerous element on account of their disregard of law.

DR. EDWARD B. BURNETT, of New York, was recently reported as dying from cancer, contracted while treating a female patient. The case was the first of the kind in the history of medicine, and seemed to prove conclusively that cancer was contagious.

THE civil service commission has fixed September 30 as the date for the next examination of applicants in Washington for the trades of the government printing office. The two examinations already held probably will not supply the demand for compositors.

IT was said there were in the United States 300 factories, large and small, that manufacture bicycles. The total output this year was estimated at 500,000, which, with the et ceteras which bicyclists usually provide themselves with, represented an expenditure of $50,000,000 by purchasers.

A NEW YORK paper estimated that each of the recent yacht races was witnessed by at least 80,000 persons at an expense of $4 apiece, and that not less than $10,000 more was expended by the owners of the forty private yachts in attendance, thus making an aggregate of $330,000 as the cost of a day's amusement.

WHEN the public schools of New York city were opened recently 221,000 pupils appeared in the 140 schoolhouses, where they were met by 4,000 teachers. There are only thirteen cities in the country, exclusive of New York, that have each a larger population than the number of the public school children of the metropolis.

A SPEAKER at the recent meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science said that by improved mechanical appliances the American farmer raised as much grain as three in England, four in France, five in Germany and six in Austria. In the United States one man could feed 250, whereas in Europe one man fed only thirty persons.

INSIDE of thirty days some of the new currency designs over which the bureau of engraving and printing has been working for several months will be ready for issue. The denominations will be the $1, $2, $5 and $10 bills. The work has been tedious, but it is said at the bureau that the result will more than justify all the care that has been taken to make the series a noteworthy one.

THE entire family of Charles S. Krueger, father, mother and five children, ranging in age from 6 to 20 years, now lie buried in Greenwood cemetery at Michigan City, Ind. The family was recently poisoned by eating diseased pork, and despite the best medical skill, one followed the other to the grave, after suffering untold agony. The physicians pronounced their disease trichinosis, their bodies being literally alive with parasites. Death was a process of slow torture.

PROF. RUNNEBAUM, of Berlin, sent by the German government to examine the timber resources of our Pacific coast, expressed amazement at the waste he witnessed there. He said the end of American forests was near at hand unless they were protected by law against the reckless cutting and conflagrations. Americans were sweeping away not only the mature trees, but the saplings which were the rightful heritage of future generations. "If nothing is done by your government you may live to see lumber shipped from Germany to Puget sound," he said.

THE Chicago Record says: Notwithstanding the fact that many people trace the Missouri river in name from the Yellowstone country to the gulf of Mexico, United States engineers are asserting the possibility of that stream becoming only a dry ravine. Government gauges at Sioux City, Ia., show that the registered measurements for twenty years indicate a gradual decrease, until in 1895 the volume of water passing that point is 20 per cent. less than in 1873. Engineers account for the decrease in upper Missouri currents by saying that the artesian basin of South Dakota is draining it.

PERSONAL AND POLITICAL.

HON. CHARLES B. STUART, chief justice of the Indian territory court of appeals and judge of the central district of the United States court for the Indian territory, sent in his resignation on the 13th. Hon. Yancey Lewis, of Ardmore, I. T., has been unanimously indorsed by the entire bar and leading citizens of that place for the position.

INFORMATION has leaked out at Washington that the recent secret work and activity in the United States navy department was because of the possibility of hostilities between Spain and the United States in the near future, the president and the secretary of the navy being cognizant of the necessity of preparing for active intervention in the affairs of Cuba.

EX-QUEEN LILIUOKALANI has been pardoned and liberated at Honolulu.

THE international agricultural congress, which has been in session at Brussels since September 8, under the patronage of the Belgian government, passed a resolution in favor of an international bimetallic agreement.

LORD DUNRAVEN has offered a weekly pension of 30 shillings for life to each man of the crew of the Valkyrie should they succeed in winning the America's cup. The offer was unprecedented in generosity, as there were twenty-six men and their ages only averaged 30 years.

THE first constitutional convention in South Carolina for twenty-seven years was called to order at Columbia on the 10th. The admitted object of the convention was to insure white supremacy. A plan was on foot to embody in the constitution as one of the qualifications for holding office in South Carolina that the person must be white.

A RECENT dispatch to the New York Sun from Philadelphia said that the recent victory of Senator Quay was likely to result in the defeat of James Donald Cameron for another term as United States senator. It seemed absolutely certain that Senator Quay would oppose the re-election of Cameron to the senate.

FRIENDS of Secretary Carlisle were said to be urging him to take part in the campaign in Kentucky and assist in securing Senator Blackburn's defeat. Prominent democrats believe that the influence of another series of speeches upon the financial question in Kentucky would make Mr. Carlisle's re-election as senator a certainty. It was believed that a return to his old seat in the senate would be more grateful to Mr. Carlisle than a continuance at the head of the treasury department.

IT was said at Washington that the republican leaders in congress may find it in their power to compel another issue of bonds next winter, if they cared to assume the responsibility, for it seemed probable that a bond issue would be required when the season of gold exports sets in, unless the currency laws were changed in the meantime so as to provide for the retirement of the greenbacks or for some control over their constant reissue by the secretary of the treasury.

MRS. LILY LANGTRY, the celebrated beauty, has begun suit for divorce from her husband, Edward Langtry, on the grounds of desertion and neglect. The papers were drawn up in London and will be sent to America, as Mrs. Langtry is a citizen of California and brings suit as an American.

CLEARING house returns for the principal cities in the United States for the week ended September 13 showed an average increase as compared with the corresponding week last year of 17.0; in New York the increase was 28.0; outside New York the increase was 4.7.

AT Paris, Tex., on the 13th Charles H. Key was hanged for the murder of Smith McLothlin in the Chickasaw nation in July, 1894.

FROG DAVIS, the murderer of Sheriff Musgrove, of Cowee district, was hanged in the jail at Tahlequah, I. T., on the 13th. On the gallows he made a confession.

AT the G. A. R. encampment at Louisville, Ky., on the 12th after some presentations Commander-in-Chief Lawler delivered his annual address and spoke on the condition of the order. In the afternoon Col. Ivan N. Walker, of Indianapolis, Ind., was elected commander-in-chief; Gen. E. H. Hobson, of Kentucky, senior vice commander, and C. E. Cosgrove, of Washington, junior vice commander. The encampment of 1896 will be held at St. Paul.

THE two yachts, Defender and Valkyrie, started in for the third race on the 12th and a few minutes later the British yacht dropped out of the contest and the American yacht went over the course alone. Commodore Arthur Glennie, Lord Dunraven's representative announced that the reason the Valkyrie did not sail was because of non-compliance with the contents of Lord Dunraven's letter to the America's cup committee relating to the crowding of excursion steamers. "Had we been assured that the course would have been kept clear for even five minutes before the starting time we would have sailed." The Defender winning the three races, the America's cup stays in America.

AN attempted train robbery occurred at Curtis, Ok. At that point four masked men crawled on to the Southern Kansas track and covering the section hands with revolvers compelled them to pile ties on the track and draw the spikes from several rails. The engineer of the westbound passenger train seeing the situation stopped his engine and two of the bandits covered him with revolvers, while the other two went into the express car and compelled the messenger to open the safe. The railroad officers assert that the robbers got nothing. The train then went to Woodward, where an alarm was given and a posse organized to pursue the robbers.

THE G. A. R. encampment at Louisville, Ky., closed on the 13th after passing resolutions declaring that all veterans should be favored by civil service boards without regard to age; favoring military drill in public schools; asking congress to defray the expenses of Memorial day services; deprecating niggardliness in pensions; favoring the erection of a monument at Washington to commemorate the loyal women who acted as nurses, and recommending to congress the equalization of widows' pensions so that all should receive at least $12 a month.

THE failures for the week ended the 13th (Dun's report) were 187 in the United States, against 219 last year, and 34 in Canada, against 44 last year.

THE question having been raised whether the New York Baseball club, which now holds the Temple cup, should defend it against this season's champions, President Young submitted the matter to the league clubs for their decision and it was decided that the Temple cup series should be played by the clubs holding first and second place at the close of the season.

THE W. R. C., the Ladies' Circle of the G. A. R., the Daughters of Veterans and the National Association of Ex-Prisoners elected their national officers at Louisville, Ky., on the 13th for the ensuing year.

THE secretary of the treasury sent a telegram to the collector of customs at Ogdensburg, N. Y., directing him not to admit any of the 200 Chinese recently landed at Vancouver en route to the Atlanta exposition. There was a belief that this was an attempt to defraud the government and secure the admission of a large number of Chinese who were not actors.

SECRETARY OLNEY has written a letter demanding that Spain protect American missionaries in the Caroline islands.

IN consequence of complaints received by the post office department at Washington orders have been issued forbidding postmasters to go within the delivery of other offices for the purpose of soliciting the execution of pension vouchers and thereby increasing the fees of their offices. A post master must execute vouchers only for those within the delivery of his office.

DURING the parade of the state firemen's convention at Hartford, Conn., the horse ridden by John C. Wasserbach, one of Gen. Harbison's aides, backed into the great steam propeller Jumbo, a traction engine used to draw heavy loads on streets. Both the man and horse were crushed under its wheels and killed.

WHEN the three horses, Robert J., John R. Gentry and Joe Patchen, scored for the opening heat, it was estimated that nearly 10,000 people were on the ground at Louisville, Ky., on the 12th. Robert J., the great son of Hartford, came off victorious, but for the fact that Joe Patchen went into the air when within 40 yards of the wire, in the fourth heat, there might possibly have been another ending. The fourth heat, which was paced in 2:04½, established a new record, beating the fastest fourth heat ever paced or trotted by any horse.

A SLIGHT shock of earthquake was felt on the 12th at Grenada and Valez Malaga, in Spain. The disturbance lasted four seconds. No damage.

THERE were 40,000 veterans in line at the grand parade of the G. A. R. encampment at Louisville, Ky., on the 11th and fully 300,000 people witnessed the march. The veterans showed the weight of years and many became exhausted and had to retire from the ranks. Old Ned, the war horse, who took part in the parade, was so feeble, that he had to ride on a float.

A RUMOR was current in Berlin that the anarchists of all countries would hold a meeting in London in October to come to an agreement regarding the common agitation for a fund to support the needs of the members.

SEVERE shocks of earthquake were felt on the island of Eubœa, in the Ægean sea, on the 11th, but no damage was done.

WHILE 100,000 people were watching the fireworks along the river front at Louisville, Ky., on the 12th, a portion of the grand stand, on which was seated at least 10,000 people, gave way and many were more or less severely injured. No fatalities were reported.

MRS. RHEA, living on a farm near Osceola, Ark., was recently murdered by two negroes, Will Caldwell and an old man, who were working for her, and whose object was robbery. Caldwell was arrested. He confessed, and was taken from the officers and hanged to a tree. The old man was also caught and has probably been lynched.

A PASSENGER train on the Rio Grande Western was held up recently at the little station of Crevasse, Col. The robbers thought they had detached the express car from the train and found that it was only the baggage car. When they discovered their error they mounted horses that were in waiting and skipped for the mountains. So far as known the robbers secured nothing of value.

AT Denver, Col., William Rose, an undertaker's assistant, shot and mortally wounded Mrs. Philip Kuhn on the 10th and afterwards shot himself, inflicting a mortal wound. Jealousy was the cause.

THE regatta committee of the New York Yacht club sustained the protest entered by the Defender of the Valkyrie fouling her in the race on the 10th and gave the race to the Defender.

THE schooner Meteor, of Mobile, Ala., loaded with lumber, was wrecked in the gulf of Mexico recently and was a total loss. Those on board were saved.

THE event of the day at the G. A. R. encampment at Louisville, Ky., on the 10th was the parade of the navy veterans, fully 10,000 men being in line. Mexican war veterans brought up the rear in carriages. The W. R. C. held a reception at night.

COMMANDER WALKER.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Sept. 14.—A brief sketch of the life and services of Commander-in-Chief Ivan N. Walker is given as follows:

Col. Walker, the new commander-in-chief, is a native of Indiana. At the breaking out of the war, at the age of 21, he was holding an important office which he resigned to raise a company for the Seventy-third Indiana Volunteers, of which he was chosen captain. He was with his regiment in all its engagements; Richmond, Perryville and Stone's river, and for gallant conduct on that hotly contested field won the rank of major, and was soon after promoted to lieutenant-colonel, in March, 1863, and, on the death of the colonel, in May following, became commander of the regiment. For more than a year he endured all the horrors of Libby prison, having been captured on a daring raid into the enemy's country. He escaped through the historic tunnel in February, 1864. Returning to his regiment he rendered most important service in the Army of the Cumberland, protecting the line of supplies between Stevenson and Decatur, on the Memphis & Charleston railroad and Tennessee river, during the advance on Atlanta. At the battle of Nashville he rendered valuable service as aide, and received the personal thanks of Gen. Thomas. He became a member of the G. A. R. in 1867, and on the reorganization of the department of Indiana, served as commander of George H. Thomas post. He was appointed A. A. G. of the department in 1888, and reappointed three times. In 1891, declining a fifth term, he was chosen department commander. Last year he was elected senior vice commander-in-chief of the national order.

WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW.

Not Much Confidence Placed in the Government's Reduced Estimate of Corn.

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—R. G. Dunn & Co., in their weekly review of trade, say: A slight setback, which may mean much or nothing, according to the final outcome of the crops, is not unexpected at this season. If the government crop reports were correct, the situation would not be encouraging. But not much confidence is placed in the reduced estimate of corn, none at all in the estimate of wheat and even the most enthusiastic bulls do not think it worth while to quote the government report as to cotton.

The fact is that we are beginning to market not far from 2,200,000,000 bushels of corn, though about 500,000,000 bushels will be moved from the counties where it is grown; about 450,000,000 bushels of wheat, of which the farmers are very unwisely holding back a large proportion, and about 7,200,000 bales of cotton.

The wheat crop is evidently larger than the department has estimated, though nobody knows how much larger, and is coming forward with more encouraging rapidity, no less than 5,773,173 bushels having been received at western ports against 5,446,001 bushels for the same week last year from a much larger crop. The farmers have undoubtedly been keeping back wheat under an agreement among themselves. It does not seem a profitable operation for them. Exports from Atlantic ports for the two weeks of September have been 2,417,872 bushels (flour included) against 5,310,926 bushels last year. The price declined sharply, about 2 cents per bushel, with little indication of recovery. The price of corn has also yielded with a strong prospect of the largest crop ever grown, and at 38 cents at New York a large proportion of the crop will be of little profit to farmers.

Ravages of Two Plagues.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—The following reports have been received at the surgeon-general's office of the marine hospital service: At Osaka-Hiago, Japan, for the two weeks ended August 1, were 1,706 cases of cholera and 717 deaths; at Kobe-Hiogo, for the week ended August 11, there were 246 cases and 193 deaths; at Rio de Janeiro, for the week ended August 17, there were 8 deaths from yellow fever; at Vera Cruz, for the week ended August 29, there were 7 yellow fever deaths.

No Admittance to Chinese.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—The secretary of the treasury yesterday sent a telegram to the collector of customs at Ogdensburg, N. Y., directing him not to admit any of the 200 Chinese recently landed at Vancouver en route to the Atlanta exposition. There is belief that this is an attempt to defraud the government and secure the admission of a large number of Chinese who are not actors.

Hanged at Tahlequah.

TAHLEQUAH, I. T., Sept. 14.—Frog Davis, the murderer of Sheriff Musgrove, of Cowee district, was hanged in the jail here yesterday. On the gallows he made a confession. The drop fell at 11:35 a. m. and within ten minutes he was dead from strangulation.

Judge Stuart Has Resigned.

SOUTH MCALESTER, I. T., Sept. 14.—Hon. Charles B. Stuart, chief justice of the Indian territory court of appeals and judge of the central district of the United States court for the Indian territory, sent in his resignation Friday morning.

ITS LABORS ENDED.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Sept. 14.—At the G. A. R. encampment yesterday resolutions were adopted declaring that all veterans should be favored by civil service boards without regard to age. This was brought about by the fact that many civil service boards in Chicago, Washington and other large cities had put an age limit on applications for examinations and in this way many able-bodied old soldiers have been shut out.

A resolution favoring the placing of flags upon every public school building and the introduction of military drill in the public school curriculum was also adopted with resolutions of sympathy for the parents and friends of the young militiamen killed by the explosion of the caisson Wednesday.

The delegates declared against long parades and marches at future encampments. It was decided that a special celebration should be held on the next anniversary of the establishment of the first Grand Army post.

Resolutions were adopted asking congress to make an annual appropriation to defray the expenses of conducting Memorial day services in national cemeteries, favoring the establishment of a military post at Vicksburg, Miss., and for the erection of a soldiers' home at Camp Supply, Ok.

Dr. J. B. Whiting, of Janesville, Wis., was elected surgeon-general and Thomas C. Iliff, of Utah, chaplain-in-chief.

The report of the committee on pensions, after reviewing the work accomplished by the soldiers of the union during the war and the laws passed in their behalf, says:

In some quarters the old soldier has come to be looked upon in the light of a burden instead of a great and patriotic privilege, as he should still appear, when viewed in his true character. Referring to this view—wholly unworthy of a great and patriotic people—constructions have been put upon the laws, wise and just in themselves, by and under which burdens and restrictions have been imposed upon those able to stand up under them. The just provisions authorized have been grudgingly doled out as though the laws passed in the interest of the pensioner as a just recognition of the obligations of the country were criminal laws, to be strictly construed, and the public beneficiaries thereof were public enemies or pirates seeking admission to the treasury of the United States.

After commenting further upon the justice of the pensions law, and the purpose for which they were passed, the report continues:

We demand for our comrades the just due which the country gladly concedes. No niggardly cutting down of pensions under the guise of reissues; no partial and grudging allowances that cut here and there will meet with the full measure of duty that the country owes to its surviving heroes. Nothing short of full measure, dealt with an honest hand, a liberal heart, will ever meet with the approbation of the American people. For this we appeal to the grateful patriotic sentiment of the whole people, and we earnestly believe that our appeal will not be in vain. Receding from no position that we have heretofore taken, reaffirming all our previous declarations on the subject, we especially demand a liberal and just construction of the laws passed for the benefit of the pensioner to the end that in his declining years he may not be harrassed with doubts of a distrust or the difficulties thrown around him by a righteous or restricted construction of the laws passed in the past to relieve his condition.

The report was adopted unanimously.

The roll was called by states for the naming of the council of administration. Among those selected were: Arkansas, Powell Clayton; Iowa, A. W. Swahn; Kansas, D. B. Dornblaser; Missouri, F. M. Sterrett; Nebraska, T. J. Majors; Oklahoma, J. J. Hassler; Texas, L. Whitman.

A resolution was adopted appointing a committee of five to arrange for the erection of a monument at Washington to commemorate the loyal women who served as nurses or in other ways aided the soldiers of the union during the rebellion. A resolution was adopted empowering the commander-in-chief and council of administration to change the place of holding the next encampment should the railroads or hotels not make satisfactory rates. A rule was made permitting posts to consolidate as membership grew less. A resolution was adopted recommending that congress should pass a law equalizing the pensions of widows so that all shall receive at least $12 a month. Some of them are now receiving from $8 to $10 a month. The committee on resolutions reported adversely on the resolution asking congress to fix a penalty on the law regarding the favoring of veterans applying for governmental positions.

The National Association of ex-Prisoners of War elected: President, George W. Grant, of Minnesota; vice president, Charles F. Sherill, of Pennsylvania; chaplain, John S. Ferguson, of Iowa; secretary and treasurer, S. W. Long, of New Jersey.

The Woman's Relief corps elected the following officers: President, Mrs. Elizabeth A. Turner, of Massachusetts; senior vice president, Mrs. Mary A. Ninekirk, of Kentucky; junior vice president, Mrs. Steinmeitzer, of Missouri; treasurer, Mrs. Bagley, of Ohio.

The Daughters of Veterans elected the following national officers: Mrs. Ellen N. Walker, of Worcester, Mass., president; Mrs. Alice Ingram, of Chattanooga, Ill., senior vice president; Mary Brown, of Spokane, Wash., junior vice president; Miss Lizzie Kimball, of Fitchburg, Mass., secretary; Ida J. Allen, of Neweton, Mass., treasurer; Miss Annie Reading, of Lincoln, Neb., chaplain.

The Ladies, Circle of the G. A. R. was in continuous session from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m. It was decided to prohibit members from holding office in the Woman's Relief corps, and afterward reconsidered. The election resulted as follows: President, Mrs. Catherine Hirst, of Kentucky; senior vice president, Mrs. Nellie Royce, of Washington; junior vice president, Mrs. Lou J. Breyles; lecturer, Mrs. F. E. Gorge, of Washington city; chaplain, Mrs. Hettie McHenry, of Colorado; counselor, Mrs. Gulock, of Chicago, the retiring president; council of administration, Mrs. Flora Dacey, Minnesota; Mrs. Marie Ely, Pennsylvania, and Mrs. Frances Hubbard, of Illinois.

ONE YEAR OF DEMOCRACY.

Mills Running Double Time and Wages Increasing.

The Wilson tariff law has been in force one year. When it took effect commercial conditions in the United States were more distressing, more disastrous than they ever had been since the time of Black Friday. After one year's operation of democratic legislation there appears striking revival in business, marked increase in wages, a healthier tone in every market. The triumph of the measure, to which the democracy in congress lent its most intelligent energies, has been complete.

A New York paper signalized the anniversary of the Wilson law by the publication of an itemized statement, showing the experience of one year under the McKinley law and one year under the Wilson law. The statement, which was gathered from the most trustworthy sources of information, demonstrates that within a year after the enactment of the McKinley law wages had been reduced in an immense number of establishments; factories and mills were closed down and the whole tendency of the manufacturing interests in the United States was toward disaster. On the other hand, the year which has passed under the Wilson law has seen mills reopening, running at double time, and a voluntary increase of wages by a host of manufacturing corporations. It is further demonstrated by these statistics that while wages have risen prices have decreased. It is shown that not only has the wage worker profited by democratic legislation, but the consumer as well. More is put into the pockets of the people. Less is taken out.

Postmaster General Wilson himself, author of the law, writing to the World in comment upon its statistics, reduces the whole theory and pratice of tariff legislation to an axiom when he says: "There is no way to protect American industry except by relieving it from burdens upon the materials with which it works; no way to insure good wages and steady employment to home labor except by freeing it from the shackles which have confined it to a glutted home market and prevented it from seeking its customers all over the world."

Freedom after all is the only stimulant for the industrial world as for the individual. Take off the shackles in each case. Let every man be as free as every other man to do what he will. Let him enjoy with every other man access to all natural opportunities. Let the nation, like the individual, be free—free from limitations imposed under the guise of protection. This done, justice will be secured in the case of individual and of nation, and he is but a poor American who does not believe that with absolute justice, with equality of opportunity, the American as an individual or the American as a race can hold his own against any people of the earth.—Chicago Chronicle.

THE BEST PROTECTION.

American Industries Flourishing Under Democratic Rule.

Another discouragement for the McKinleyites comes out of Pennsylvania, where the differences between coal miners and their employers have been adjusted upon the basis of an advance in wages.

Advances in wages under a democratic tariff are never acceptable to republicans on the eve of a campaign in which it is proposed to make the reopening of the tariff question the "overshadowing issue." But they are occurring with a degree of regularity to make the republican outlook anything but bright or promising.

This advance, like that recently made to the employes of the Carnegie and other iron and steel manufacturing concerns in Pennsylvania, is an advance over the old McKinley prices. It is an advance, in other words, over the price of labor paid under high protection. Settlements of strikes on such a basis were of rare occurrence under the republican tariff law. Their frequent occurrence under the present law does not encourage the threat made by republican leaders that when their party comes into full control of the government it will revise the tariff on lines of higher protection "to American industry and American labor."

Both American industry and American labor are in the enjoyment of more and better protection now than they received under the highest tariff ever laid in this country, if we consider the term protection in its proper meaning as a fostering and encouragement of both labor and capital. Republican politicians succeeded during the years of their control of the government in giving the word a signification which never properly belonged to it.—St. Louis Republic.

General Prosperity.

Gold exportation continues, but the syndicate is carrying out its agreement to protect the treasury, and the reserve continues well above the one hundred million dollar line. The treasury deficit, which was eight million dollars in July, will not, the government officials predict, go much above five million dollars in August. The treasury situation is the only speck in the business sky, but here, too, an early improvement is looked for with the growth in trade and the general increase in the country's prosperity. Bank clearances maintain their long lead over last year's figures, and railroad earnings, which were slow in responding to the general business improvement, have recently been nearing the highest level of the past. In all the great productive industries the activity is fully up to the figures of normal years. Commercial failures are decreasing coincidently with the great increase in commerce. More business is done at present throughout the country than was done at any previous time since 1892, and it is carried on under sounder and safer conditions.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat (Rep.).

——That big corn crop may as well select its seconds. McKinley is in a fighting mood.—Albany Argus.

THE SENATE OUTLOOK.

The democrats of New York should do something to help assure a democratic majority in the United States senate. When that body meets in December it will be made up of forty-three republicans, thirty-eight democrats and seven democratic and republican populists. The condition of parties may remain until 1897, when the successors to twenty-nine senators will be chosen. Of these twenty-nine twelve are now republicans, fourteen are democrats and three are populists. It is safe to assume that ten of the states now represented by republicans will be held for that party, and that they may gain three senators from states now held by populists and one from the democrats. That will give them fourteen of the new senators.

On the other hand, should the democrats secure the Utah senators and hold New York and Ohio they would have sixteen of the new senators in 1897. If Nevada remained a strict silver state and its new senator insisted upon standing out with Stewart, the populists in the senate would be but three in number—Allen, of Nebraska; Stewart and Jones—if Jones insisted upon returning from Nevada. It appears to be possible that in 1897 the senate may stand forty-five democrats, forty-one republicans and three independents.

If New York state is thrown away to the republicans, the chance of making the above showing better will be gone. It is for the democrats of Illinois, Ohio, Wisconsin, North Carolina and Utah to work out the advantage of the party in those states. New York democrats who can appreciate the importance of having control of the senate of the United States, particularly in the possible event of a change of administration, will need but little urging to impress upon them the supreme need of united and hearty action this year and next.—N. Y. Times.

THE GOLD RESERVE.

A Protectionist Method of Increasing the Revenue.

Certain republican leaders who are looking forward to tampering with the tariff during the coming session of congress are endeavoring to revive the theory that an increase of revenue is all that is needed to maintain the gold reserve. This is a fallacy unless we assume that the increase is so great as to carry with it all the dangers of a large surplus. The revenue from the customs and internal receipts is now coming into the treasury at a rate which if maintained throughout the year will leave but a trifling deficit on June 30, 1896, but it will require an enormous increase of taxation to pile up a surplus sufficient to protect the treasury from any possible demand for gold. It will be necessary in order to put off this demand to lock up the entire volume of legal tender paper which has been issued by the government, and which amounts to four hundred million dollars, or about three hundred and fifteen million dollars in excess of the present treasury balance. The cash now on hand is ample for the ordinary purposes of the treasury and will not be materially reduced during the present year. The receipts since July 1 have averaged a million dollars a day, including Sundays and holidays, or at the rate of three hundred and sixty-five millions per annum. This will more than cover the ordinary expenditures and would be ample to protect the treasury but for the "endless chain" of greenbacks which draws out the gold. Protectionist leaders can hardly hope, however, that the people can be induced to look with favor upon a proposition to increase the taxes to a point high enough to accumulate a four hundred million dollar surplus as the best possible means of solving the currency problem.—Detroit Free Press.

——The American Protective Tariff league has been engaged in inquiry about wages to secure evidence that the Wilson tariff law is injuring the country. It is getting replies that do not give much encouragement to the agents of protected interests. Here is a reply from the Doe river woolen mills at Elizabeth, Tenn., which the proprietors send to a New York newspaper, so that the information may not be suppressed from the public. It is as follows:

"GENTLEMEN: In answer to your circular and cards, will say we are paying the same price to the same amount of hands that we did in 1890—that is in dollars and cents—and at the same time our hands are buying forty per cent. more with the same money than they did in 1890. We have all the protection we want in this wool."—Utica (N. Y.) Observer.

THE CHRONICLE.

C. C. DuBOSE, Editor and Proprietor.

COLUMBIANA, SEPT. 19, 1895.

THE Hartford Times has discovered that "August was the longest month ever known in Boston—31 days and 25,000 knights."

THE gold users control all the great commerce of the earth. They do 99 per cent. of the manufacturing of the world, and handle about the same per cent. of the world's traffic. Of the 360,000 miles of line of railway, the gold nations contain over 300,000 miles. The state of Ohio has more miles of road than Mexico, China and Japan combined. Ohio has a population of 3,700,000. These three silver empires have an aggregate population of fully 450,000,000.

A HARTFORD machinist claims to have invented a war balloon. It is fitted with an armor boat from which a number of bombs can be suspended. The bombs can be ignited and released by automatic machinery. After all the bombs are discharged, the balloon is destroyed by an explosion. Satisfactory tests have been made, and it is claimed will do the work intended. A syndicate of Cubans have purchased the patent and will manufacture the balloon for use of the insurgents.

CYRUS TEED, who claims to be a second Messiah, and teaches that the earth is flat, is busy developing the plans for the New Jerusalem of his sect, which is to be built in Louisiana. In describing this city, he says: "The streets will be 400 feet wide, beautiful streets. We will build the city in stories or tiers. One tier or story will be for pedestrians, one for light traffic, another for railroads, etc. We are going to have a great big city of eight or ten million people, and in it we will gather at least four million Ethiopians of the South."

AFTER five years of incessant labor and the expenditure of $3,000,000, the task of harnessing Niagara and putting the force of the cataract to industrial use is practically accomplished. The magnitude of the work can be imagined from the fact that the plant represents an available force of 450,000 horse-power, or more than a third of the power derived from all the waterwheels in the country ten years ago. This is easily one of the greatest triumps of electrical engineering, and the rsults are sure to be correspondingly important and advantageous.

THERE are 10,000 more men at work in the Birmingham district of Alabama to-day, than there were at this time last year, and the calamity howler will find it a serious matter to convince these men that times are worse or that this prosperity in fictitious. To them it is a joyful reality, hard work for hard money and plenty of both. The furnaces and mines are running just as briskly over the country as they are in Alabama, and the only despair and depression apparent is that which exists among the croakers who croak for political purposes only.

THE superstition of stock brokers would be ludicrous if it were not often mischievous. Just at present they are possessed of a most superstitous belief in the importance of an exact hundred millions of gold reserve in the United States treasury, and they fall into a panic whenever the figures appear below that sum. As a matter of fact, if there were a run upon the treasury, a hundred millions would be of little more use than ten: if there is not such a run the daily fluctuations in the reserve can make little difference. They are merely indications of temporary conditions, and while it is a disappointment that the usual September shipments of cotton and breadstuffs are so delayed this season as to require the employment of an unusual amount of gold in the weekly settlements, it is absurd to attach an exaggerated importance to conditions that must necessarily mend in the natural course of events.

BUT the time has at last come when those who have been deceived should no longer be. In the face of the assertion that prices could not advance under the operations of the single gold standard we find iron increased 100 per cent. cotton 50 per cent. wages in all manufacturing trades from 15 to 50 per cent. We find all the railroads getting out of the hands of receivers, which shows that money is getting on the market and signs of prosperity all along the line, which is a more complete refutation of the arguments of the free silver men than anything that could be gotten up in any other shape. The agitation of a change in our monetary system has naturally put the future, in regard to financial matters, in a state of uncertainty and the sooner the agitation is stopped the sooner will money seek investment. As people become convinced of their error they should have the manhood to acknowledge the corn and join the procession.

STOP FINANCIAL JUGGLING.

From the Philadelphia (Pa.) Times.

Some of the more reckless partisan organs are criticising the Cleveland administration for the present humiliating condition of the national treasury. If they had the intelligence and courage to state the truth they would say the present deplorable condition of our national finances is entirely due to laws which were enacted by the Republicans, and which, however necessary at the time, have become fearfully oppressive and must be radically changed.

It is a public disgrace that the gold reserve in the treasury is to-day dependent upon a syndicate of Wall street bankers, but it is because the laws which the administration must execute make it impossible for the government to maintain itself in any other way. With over $500,000,000 of currency redeemable in gold at the will of the holder, the government must maintain its gold reserve to maintain the national credit, and as the present administration did not create the indebtedness of the government it can only execute the laws and provide the gold for preserving the national credit inviolate.

There is but one remedy for this shameful financial condition, and that is the retirement of our currency issued by the government. While the government plays the part of banker it must have the means to redeem its obligations or its credit must be destroyed. It is necessary, therefore, to keep a reserve of $100,000,000 in gold to assure the country and the world that our national credit cannot be impaired. As trade conditions draw gold from our shoes, as is common in some seasons of the year, the government must buy gold or commit the unpardonable crime of plunging the country into financial revulsion.

The time has come when the government must separate itself from all banking operations. It can be done without disturbing business channels by the gradual retirement of our obligations payable in gold, and the substitution of an equally sound currency for which the government will not be immediately responsible. Until we come to this common-sense business basis gold speculators may any day convulse the financial, industrial and trade circles of the country, and it is midsummer madness for us to continue it.

Some of the most injurious financial measures enacted by the republican party under apparent necessity have been repealed under the present administration, and it was the fault of congress, and equally of both parties in congress, that the national finances were not placed upon a sound condition one year ago. But for the courage and patriotism of President Cleveland our financial condition would today be most embarrassing, and if his counsels shall be respected by the next congress, the present humiliating spectacle of the treasury being dependent upon Wall street speculators will perish forever. Stop financial juggling.

What They Look For.

Brewton News.

The effort of any newspaper to build up a town is practically nullified unless it is backed up by the business men. A stranger turns from the news columns of a paper to its advertising pages, and if he fails to find there the business cards of the merchants and the business men he comes to the conclusion that the publisher is not appreciated, in which case it is a good place for him to keep clear of. No town ever grew without the active assistance of its newspaper. Nor can papers grow and build up their localities without the assistance of the town. Business men should realize this and remember that in giving support to the newspaper they are not only building up their own business, but are helping to support that which is steadily working for the whole community.

Irving W. Larimore, physical director of Y. M. C. A., Des Moines, Iowa, says he can conscientiously recommend Chamberlain's Pain Balm to athletics, gymnasts, bicyclists, foot ball players, and the profession in general, for bruises, sprains and dislocations; also for soreness and stiffness of the muscles. When applied before the parts become swollen it will effect a cure in one-half the time usually required. For sale by Parker & Armstrong.

THE L. & N. RIGHT AS USUAL.

From the Greenville Advocate.

For some time there has been a great question at issue before two very large and powerful organizations. One is a mercantile body made up of members with great capital back of them, the Southern Wholesale Grocers' Association, and the other the Louisville & Nashville railroad.

As it is a matter which very closely concerns the people of Greenville as well as of Alabama and other Southern States, we will go into it at some length, in order that a clearer understanding may be had of the matter.

The differences between the railroad company and the wholesale grocers' association began about freight rates. Not about freight rates on the the luxuries of life, but on the necessaries. The rates at issue are those on flour, meal, hominy, grits, meat, lard, coffee, rice, soap, soda, sugar and molasses, which are among the recognized essentials of life.

At first glance we might suppose that the wholesale grocers' association was contending for lower rates for the benefit of the people. The exact converse is true. They are contending for higher rates, for everybody except themselves, for the benefit of themselves.

If the rates were at a certain figure, and could be reduced somewhat in the case of buyers of car load lots, then they would be justifiable in asking a reduction for themselves, and would be going according to a well known principle of business life. But as it is, the wholesale dealers' association does not say that the present rates are not low enough, or are not as low as they can consistently be made but they ask an increase on everybody except themselves.

For instance, if a man buys a carload of provisions, such as before mentioned, they want the rate to stand as it is at present. But if anybody else buys a barrel of flour, or a dozen barrels of flour, or a case of meat, or of soda, or any amount of groceries less than a car load lot, they want him charged 4 cents per hundred pounds more than the present rate. In other words, a man could not buy a barrel of flour for himself, without paying at least 4 cents per hundred tor the privilege, over every railroad upon which it was handled. Truly this is a beautifully philanthropic principle.

This discussion has been going on for two or more years between the Southern Wholesale Grocers' Association and the Southern Railway & Steamship Association, of which the Louisville & Nashville railroad is a member. The matter has been brought before the latter association, and they unanimously refused to acceed to it. Since that time the matter has not been dropped; and as a result we understand that the Louisville & Nashville railroad has been boycotted by the wholesale grocers' association. As to why this railroad should be singled out, when all the other lines composing the Southern Railway & Steampship Association had taken the same position, might be difficult to tell unless it is because it is the leading system, or because they hope by boycotting that line to throw the bulk of the trade to the other lines and thus bring them around to their way of thinking.

A few days ago the Interstate Commerce Commission expressed their views upon the matter as follows:

"A difference in rates upon car loads and less than car loads of the same merchandise between the same points of carriage, so wide as to be destructive of competition between large and small dealers, especially upon articles of general and necessary use, and which under existing conditions of trade furnish a large volume of business to carriers, is unjust and violates the provisions and principles of the act."

To show how this proposed plan would work, we will take the case of our own town. Should the wholesale grocers' association gain their point, the rates from Montgomery to Greenville would be changed; the rates on car load lots remaining the same as at present, the rates to the purchaser of less than a carload would be raised as follows: Coffee, rate per 100 pounds 21 cents, raised to 25 cents; sugar, present rate 21c., raised to 25c; soap, present rate 21, raised to 25; flour in sacks 13, raised to 17; flour per barrel, 26, raised to 34; and, all goods of Class D, now 10 cents would be raised to 14 cents. It is easy to see that this additional expense would fall upon the small buyer and the consumer. All boycotts are bad, and we think this one will be an utter failure. The Louisville & Nashville has done a great deal to build up the towns along its route, and we believe the sympathies of the people are with it in this fight.

John G. Mauger, editor of the Sunbeam, Seligman, Mo., who named Grover Cleveland for the presidency in November, 1882, while he was mayor of Buffalo, N. Y., is enthusiastic in his praise of Chamberlain's Cholic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. He says: "I have used it for the past five years and consider it the best preparation of the kind in the market. It is as staple as sugar and coffee in this section. It is an article of merit and should be used in every household." For sale by Parker & Armstrong.

MOST communities are cursed with a set of men, and sometimes women, with little or nothing to do, and so they, vulture like, constantly look for some scandal to stir. Their tongues are forever wagging about other people's business. Nearly all the quarrels and difficulties between neighbors are traceable to these busy bodies. As communities value their good name and peace they should frown down such miscreants.

POPULATION OF HELL.

In a late edition of an English Freethinkers' magazine a writer has found some curious statistics on the relative number of souls that have been saved and lost since the creation of the world. They are very faulty as well as rashly presumptive. This latter remark refers to the probable number of souls lost between the date of the birth of Adam and that of Christ, but are queer and interesting nevertheless. The following is a synopsis of the article:

In round numbers the earth has a population of 1,300,000,000, of whom 300,000,000 are professed christians, the other 1,000,000,000 being Mohammedans, Buddhists, Jews, pagans and heathens. The whole race was condemned to eternal punishment for the sin of Adam. This was the fall of man, and for which there was and is no redemption save through the death of Christ.

Biblical chronology gives the earth a period of 6,000 years. From Adam's time down to the date of the birth of Christ was 4,000 years, during which time all human souls were lost. The population of the globe during that 4,000 years averaged, we will say, 1,000,000,000. Three generations, or 3,000,000,000, passed away each century.

Forty centuries, therefore, consigned 120,000,000,000 human souls to eternal fire, and, if we are to believe the doctrines of eternal punishment, these souls must still be in hell. In the 1,900 years which have elapsed since the birth of Christ, 57,000,000,000 more of human beings have lived and died. If all the christians, nominal and real, who have ever lived on the face of the earth have been saved, they would not number more than 18,000,000,000.

Now, if we deduct the latter number from the grand total of 177,000,000,000, the number of which have been born since the creation, we find that 159,000,000,000 of souls are now suffering the torments of hell fire against a possible 18,000,000,000 who have escaped. But this is not the whole truth. No one believes that over 10 per cent of professed christians are really such. The Calvanists say that the elect are very few. Say that 10 per cent of the so-called christians have been saved, which is very doubtful, then heaven contains a population of less than 1,800,000,000, while that of hell aggregate upward of 200,000,000,000.

While in Chicago, Mr. Charles L. Kahler, a prominent shoe merchant of DesMoines, Iowa, had quite a serious time of it. He took such a severe cold that he could hardly talk or navigate, but the prompt use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cured him of his cold so quickly that others at the hotel who had bad colds followed his example and half a dozen persons ordered it from the nearest drug store. They were profuse in their thanks to Mr. Kahler for telling them how to cure a bad cold so quickly. For sale by Parker & Armstrong.

ATTORNEYS AT LAW

COLUMBIANA, ALA.

Will practice in Shelby and adjoining counties, and in the Supreme and Federal courts of the state. Special attention given to collection of claims.

FARMERS

Insure Your Property in the FARMERS' MUTUAL OF ALABAMA.

Chartered by the state. No capital required. No officers to support. Help your neighbor in distress. Keep your money at home.

THE PLAN.

Each county is organized into a separate organization. Get a policy for thirty years for five dollars per thousand dollars without renewal. You only pay your pro-rata share of the loss of a brother member in your own county. In Kentucky, South Carolina, Georgia and Virginia the average cost has not been more than two dollars per annum in each thousand dollars of insurance.

Ayer's Hair Vigor

CORDIALLY INDORSED.

RESTORES Natural Growth OF THE HAIR —WHEN— ALL OTHER Dressings FAIL.

"I can cordially indorse Ayer's Hair Vigor, as one of the best preparations for the hair. When I began using Ayer's Hair Vigor, all the front part of my head —about half of it—was bald. The use of only two bottles restored a natural growth, which still continues as in my youth. I tried several other dressings, but they all failed. Ayer's Hair Vigor is the best."—Mrs. J. C. TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS.

WELL-MATED.

Fat wife, fat wife,
God bless her!
She looked like a drum and he looked like a fife,
And it took all his money to dress her,
God bless her!
To dress her.
To wrap up her body and warm her toes,
Fat toes, fat toes,
God keep her!
For bonnet and bows and silken clothes.
To eat her, and drink her, and sleep her,
God keep her!
To drink her.
She grew like a target and he like a sword,
A sword, a sword,
God spare her!
She took all the bed and he all the board,
And it took a whole sofa to bear her,
God spare her!
To bear her.
She spread like a turtle, he shrank like a pike
A pike, a pike,
God save him!
And nobody ever beheld the like;
They had to wear glasses to shave him,
God save him!
To shave him.
She fattened away till she bursted one day,
Exploded, blew up,
God save her!
And all the people that saw it say
She covered over an acre,
God take her!
An acre.

Capt. W. C. Ward, of Birmingham, is attending court.

Hosea Pearson, of Farmer, was a visitor in town yesterday.

Hon. Cecil Browne, of Talladega, has been in town several days.

Robert Bowden, of Calera, was in town Tuesday and Wednesday.

John B. Knox, Esq., a talented Anniston lawyer, is attending court.

Hon. Frank Pettus, of Selma, was in attendance upon court this week.

Dave Cromwell, of Montgomery, is in the city visiting his brother John T. Cromwell.

Misses Katie Huyett and Patty Mason attended Mr. Harrell's funeral at Shelby Saturday.

Mrs. B. L. Moore and Miss Louie Longshore left yesterday for Atlanta, to see the Exposition.

Misses Belle Barnett and Allie Nelson visited friends and relatives in Calera Saturday and Sunday.

E. T. Witherby, the genial secretary of the Shelby Iron Company, has been a visitor in our town this week.

Miss Clemmie Cromwell returned home Saturday from a visit to relatives and friends at Maplesville and Stanton.

Cotton is coming in slowly, but it is bringing a price that makes the farmers smile and the merchant grin. Eight cents is the price paid here now.

William J. O'Hara, son of our Rev. C. W. O'Hara preached an excellent sermon Tuesday evening at the Baptist church. Will is a bright young man and is thoroughly consecrated to the work of the Master. He has the best wishes and prayers of our entire community that he may reap a rich harvest in the wide field before him.

There has been the largest crowd in town this week we have ever seen attend court. As a consequence the hotels and boarding houses are booming. Monday night the Spencer house turned off guests, the house being crowded to its full capacity.

Judge George C. Brewer, recently appointed judge of this circuit to succeed Judge Box, deceased, is holding court this week, and the general verdict is he is cool, clear-headed, impartial and moves business along with as much dispatch as possible consistent with justice to all parties concerned.

The court house is getting to be quite a fashionable place in which to marry, the average lately being about one each week. Prof. J. A. Spearman and Miss Flora Riddle were the last to call on Judge Leeper to tie the nuptial knot, and they selected last Sunday as the most appropriate day on which they could be joined in wedlock. May peace and penlty be their lot.

Last evening Col. Sumter Lea, of Birmingham, lectured in the court house on the subject, "Wm. L. Yancey and his times." The crowd present was not large, but all who went were amply repaid. Col. Lea is a genuine old-time southerner of the ante bellum type, and his vivid pictures of scenes of those days were indeed inspiring. Would that every young man in the South could hear his lecture.

Vincent's First Bale.

VINCENT, ALA., SEPT. 11 1895.

ED. CHRONICLE:—The first bale of new cotton was sold here today by that wide awake and energetic farmer, R. B. Posey, of Harpersville, for 8 cents to J. F. Pope & Co. This is a new firm here composed of J. F. Pope, of Wilsonville, and Jim Wilder, of Oxford, a Shelby county boy. Success to your valuable paper and its many readers is the wish of

2:30 p. m. What have I learned from the convention! General discussion and experience meeting.

Pastors and Sunday school superintendents are ex-officio members. Each school is allowed three delegates. There are many Sunday school workers in the county whose names do not appear on the program from the fact that the committee could not ascertain who they were. We are anxious that every school in the county be represented in this convention, that we may become acquainted with each other and be prepared to more effectually push forward the work in our county. Bring your Bibles. Come praying God's blessings on the convention. All delegates will be entertained free of charge. Report to J. F. AVERYT,
Chairman of Committee on Entertainment.

A Tribute of Respect.

Ere the twilight of life's scriptural allotment of three score years and ten had been reached, while yet braving the stern realities of this earthly existence and meeting the obligations of God's noblemen in exerting and extending a moral and religious influence among the rising generation, Mr. E. F. Harrell was called away into eternity on last Saturday morning at 4 minutes past 12 o'clock. Only a few days ago his 64th birthday found him wracked with pain and fever, and his natal day instead of being celebrated with joy and pleasure as in former years, ushered the awful premonition that soon he would go to that "bourne from whence no traveler returns." His death occurred amid the hush and gloom of midnight surrounded by his children, wife and grandchildren. His Sunday school class was to him an object of his religious affection, and he was devotedly fond of interpreting the scriptures before them. The love of his class was reciprocal, and during his sickness one or more of them would keep up a watch over him praying and singing to him. As a citizen he will be missed, as he filled his part in life patriotically, and his public spirit oftentimes impelled him to take an active part for the promotion of laudable schemes for the benefit of the community in which he resided. His memory will be long cherished by his family and his fellow citizens. He acted well his part and can say like old Horace has said:

"Exegi monumentum ære perenius."

The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Mr. Wilson pastor, and Dr. Newman presiding elder. They were very impressive. The pall bearers were his Sabbath school scholars and as they bore his remains to its last resting place they were deeply affected. Surely the death of Mr. Harrell was a blow to this community.

Vandiver Locals.

Rain in abundance now; too much for successful gathering.

Zeke Isbell shipped a car load of crossties to Birmingham last week.

Mrs. Martha Lawley, a very aged lady, is visiting her children here this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Whitfield have been confined with chills and fever several days.

Prof. D. F. Funderburg made an interesting speech on education here last Wednesday night.

Dr. Lawley has moved his saw-mill to Vandiver. His family is now in the old residence here.

If "Bonami" was not afraid of being indentified, he would probably attend singing school here now.

The Campbellites had a grand success in their meeting here. There were sixteen candidates for baptism.

Lampkin Vandiver has been very lame for several days from injurying his foot with a nail. We are glad to see him able to walk again.

Rev. Jennings preached his farewell sermon here last Sunday night. He is going to enter the theological school, and prepare for a plane of higher work.

Boss Isbell and Miss Bell Smith got married last Monday night. Rev. Frank Isbell proceeded to tie the knot, and it was his first duty of the kind to perform.

John Babb is teaching a singing school here now. Every one who wishes to learn music will do well to attend as the terms are reasonable, and he is well versed in the work.

REPORTER.

Wilsonville Waifs.

Cotton is coming in very slow.

Blake Edwards is the onliest dude in town.

B. J. Lilly, from Coosa Station, was in town Sunday.

The brickyard men are having good luck now in the way of dry weather.

Miss Rosa Wallace, of near Harpersville, has a music class here which requires her to teach every other day in the week. Miss Rosa is a nice accomplished young lady and we feel proud to have her with us.

Walter McGowen went to Montgomery, Monday, from there he will go to Greensboro, Ala., and enter college, expecting to have authority to add "D. D." or "M. D." to his name when he finishes. We wish much success.

J. Claude Jackson is now the business manager for the lumber firm of J. C. Jackson & Sons. He can be seen at most any time in the office with his diploma hanging where he can go to sleep in one eye and keep the other open to view his diploma with.

Saturday evening a telegram was received from Mr. Pairo, master of trains for the Southern Ry. at Selma, stating that Will Brown had been killed in an accident on the Alabama Midland. His remains were sent here. Funeral services were held at 4 o'clock Sunday evening.

Among the delegates that attended the Baptist association from here held in Childersburg last week, were John Weldon and Buck Daniels. Buck got to bucking too much with the Childerburg people's chicken, and the consequence was he had to buck out of town on very short notice. All that attended from here report a very nice time, good preaching, good chicken, and nice people.

Friday evening about half past 7 o'clock, while the north bound local freight train was switching in the yard here, a negro brakeman named Sam Dobine, while in the act of uncoupling some cars that were being backed in on the sidetrack, was very seriously hurt. He had previously set some cars to the main line but failed to have them far enough back to clear the sidetrack. The car he was on collided with those that were on the main line, tearing the cars up and injuring the brakeman as stated above.

Nelly Bly, come again; you are short but sweet, and your warblings are as those of a sweet singing canary.

BUTCH, JR.

Mr. Wallace Explains.

CRESWELL STA., Sept. 17, 1895.

ED. CHRONICLE:—The statements in your issue of the 12th inst. made by R. G. Jones relative to the postoffice here are utterly false. Mr. Jones first offered me ten ($10) dollars to resign the office in his favor. Does this look like I was trying "to lug other parties into this postoffice business?" I might cause people to think "other parties" wanted "to lug into this postoffice business," or disliked to "lug" out of it, as if I were to say they have been boycotting the office to a great extent since I have had it in charge. But I will not tell that part. Jones positively did refuse to rent me a house, and I will make affidavit to that effect, if necessary, and can prove it. I have the office situated directly on the two public roads leading from Harpersville and Cresswell. I did not tell Jones or any one I would carry the office to my father's residence. Neither was Jones attending to the office for nothing. I could mention other substantial facts, but will not consume any more space at present. Neither do I intend to make any fight through the paper. I will say further I did not misrepresent anything to the Postoffice Department to get permission to change the site of my office. I have also applied to the railroad company for permission to build a house on the railroad right-of-way, and shall build if I get the permission.

Yours respectfully,

G. W. WALLIS, JR.

Harpersville Echoes.

Cotton is being picked in a double rush.

They say that cotton will be worth 10 cents per pound before Christmas.

Capt. J. L. Walthall, of Irondale, was hand-shaking with his many friends here last week.

T. J. Martin has bought two new gins and a new press, and is now prepared to gin all the cotton carried to him.

We have a lady here who tries to be so erect that she has pulled all the hair out of the back of her head in trying to hold her head straight.

The colored Methodists had a baptizing at the pool Sunday evening, and their preacher, Parson Caffey, administered baptism to three boys and a dog.

Died near here last Friday morning, infant child of Mr. and Mrs. George Cosper. It was buried at Childersburg, Saturday. To the bereaved parents we extend our sympathy.

John Martin, of St. Clair county, and Miss Mary Jane Ballentine, of this place, were married last Sunday evening, Rev. Mr. Corley officiating. May all of their troubles be little ones.

Our friend Cull Henderson, has bought the Pitts farm near here from the syndicate company, and now he wants to buy him a house-keeper. They only cost $2.50, Cull, and with some right pretty talk thrown in.

Rev. Mr. Tidwell, of East Lake, filled Mr. Giles' appointment at the Baptist church, Saturday and Sunday last, and, Rev. Mr. Watson, of Alpine, Sunday night. Both are young men, and are theologians at Howard college. We predict for them a bright future, and hope that their visits to Harpersville will be more often, for our people are perfectly carried away with their style of propounding the gospel.

There is a right good joke on Judge Russell, in fact there is more truth in it than poetry, for Mr. Martin vouches for its truthfulness, and the judge don't deny it. The judge is a great hand to marry people, and they come after him far and near. When he puts on his dignity and derby hat, he is a whole team—a double team at that. Well, it happened not very long ago that he was called on to marry a colored couple, and after he had gone through the ceremony in a most aristocratic style, the judge said to the groom: "Now Ned, you must salute the bride." Ned not knowing what that meant, said, "What is dat, Jedge?" "Kiss her, you fool you," remarked the judge. Ned replied, "Well, Jedge, mammy allus tole me to have manners, and respeck de ole folks, so you can kiss her fust yerself." JAKE.

A Michigan paper relates the following true story: "A well known Scio farmer went into his cow stable the other night and by mistake mixed up a nice bran mash in a box filled with sawdust instead of bran. The cow merely supposing the hard times had come and they were going to economize, meekly ate her supper, and the man never discovered the mistake until the next morning, when he milked the cow and she gave down a half gallon of turpentine, a quart of shoe pegs and a bundle of laths."

The "16 to 1" or bust journals frequently speak of free coinage "like we had in olden days." Now, the facts are that we never had free coinage until after the civil war, when gold was admitted to the mints for coinage without charge. Prior to the civil war a charge for mintage was always made. Now smoke that, please.

A Mighty "Confusionment" in the Rocky Creek Country.

Blev Scroggins and His "Tremendius" Big Gold Find on the Old Stinson Place—A Job That Sent Old Man Abner "Back to Georgy and to Becky Ann."

(Copyright, 1895.)

If the fool-killer hasn't give up his job and went out of the business he ought to navigate around through Georgy and Tennessee, and then come down into the Rocky Creek country for new recruits. From the general appearments in this settlement, I reckon if he would come on across and take on a Waterbury movement and tend to his business clost and steady for a few days he could start a new graveyard somewheres right around in these regions.

The Net Was Spread.

One day about three weeks ago it leaked out all of a suddent and come to my ears that Blev Scroggins had found a tremendius big pile of gold over on the old Stinson place. Seein as how the news had come from Blev, naturally of course I was bound to put a little salt on it to kill the fishy smell. But at any rates I saddled up bright and early the next mornin and lit out and went over to see Blev in orderment to git the main facts in the case.

"I don't mind givin out the news to you, Rufe," says Blev, "but we will have to hop light and sing mighty low for a few days." And then we took a walk way over in the woods pastur to talk it out, whilst Blev he went on to say:

"Now in so far as I know, Rufe, there aint gold enough on the old Stinson place, or anywheres in forty miles around, to paint the left wing of one goldbug. I aint no free silverloon by a whole lot, you understand, but at the same time all the gold that I have fingered in ten years wouldn't plug my last baby's tooth. In regards to the terrible big gold find on the old Stinson place—jest betwixt us gals, as it were—the news went out through me and Andy Lucas, and you are the onlyest livin man that can go down to rock bottom and git the naked unwashed truth.

"You will recollect no doubts, Rufe, that I bought the Stinson place from old man Abner Wheelan, which you must likewise also remember he married Becky Ann Stinson. When old man Gray Stinson went the common way of all human flesh he left the home place to Becky Ann, and consequentially when old Abner got Becky Ann he got the Stinson dirt along with her. When me and old man Abner first started on the land trade there was fifteen dollars difference between his figgers and mine, you understand, and dadblame him he wouldn't budge narry inch. We bucked and we seesawed back and forrards till I thought maybe he mought split the difference, but consound him he wouldn't even split. By gatlins, Rufe, he is the clostest and most stingiest man I ever run up with in a trade. He set and he sot, and he sot and he set, you understand, till finally at last I had to go to his figgers or either quit the deal. I never did git over that and I never will till I can play fer even with old man Abner. Whereas I went to work and put out the news through Andy Lucas about findin that scandlous big pile of gold buried on the old Stinson place. In workin out the sum we thought it mought be best for me to wear a padlock on my lips, so to speak, and leave the spreadin of the news to Andy. Since we got the thing started people have been comin and goin reglar as pig tracks and tryin their level blamdest to pull the naked facts out of me. But I have been too everlastin shy and sly for 'em, Rufe, and the general confusionment has went on from bad to worse and still more of it.

"Now accordin to the way me and Andy have figgered it out, Rufe, old man Abner will soon git the news back there in Georgy, where he moved his washin soon as he unloaded the old place on me," Blev went on in layin down the facts to me. "It mought be that he has heard the first reports by now, cause there are plenty of people in the settlement that would write and tell him, and Andy has already managed somehow so as to git it in the papers. And whensomever old man Abner hears the news he will hit the first train runnin out of Georgy and come a bilin right on back down here to see about it and put in his claims for the gold. Him and Becky Ann amongst 'em will soon fix it up so he can remember right exactly the very spot where old man Gray Stinson buried the yaller stuff. By gatlins, Rufe, if Andy Lucas didn't lose no time in spreadin of the news I will bet a pocketful of blue chips, you understand, that old man Abner is right now shakin that red Georgy dirt off of his feet and headed straight for Rocky Creek. And that is the mainest thing with me, Rufe. Consound him, it will cost him no less than twenty dollars to come and go, and it will be like payin taxes or sheddin eye teeth, cause the blamed old skinner totes his heart right down there in his flanks. In that way I can play out even with the old scrape-grace, not to speak of the fun that me and you and Andy will have in the main time."

He "Driv Up in a Storm."

Way along in the shank of the evenin one day last week Andy Lucas come ridin over to see me in a monstrous hurry and flurry, and presently we both went a curlin on down the road to see Blev Scroggins.

"The news in regards to Blev and the gold they say he found over on the Stinson place has now spread into Georgy, you understand," says Andy, "and old man Abner Wheelan is now on his way down here to put in his claims for Becky Ann. Accordin to my figuration he will make his landin in the settlement tonight, and I lowed it mought be pleasant for us to be there when he first drives up."

It was about first dusk, and me and Blev and Andy had went out to the hore rack to tend to the stock, when bless gracious we heard a mighty rumblin and roarin of buggy wheels down the road, and the next minnit old man Abner driv up in a perfect storm and a full sweat.

"I have come back all the way from Georgy and driv right on down here to see you, Mister Scroggins, about that gold you found buried on the old Stinson place," says old man Abner, talkin nervious and excited like. "When we sold the land to you we didn't sell you everything that was buried on it, and I have come to put in claims for Becky Ann. She remembers same like it was yesterday the very same night when old man Gray Stinson went out and buried that gold, and accordin to law it naturally belongs to her."

"Did the old man bury that gold down there in the back side of the garden?" says Blev.

"Right exactly there, accordin to Becky Ann's remembrance," says old man Abner.

"Was it buried in a big, low, squatty stone jar?" says Blev.

"That's the very thing to a nat's heel which Becky Ann says he put it away in, and she can likewise also recollect till now that the stone jar come down from her great grandfather and had been in the Stinson family clost on to a hundred years," says old man Abner.

"Well by the shades of George Washington, you and Becky Ann know a blame sight more about that gold than I do," says Blev, "cause I have never saw it as yet. Some Gipsy horse traders come along by here, and one of the old women took a forked stick and went out in the garden, and when she come back she lowed there was a big pile of gold buried somewheres around there, which she would show me the very spot for four bits. I give her the four bits—mostly from the fact that she was old and poro and feeble, you understand—and she showed me the very spot where old man Gray Stinson laid his treasures up. But I havent done any diggin as yet. I lowed you and Becky Ann mought know all about it, and consequentlielly I helt off so as to let you have the trouble of diggin and the fun of findin the stuff. My four bits in silver has gone a glimmerin down into that poro Gipsy woman's old stockin, you understand, but I am plum willin to let you take the first whack at the gold. If in case you find it I will take the old stone jar for my four bits and call it even. The women folks can use it to pack lard in, and it will forever keep me in remembrance of the Stinson family. But if in case you don't find it, when you blow off your dogs and quit I will come in on a cold trail and see if I can't turn it down."

Back to Georgy and Becky Ann.

Now of all the diggin and sweatin that was ever read of or writ about, Blev Scroggins got it from old man Abner durin the next three days. The old man tried his level blamdest in every way he could think of to back down and out. But Blev told him it would never do for him to go back to Georgy and Becky Ann without that gold.

"You can take my spade and grubbin hoe and go right on down into the bowels of the earth after it," says Blev, and the old man had to take the job or either back square out and show his hand.

In the main time me and Andy went on spreadin of the news amongst the people till every livin soul in the settlement could tell the story. We would ride over oncst or twicst every day to see Blev and old man Abner and find out if anything had come to pass. And Blev he didn't do a blessed blame thing durin them three days but lay around in the shade and use good tobacco and sick old man Abner on. He managed so as to keep the old man diggin and sweatin, you understand, till he had dug over every square inch of the garden, and still it was all vanity and vexation of spirit in regards to the gold which old man Gray Stinson had buried there in the old family stone jar accordin to the remembrance of Becky Ann.

"I have put in my orders for a two-horse auger to bore me a few wells around the place," says Blev to old man Abner when finally at last he had give up the fight, "and if you will remain over and wait a week or two I can loan you all the machinery and you mought go on down deeper and deeper till you find that old stone jar and the yaller stuff."

But by that time it seems as if the old man had found out that there was somethin dead up the creek and he wouldn't take any more draggin from Blev. Everybody in the settlement had found out by now that a man by the name of Scroggins had set his hook for suckers, you understand, and caught the biggest one in Georgy. Old man Abner got his back up higher than his shoulders and lit out the next mornin on his return to Georgy and Becky Ann. When he driv off me and Blev and Andy give him the grand horse laugh, and the other boys kept the tune runnin till he passed on out of the Rocky Creek regions.

TREATMENT OF STOCK.

Hints Regarding the Care and Handling of Young Animals.

The foundation of national character and prosperity is laid in the nursery and school room.

In no less degree does the profit to be derived from domestic animals depend upon the treatment received by these animals while young and growing. If these are stunted in their growth by undue exposure, or insufficient or improper food, entire recovery and full and normal development is rare.

Our winters are usually so mild that we do not make proper provision of food and shelter for our stock, and consequently the cows that come to the pail in the spring are not in the condition necessary for profitable milk production.

It is natural for all females to lay in flesh and fat while pregnant and thus store up supplies for the young in advance. If their surroundings are such as to prevent this they are not able to provide proper nourishment for their young, either before or after birth.

Since our profits are derived either from the milk provided by the mother for its young, or from the rapid and healthful growth of the young, we forfeit our profits by the neglect of either. It was distressing to read reports during the winter just past, of the death of stock from starvation in many parts of this favored land. It is a disgrace to the owners of stock to allow such suffering and loss. Not only humanity, but self-interest, should prevent the occurrence of such suffering and loss.

The mill owner who allows his machinery to rust and wear for the want of oiling, and deprives himself of the profits of his investment because of failure to provide the raw material to keep the mill at work, will soon fail to meet his liabilities, and declare that the manufacturing business "does not pay."

Such manufacturers are the exception.

Nine-tenths of the stock in the cotton states are allowed to grow very poor during the winter, and very many barely survive until the buds put forth in spring. Until midsummer the food consumed is entirely appropriated to rebuilding the wasted frames, instead of being devoted to the production of milk or growth. No animal that is alternately starved and pampered can maintain a profitably healthy condition.

There is a very prevalent idea among farmers that pigs that are allowed a run of the pea fields or of the fattening pen in the fall "will die the next spring." They grow excessively fat in the pea field or in the "fattening pen," and the supply of peas are exhausted, or the fattening hogs are killed, the food supply is suddenly cut off, and they have only starvation rations during the winter and spring. They thus fall an easy prey to disease. They have the "luck of the lousy calf."

Pigs of good breed will be ready for the knife at nine to eleven months of age, if properly fed; while under the treatment which they generally receive they are not ready until eighteen or twenty months old.

It would be poor economy for a mill to run on half time or half supplies, and require two years to accomplish what might be done in one with proper management.

From a business standpoint domestic animals should be regarded as machines for the conversion of cheap, raw material into more costly and valuable products. The value of a cow depends upon her daily yield of milk or butter, or her capacity of converting hay or grass and mill-feed into milk, butter or beef. The calf that requires three years to attain a weight of 1,200 pounds is less than half as profitable as one which attains that weight in half the time.

All young animals should be kept in a constantly-growing condition without being pampered. — Agricultural South.

THE SWINE INDUSTRY.

Hogs Good Property and Are Quickly Turned Into Money.

Hogs are always good property if kept healthy, when ordinarily fat cattle sell at five dollars per hundred, gross. Beef is likely to be still higher within the next twelve months. With the advance in bovine products pork is sure to be in sympathy.

Not every month affords desirable prices for swine, but scarcely three months go by in the average year in which the price for good fat hogs is not remunerative.

Good quality of stock, in fact, the best obtained, is required for uniform success in meat production. Breeding and feeding, when conducted intelligently, are prime factors in good results. There is always a defect in the one or other or both if good quality is not realized. In machinery, often a single nut lacking renders powerless the whole effort of the craft and crew. With live stock a single point lacking in the proper make-up of the sire in a herd may mean the loss of all profit on a herd for the season, and even more than this.

Defective form in the pigs is, however, not a complete bar to average success, if one is master of the feeder's art. During the next six months the question of profit and loss hinges on feeding and management. Having secured all the seemingly important articles of food, without the important small quantity of flax-seed products (or an equivalent—difficult to name), the element of profit is liable to be lacking in the returns when the hogs are marketed. Without a factor to regulate and invigorate the digestion, waste often attends feeding without it.

It is often true that simply a lack of pure, clean water causes loss, varying in degree from loss of one animal to that of the plague and an annihilation of a herd. Pure, clean water for drinking, in the hog yards, into which the pigs even can not wallow, and which flows cool and fresh from spring or fountain at a temperature which the animal relishes the soothing draught during the hot and dusty weather of a good share of the year, has value incalculable.

There are a half dozen and more other little (?) things which are not to be omitted if a good profitable lot of pork is to be marketed.—Cor. Western Rural.

Milking.

In reply to a query, "Is there any secret about milking a cow so as to get a result not wholly related to the food and care of the cow?" we would say that successful milking of a cow to secure the greatest and best results is a sort of "fraternal" and commercial treaty with her. The cow has a maternal side to be considered. Milk is secreted first and primarily for the calf, and dairying and good milking is a plan to get the milk, and have that mother office extended. To do this there must be a confidence awakened and maintained, to the end that milking this cow shall be a pleasure quite akin to supplying the calf; and some authorities claim, keep in continuance the "emotions," that can be called without violence, but an occasion of (to her) actual enjoyment. The man who pets a cow, and will feed her and does not give her pain when he milks, may be said to be more than a mechanical milker, but one who has gone further, and is—although in an artificial way—keeping alive the cow's maternal affection, and this can but be a stimulative influence to induce milk secretion. The reader has witnessed on untold occasions the cow's greatest desire to suckle her calf, or be milked, and if milk giving and milking can be closely associated by pleasurable contact, there is at once answer that there is a "secret" in milking, and it is fashioned on the everlasting law of good care and kindness.—Practical Farmer.

One Acre in Hens.

It is a progressive farmer who can succeed in making one acre support a cow, and he is then perfectly satisfied with a profit of $50 from her. If an acre of land can be made to yield any kind of crop that will pay a profit of $50, the success attending such a result will be considered worthy of notice. Profit means, of course, all that portion of the gross receipts which remains after the full expenses are paid, and a profit of $50 an acre is very large. It is easy to figure (on paper) the possibilities of an acre of land, but there are facts abundant to demonstrate that $50 is but a small sum to derive from one acre of land devoted to poultry. It is rare to find a case where a large flock of poultry has been given the space of one acre that the hens did not pay well, although due credit is not always allowed for "home" market, which calls for poultry and eggs, accounts not being kept with the family table. Farm and Fireside.

The Value of Mixed Feeds.

The wise dairyman will always strive to furnish a variety of feed to his cows. Further than that, he will also strive to have each kind of food cut and cured in its most palatable state, for he knows that to have the food palatable —"taste well"—is a very profitable feature to him. There is something a little strange about the value of mixed feeds. For instance, when fed to pigs of 100 to 125 pounds weight, a bushel of shelled corn will produce ten pounds of gain, and 100 pounds of skim milk will produce five pounds of gain. That means when fed separately the two feeds will produce fifteen pounds of growth. Now mix the two feeds, cornmeal and the sweet skim milk, and they will produce eighteen pounds. Such at least has been the result of repeated experiments.—Rural World.

HERE AND THERE.

—It's hard work to dig out these little plantain and dandelion weeds from your grass plot just now. But it pays. They are like the "little foxes." There are homilies in plantains and dandelions.

—It is well enough to remember that good forage can be kept for another year, so if there can be found no profitable present use for it, just hold it over and be prepared with animals to eat it next year.

—Unless the orchardist is careful weeds will get a fast hold during the fall and seed the ground for a more abundant crop next year. Now is the time to destroy them. Cut, and as soon as dry enough, burn them.

—"Good roads are too costly," says a conservative paper. They are not half so costly as bad roads. It is as hard for a fool to disguise himself as for a jackass to roar as a lion. Both have tried these things and failed.

—Don't sow down your young orchard in grain to make pasturage. In the first place, no kind of grain should be sown in an orchard; and in the next, horses and cattle have no business in an orchard—they are sure to do mischief.

—Pullets hatched after May rarely lay until the following spring. For this reason, when feed must be bought, or feed used that might otherwise be sold, it is not profitable to keep these late arrivals over. Better fatten and sell the last one of them. The early-hatched pullets should lay in winter, when eggs are a good price in the market or at home, and are the ones to keep.

—The steady improvement in farm poultry in this country has not only resulted in more eggs, but larger ones; not only more chickens, but larger and better ones. Improvement still goes on—where will it end? Or, will it end? Not until civilization lets her foot slip while climbing the hill at whose top perfection perches.

—Cotton is beginning to appear in market, and farmers are displaying their usual anxiety to get rid of the stuff. For this speculators who are interested in depressing prices should be duly thankful, for they have proclaimed a large crop, on only five per cent. decreased acreage, and this rush to sell confirms the contention, and the bears suck their paws with satisfaction.

—Bees might well be kept by all lovers of nature with a taste for investigation, even if honey was not used. It will pay any intelligent person to observe the habits of these models of ingenuity and industry, and give him a clearer conception of the wisdom of creative power. The effect on the moral character of studying bees is salutary, as well as interesting.

—Southern farmers can control the price of cotton if they will. If they set the price at seven or eight cents, and refuse to sell for less, they will get it. But many must sell to meet obligations and pay rent. That is all right. Let them sell who must; but those who are under no such necessity can control the bulk of the crop and the price. Will they do it? We will see.

—Hogs throughout Texas are doing well, and the number is largely increased over last year, and last year they were largely increased over any previous year. And—mark the prediction—1896 will show an annual increase that will throw all previous annual increases far in the shade. Texas farmers have found that they have the finest hog country in the Union, and they are going to run the business in such a manner as to cause Iowa and Wisconsin to look out for their laurels.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

WOMEN'S FACES—like flowers, fade and wither with time; the bloom of the rose is only known to the healthy woman's cheeks. The nervous strain caused by the ailments and pains peculiar to the sex, and the labor and worry of rearing a family, can often be traced by the lines in the woman's face. Dull eyes, the sallow or wrinkled face and those "feelings of weakness" have their rise in the derangements and irregularities peculiar to women. The functional derangements, painful disorders, and chronic weaknesses of women, can be cured with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. For the young girl just entering womanhood, for the mother and those about to become mothers, and later in "the change of life," the "Prescription" is just what they need; it aids nature in preparing the system for these events. It's a medicine prescribed for thirty years, by Dr. R. V. Pierce, chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y.

AN unconfirmed rumor reached the city of Berlin, on the 16th, that a North German Lloyd steamer had foundered, and that 150 persons were lost. Neither the name of the steamer nor the location of the alleged disaster was given.

CURRENT TOPICS.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF.

PERSONAL AND GENERAL.

THE verdict of the coroner's jury investigating the Osceola mine disaster at Houghton, Mich., in which thirty persons lost their lives, made public on the 18th, said that the cause of the fire is unknown, and exonerated the mine officials from all negligence.

A DEFALCATION of $19,800 on the part of the receiving and paying tellers of the National Bank of Illinois at Chicago, was, on the 19th, admitted by the officers of that institution. The shortage had all been made good, and it is understood there will be no prosecution.

THE treasury gold reserve stood at the close of business on the 16th at $95,248,642, the lowest point reached since the last bond issue raised the reserve above the $100,000,000 mark.

IT is said that English capitalists will import several hundred thousand head of Mexican cattle into Texas, fatten them on cottonseed meal and ship them alive to England.

THE supreme court of Nebraska met, on the 17th, for the usual September term. Among the first decisions handed down was that in the Omaha fire and police board muddle. The decision was rendered by Justice Post, and was unanimous in favor of the new board.

A DISPATCH from Stockholm, on the 17th, said the Norwegian bark Clodian, Capt. A. Johannsen had been wrecked off Umea, Sweden, and her entire crew lost. She was owned by O. A. Johannsen, of Frederikstadt.

A MAN giving his name as Frank Smith broke into Joseph Emmons' house at Elwood, Ind., on the night of the 16th, and became engaged in a desperate conflict with Emmons. A sick child was frightened to death, and Emmons presented a sickening sight when rescued by officers. Smith was placed in jail, feigning insanity. The coroner held him as the murderer.

A NOTABLE reunion was held at Indianapolis, Ind., on the 17th. It was that of the One Hundred and Twenty-third Indiana regiment, known to history as "Hovey's Babies." They were recruited by Gen. Alvin P. Hovey, afterward governor of the state, and they got their name from the fact that the average age was the lowest of any regiment that participated in the war. Of the 1,000 men enlisted 700 at the time of enlistment were under 25 years of age, and many were but 15 years old. The regiment made a great fighting record.

IN connection with the celebrations commemorative of the entry of the Italian army into Rome, King Humbert issued a decree, on the 17th, liberating all prisoners except four of the leaders of the Sicilian riots.

THE rumor that one of the steamers of the North German Lloyd Steamship Co. had foundered was, on the 17th, emphatically denied by the officers of that company.

AT CHATTANOOGA.

The Closing Day of the Dedication Ceremonials,

Meeting in Commemoration of the Battle of Chattanooga Proper, Preceded by a Grand Military Parade—Closing Scenes.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Sept. 21.—The proceedings of the third and last day of the dedication of the Chickamauga and Chattanooga National Military park, judging from the crowd which thronged the streets, were the most attractive of the series. This was the case, however, for the reason that there was nothing going on at the battlefield, and everyone's attention was centered upon the meeting in the big tent. Another fact was that the military demonstration by the regulars and state militia in camp here was an attraction that drew to the city many residents of the surrounding territory, who had not previously been present during the dedicatory ceremonies. There was a slight relief from the oppressive, almost overwhelming heat of the past few days, whereby existence was rendered somewhat more comfortable to sweltering humanity. The procession formed on Market street, the principal business thoroughfare of the city, and was characteristic of the occasion. First came a platoon of police and then the United States troops, foot and artillery, in camp at Chickamauga park, under command of Col. Poland. These numbered, all told, about 1,200 men. There were battalions from the Sixth, Fourteenth and Twenty-third infantry and Battery F Fourth artillery; the Ohio national guards with Gov. McKinley and staff at their head, including companies from Cleveland and Columbus, the latter on bicycles: Capital City guards, of Georgia, Capt. W. S. Hewitt commanding. This troop marched to the dedication from Atlanta, arriving here Tuesday. The national guard of Tennessee, Col. I. F. Peters commanding. A company of this body which attracted much attention was Capt. Carnes' battery, of Memphis, composed exclusively of confederate veterans. The rear of the column was under command of Capt. F. H. Phillips. The procession marched through the principal business and residence streets to Grant university in front of which the reviewing stand was erected. The streets were decorated with great profusion with the national colors in all conceivable designs, and as the troops marched under and by them they were accompanied by the almost constant cheers of assembled thousands.

Ohio's representation in the procession was the most striking portion. At its head rode Gov. McKinley and his entire staff in full uniform. The appearance of the governor was greeted with cheers along the entire route of march, and he was kept busy doffing his hat in acknowledgment of his hearty reception. Besides the Fourteenth regiment Ohio National guards, Gov. McKinley had in his command the famous Cleveland cavalry troops, which formed President Hayes' escort at his inauguration in 1877; battery H and the Toledo cadets. The company made a fine appearance and received much applause.

One of the leading features of the day's parade caused comment and enthusiasm, and will make a lasting impression upon those who saw it. It was company of confederate veterans, attired in their tattered old uniforms of gray, carrying the Stars and Stripes. As they passed through the miles and miles of streets they were tendered an ovation that would have honored an emperor. Not one of these old war dogs was under 60, and yet they walked with a firmness of step that would have done justice to West Point cadets. And one of them, the one next to the color-bearer, carried an olive wreath, an emblem of peace and love.

The visiting governors and their staffs, together with the various state park commissioners, followed Gen. Fullerton and staff.

On the reviewing stand were Lieut.-Gen. Schofield and Vice-President Stevenson, the reviewing officials and a large body of distinguished visitors and prominent citizens. The procession disbanded shortly after passing the reviewing stand, and the battery proceeded to Orchard Knob, on the summit of which was fired the Union salute of forty-four guns at noon.

IN COMMEMORATION OF THE BATTLE OF CHATTANOOGA.

At that hour began the exercises in the tent intended to commemorate, in connection with the dedication, the battle of Chattanooga proper.

Vice-President Stevenson presided. The proceedings were opened with prayer by Rev. Samuel J. Niccolls, D.D., of St. Louis. Hon. George W. Ochs, Chattanooga's eloquent executive, was introduced, and extended a cordial welcome to the visitors to the mountain city.

Gen. W. B. Bate, a senator from Tennessee, was the first speaker. His address presented the southern view of the causes leading to the war.

Gen. Bate was followed by Gen. Charles H. Grosvenor, a representative in congress from Ohio.

Referring to the departure of Gov. Morton and staff from the platform at the battlefield Thursday, Speaker Hamilton Fish, of New York, said:

"Gov. Morton, recognizing the fact that this was an occasion when only the heroes who fought on this ground should speak, concluded to leave before he was called upon to make an address. New York state had no troops at Chickamauga, therefore why should its governor weary an audience already tired by an oppressively hot sun? Gov. Morton retired from the stage at a most opportune moment."

ARMY OF NORTHERN VIRGINIA REUNION.

At eight a joint committee of the survivors of the army of northern Virginia and that portion of the army of the Potomac which fought at Chickamauga was held. Gen. Walthall, of Mississippi, presided. Gov. Oates, of Alabama, who lost an arm in the battle, delivered an oration bristling with patriotism and bitter-sweet reminiscences. Col. Lewis Stedman, of New York, and Gen. J. A. Williamson, of Ohio, further pursued the course of eloquence, and evoked bursts of patriotic applause. The flag of the "Rock of Chickamauga" is in the city, as welcome in Dixie land as it was unwelcome in '63, and everywhere, from both sides, its appearance is the incentive for ovations. Particularly proud of the old tattered emblem are the Ohioans, who are prodigally represented here. Ohio has a deep and lasting interest in the historic battleground, and her monuments are strikingly handsome ones, especially so is the Eighteenth Ohio on Snodgrass hill.

There are many distinguished men and women here who are not taking an active part in the exercises. Among them are Gen. Longstreet, Gen. Lew Wallace, Mrs. John A. Logan, Senator Joe Blackburn and others. The whole affair is, as it were, a regeneration of patriotism and fraternal unity. By the silent sentinels and over the pathetic appealing graves of the "brave unknown," the hand of fellowship has been clasped; "no north, no south, no east, no west, but one America, one ever-abiding, always-enduring Union." The end of the celebration, the consummation of Webster's "Liberty and Union, one, now and forever inseparable."

HEADING HOMEWARD.

Gov. Altgeld headed the train of outgoing officials. He left at 1 a. m. At 8 o'clock the visiting members of the cabinet started on their return to Washington. In the afternoon the railroads were crowded to the utmost in handling the departing guests. Gov. Morton's big eight-car special left at 2 o'clock for Atlanta, which is the next objective point in the journey of most of the visitors. Gov. Matthews of Indiana, with his large party, will leave for Indianapolis via Nashville Saturday morning. Indiana had nearly 1,000 visitors here.

Gov. Rich and the Michigan delegation will remain until Saturday night. Part of the Michigan contingent will go to Atlanta. The Massachusetts delegation left by an evening train and will spend Saturday at Natural Bridge and Luray caverns, Virginia. Thence they will proceed directly home, reaching Boston Sunday evening.

PRESENTATION TO GEN. BOYNTON—RECEPTION TO DISTINGUISHED VISITORS.

At noon the citizens of Chattanooga paid compliments to Gen. H. V. Boynton, who originated the idea of making a national park of the battlefield of Chickamauga. A number of citizens, headed by Capt. H. D. Chambers, chairman of the executive committee of Chattanooga, and Hon. Adolph Ochs, of the Chattanooga Times, went to the general's office in the government building and presented him with a silver dinner set containing 225 pieces. It was a complete surprise to the veteran, and he was so overcome that he could scarcely express his thanks.

A reception was tendered the vice-president, Gen. Schofield and the visiting governors at night at the Read house. The following were present: Vice-President Stevenson, Gen. Schofield, Gov. McKinley of Ohio, Gov. Rich of Michigan, Gov. Greenhalge of Massachusetts, Gov. Oates of Alabama, Gov. Turney of Tennessee, Gov. McIntyre of Colorado, Gov. Holcomb of Nebraska, Gov. Morrill of Kansas, United States Senator Bate, Congressman Benton McMillin, Gen. Grosvenor, and other distinguished men.

ON LOOKOUT'S SIDE.

Tourists Rudely Shaken Up—Lost in a Cave.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Sept. 21.—One truck of a passenger train on the broadgauge road to Lookout Mountain, while coming down the grade last evening was thrown from the track and the cab dragged over the ties for 200 or 300 feet. The passengers were badly shaken up and bruised, but none of them were seriously hurt. Senator Peffer, of Kansas, received a cut over the right eye, which required a few stitches by the surgeon to close.

A report was received at the police station last evening that three men had gone into a cave under Point Lookout Thursday morning, and had not yet returned. The cave had not yet been fully explored, it is said, but the galleries and passages have been penetrated a total length of three or four miles.

CHARLES LECLERQ,

The Well-Known English Actor, Succumbs to Typhoid Fever in New York.

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—Charles Leclerq, the actor, died of typhoid fever Thursday night at the New York hospital. He was taken ill a week ago last Monday. He grew worse and a doctor was summoned, who found that he had typhoid fever. He was removed to hospital on Wednesday of last week, and on Saturday his friends were notified that there was no chance of his recovery.

Mr. Leclercq was born in England about fifty-four years ago. He belonged to a family of actors, his only surviving sister being Miss Rose Leclercq, well known on the London stage. His brother, who died several years ago, was Fechter's stage manager for a long time, and his sister, Carlotta Leclercq, was also prominent on the English stage until her death recently. He was never married, and his only relative in this country is his nephew, Fuller M. Ellish, a member of Sir Henry Irving's company, now playing in Montreal.

He had been a member of Augustin Daly's company for the past sixteen years, and had become well known as a player of character old men's parts.

THE REVOLT IN CUBA.

An Official Letter from Gen. Maximillo Gomez—An Inner View of the Situation—The Patriots Extending Their Lines and Confident of Success—Spanish Recruits for Cuban Graves—Gen. Campos Losing Prestige.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 21.—A letter was received yesterday in Philadelphia which was written on August 30 by Gen. Gomez, commander-in-chief of the Cuban army, at his headquarters in Camaguey. The letter, addressed to the secretary of the Cuban revolutionary party in the United States, sums up the condition of the military affairs in the excited island, and being written on the eve of constituting the revolutionary government, declares it the intention of the Cubans to raise loans for the republic in the United States. The full text of the letter follows:

DEAR COMPATRIOTS: We are on the eve of the constitution of the government. The representatives of Santiago de Cuba—Maj. Rafael Portuondo, Dr. Joaquin Castillo, Dr. Manduley and Civil Engineers P. Auguilla and Maj. Manaru Sanchez—have arrived already and those of Camaguey, headed by the Marquis of Santa Lucia, are waiting only for those appointed by the state of Las Villas in order to form the assembly and elect an executive and cabinet and appoint with sufficient powers our ministers abroad, especially the diplomatic agent in the United States, who will be authorized to raise loans for the republic.

"We have been very happy to receive the expeditions of Generals Roloff and Sanchez in Las Villas, and that of Gen. Jose Maria Rodridguez in this province, and just now I have heard the welcome news of the arrival of Col. Francisco Sanchez Reheverria, who landed with a great number of arms safely in Baracoa. With a few more expeditions we will be able to arm the rest of our increasing forces, resist the winter campaign, and extend our occupation to Matanzas.

"As to the war carried on against us; the Spanish have done little to diminish our drawing strength. They are on the defensive in this region, and dare not attack us to such an extent that I have been forced to surprise and besiege their garrison and towns, capturing many hundreds of stands and arms; the railroad between Neuvitas and Puerto Principe, their strategic line, has been generally interrupted and partially destroyed; but such are the low tactics of the enemy that they do not publish any account of our numerous engagements, in order to make the world believe that there is no war in this section.

"In the eastern department everything is organized as ours is in Las Villas; the revolution advances towards the west, and I have organized a great deal from here in the latter province.

"The late personal defeat of Gen. Martinez Campos at the hands of the brave Gen. Maceo, has caused the prestige and fame of the Spanish captain-general to suffer a great loss, and the morale of his troops to be endangered. Campos has not been able, not even with all his sagacity and studied malice to hide, or, better, efface the effect of such a failure, they want to unsuccessfully explain his defeat and have people think that he has attained his object, but any military man versed in our kind of warfare will laugh at the futility of such pretensions.

"We cannot give you a detailed account of our operations; it would be long and tedious. I can only tell you that in five months of the campaign the enemy have been able to measure the wonderful strength of the Cuban forces, and thus it is that Gen. Campos has hurriedly called for large reinforcements. My opinion as a military man, given without passion or vanity, is that they will arrive too late. The revolution is assured. It does not make any difference whether I fall and others do also, the revolution will go on till it triumphs.

"An estimate made by physicians well acquainted with our climatic conditions as to the losses suffered by the Spanish army in Cuba is as follows: In normal conditions 8 per cent.; different diseases, yellow fever, typhoid, dysentery, ulcers, etc., 40 per cent., and men employed in different occupations not in the army, 7 per cent., a total of 45 per cent. per year, with at present nearly 25,000 Spanish soldiers hors du combat. This will give you an idea of what will become of the 50,000 men sent to reinforce the Spaniards. The country from one end to the other is hostile to Spain; those who serve are forced to do so, and forced service is not a guarantee for the stability of any government.

"This is our situation, and you can make it public to the whole world, without fear of being contradicted. I do not know how to lie.

"I respect myself enough not to descend to such low acts as our adversaries.

"The morality and discipline in our ranks is excellent, and we take care to correct the least fault which would detract from the nobility of our cause.

"GEN. MAXIMILLO GOMEZ,
Commanander-in-Chief of the Cuban Army.

FIVE THOUSAND DOLLARS

The Reward Offered for the Capture of the Absconding Van Bokkelen.

CHICAGO, Sept. 21.—President Doane of the Merchants' Loan & Trust Co., announced yesterday that a reward of $5,000 would be paid by the bank for the capture of Ross C. Van Bokkelen, the absconding teller who stole $40,000 of the bank's money. Private detectives are on the trail of the defaulter, who is supposed to be in Mexico or headed in that direction. The officials of the bank are determined to spare no money to capture the man.

ANOTHER CHALLENGE

To Contest for Possession of the America's Cup Comes from Across the Great Pond—Considered as an English Endorsement of the New York Regatta Committee's Action in the Late Defender-Valakyrie Race.

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—The Evening Telegram last night published the following:

Another challenge has been issued for the America's cup. Ex-Commodore Smith, ex-president of the New York Yacht club, received a cablegram from Charles Rose, son of Sir John Rose, of London, challenging the club to a race to be sailed in 1896. The challenge was turned over to the New York Yacht club. It can not be formally acted upon because it was not made in the proper form. According to the deed of gift under which the New York Yacht club holds the America's cup, the challenge should have been sent through the secretary of the club to which Mr. Rose belongs to the secretary of the New York Yacht club. Mr. Rose challenges as an individual. It is thought, however, that he will probably put his offer in formal shape for the action of the yacht club.

Commodore Smith said last night that the challenger is a member of the Royal Yacht squadron, but his name does not appear on the list of those belonging to that organization.

Sir John Rose, father of the challenger, is a member of the banking firm of Morton, Rose & Co., London correspondents of Morton, Bliss & Co.

The fact that a new challenge comes so soon is regarded as a compliment to the regatta committee of the New York Yacht club from an English source.

LONDON, Sept. 21.—The Field to-day makes mention of a possible challenge for the America's cup. The gentleman referred to is probably Mr. Charles Rose. The Field says:

"A wealthy gentleman has informed us that he is prepared to build a cutter to challenge for the America's cup in 1896, provided the committee will consent to have the matches sailed away from New York, so that it will be impossible for excursion boats to interfere.

DUN'S COMMERCIAL REVIEW.

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—R. G. Dun & Co. in their weekly review of trade, issued to-day, say:

Movements of exchange and of gold have somewhat affected all markets this week. It is confidently believed that the international syndicate will allow no financial disorder and many are certain that an issue of bonds will come. August imports exceed exports by $15,282,729, and the net exports of gold were $15,159,782. A small cotton crop with large stocks held abroad, a slender demand for Atlantic wheat with Russian arriving in London in large quantities and merchandise exports and imports at New York 30 per cent. larger than last year in September thus far, scarcely promise a speedy change.

In spite of gold exports wheat advanced for some days, in all nearly 2 cents. Corn rose and fell in sympathy with wheat, with as little reason.

The cotton market, lifting and falling a fraction each day alternately, shows no settled tendency, big stocks balancing an undoubted, but as yet indefinite, decrease in yield.

The surprising increase in production and advance in prices of iron seem to be bringing a natural check, as prices have gone so high as to cause some purchases from Europe, both of pig and finished products, and have also caused a distinct shrinkage in home demand.

Sales of wool are smaller than last year, and for three weeks only 17,133,470 pounds, of which 7,718,370 were foreign, against 24,572,400 pounds in 1892, of which 7,614,000 were foreign. Prices of foreign wool are so low that purchases for export have been made.

Commercial failures for two weeks of the month were $4,154,227 this year, against $2,867,764 last year, and $8,260,813 for the same weeks in 1893. This year $1,723,814 were of manufacturing concerns, against $959,716 last year, and $2,311,588 of trading concerns, against $1,796,048 last year.

The failures this week have been 213 in the United States, against 210 last year, and 32 in Canada, against 48 last year.

ITALIAN UNIFICATION

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—The Italians of Washington celebrated the anniversary of the unification of their country yesterday. The celebration began with a street parade, and was conducted by the local society known as the Union et Fratelanza Italiana. Baron de Fava, the Italian ambassador, received the society, about 400 strong, at his residence on Connecticut avenue, and gave them a luncheon. Patriotic speeches were made, and a message to King Humbert, congratulating him on the unity of the Italian states, was sent by the society through Baron de Fava.

Activity of British War Vessels in Chinese Waters.

LONDON, Sept. 21.—The Globe prints a dispatch from Shanghai saying that the British cruisers Aeolus, Spartan, Rainbow and Caroline and the sloop Daphne assembled unexpectedly at the outer anchorage there yesterday, and subsequently proceeded up the Yang Tse Kiang river. The movement was made in consequence of threats having been made against foreigners in the interior of the empire. The Chinese officials, the dispatch says, are greatly excited over the action taken by Great Britain.

BROWN CHEMICAL CO. BALTIMORE, MD.

THE * CHRONICLE.

C. C. DuBOSE, Editor and Proprietor.

COLUMBIANA, SEPT. 26, 1895.

THE Kansas City Star observes that good times are killing the free silver craze, and the people will see to it that free silver will not get a chance to kill the good times.

JUDGE JAMES A. BILBRO, of the ninth judical circuit of this state, opens court with a short reading from the Bible, followed by prayer. The remarkable thing is that so commendable a practice should be so rare as to be considered worthy of special notice. Would it not be well for the lawyers to follow the pious judge's example and open their pleadings with prayer?

IT IS a fact not generally known that Gen. Ulysses S. Grant and Jefferson Davis were relatives, having a common ancestor in the third generation back. This is vouched for by a correspondent of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat who has as his authority some old family records which show that these two men were both great grand-sons of William Simpson of Pennsylvania.

DR. GEORGE PLUMB, one of the chemists of the University of Chicago, is a noted food concentrator. He believes the time is soon coming when hot water and food tablets will be the sole accoutrements of a kitchen. He says the essential food elements of a 1,200-pound steer can be got into an ordinary pill box, one of his tablets, the size of a pea, making a large bowl of soup. A ration case of his planning which weighed eight ounces, contained the following supply: Three tablets concentrated soups, equal to three quarts; four tablets, beef, equal to six pounds; one tablet, milk, equal to one pint; two tablets, wheaten grits, equal to two pounds; one tablet, egg food, equal to twelve eggs.

THE Chattanooga Times, during the Chickamauga Celebration last week, published mammoth illustrated editions each day, ranging in size from 24 to 60 pages. Every issue contained the fullest reports of the great events which were transpiring, besides a vast amount of special matter bearing on the celebration, such as historical stories of the battles, sketches of the leading men in attendance and the like. Such a great paper was never before published in a city the size of Chattanooga. It was a marvel in southern journalism, and must have proved as big an advertisement for Chattanooga as did the celebration itself. Adolph S. Ochs and his associates know how to make a great newspaper.

We heartily endorse the following article from the Talladega News-Reporter. "Oh for a legislature that will take the bovine by the horns and pass a dog law that will kill out three-fourths of the dogs in the state Fully that many are utterly no account, and with them out of the way there would be some chance for the sheep raiser and stock farmer. As it is, there isn't a flock of good sheep in the county that we know of. And how much better it would be for the farmers themselves if they could only realize it. What it takes to keep a dog a year will keep a hog, and every Christmas instead of having an egg-sucking, sheep-killing dog that won't even make soap grease, his family could have a 300 pound hog. Every five-year-old dog means fifteen hundred pounds of good pork thrown into a dog skin and ruined, to say nothing of the devilment the dog has been doing in that time. We do earnestly hope our people will come to their senses in this matter, stop raising dogs and turn them into hogs to eat and sheep to furnish clothing for their half-starved, half-clad children. God Almighty will never help us until we use some common sense in helping ourselves. When we learn to tax dogs high enough to pay for all damage they do and make our laws to protect valuable sheep instead of worthless dogs, then we can expect some outside help in stock raising, but not before.'

John G. Mauger, editor of the Sunbeam, Seligman, Mo., who named Grover Cleveland for the presidency in November, 1882, while he was mayor of Buffalo, N. Y., is enthusiastic in his praise of Chamberlain's Cholic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. He says: "I have used it for the past five years and consider it the best preparation of the kind in the market. It is as staple as sugar and coffee in this section. It is an article of merit and should be used in every household." For sale by Parker & Armstrong.

AN AUTOMATIC GOLD RESERVE.

New York Evening Post.

Yesterday a correspondent asked us to give a brief explanation of the method by which the gold reserve of the country would be maintained if the government had nothing to do with the matter, but should simply leave it to the ordinary operations of commerce. We replied in substance that the method would be the same that is followed in England, France and Germany now, and the same that was followed in this country before the war. It must be borne in mind that the United States alone among civilized nations is on a false monetary system—a system which was adopted as a consequence (though not a necessary consequence) of war, and which once adopted we have not had the good sense to get rid of.

The paradoxical result has been that while we claim to be the nation which reserves the largest liberty to the citizens and allows the least possible interference by the government with private business, we are in fact the only nation that tolerates paternalism in money matters and allows the government to interfere in every bargain that men make with each other from the negotiation of a railway loan down to the hiring of a day laborer. All these bargains are bottomed on the gold basis, and the consideration in every case is a certain weight of gold or its equivalent, but whether it shall be executed in gold depends upon the government, and this depends in part upon the whims of 300 or 400 men selected in the first instance by Platt, Quay, Croker and other political bosses, and afterward tried by the ordeal of universal suffrage. After passing these tests they are supposed to be competent to decide whether all the contracts and bargains made in the United States shall be met and discharged in gold, or in silver worth only half as much, or in paper, which, in a supposable case, may be "not worth a continental."

The difference between us and other specie-paying countries—for ours is as yet a specie-paying country, thanks to President Cleveland—is that in the other countries the government has nothing to do with the money in which bargains are computed and settled, in which wages are computed and paid, except to put its stamp on certain pieces of gold to certify that they are of a certain weight and fineness, and to prescribe that when payments are made in these pieces the obligation shall be considered lawfully discharged. How the obligor shall obtain these pieces of gold is no concern of the government, nor is it any concern of the government how many ounces of that metal shall be brought to the mint or how many shall be melted or exported. Nor does it guarantee that banks shall always have gold enough to redeem their notes or pay their checks with in case the noteholders and depositors for any reason want gold. The utmost that it does in such a case is to enforce penalties for any breach of the bank's contract just as in other cases of breach of contract.

Now let us see what happens when there is a demand for gold for export in England for example. If it is an unusual demand the bank raises the rate of discount. If it has been lending at 3 per cent. previously it will now raise the rate to 4 per cent. This has a two-fold consequence. It causes a certain proportion of the bank's borrowers to pay up. All those to whom money is not worth 4 per cent. will pay their maturing bills and not borrow again. These payments are the equivalent of gold to the bank, as they must be resolvable into gold at the mint price, which is at the rate of £3 17s 10 1-2d per ounce. The rise in the rate of discount is also an inducement to foreigners to send money to London for investment, and this checks the export movement. If the export continues nevertheless the bank raises the rate of discount another peg, say to 5 per cent. This causes another lot of borrowers to pay up, and attracts more money from abroad and has a still further effect, which is really the most important of all. As it forces borrowers to pay 5 per cent. who were formerly paying only 3, it compels some of them to sell their goods at lower prices, and this leads to an increased exporation of goods which thus take the place of gold in the country's foreign trade. As there is no assignable limit to these three operations, all proceeding from the rise in the rate of discount, it is plain that it is adequate to check the exportation of gold in every case and that it is automatic in the sense that the government has nothing whatever to do with it. It is needless to say that the same course would be pursued here if the government were restricted as formerly to the monetary function of merely certifying the weight and fineness of coins.

One fact touching the recent exportations of gold from the United States has been lost sight of, and is continually lost sight of, namely that we are producing about a million dollars of gold per week. Consequently an exportation of $52,000,000 per year would leave us just where we were before. This fact, however, often repeated, makes no impression on the public mind because the mining of gold is done quietly and without parade, while the exportation of it is always trumped in the public ear.

WHO IS TO BLAME?

From the Philadelphia Times.

Mr. Eckels, the comptroller of the currency, in an interview in London, explained the present financial situation very tersely in a few sentences worth reprinting. After the statement that the American people have lately been buying a great deal abroad and are not selling sufficient of their own produce to equalize things, thus necessitating a settlement of the balance due in gold, Mr. Eckels said:

"We maintain a financial system which makes the U. S. treasury a general market of supply for all requiring gold. Consequently more or less embarrassment comes to the administration of the treasury department when these balances require to be settled. However, the treasury has always managed to maintain unquestioned the payment in gold of its obligations, and always will do so. The system under which it is forced to operate makes it sometimes expensive to do so, but as long as representatives in congress refuse to change that system and as long as the voters tolerate them the people have no right to complain of the expense."

Under any normal financial system, those who required gold for commercial purposes would obtain it from a bank or banks, upon such terms as the state of the money market dictated; the bank would replenish its stock in the ordinary course of the banking business and nobody would be disturbed. The transactions would have no interest for the general public. In this country, however, anybody who wants gold goes to the United States treasury, and by presenting a sufficient amount of United States notes, gets all the gold he requires being pledged to redeem all its notes on demand.

But the United States treasury has no means of replenishing its stock of gold, as a bank would have, and it dare not allow it to be depleted, as a bank might, since upon the evidence of its readiness to pay out gold on demand depends the value of the whole volume of currency. It must, therefore, go into the market and buy gold at whatever cost. It has to perform some of the most important functions of a bank without any banking facilities, and the wonder is that it has succeeded in doing this so long.

The responsibility for this worse than absurd system is not with the treasury officials but with those who inserted in the act for the resumption of specie payments the provision forbidding the retirement of legal tender notes. If these notes, when once redeemed and paid, had been cancelled, as they ought to have been, as so much debt wiped out, the most disturbing feature in our currency system would long since have been removed. As it is, these notes have been paid over and over again, and constitute as has been said, and endless chain, drawing gold continuously from the treasury and carrying none back. It is marvelous that an intelligent people should tolerate so preposterous a system.

GOOD ADVICE.

Gadsden Times-News.

Political matters should be relegated to the rear, and for the time at least, the chief aim of our people should be to work for the upbuilding of his town, county and state. There is plenty of time to open the campaign of 1896, and, besides, we are opposed to long campaigns because they keep up bitter personalities that are extremely unpleasant. The shorter the campaign, the better for us on all sides, and the candidates should allow us a breathing spell anyway. We want the people to turn their attention to the more important subjects of immigration and good roads. Nearly everyone is interested in immigration, and certainly we cannot do very much in bringing people into our midst unless we wake to a more progressive spirit with regard to good roads. If one will travel a splendidly constructed road he will always find it skirted with fine cultivated fields owned by prosperous farmers. It is just the other way with a bad road; you find poor people along-side of it, and you find exceedingly poor farms. A road is an index to the character and intelligence of a community, and no northern or western farmer wishes to get into an undesirable community. We must do something to better our roads; they do not reflect credit upon our county.

ADVICE TO FARMERS.

Florence Herald.

Improved methods of farming are taking the place of crude methods. Improved farm machinery is being rapidly introduced, and labor-saving machinery is no new thing. A planter who still sticks to the fleecy staple and neglects to raise corn and hogs is not in it, so to speak. To those farmers who have been driven to the wall in the past few years—their credit ruined and what has promised to be a curse—the low prices of cotton last year—has proven a blessing in disguise. The markets of Europe are now filled with cotton and the short crop only has saved the people of the southern states from a terrible financial calamity. If the farmers of the South will decrease the acreage another year, prices will still advance and prosperity will again reign supreme. An overproduction is what has ruined the South.

Irving W. Larimore, physical director of Y. M. C. A., Des Moines, Iowa, says he can conscientiously recommend Chamberlain's Pain Balm to athletics, gymnasts, bicyclists, foot ball players, and the profession in general, for bruises, sprains and dislocations; also for soreness and stiffness of the muscles. When applied before the parts become swollen it will effect a cure in one-half the time usually required. For sale by Parker & Armstrong.

VIOLENCE AT ELECTIONS.

Birmingham State.

Col. Troy is giving very bad advice to his populist friends to secure managers at elections. This will never do! When law and order are shoved out of the way and mob law substituted, we have become barbarians. It is far better to suffer for a season from the cheats and defrauders who are protected by the forms of law than to resort to violence and encourage lawlessness. There never yet was a free country which did not in time purify the polls and secure honest elections. Colonel Troy seems to leave out of view the fact that in more than half of the counties of the state there is no resort to fraud, and that in the other half the division between men and ideas is becoming so great that the ballot stuffers are dividing. If they are pursued only by the law, or only by the exigencies of party or of faction, we will find that in a short time we will have an honest expression of the voice of the white people of Alabama. There is no occasion for violence or for resort to counter frauds. The next general assembly will be a body representing a majority of the white voters of Alabama, and they will apply the necessary corrective to unfair machinery methods. If any one expects a fraudulently elected governor to be seated by that body he may disabuse his mind at once. There is revolution in the air and revolutions never go backward. Colonel Troy and his shot-gun may retire to the rear. States can be saved without the shot-gun!

STATE BANKS.

Piedmont Inquirer.

For the past twelve months the question of free silver has completely over-shadowed another important question—that of state banks. But if our next congress will repeal the 10 per cent. tax on these institutions and allow each state to provide a wise and safe system of state banking, then we will hear no more of this contention about silver. What the people need and should have is a convenient and elastic currency of sufficient volume to supply the demands of every day business. Take our people generally and the farmers in particular, and their uses for money are confined principally to their daily home wants. The majority of the people rarely ever go outside the limits of their own state. The advantage in having state money would be, mainly, that it would be apt to remain in the state and accessible to our people the year round. In mid-summer when the farmer always needs money most, he could get it at a low rate of interest and save himself from ruinous credit prices. Another thing. This state money would relieve, in a large measure, the mid-summer money stringency so generally felt in the South by supplying a constantly circulating medium which would be accessible to our people at a low rate of interest.

A SHORT CUT TO THE TRUTH.

From the Philadelphia Times.

Gov. McKinley takes occasion to thresh over the claims and qualities of his tariff law as a revenue getter in his opening speech in the Ohio campaign, but the official treasury figures must have been troublesome.

During the two years and nine months' run of the McKinley law, from October 1, 1890, to July 1, 1893, the surplus revenues over expenditures amounted to $13,388,067. That was the situation July 1, 1893; but for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894, the last year of its operation as a law, the deficiency was $69,803,260. To this deficiency must be added the further sum of $13,508,557 to cover the months of July and August of last year. The Wilson bill did not go into effect until September 1, 1894.

There is an actual deficiency, as shown by the records of the treasury department, of $83,311,818, an average of $1,487,000 a month during the continuance of the McKinley law, but Gov. McKinley had no use for these figures in his speech at Springfield.

There will be abundant opportunity for Gov. McKinley to remove clouds from essential facts as the Ohio campaign takes gait and hustles along.

A. M. Bailey, a well-known citizen of Eugene, Oregon, says his wife has for years been troubled with chronic diarrhœa and used many remedies with little relief until she tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy, which has cured her sound and well. Give it a trial and you will be surprised at the prompt relief it affords. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Parker & Armstrong.

It Is Populistic.

Birmingham News.

Free silver advocates have been repeatedly challenged to show where and how their teaching is other than populistic doctrine. No national democratic convention ever declared for any such principles, and until this is done no intelligent democrat can claim them as "democratic."

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS.

Ed. Parker left Monday for Howard College.

Douglass Logan, Esq., of Centerville, is a visitor in town this week.

Mrs. I. W. Bailey, of Calera, is visiting her father's family in town.

Miss Viola Malone has returned from a delightful visit to relatives in Bessemer.

Misses Pearl and Linnie Seale returned Monday from a visit to their father in Selma.

Miss Mary Riddick, of Shelby, was a guest of friends here Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

A. D. Smith, a clever farmer of near Vincent, has been in town several days attending court.

Maj. John B. Randall and C. L. O'Neal, of Calera, paid us an appreciated call yesterday.

Miss Lizzie Riddick one of Shelby's prettiest young ladies spent Saturday with Miss Annie McMillan.

Mrs. C. C. Elliott returned yesterday to her home in Vincent, after a visit of several days to relatives here.

Mrs. Fayette Armstrong, of Shelby, was a guest of her sister Mrs. Laura Armstrong, Monday and Tuesday.

Will O'Hara left Friday for East Lake to continue his studies at Howard. May unbounded success reward him.

C. J. Christian and wife, of Bessemer, spent last and a part of this week with Mrs. Christian's father, W. R. A. Milner.

W. B. Bell is at home from Marion Junction. He will remain awhile, then go to Atlanta where he will engage in business.

Mrs. Henry Wilson returned to Birmingham Tuesday after a two weeks' visit to relatives here and Anniston.

Mrs. B. L. Moore and Miss Fannie Longshore returned home Tuesday from a delightful trip to Atlanta. They took in the fair of course.

W. F. Thetford, Jr., of Talladega, has located here, and serves notice on the world through our advertising coumns that he is not here for his health, but to practice law, and that he is ready for busines. Welcome, brother.

We have recently received a large assortment of bill heads, statements, letter and note heads, envelopes, etc, and we can give you anything you want on short notice and at reasonable prices. Consult us before you place your order.

To Judge Russell: Hadn't you better hit "Jake" another lick? He is one on you up to date. Say, Judge, did "Jake" really wear over to Birmingham in addition to T. J. Martin's plug hat, striped pants and toothpick shoes? And is it a fact that he wore a "biled" shirt?

The job department has just completed five hundred minutes of the Shelby Baptist Association. The work is up to date in quality of material and excellence of typography. We defy any city office in Alabama or outside to beat it either in workmanship or price. Call on us if you want good work.

At 1 o'clock Tuesday morning the spirit of Miss Mary Moore aged 18 years, took its flight to Heaven. Miss Mary was a young lady of superior charms and traits of character. She had been teaching school at Morrow's school house two miles west of town near where she lived. Her mother, sister and brothers, have our heart's sympathy.

A Good One on the Atlanta Constitution.

A bright woman in the city of Talladega has a little boy who owns a William Goat. His Goatship has a bad reputation at home and among the neighbors, and really has been guilty of all kinds of crimes and misdemeanors, such as the festive kids are usually charged with. Some days ago a gentleman of the family left his sack of Yellow Rose smoking tobacco upon the water shelf on the back piazza, and when he returned to take his accustomed smoke he saw Billy quietly chewing the sack, tobacco and all. It soon disappeared, and the gentleman consoled himself with the idea that directly he would see a very sick goat. But he was disappointed. The goat was as festive and happy as ever. The same evening the gentleman left a copy of the Atlanta Constitution on the back piazza, where he had been reading some heavy articles on the silver question. He returned after some half hour's absence, and found his friend Billy busy chewing and devouring the Constitution. Very soon the last vestige of the paper was gone and in the stomach of his Goatship. The goat came near having spasms, but finally recovered. The question in that household is, what will it take to kill a billy goat?

A prominent Talladegan vouches for the truthfulness of the above.

Items from Sterrett.

Several of our citizens are attending court this week.

Miss Lula Jarrett has vacated her school till November.

Joel Falkner transacted business in Birmingham last week.

Dry, needing rain, and hot, O, my; too warm for September.

C. H. Bradshaw has removed his family to C. Butter's mill on Yellow Leaf creek.

Mrs. Margarette Baugh, of Easonville, is visiting friends and relatives here, preparatory to moving to Texas this fall.

Rev. S. V. McGinnis has returned from Bibb county where he has been helping Bro. Hubbard in a series of meetings.

The school exhibition will be on the night of Thursday October 3rd, so those who feel disposed will bear in mind. Come one, come all, a welcome to all.

Messrs. R. H. Jarrett, J. R. Dyke and J. S. Falkner attended the Cahaba Valley Association held with Friendship church in St. Clair county the latter part of last week. They report a very pleasant time, also the next session of that body will be held with the church at this place.

BONAMI.

Vandiver Locals.

Cotton is being picked and sorghum made.

Miss Mary Billingsly is on the sick list now.

Lampkin Vandiver is attending court this week.

Hut Vandiver and family moved to our town last week.

G. O. Brasher shipped two bales of cotton to Birmingham last week.

John Watson and Will Andros are prepared to gin all the cotton produced in this vicinity.

Singing school is suspended until Mr Bab returns from court. We again invite everyone, who will, to take part with us in the closing days.

A. B. Allen and family were up Sunday visiting their friends here. Mr. Allen is parylized, and we extend to him our most sincere sympathy.

G. B. Spruell was in town last Friday. He seems to be all smiles. We don't know whether it is because his school is closed or because he is preparing for another.

Rev. Parker, of Harpersville, filled the stand in the Baptist church here last Saturday night and Sunday. His discourse was a very interesting one. May success attend him through life.

REPORTER.

Wilsonville Waifs.

Sorghum "chawing" all the go.

If it doesn't rain very soon it will be a "mighty long dry spell."

We regret very much to report the sickness of little Devotee Kilpatrick.

We enjoyed a sociable at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Ray, on last Thursday evening.

Marvin Self has been quite sick for several days, but we are glad to report that he is convalescing.

Our school is progressing finely. Five new pupils entered Monday. The enrollment will now reach near 60.

The Epworth League is thoroughly organized here, with a memberspip of fourteen. We hope that all will join at an early date.

Messrs. Will Tinney and Will Smith have returned from Indian Territory. Mr. Smith is quite sick at present writing, but we wish for him a speedy recovery.

What do you think our boys have done? Why they have organized a society known as the F. A. K. i. e. "Fool Alabama Kickers." None but the above named class included.

A telegram was received today announcing the death of little Otis, daugter of W. R. Self, of Hattiesburg, Miss., which occurred Sunday night. The remains will be brought here for interment.

Quite a crowd congregated at the depot on Monday at noon to witness the departure of their friends John Weldon and his sister, Miss Mattie, who left for East Lake to enter Howard College. We wish them every success. Weep not dear girls, mourn not ye boys, for they will return ere Christmas has gone.

"BROWN EYES."

A Ghost to Order.

Mr. J. Heuniker Heaton tells an interesting sequel to the most famous Australian ghost story which came to his knowledge as one of the proprietors of the leading New South Wales weekly, The Town and Country Journal. One of the most famous murder cases in Australia was discovered by the ghost of the murdered man sitting on the rail of a dam—Australian for horse-pond—into which his body had been thrown. Numberless people saw it, and the crime was duly brought home. Years after, a dying man making his confession, said that he invented the ghost. He witnessed the crime, but was threatened with death if he divulged it as he wished to, and the only way he saw out of the "impasse" was to affect to see the ghost where the body would be found. As soon as he started the story, such is the power of nervousness that numerous other people began to see it, until its fame reached such dimensions that a search was made and the body found, and the murderers brought to justice.

The Problem Solved.

Mr. Jordan Holland, an old prosperous and highly esteemed farmer and stockman of Alabama has at last solved the hog and chicken cholera problem.

He has by hard study and much expreimenting discovered a sure, positive, guaranteed and never failing cure for the dreaded desease which has stood the test in thousands of cases without a single failure. His daughter, Mrs. Rachel V. Thomas a highly esteemed christian lady of Cowarts Ala., is selling the recipe and family right, also the ready prepared medicine. The remedy is a certain preventive as well as a cure. Mrs. Thomas has a standing reward of $50,000 for a case of cholera which her remedy will not cure. Price of recipe and family right $1.00, medicine 50c and $1.00 per bottle. Testimonials and circulars free. Our readers should investigate this. Address.

MRS. RACHEL V. THOMAS.

An Awkward Dilemma.

According to the Atlanta Constitution, a Western Alabama editor was writing up a local theatrical performance recently and desired to give the participants a flattering notice; so he mentioned the names of several young ladies of the town, and wrote: "They all filled their parts to perfection." Then he went home. When the paper appeared it was found that the printer had put an "n" in the place of an "r" in the word "parts." Of course, it was an awkward dilemma for the poor editor, but when the bloomer craze shall have become a little more widely adopted such embarrassing mistakes will probably be passed by unheeded.

The Trouble.

Edwardsville Standard-News.

One of our populite contemporaries said a few days ago: "The people's party of Alabama could be successful if it would relegate to the rear those old chronic office-seekers in its ranks and who are in the party for what spoils there can be gotten out of it." That's it, brother, your party is dominated by the fellows who are nagging for office. They see no good in any one but themselves. You will have to weed them out before you can hope to succeed, and the fact is, it seems from our point of observation, that if you should drop all of them your party would be without voters in a measure.

While in Chicago, Mr. Charles L. Kahler, a prominent shoe merchant of DesMoines, Iowa, had quite a serious time of it. He took such a severe cold that he could hardly talk or navigate, but the prompt use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cured him of his cold so quickly that others at the hotel who had bad colds followed his example and half a dozen persons ordered it from the nearest drug store. They were profuse in their thanks to Mr. Kahler for telling them how to cure a bad cold so quickly. For sale by Parker & Armstrong.

Hellen, aged 4, was spending a night away from home. At bedtime she knelt at her hostess' knee to say her prayers, expecting the usual prompting.

Finding Mrs. I. unable to help her out, she concluded thus:

"Please, God, 'scuse me. I can't 'member my prayers, and I'm stayin' with a lady that don't know any."

It's a Fact.

Houston Post.

It is said both Alabama and Michigan have passed Pennsylvania as iron producers. One-half of this country is ignorant of the rapidity with which the other half is growing.

In The Country.

Detroit Free Press.

She—I presume the country editor's pathway is not strewn with flowers?

He (pleasantly)—No, not exactly; but we stumble on a bushel of potatoes occasionally, or a cord of wood.

CAPT. KOLB'S NEW ROLE.

Huntsville Mercury.

Captain Kolb's recent address to the cotton planters of the South, advising them not to rush their cotton on the market, but to hold it for 10 cents, shows the captain up in a different role from that he has been occupying as an agitator and sower of dissension in the ranks of the agriculturists. If Parson Adams would but follow suit with an address to the ministers on "How to entertain congregations in hot weather," and Colonel Troy follow with an address to his lawyers on the "Waste of brain matter before petit juries," the wings of peace would fan the fevered brows of the whilom populists and greenbackers who are working themselves into a white heat in anticipation of another tussel with the organized democrats over the silver issue. Kolb has set them a good example. Will they follow him in the good work as they have in the bad?

THE PEOPLE KNOW

New Orleans States.

Having been compelled to drop the calamity cry because of the general revival of trade industry throughout the country, the republicans are now claiming that the return of prosperity is due to the election of a republican congress last November. It is evident that the republicans regard the American people as dullards and gudgeons who will swallow the story like a trout would a minnow, but they will be disappointed. The people are well aware of the fact that a congress elected one year before it assembles and has a chance to legislate can have anything to do with either business prosperity or depression. The prosperity which the country is now enjoying is the result of the reduction of the tariff duties by the democratic party, and confidence in the sound financial policy of President Cleveland.

POSTAL SERVICE'S PROGRESS.

Pittsburg Post.

The progress of the postal service was happily illustrated at the Philadelphia meeting by Postmaster General Wilson, who read a letter from the person who he believed to be the oldest employe of the postal service. He was appointed a postmaster in Ohio sixty-one years ago by Andrew Jackson, and at that time it cost 6¼ cents to send a letter thirty miles, 12½ cents to send one 150 miles and 18¾ cents to send one 400 miles. It took two pounds of butter and four dozen eggs, the old postmaster wrote, to pay for the transmission of a letter to Washington, and a fairly fat Ohio cow would only pay for the transmission of thirty-two letters to the national capital.

THE Eufaula Times tells the story of a happening in South Alabama which has not probably its like in history. Years ago a Mr. Weeks built a Universalist church some miles from Brundidge, Pike county, and the congregation has been large and devout since the beginning. Six weeks ago a young man named H. L. Martin, of Ozark, having been converted at a tent meeting, decided that he had some special work to perform for the Lord; so he went down into Pike county and laid siege to Mr. Weeks and his congregation, and at the close of his labors baptized Mr. Weeks and his entire congregation into the Baptist faith. The young man is a son of Rev. Dr. Martin, of Abbeville, Henry county.

They do not weaken by their action, but by giving tone to stomach and bowels greatly invigorate the system. Regular size 25c per box. Sold by Parker & Armstrong, druggists.

Would Kill It.

Galveston News.

Even if the silver movement were unobjectionable otherwise, it would still go down because of the load of demagogues who are riding it.

Old People.

Old people who require medicine to regulate the bowels and kidneys will find the true remedy in Electric Bitters. This medicine does not stimulate and contains no whiskey nor other intoxicant, but acts as a tonic and alterative. It acts mildly on the stomach and bowels, adding strength and giving tone to the organs, thereby aiding nature in the performance of the functions. Electric Bitters is an excellent appetizer and aids digestion. Old people find it just exactly what they need. Price fifty cents per bottle at Parker & Armstrong's drug store.

On the Installment Plan.

Taken at Home.

McElree's Wine of Cardui relieves the agony endured by many women month after month in modest silence. It is recommended by many physicians as the most effective remedy known for painful menstruation. The treatment can be adopted in the privacy of home, without submitting to humiliating examinations or consulting a doctor.

Mrs. W. L. Mitchell, of Pratt Mines, Ala., writes: "For the past six months I have suffered awful pains at the time of my monthly periods. A few months ago my husband got me some McElree's Wine of Cardui. Since using that I haven't felt a pain. I can't give it all the praise it should have."

J. W. Pollard, Pleasant Ridge, Miss., says: "McElree's Wine of Cardui cured my wife after four doctors had failed."

Short Stories and Sketches Fresh From the People.

They Had Been "A Thinkin" and the Funeral Procession Didn't Come Off—The General Crop of Fools—"Hell-Roarin Billy" Weaned From Cussin. Andy Lucas and the Elder.

(Copyright, 1895.)

My friend and fellow servant, Andy Lucas, which the same is likewise also a natural-born horse trader, was dead right that time when he unbuttoned his lips and give it out that "woman is a monstrous jealous thing." It was accordin to that great gob of truth that they busted up a beautiful deathbed scene and headed off a funeral procession over at the Wash Green place one day last week.

They Had Been "A Thinkin."

Old man Wash Green has buried two wives already, and everybody thought from general appearments last week that the time had come for him to put away the third one. But right there is where everybody made a mistake as big as a barn door. Mises Green had been sick abed with a slow fever for lo these many weeks. The doctors had give her up, and the family had give her up, and she was both ready and willin to go right on home to glory.

But in the main time you must recollect that a buxom, fine-lookin young woman by the name of Miss Josie May Linton has been makin her home at the Wash Green place for two or three years. She was a poor orphant girl, you understand, whereas Mises Green took a likin to her and picked her up and made a place at home for her like she was a reglar member of the family.

Now then. Some of the neighbors had come in to speak a few partin words with Mises Green. The preacher had been there and read the scripture and lead in prayer. She had called the children in one by one and told them all goodbye. And then she called for her dear beloved husband. Old man Wash come creepin in, cryin as if his heart would break, and took his seat by the bed. Mises Green had a long farewell talk with him about the future and the past in goneral, and finally she come to the children.

"I could welcome death with a smile if it want for leaving you and the children," says Mises Green, and old man Wash looked like he jest couldn't stand the naked thought of such a thing. "When I am dead and gone," she went on presently," I reckon it would be better for you to marry Josie May. She knows the children and they know her, and no doubts she would make you a good wife."

"Yes"—says old man Wash between his sighs and sobs, as he went down in his coat pocket after a bandana handkerchief to wipe the tears away—"yes, me and Josie May have been a thinkin about that."

Well man sir, from what the neighbors say, they had the most gonebyest confusionment you ever read of goin on around there presently. The old lady flew off at the handle, you understand, and got mad and riz up in bed and proceeded to give out a piece of her mind to old man Wash in regards to him and Miss Josie May. She lowed she wouldn't die now to save both of them and the whole Green family from the everlastin and orful torments. She took a turn for the better right then and there, and by gracious she aint dead till yet. Instid of that she is on the mend, and whensomever she gits up and about the house onest more, you understand, you can bet your pocketful of blue chips a young woman by the name of Josie May Linton will have to take up her bed and move her washin from the Wash Green place.

A Safe, Sure Crop.

With the common run of men all is vanity and vexation of spirit anyhow, but sometimes it looks plum marvelsome to me to stand off and see a full-grown man make a fool of himself. But there is one crop that always grows free and plentiful on the soil of America—which never fails and never falls short—and that is the general crop of blame fools.

Whereas and consequentially, Bud Newton is now laid up for repairs—flat of his back with one leg in a swing and as helpless as a baby. He broke three of his toes and sprained his ankle and knocked his knee-cap out of place the other day, and from what the doctor says it will be a month or better before he can come around on his feet again.

Maybe you mought know where Bud Newton hangs his clothes up, but in case you don't I will have to tell you that he lives right over there in the hill country. It is a perfect scandalation on the settlement to tell it in the papers how Bud got himself into such a great fret and terrible smashup, but the truth is mighty and bound to leak out.

Well, at any rates, Bud he was haulin off some cotton to the gin down at Stringer's Mill that day, and he had some scandlous rough roads to drive over. He put on a big load of cotton and had some ties and a full roll of baggin on top of that. On his way down to the mill that roll of baggin would tumble off of the wagon every mile or so, and Bud would have to git down and go and pick it up and put it back. The weather it was tremendius hot, you understand, and by-and-by Bud he got hot and tired and likewise mad. That roll of baggin had fell off five or six times, and finally at last it tumbled out on one side of the wagon and rolled way off down in the woods. Then Bud got so furious mad till he jumped off and run down there and kicked the roll of baggin as hard as he could drive it. He kicked so almighty hard, you understand, till he drove up three toes and sprained one ankle and knocked his knee-cap out of place. By gracious, he was so bad broke and bunged up he couldn't walk a lick, and so he had to lay down and stay there till some of the neighbors come along and toted both him and his roll of baggin back to the wagon.

And that's what makes me tell you what I do about a grown-up man playin the fool. It would look bad enough to kick somethin that had life in it and could feel, but for a man to take a runnin start and bust himself open on a poor old roll of dead cotton baggin—it passeth all understandin.

"Hell-Roarin Billy" Got Broke.

The way in which Bud Newton run his fool self into that mighty smashup brings to my mind old man Billy Castleberry—"Hell-Roarin Billy," as the people were wont to call him—and the time when he got broke and weaned off from his terrible wicked and foolish way of cussin. He was so reglar and so constant and so promiscus with his cussin, you understand, till it was in that way he got the name of "Hell-Roarin Billy." But finally at last when the quittin time come he jest simply took out and quit.

It was then along in the fall of the year and old man Billy was harvestin of his crops. Soon one mornin he drove over to the new ground after a load of pumkins, and on his return back he had to make a long, hard pull up a steep hill. He went up in a storm, cussin and slashin the mules right and left, and jest as the team turned the brow of the hill bless gracious the back gate to the wagon come out, and his load of pumkins rolled off one by one and went bumpin and bouncin back down to the foot of the hill.

Old man Billy set up there and looked on at the performance till the last pumpkin had landed kerbip at the foot of the hill. But he didn't say nothin. He turned first red and then white all over in spots as big as a bed quilt, and then broke out in a cold sweat, you understand. But he didn't say nothin.

About that time John Andrew Milligan come along and saw the lay of the land, and naturally of course he wanted to know of old man Billy why he didn't put in and cuss out creation.

"I never felt more like cussin a few stanzas in all my born days," said the old man, "but the fact is, John Andrew, I don't see how I could do the subject justice."

And henceforwards after that, clean on down to his dyin day, old man Billy Castleberry never was known to use another cuss word.

The Elder Backed Down.

Onest upon a time Elder William Jernigan was out sowin the seeds of the gospel truth accordin to the doctrines of the Christian Church, and he met up with Andy Lucas way over there at Murder Creek bridge.

Now in them days to hear the Elder talk it would seem as if he had took the job of savin the whole entire human race, and somebow a notion had worked itself into his head that he must pitch in the first chance he got and save the lost and ruint soul of Andy Lucas.

"Good mornin, Andy, and how are you comin on?" says the Elder.

"Well, I aint very many," says Andy, "but I am still above water and swimmin without gourds."

"Andy, I want you to quit your wild and wicked ways and come out on the Lord's side," says the Elder. "You are the very man we need to build up the cause in this settlement. Let me baptize you right here in the creek and bring you forth as a spared monument and a livin witness and a shinin example of the might and power of the gospel truth."

"Bill Jernigan, you must take me for crazy," says Andy. "You know full well that I aint fitten to jine the church or go down into the water and be buried in baptism. I aint fitten for nothin in particlar but to cuss and drink whisky and swap horses and the like of that."

"But I want to make a Christian out of you," the Elder went on." All I ask is for you git down and let me lead you into the water and bury you in baptism, and when we come out you will be a changed man and a Christian."

"Are you givin me the rock bottom facts, Bill?" says Andy.

"That's the solemn gospel truth, which I can prove it to you by the words of the blessed book," says the Elder as he went down in his coat pocket after his Bible.

"Well by gatlins, I believe I will try you one barrel anyhow," says Andy. "But let me tell you Bill—when we come forth out of the water, with my clothes all wet and muddy, if I aint a changed man and a Christian I am goin to give you the blamdest and most hellatious beatin that a white man ever toted out of these regions."

What did the Elder do then? Well, he jest naturally took on a crawfish movement, you understand, and backed down from his own game. His faith was right tolerable strong, but he was skeered to take the chances with a man by the name of Lucas. And finally, friends and fellow citizens, in regards to that, I will remark in conclusion that the Elder's head was as level as a squash. RUFUS SANDERS.

That Test Was Satisfactory.

"Do you think, sir," said the girl's mother, "that you have patience and forbearance to be a kind-hearted husband?"

"Madam," replied the young man, in earnest tones, "I can put a 14½ stand-up collar on a No. 15 shirt without saying a single word."

FOREIGN PICKUPS.

CHILDREN from eight to fifteen years of age are employed in the sulphur mines of Caltamsetta, Sicily, to carry the sulphur to the surface of the earth. The occupation is very unhealthy, and the children, after two or three years of service, are physical wrecks.

ROGER BACON was the first to suggest the use of spectacles. When they came into use in Italy, about the year 1285, on the recommendation of Alessandroa di Spina, a monk of Pisa, women were forbidden to wear them, because it was thought such facial ornamentation would make them vain.

A CHESTNUT tree at Torworth, the residence of the earl of Ducie, near Bristol, is probably the oldest tree in England. It is 1,000 years old at least, and measures fifty feet in circumference until it branches into three limbs, one of them over ten feet in diameter.

MANUFACTURERS of patent medicines can find an excellent market for their goods in China. According to the report of a British consul the Chinese have "that tired feeling" a great deal and like to fancy that they are run down in health and in need of a nostrum.

A PARALYTIC CURED.

His Grandfather, a Revolutionary Soldier, and His Father Both Died of Paralysis, Yet the Third Generation Is Cured—The Method.

From the Herald, Boston, Mass.

Like a thunderbolt from a clear sky, a stroke of paralysis came to Mr. Frank T. Ware, the well-known Boston auctioneer and appraiser, at 235 Washington street. He went to bed one night about six years ago, seemingly in robust health. When he awoke his left side was stiffened by the deadening of the nerves.

The interviewer sought out Mr. Ware to get the facts. He gave the interesting particulars in his own way:

"The first shock came very suddenly while I was asleep, but it was not lasting in its effects, and in a few weeks I was able to be about. A few months after, when exhausted by work and drenched with rain, I went home in a very nervous state. The result was a second and more severe shock, after which my left arm and leg were practically helpless.

"My grandfather, who was a soldier in the Revolutionary War, and lost an arm in the struggle for American independence, died finally of paralysis. My father also died of paralysis, although it was complicated with other troubles, and so I had some knowledge of the fatal character of the disease which is hereditary in our family. After the second shock I took warning, for, in all probability, a third would carry me off.

"Almost everything under the sun was recommended to me, and I tried all the remedies that seemed likely to do any good, electricity, massage and specialists, but to no effect.

"The only thing I found that helped me was Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I verily believe that if it hadn't been for those pills I would have been dead years ago.

"Yes, I still have a slight reminder of the last attack six years ago. My left arm is not as strong as the other and my left foot drags a little, as the paralysis had the effect of deadening the nerves. But I can still walk a good distance, talk as easily as ever, and my general health is splendid. I am really over seventy years old, although I am generally taken to be twenty years younger than that.

"The Pink Pills keep my blood in good condition, and I believe that is why I am so well, although cheerfulness may help.

"I have thought of it a great many times and I honestly believe that the Pink Pills have saved my life."

Mr. Ware has every appearance of a perfectly healthy man, and arrives at his office promptly at eight o'clock every morning, although he has reached an age when many men retire from active life. His experience is well known to a great many people in Boston, where his constant cheerfulness has won him hosts of friends. He says that in his opinion both his father and grandfather could have been saved if Pink Pills had been obtainable at that time.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People contain all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They may be had of all druggists or direct by mail from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y., at 50c. per box, or six boxes for $2.50.

—At a picnic given the waifs of Chicago a plate of tarts was passed to two little urchins, evidently chums. One, whose mouth was too full for utterance, and plate too full for even an extra tart, shook his head; not so his neighbor, who added the tart to his pile of goodies. In a few minutes number one had so reduced his plate that he asked for the refused dainty, when he was told they were gone. Whereupon his little friend was heard giving him this philosophical advice: "The time to take tarts, Bob, is when they're a-passin'!"—Harper's Bazar.

—One day, when the late Lord Beaconsfield was walking in his grounds at Hughenden Manor, he was accosted by a well-known parishioner noted for his ready wit. It being winter time, and the weather unusually severe, the villager, after paying his respects to his lordship, commenced to make an appeal for a little help. "How often have I told you to be careful and prepare for a rainy day?" "Ah! that's right enough: so I did, my lord," said the ready-witted villager; "but then who thought of seeing all this snow and hard frost?" This ready retort had the desired effect.—Household Words.

WIG RIOTS.

Troubles Among the Hairdressers of Olden Times.

A long chapter might be written on hairdressers, their rights and wrongs and revolutions; but they have always been stanch tories in their hatred of wigs. England had her wig riot in the reign of George II.; Milan had hers in the reign of Maria Theresa. It arose from an audacious attempt by some restless innovator to cover every fashionable head in Milan with a wig of steel or silver wire, warranted to save some three hours' daily toil and endurance in the dressing of the hair. Up rose the hairdressers like one man, and petitioned the empress to save them from the threatened ruin of their art.

The empress listened to their prayer, and straightway decreed that anyone wearing one of these new-fangled periwigs must pay a fine of fifty sequins or be thrice scourged in public. She further empowered the police to search private houses for the offending article, and to destroy it if found. To this imperial legislation Goldoni alludes in the doggerel lines:

In that great day it came to pass
That a gentle countess was forced, alas!
For her hairdresser's sake to forego her mass.

He kept her too long at her toilet. Ten years later another satirist published an "Account of a Prodigious Comet Lately Seen at Milan," the comet being a transcendent specimen of the hairdresser's art, erected on the head of a certain noble dame.—Macmillan's Magazine.

VALUE OF SPRAYING.

Summary of Experiments Conducted at the Ohio Station.

1. The profit to be derived from spraying orchards often exceeds $20 per acre, and for vineyards is much more. The fruit crop of the state would be enhanced in value by several million dollars annually if the practice were generally followed.

2. Combined fungicides and insecticides are recommended whenever applicable, because of a saving of time; a less liability of injuring foliage, a greater efficiency in some cases, and as a precautionary measure in others.

3. Dilute Bordeaux mixture, copper-arsenic solution and ammoniacal solution of copper carbonate are the most useful for the treatment of the diseases herein mentioned, and the first has the widest range of usefulness of all.

4. Early spraying is the key to success in the use of fungicides.

5. For the plum curculio and shot-hole fungus use Bordeaux mixture and Paris green combined, making three or four applications. It is not known that the treatment will prevent the black knot, but cutting away and burning the diseased branches will accomplish the result.

6. Scabby apples rot much earlier than those free from scab, and spraying with fungicides will save at least fifty per cent. of this loss.

7. Spraying with fungicides in the season of 1892 prevented much of the early dropping of apples, which is usually attributed to wet weather.

8. For apples, two applications of Bordeaux mixture before blooming are advised, and two of the same mixture after blooming with Paris green added.

9. The same treatment is recommended for the pear as for the apple, before blooming, but the copper-arsenic solution is applied after blooming.

10. The Bordeaux mixture, if used too late, causes a russet appearance on both pears and apples.

11. The quince may be treated the same as apples, or with Bordeaux mixture alone.

12. The treatment advised for the cherry consists of using two or three applications of Paris green, two ounces to fifty gallons of water.

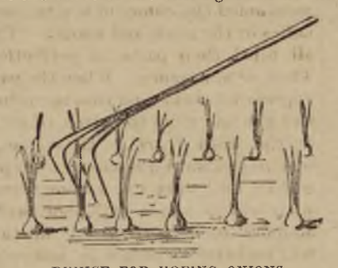
13 Peach trees and American varieties of plums have very tender foliage and must be treated with very weak mixtures, if at all.

14. Raspberries may be treated with Bordeaux mixture alone; grapes with the same until the fruit sets, after which use copper carbonate. Potatoes should be sprayed at least five times with Bordeaux mixture and Paris green.—Prof. W. J. Green, of Ohio Experiment Station.

WEEDING THE ONIONS.

How to Make an Inexpensive Tool Suitable for This Work.

How to manage the onion patch during the last stages of growth, when the mass of tops forbids the further use of the wheel hoe among the plants, has often been a puzzle to onion growers, and is a matter of frequent inquiry. The harm done to a crop by the breaking down of the tops during the process of cultivation usually is insignificant to the damage resulting from an early cessation of tillage. We prefer to till the ground between onions, potatoes, cabbages, and other crops, when well advanced, and to risk occasional injury to the leaves or stalks. Finally, cultivation has come to a stop, however, but the growth of weeds will not. Purslane, especially, is the curse of the onion grower at this late period of growth. The tool which is usually most convenient for stirring the soil between onion rows is a narrow steel rake. It can be drawn along between the rows of bulbs, of course with proper care, and will loosen the surface and keep the weeds down. The ordinary garden rakes are rather too wide for this purpose, but may be easily cut down.



DEVICE FOR HOEING ONIONS.

Another tool suitable for this work is shown in the accompanying sketch. The nearest blacksmith can make the hoe part out of steel rod, or an old pitchfork. Insert the hoe firmly into a good handle, and then draw the tool along between the rows, in the same way as a steel rake. — American Gardening.

FRESH DAIRY NOTES.

USE tin milk pails always and keep them bright and clean.

POOR butter deteriorates rapidly. It has the elements of rapid decay in it to start with.

IF the butter is not of good quality, sell it as soon as made. Do not attempt to pack it.

DEHORNING, like most everything else, requires some experience. It is a good way to get some one who has experience to do it.

IF the churning is only done once a week, good butter is out of the question. Churn every two days or every three days at most.

TO KILL the horns on calves cut the hair from around the horn, or around the place for the horn, wet the nub and rub on caustic potash. The potash comes in sticks and must be wrapped in paper or it will burn the hands.—Farmers' Voice.

Perfuming Flowers Artificially.

Flowers that have lost something of their perfume are now scented artificially by watering them with an alcoholic solution of essence, using a little glycerine to fix the odor. Thus, for violets, the liquid is composed of 100 grammes of glycerine and 10 grammes of essence of violet. In many places while scented violets are comparatively rare, the unscented kinds grow wild in great profusion. These are now bought up in large quantities, scented artificially and put into the market in advantageous competition with the perfumed violets grown by the horticulturists. Cut flowers which have wilted are revived by being plunged from time to time into a weak solution of sal ammoniac. Flowers which have little or no scent are also perfumed for sale by being put into a box with ice, and then saturated with a current of carbonic acid charged with perfume.

CURRENT COMMENT.

THIRTY out of the 244 republicans in the house which meets in December are 16 to 1 men, and 51 democrats out of the 104 in that body stand with these 30.

THE Illinois bureau of labor statistics issued a sensational report charging the great majority of the wealthy people of that state with perjury in making returns to the assessor.

THE bones found by Prof. J. L. Wortman, of Columbia college, N. Y., near the head of Bitter creek, Wyoming, and pronounced by him possibly the "missing link," have turned out to be the skeleton of a pet monkey once owned by cowboys.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., proposes to escape from its old title of smoky city. After October 1 the owner of any chimney emitting 20 per cent. of black or gray smoke from boiler furnaces for three minutes or more will be subject to a fine of from $10 to $50.

A RECENT dispatch from Paris said that the council of Avignon, France, had agreed to spend about $750,000 on the restoration of the old pope's palace in that city. They claimed that the next pope would be elected from Avignon and would live there.

A NOVEL amendment was introduced at the South Carolina constitutional convention providing for county boards of physicians, who would "critically examine all men wishing to get married, and without a certificate from such board to the effect that he is a fit man physically to become a husband and a father a marriage license should not be granted to him."

"OUIDA," the distinguished novelist, does not see what Italy wants with African possessions, when it has 100,000 persons dying of pellagra, 6,000,000 living on malarious land, 1,700 communes in which grain is rare, 1,400 communes with scanty and foul water supplies, 600 communes without doctors within reach, and over 300 communes which have no burial place.

J. H. JACKSON, of Fort Worth, national vice president of the American Protective association, when asked recently about the condition of the A. P. A., said: "The order is growing rapidly in numbers. We have, in round numbers, 3,500,000 members. In California we have 200,000, and in the older states farther east the number of members we have is enormous and growing daily."

THAT the Western Baseball league has been prosperous this season is shown by the fact that Manager Comiskey, of St. Paul, says that he has cleared in the neighborhood of $20,000. President Killilea says that the Milwaukee club cleared $11,000. Treasurer Galt, of Indianapolis, claims that the Hoosiers quit $10,000 to the good, and Manager Manning, of the Kansas City Blues, has about the same balance in his treasury.

IN an interesting and highly instructive article Edward S. Martin, in the October Ladies' Home Journal, reviews the numerous theories advanced by scientists in the endeavor to solve the perplexing problem as to the exact location of the site of the Garden of Eden, where Adam and Eve first lived. After sifting the theories the writer concludes that the question is no nearer answered than it was 2,000 years ago, and that there are no present indications that the matter will ever be definitely settled by any man.

AT the recent meeting of the American Humane association at Minneapolis, Minn., Dr. Albert Leffingwell, presented the report of a medical committee which had been engaged in sounding public sentiment regarding vivisection. Over 2,000 expressions of opinion were obtained from leading physicians, clergymen and others. Of these only about one-eighth were in favor of unrestricted experimentation upon living animals, a large majority being either for absolute prohibition or for such restriction by law as should limit vivisection to painless operations.

IT is positively asserted by those who claim to be conversant with the facts, that Cuba will have the rights of belligerency accorded to her by Mexico and several South American republics within a very short time. Facilities for coaling stations will be provided for the patriot navy, and for all vessels sailing under letters of marque issued by the officials of the republic of Cuba. There will be several of the latter, which will be manned by naval men from different countries, and there are many applications on file at Cuban headquarters in New York for positions in the fleet.

EUROPE has gone daft, speculatively, over the rich discoveries in South African gold mines. The chief center of speculation is, of course, in London, but the craze has spread over into France and is beginning to be a factor in Berlin and Vienna. There is talk even of placing some of the mining shares on the New York stock exchange. The gold lies in rock nearly uniform in dip and in richness so great that it has been found possible to forecast the yield of gold from a given territory very accurately. At present the English capitalist is wrapped up in Kaffir speculation.

MISS MILLICENT W. SHINN has been gathering statistics from all the women's colleges of the country on the subject of matrimony, and finds that the ultimate probability of a college woman's marriage is below 55 per cent., against 90 per cent. for those of her sex who do not receive a collegiate education. It is claimed by Miss Shinn, however, that this is not due to masculine prejudice against women thus trained, but to the fact that they find employment as teachers in girls' schools, "a station in life more inimical to marriage," she says, "than any other save that of a nun."

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Gleaned By Telegraph and Mail

PERSONAL AND POLITICAL.

THE New York Herald said on the 25th: "It is said on the authority of a republican leader of national repute that Benjamin Harrison has withdrawn from the presidential race, and has named William McKinley as his residuary legatee."

REV. DR. TALMAGE, of Brooklyn has accepted the call to be co-pastor of the First Presbyterian church at Washington. He is to have equal authority with Dr. Sunderland and probably will preach one-half of the sermons beginning Sunday evening, October 27.

THE Irish convention at Chicago on the 26th recommended the formation of military companies wherever practicable, in order to foster the military spirit of the Irish race and to be prepared for action in the event of England's difficulty. A delegate wanted a president, vice president and parliament elected for a probable future Irish republic. The election of officers of the Irish National alliance, which was the title agreed upon for the new organization, was as follows: President, William Lyman, New York; vice president, O'Neill Ryan, St. Louis; treasurer, R. V. Fitzpatrick, Chicago.

AT the Irish convention in Chicago on the 25th speeches were made advocating a standing army of Irishmen to harass England and to use force to further the cause of Ireland's freedom, all the speeches being met with hearty applause.

THE number of democrats gathered at Syracuse, N. Y., on the 24th for the state convention was the greatest ever known at a similar gathering. Perry Belmont was selected as temporary chairman. On financial questions, in his speech, he declared that the New York democracy had always been for "sound money," and said that the greenbacks caused the driving out of gold.

SECRETARY OLNEY recently received the following telegram from Ambassador Eustis, at Paris: "Mrs. Waller's family arrived at Paris. She has decided not to visit her husband. Impossible to engage passage before October 2, on which date they will sail on the Amsterdam."

SENATOR STEPHEN B. ELKINS fell from his bicycle at Kingwood, W. Va., on the 24th and so severely injured his ankle that he immediately took a special train to New York city to obtain surgical treatment.

MISCELLANEOUS.

AT Amsterdam, 10,000 diamond cutters struck upon the refusal of the employers to adopt conditions upon which the cutters' trade union insisted.

THE failures for the week ended September 27 (Dun's report) were 216 in the United States, against 235 last year, and 50 in Canada, against 55 last year.

GEN. JOHN C. BLACK, United States district attorney at Chicago has received instructions to investigate the alleged combination of Chicago packers to control the price of beef. The order came from Attorney-General Harmon, who inclosed a statement of the suspicions regarding the alleged trust prepared by Secretary of Agriculture Morton.

FIRE damaged the Omaha & Grant smelter in Durango, Col., to the extent of $50,000. The fire caught from the boiler room and for two hours the entire plant was in danger. The three story sampler was ruined, together with much improved machinery.

A DISASTROUS prairie fire raged in the western half of the Cherokee strip and swept everything before it on the 27th. The fire started south of Kiowa and it was thought it would end at the Southern Kansas railway, but it jumped the track and got a clean sweep for a distance of 100 miles without anything to stop it. Many cattle and goat ranches suffered. Three homesteaders' houses north of Alva caught fire and burned to the ground with their contents.

AT Wilkesbarre, Pa., Nelson Miller, two other colored men and two colored women were found guilty of the murder of four Hungarians on the 27th. Miller and his associates in October last, with the use of dynamite, blew up a Hungarian boarding house on the mountain side with the object of robbing the victims. Sixty persons were in the house at the time and four of them were killed.

SECRETARY SMITH promulgated an important decision on the 26th, which concerns twenty-one claims in Oklahoma, near El Reno, and about 500 claims in the Cheyenne and Arapahoe country. By some muddle two allotments were made to some Indians and the secretary ruled that in all cases where double allotments were made the one taken last was the one that should go to the Indian and the other be opened for settlement under the general law. This will throw all the claims in original Oklahoma near El Reno to the whites, and force the Indians over into the Cheyenne and Arapahoe country to their second allotments.

THE excursion steamer Macatawa was burned to the water's edge on the 26th at Chicago and two of the crew were supposed to have perished in the flames. The fire broke out in a lumber yard and the flames, fanned by a lively breeze from the lake, swept across the slip and enveloped the Macatawa.

FOREST fires were reported raging in the vicinity of Carbondale, Pa. The villages of Forestville and Richmond were surrounded by fire and numbers of cattle had perished.

GOV. CULBERSON, of Texas, issued a proclamation at midnight of the 26th calling a special session of the legislature on October 1 to pass a law to prevent prize fighting in that state.

BY the explosion of a lamp in the dwelling of Leon Kuchinsky at Pittsburgh, Pa., his two daughters, aged 6 and 8, were fatally burned. Dr. L. S. McDonald, who rescued the children from the flames, was severely burned and will probably lose the sight of one eye.

THE Dominion line steamer Mariposa, bound from Montreal, Can., to Liverpool, was reported ashore on Fortune point, Belle isle. A wrecking tug was sent to the Mariposa's assistance from Quebec.

THE steamer Mark Hopkins collided with the steamer Vanderbilt at Nine-Mile point, Mich., on the 27th, and the Hopkins went down in two minutes. The Vanderbilt was but slightly injured. The Hopkins was insured for $40,000.

A STORAGE house at Cincinnati of the Cincinnati Leaf Tobacco Co. was burned on the 27th. It contained 2,775 hogsheads of tobacco, the average contents of a hogshead being 1,300 pounds. Both building and tobacco were a total loss, the amount being $50,000 on building and $250,000 on tobacco.

SECRETARY MORTON has issued an order that from and after October 22 next cattle from Mexico for grazing and immediate slaughter may be brought into the United States through the ports of San Diego, Nogales, El Paso, Eagle Pass, Brownsville and the sub-port of Laredo. The admission of the cattle is permitted subject to inspection and certain restrictions.

THE building of the Minneapolis, Minn., chamber of commerce was damaged by fire to the extent of $30,000 and its contents to another $30,000. Fully insured.

JOHN FOOTE shot and killed James Slabaugh near Stillwater, Ok., and Charlie Slabaugh, son of James, split Foote's head open with an ax. The men quarreled over a land contest and had been fighting in the courts over land for five years.

SIXTY-FIVE pounds of giant powder exploded on the 26th in the Belgium mine, near Leadville, Col. Ten miners were at work at the drifts at the time, and it was believed that a miner carrying the powder from one drift to another let it fall and the explosion caused a cave-in, resulting in the instant death of six and the serious injury of two more.

A FIRE at Carnegie, Pa., destroyed Waldee & Foster's extensive flour mill, Martin's lumber yard and damaged several other buildings, entailing a loss of $60,000.

AT Nutwood park, Dubuque, Ia., on the 25th, in the special pacing, Gentry made the fastest record of the season, and the fastest third heat ever paced or trotted. Time, 2:03¾.

A CENTER ISLAND, N. Y., dispatch on the 25th stated that a British boat had won a yacht race from an American boat, Spruce IV. having captured the second of the Seawanhaka cup challenge series for small boats, defeating Ethelwynn, the defender, by a narrow margin of 23 seconds, in a 12-mile race over a triangular course of 2 miles a side, gone over twice.

THE officials of the customs service have made an important change in the regulations governing what is known as "immediate transportation" goods. Under the new regulations the importer may change the destination of the goods from one interior port to another on reaching the port of arrival. This regulation gives the importer the advantage of any favorable change in the several markets of the country.

THE American Humane association met in its fifteenth annual convention at Indianapolis, Ind., on the 25th. About 100 delegates were present. Secretary Francis G. Rowley made his annual report summing up the association's work for the year. He showed that 6,235 cases of cruelty to children and 4,238 cases of cruelty to animals had been prosecuted.

THE town of Belle Fourche, S. D., was totally destroyed by fire on the 25th. The losses were $75,000.

ADVICES from Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., stated that the barge A. W. Comstock, of Algoma, Mich., foundered off Stannards rock, Lake Superior, in a storm and her crew was supposed to be lost. The barge was new and was valued at $51,000. She had a cargo of 51,000 bushels of wheat from Duluth.

JOHN MULLEN, 26 years old, a farmer's son, attended the wedding of a girl in Bloomfield, Mich., and seemed to enjoy himself until the dancing began when he went out to the barn and shot himself, leaving a note saying that life was unbearable to him because he could not dance. He was crippled through hip disease.

THE New York Central again broke the record for fast time on the 24th. A special, consisting of three coaches and drawn by locomotive No. 999, left Albany at 6 o'clock and arrived at Syracuse at 8:12, thus making the run of 148 miles in 132 minutes. This beats the world's record for this distance.

A RECENT special from New York said that Bob Fitzsimmons and his lawyer, Friend, had severed their business and friendly relations. Their falling out may cause fresh complications in the Corbett-Fitzsimmons arrangements, as Mr. Friend may at any moment withdraw the $5,000 which he put up for Fitz.

THERE is a movement among the authorities at Washington toward putting fourth class postmasters under the protection of the civil service laws. It is probable that before the end of this administration action will be taken. There are over 65,000 fourth class post offices in the country and the number is constantly increasing.

THE commissioner of Indian affairs has made his annual report to the secretary of the interior. It shows progress in nearly all directions.

THE town of Hueda, Turkey, has been overwhelmed by a landslide from a mountain near by which killed a hundred persons.

THE last spike has been driven in the Choctaw, Oklahoma & Gulf railway connecting South McAlester and Oklahoma City. The road is now completed from Webster, I. T., to El Reno, I. T., a distance of 240 miles. The first through train was a coal train. Double daily passengers will be put on October 15, at which time a grand excursion will be run from Fort Smith, Ark., to Oklahoma City.

THE IRISH ORDER.

A Statement That 5,000,000 Will Be Enrolled Before 1896.

CHICAGO, Sept. 28.—Most of the delegates to the national Irish congress left for home on last night's trains, but President Lyman, of the National alliance, which was brought into existence yesterday, will remain over until to-morrow for the purpose of consulting with members of the executive council concerning the issue of charters to local organizations and other matters pertaining to the preliminary work of the conference. The delegates generally express themselves as well satisfied with the outcome of the convention, and some of them go so far as to predict that 5,000,000 Irish-Americans will be enrolled under the banner of the new movement before the advent of 1896. The appointment by President Lyman of John P. Sutton, of New York, formerly of Nebraska, as secretary of the Irish alliance, is received with general approval.

MEXICAN CATTLE MAY COME.

Secretary Morton Makes an Order for Their Admission to the United States.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—Secretary Morton has issued an order directing that from and after October 22, next, cattle may be admitted into the United States from Mexico for grazing and immediate slaughter through the ports of San Diego, Nogales, El Paso, Eagle Pass, Brownsville and the sub-port of Laredo. The admission of these cattle is permitted subject to inspection by inspectors of the bureau of animal industry, and no cattle will be admitted which are affected with or which have been exposed to the contagion of any disease liable to be disseminated among the domestic animals in the United States. The importer must produce evidence satisfactory to the inspector that his cattle had not been exposed to contagion during a period of ninety days previous to the importation.

WILL MOVE TO AMERICA.

Lord Scully, the Great Land Owner, Has Ceased to Be an Englishman.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Sept. 28.—Through his agents in this city it has been learned that Lord Scully, who owns nearly 100,000 acres of land in Illinois, as much more in Missouri, and still more in Kansas and Nebraska, has taken out naturalization papers in New York city. It is his intention to make that city his future home. His object in taking this step is to enable him to purchase more land. The legislatures of Illinois, Missouri and Kansas have all passed laws prohibiting an alien from acquiring real estate. His agents spent last year and a portion of the present year in Missouri, where they bought thousands of acres, but were checked by the adoption of a measure by the legislature. He owns one whole county in Kansas and more in Nebraska.

TOBACCO BURNED.

The Cincinnati Leaf Tobacco Co. Suffers Heavy Loss by Fire.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 28.—At 9 o'clock last night the Commerce street end of one of the storage houses of the Cincinnati Leaf Tobacco Co., between Race and Vine streets, was found to be on fire. A ten-blow call brought thirteen engines to the scene. The building was brick and four stories high and 2,775 hogsheads of tobacco were stored in it by actual count made yesterday. The average contents of a hogshead is 1,300 pounds. At a very low price the tobacco stored in this warehouse is worth $250,000. The building is very old and has been water-logged by numerous floods. Its value as a source of rental income was about $50,000. Both building and tobacco are a total loss of not less than $300,000. The building belongs to the Mudge heirs, insurance not known.

OLD SOLDIERS FAVORED.

Property Bought with Pension Money Not Taxable in New York.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Sept. 28.—The question of exemption from taxes of the property of veteran soldiers in this state, purchased with pension money, has just been decided in the affirmative by Judge Alton E. Parker in special term. The relator was George Coddington, who sued the assessors of the town of Gardiner, Ulster county. The exemption was claimed on an old law holding bounty and pension funds exempt from execution. Judge Parker held: "The court holds, if all the money with which the land was purchased was received from the United States government for pension or bounty money while he was a non-commissioned officer or private, that such property is exempt from taxation."

TERRIBLE PRAIRIE FIRE.

An Ocean of Flame Devastating the Western Portion of the Cherokee Strip.

KIOWA, Kan., Sept. 28.—A disastrous prairie fire is raging in the western half of the Cherokee strip and is sweeping everything before it. Several houses, principally prairie shacks and hay stacks, without number, have been burned. The fire started south of Kiowa and it was thought it would end at the Southern Kansas railway, but it jumped the track and now has a clean sweep for a distance of 100 miles without anything to stop it. Luckily the settlement is thinly populated, but there are a great many cattle and goat ranches that will suffer. Three homesteaders' houses north of Alva caught fire in spite of efforts to save them, and burned to the ground with their contents.

Rome's Society Interdict Strict.

CHICAGO, Sept. 28.—Some of the American bishops, doubting that Rome would strictly enforce the order condemning Catholic membership in the Knights of Pythias, Sons of Temperance and Odd Fellows, recently wrote for instructions. A letter in reply has been received from Archbishop Larrisen, secretary of the propaganda, in which he says there is no chance for a revocation of the decree.

Gold Reserve Still Dwindling.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—The treasury yesterday lost $1,500,000 in gold for export to Europe, which leaves the true amount of gold reserve $92,705,097.

POSTAL FACTS.

Interesting Statistics in Regard to Western Offices.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—According to the report of the fourth assistant postmaster-general, during the last fiscal year Oklahoma had the greatest increase in the number of post offices, 69, while the Indian territory's was 60. Nineteen states showed decreases, with Kansas leading with the greatest loss—53. Post offices established during the year numbered: In Kansas, 40; in Missouri, 115; in Oklahoma, 98; in the territory, 78. Post offices discontinued: In Kansas, 93; in Missouri, 95; in Oklahoma, 29; in the territory, 18. Fourth-class postmasters resigned: In Kansas, 316; in Missouri, 396; in Oklahoma, 90; in the territory, 103. Fourth-class postmasters removed: In Kansas, 78; in Missouri, 71; in Oklahoma, 20; in the territory, 13. Fourth-class postmasters deceased: In Kansas, 19; in Missouri, 23; in Oklahoma, 2; in the territory, 7.

Of the presidential offices in Kansas, 1 postmaster resigned, 6 were removed, the commissions of 13 expired and 2 offices were relegated to the fourth-class; in Missouri, 1 resigned, 5 were removed, the commissions of 12 expired, 1 died, 4 offices became presidential and 4 went back to the fourth-class; in Oklahoma, 9 offices became presidential; in the Indian territory, 1 presidential postmaster was removed.

At the end of the post office year Kansas had 1,701 post offices, Missouri 2,725, Oklahoma 468 and the Indian territory 429. These states lead the union: Pennsylvania, 4,980 offices; New York, 3,622; Ohio, 3,301; Virginia, 3,188; North Carolina, 2,876, and Texas, 2,730.

AN UPWARD TENDENCY.

General Advance in Prices Reported During the Week.

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—R. G. Dun & Co's weekly review of trade says: The speculation in cotton has lifted the price ⅝ cent during the past week and quotations here are so much higher than at Liverpool that free exports cannot be expected. It seems no longer possible to hope for a good crop, and Neill Bros. have issued a circular predicting a yield of only 7,000,000 bales.

The wheat market has been excited without much discovered reason, and the price has advanced over 5 cents for spot and 2½ cents for December deliveries. It may be said that crop prospects abroad are not quite as favorable as they were a month ago, and with a short supply as best in this country the market is liable to be unusually short. Western receipts for the week have been 5,601,568 bushels, against 5,432,254 bushels last year, and for the last month, 22,393,223 bushels, against 21,923,883 last year. The exports from Atlantic ports, flour included, have been 1,887,501 bushels for the week, against 2,440,584 last year, and for the past four weeks, 7,524,631 bushels, against 8,772,318 last year. Holders of corn have judiciously declined to "sympathize" with wheat to a great extent and the price is practically unchanged. Pork and hog products are all somewhat lower.

Failures for the week have been 216 in the United States, against 235 last year.

FIRST APPLE CARNIVAL.

RED OAK, Ia., Sept. 28.—Probably the first apple carnival ever held in Iowa or the western states attracted an immense crowd to Glenwood yesterday. The city was profusely decorated with fruits and grasses, and apples of every variety and color were made into every conceivable form, from Goddess of Liberty to a huge map of Mills county. Exercises were held in the courthouse square, addresses being made by Judge Deemer, of the supreme court; Judge Powner, of Corning; ex-Attorney-General Stone and others. Many other distinguished gentlemen were present, including Burlington road officers. The carnival was a wonderful success and will probably be followed by others, with the end of making to a greater extent than ever southwestern Iowa the banner apple producing country of the world.

A deplorable accident marred the festivities of the day, D. U. Reed, of Blue Springs, Neb., secretary of the Nebraska Horticultural society, being run down by the fast mail and killed. Mr. Reed came to the city by special invitation as one of the speakers.

AMERICAN BANK IN CHINA.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—The establishment of an American bank at Shanghai, China, is strongly urged by Consul-General Jernigan in a report to the state department. He says such an institution would evidence the permanency of American interest in China and would aid in enlarging the United States trade there. At present the trade between China and the United States is paid for in British exchange.

A Mule Wrecks a Train.

CLARKSVILLE, Mo., Sept. 28.—At 2 p. m. yesterday, train No. 5, the Burlington's Twin City express, with 245 passengers aboard, ran into a mule on a road crossing near Annada, a small station. The train consisted of engine, baggage car, smoking car, two day coaches, sleeping car and dining car. The two latter cars were overturned, the other cars left partly upright, although all were ditched. James Wilson, of Rockport, Ill., aged about 60, was badly injured.

A Veteran Drowns Himself.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 28.—Henry Spahn, an old soldier and veteran of the civil war, drowned himself in the lake in Benton park. The cause of the rash act was that for some time the old man had been suffering with asthma and was unable to get any sleep at night.

For Killing Fifteen Men.

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—The grand jury has ordered indictments for manslaughter in the second degree against five men who were held responsible for the collapse of the Ireland building, August 7 last when fifteen men were killed.

M'KINLEY'S MISTAKE.

The Champion of Protection Ignores All Issues But the Tariff.

The speeches of Sherman and McKinley at Springfield, O., are not encouraging. Not a word was said by either of them marking out a constructive policy to meet the exigencies of the times. As of the democracy of old, their whole stock in trade consists of denunciation of the other fellows, without a hint of what they would do to remedy a situation due, more than to anything else, to their own enactments. When McKinley said the tariff must be and is the issue, the wish was wholly responsible for the thought, which has no other foundation. What about the overshadowing financial question and the preservation of the gold value standard and the integrity of the currency? Hardly a word beyond damning the administration for its efforts put forth to rescue the nation from the most critical financial position it has ever been in.

Gov. McKinley did touch upon the need of more revenue, which is a matter to be emphasized. But he would simply make it an excuse for advancing not the revenue duties, but the so-called protective duties, which are designed to check and not increase duty-paying importations. He repeated the familiar claim that "at no time from the passage of the republican tariff law of 1890 down to the close of President Harrison's administration did that law fail to raise all the revenue needed to meet every expense of the general government, and during no part of that period did the gold reserve fall below $100,000,000."

What are the facts about this? The McKinley tariff did not go into full effect until April, 1891, when the duties were removed from raw sugar. The secretary of the treasury had meantime paid off a year's interest on the funded debt in advance, and things were all cleared up for two years of generous existence for the treasury. The results can be seen from this comparison of the net cash balance and funded debt as they stood on April 1, 1891, and March 1, 1893, when the Harrison regime ended:

Total cash balance, April, 1891	$158,425,231
Funded debt, April 1, 1891	613,512,090
Total cash balance, March, 1893	$124,128,087
Funded debt, March 1, 1893	585,034,000

The treasury in this time had lost $34,297,000 in net cash and reduced the debt but $28,500,000. The McKinley act had failed by so much, at least, to provide the necessary revenue. The gold reserve had meantime fallen from nearly $150,000,000 to $103,300,000. So rapidly was the government beginning to run behind that Secretary Foster, in his report of December, 1892, said that "the revenues should be so increased as to enable the treasury department to maintain a gold reserve of not less than $125,000,000." If, as Gov. McKinley now says, the McKinley tariff act yielded sufficient revenue, why, after two years, was more revenue needed to keep up a gold reserve to $125,000,000 when the act started out with a reserve nearly $25,000,000 larger than that?

But it will be said that the democratic victory in November, 1892, caused importations and revenue to fall off because of an anticipated reduction of the tariff. What are the facts here? The revenue from customs after Mr. Cleveland's election in 1892 were larger than they had been in the corresponding months of the previous year—that great and prosperous republican year of 1891-2, when the prospect of a democratic victory had not come into being in the mind of anybody. In November, 1892, for example, customs receipts aggregated $14,200,000, against $12,600,000 in the previous year; in December, $17,200,000, against $14,300,000; from January 1 to March 1, with a democratic president and congress preparing to take their seats, $37,600,000, against $34,100,000 in the same time the year before.

And yet the treasury was all this time running behind, and Secretary Foster had given an order to the bureau of engraving and printing to prepare plates for a new issue of bonds. Gov. McKinley's sincerity in asserting that at no time did his tariff law fail to yield all needed revenue does not shine forth very brilliantly in the face of these disagreeable facts. And all he can suggest by way of remedy for our present difficulties is a restoration of his deficit-breeding and debt-increasing tariff.

It is just as well to keep these facts of recent political history in view. The people want to see fair play. They are not greatly impressed just now with democratic capacity in government, but they will not applaud this solemn-faced stone-throwing from republican party leaders daubed all over with a record of financiering reckless and demagogic beyond anything known to the nation in years.—Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

——Men are wanted. The activity in the iron trade makes it necessary to employ all available men. To a free trader this situation is particularly satisfactory. Brisk trade and steady employment at good wages of all capable workmen is just what the free trader considers an excellent industrial condition. This condition has followed a reduction of the tariff on iron and steel goods from thirty to thirty-five per cent. Now, if the high protectionists in the McKinley school in Pennsylvania and elsewhere do not like this, and if the workingmen do not like it there is a way to change it. It is simply to reenact the McKinley tariff law. There will be no more complaint about scarcity of capable men then.—Utica (N. Y.) Observer.

——The general fact of the steady depression of wages from 1891 to 1894 under the McKinley act cannot be denied. The people know it. What the country is much more interested in, however, is the rise in wages, the reduced cost of necessaries and the return of prosperity under the democratic tariff. What all the republican politicians and editors said could not occur has occurred. There is no need of figures, and facts prove this. The people see and feel and rejoice in it.—N. Y. World.

REPUBLICANISM AND LABOR.

Depressing Effect of Republican Legislation on American Industry.

The fact that labor is prosperous is a source of much trouble to some of the republican organs of the country that are constitutionally opposed to reconciling any such state of affairs with the existence of a democratic administration. They do not have to account for any new triumph of labor over capital, for it is the unmistakable lesson of the recent past that the interests of capital and labor are identical, and that one cannot prosper without the welfare of the other. They are not embarrassed by any better place which labor holds in the economic system, for the position of labor has already been won, and is recognized in the statutes of the state and of the nation. But what puzzles these molders of party sentiment is to explain the recovery by labor of the place it held before the crushing depression set in two years ago.

Labor has not only recovered this place, but has made it more secure and has a brighter outlook for the future than ever before in the history of the country. The position held by those who work is a more commanding one than they have ever before held, and the fact is largely due to their own efforts. It was the vote of the wage earners that overthrew McKinleyism and established a tariff for the people. They elected the congress that did away with the ruinous financial policy of the republican party, insisting that the dollar with which the workingman is paid shall be as good as the dollar paid to the government bondholder. With this accomplished, and with a wise conduct of its affairs, the future of labor is assured. Industry is flourishing, wages continue to advance, the relations between capital and labor are, with a few exceptions, harmonious, and the republican spellbinders are confronted by conditions that drive them to subterfuge and misrepresentation.—Detroit Free Press.

PROSPERITY AND POLITICS.

What the Working People Are Most Interested In.

The people can be trusted to remember the operations of the McKinley tariff and to observe the effects of the present one. They know that there was no increase in wages to correspond with the increase in duties under the McKinley act. They know, as "the shopping woman" told Mr. Reed, that there was an increase in prices. They remember that Gov. Campbell and other democratic speakers vainly challenged the republicans in the campaign of 1891 to name one instance of an increase of wages in the industries that had received higher bounties in return for their campaign contributions. They remember—the Homestead workers in particular—actual reductions in wages. Other instances reported from time to time in the daily news, recently reprinted in the World and never before questioned, have been made the subject of quibbling denials as to the extent or time or cause of the reductions. But the general fact of the steady depression of wages from 1891 to 1894 under the McKinley act cannot be denied. The people know it.

What the country is much more interested in, however, is the rise in wages, the reduced cost of necessaries and the return of prosperity under the democratic tariff. What all the republican politicians and editors said could not occur has occurred. There is no need of figures, and facts prove this. The people see and feel and rejoice in it. And this Gov. McKinley will find is to be the main factor in the approaching elections, and especially in the more important one next year. The people cannot be deluded into denying the good times nor into preferring politics to prosperity. They ask only for an era of peace in which to improve to the utmost the opportunity that has come to them. And they intend to have it.—N. Y. World.

PARAGRAPHIC POINTERS.

— Republican enthusiasm for 1896 is decidedly on the decrease as the prosperity of the country is on the increase.—Chicago Chronicle.

——There is reputable authority for stating that the boom of every republican candidate for the presidency has been sidetracked, and yet it remains a moral certainty that a nomination will be made by the national convention.—Detroit Free Press.

——With the addition this year, made or projected, of eight hundred thousand spindles to the cotton mills in the south, representing an investment of fifteen million dollars, doesn't Mr. McKinley see how illogical he is as a presidential candidate?—N. Y. World.

——Wool growers receive better prices for their wool than when the McKinley law was in force and about twelve dollars a year per capita is saved to the purchasers of woolen goods. The party that advocates the restoration of McKinley duties on wool will be largely in the minority.—Arkansas Gazette.

——Why don't those republican papers which insist that the tariff is an issue in this year's politics be more explicit? People cannot be deceived by glittering generalities. In what way is the tariff an issue? Are the republican campaigners going to demand the restoration of the odious McKinley law as soon as practicable?—Cincinnati Enquirer.

——Three years ago the exportation of a few millions of gold and a corresponding shrinkage of the gold reserve would have attracted no attention. But now, since we have had a practical illustration of the evil effects that can result from a raid on the reserve through our beautiful system of paper currency, the fluctuations of the reserve are watched in some quarters with anxiety. But there is no occasion for any uneasiness whatever. As long as Cleveland is president and Carlisle secretary of the treasury the gold reserve, our national credit and the people's money will be protected.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

THE * CHRONICLE.

C. C. DuBOSE, Editor and Proprietor.

COLUMBIANA, OCT. 3, 1895.

A SUGGESTION.

The grand jury report as a rule is a dry document and contains little of public interest, but in the last report which we publish elsewhere, we find a recommendation which demands attention—serious attention. We refer to the way our public roads are worked.

In the first place the laws governing this important work are fifty years at least behind this progressive age. In the second place the overseers have no experience or training to guide them in the discharge of their duty, and the consequence is the roads are not worked, nor even patched, but are butchered, if we may be allowed to use that expressive term.

In the third place the hands have no tools with which to work the roads, if they felt so disposed, for under the present laws it is left largely to their discretion and pleasure whether they are worked at all or not. We might enumerate other causes which operate to produce the miserable excuses we call public roads, but it would be useless. We all know the facts, and we know further that our roads are a disgrace to our county.

This being true, is it not high time we take some steps toward improving their condition? We think so, and we can give a reason. There are few men in our county who would not like to see a desirable class of emigrants move here and help us build up the waste plases, develop our agricultural and mineral resources, and fire us with renewed energy and ambition by their skill and improved methods. Their influence would prove a blessing in many ways besides the enhancement in the value of property.

But we had as well sing Psalms to a dead mule as to try to induce them to purchase property here so long as our roads remain in their present condition. The people whom we would like to see located with us are accustomed to macadamized roads, and well they know their advantages. If they should come here to investigate their first impression would be that we are anything but progressive in our methods, and they would naturally prefer to buy property where the roads are already in good condition, and where the residents display more public spirit and progressiveness. These are facts, plain, stubborn facts that can be readily proved, but it is best to state these things plainly and then try and devise a remedy.

Just now the tide of emigration is flowing to the South. Thousands of energetic farmers are leaving the bleak North for our more genial climate, and if we were prepared to offer any kind of inducements we would undoubtedly get quite a number of these people located in our county. We have an inducement in the way of good land at moderate prices, but there are other counties in this and other southern states that have not only the cheap lands, but they offer a large bonus in the way of splendid wagon roads. In choosing between the two the county with the best roads will always get the preference.

Now the question is are we willing to sit down quietly and let this rare opportunity pass? Surely not. It were worse than suicidal to do so. If not, then let us awake to our duty. Good roads can be made in this county at less cost than in almost any county in the state. We have the material right on the spot, and all we need to do is to utilize it.

We earnestly hope to see some tangible plan brought out in the near future whereby we can effectually remove this menace to our prosperity. Now is the time to begin. We cannot build the roads on paper, else we would have had them long since, but we are ready and anxious to do all in our power through the paper and otherwise to aid in any plan looking to the upbuilding of our county and state. Think over this matter carefully. Look at the numerous advantages we could gain, and then let's set our energies toward the accomplishment of these ends. Set the ball once in motion and no one will care to stop it.

THE populist and week-kneed democrats have begun already to suggest to the democratic party the "safe" policy and methods to be pursued by that party in the next campaign. They, of course, as usual, want the qualifications of participants in the primaries and conventions made so conservative that all the soreheaded backsliders and disgruntled kickers can get in. We object seriously to any compromise by the democratic party. If backsliders want to come back let them come the same route they left their party, i. e., by their votes. That's true democracy. If a man is sincere in his desire to return to the party he will not question the requirements.—(Washington County News. It will be remembered that when the Prodigal Son came back he did not propose to run the ranch, but remarked with timely humbleness: "Father, I have sinned before heaven and in thy sight, and am no more worthy to be called thy son. Make me as one of thy hired servants." Let the backsliders come in this spirit, and not with the imputation that all the sinning has been done on our side of the house, and we will negotiate with them.

THE importance of the coming election in Utah to the country at large lies chiefly, of course, in its effect upon the United States senate. Today this body has forty-two republicans, or with Duport, of Delaware, forty-three. The democrats, if Irby, Tillman and Butler are counted with them, have forty; but if these three are counted with populists, the latter have eight and the democrats thirty-seven. If the new Utah senators are republican, that party will have forty-five, or just one-half of the total of ninety with Jones, of Nevada, a certainly on party questions generally. If the Utah senators are democrats, and can capture the total populist vote—which is improbable—it would give the democrats power to block any republican legislature sent over from the house. It must not be forgotten, however, that the Utah senators will have no voice in the organization of the senate, as they will not be elected until after congress is in session.

THE time when electricity will be the chief motive power on railways seems near at hand, when we hear that the Great Westinghouse Electric company has combined with the great Baldwin Locomotive works to begin the manufacture of electric locomotives. Already two railways in the East are using electric locomotives over a part of their lines, and the work done by them is satisfactory. In a few years railways and factories will be equipped with electric engines. Wagons and carriages will be moved by the same force, and our houses will be lighted and warmed by it. Great is electricity, may its uses increase.

GOOD Americans must rejoice at the news from Cuba, telling of the success of the patriots in their efforts to throw off the yoke of Spain and give to their fair island a free government. There is no call for the government of the United States to spend money in trying to prevent aid from our shores from reaching the Cuban revolutionists. The liberty loving instincts of our people leads them to be in full sympathy with any country the citizens of which are fighting for liberty. May Cuba win.

IT IS because the world has become confident that another panic will not be precipitated by congress falling into the control of the free coiners, as well as the short crop, that the price of cotton is now high, with the promise of going higher.—Macon Telegraph.

Cotton's Contrariness.

From the Montgomery Advertiser.

Last March silver was 67 cents an ounce and cotton 5 cents a pound. Now silver has declined to 66¢ cents per ounce while cotton has advanced to 8 cents. Will the free silver advocates please explain the great falling out between these two commodities? According to their argument there has always been a mysterous bond between them, so that when one went down the other did too. Why has cotton advanced without the only possible cause—the enactment of a free silver coinage law?

"Do you think he is after my money?"

"Shouldn't wonder. He told me he was figuring on marrying you."—Life.

SILVER THEORIES REFUTED BY FACTS.

From the Iron Age.

The admission of Representative Newlands, of Nevada, that "if business continues to improve and it turns out that the improvement is permanent the silver issue is dead" is a piece of frankness that few silver men seem capable of but the force of the admission cannot be lost on any of them if they will give it a moment's thought. A system which has extensive popular support only when business is extremely bad is suspicious; intelligent men are not likely to regard it with much respect and business men will be reluctant to take their chances on it. Bad crops are likely in England and America to cost a political party its control of the government. Yet no man contends for a moment that the politics of the administration can blight the crops or a change in administration can confer fertility on the soil. The political influence of a bad crop is due to the propensity of a small fraction of the electorate to change the first thing that comes to hand when matters are unsatisfactory. So in bad times a financial or other scheme of the most worthless character may secure the support of people who are discontented and wish to change something, it makes no difference what. A financial scheme that cannot stand prosperity stands convicted of being a humbug.

But there is more in Mr. Newland's admission than this. The silver men attributed to gold monometallism the disasters of 1893, which their own legislation and their own threats had caused. The slow recovery of business after the repeal of the Sherman law they cited as evidence that silver purchases had not caused the panic, though the expulsion of gold from the country by the Sherman law can be demonstrated on a blackboard. They declared that business could not recover till the currency was inflated by more silver and free coinage was secured. Yet a deep and wide revival of business is in process. It is, perhaps, the most sudden revival that we have ever had. There are apprehensions that it has moved too fast and that reverses may occur. But the revival of business is not only diverting the attention of the public from patent medicines from public woes—it is refuting the predictions of the quacks who poffer the patent medicines.

Business is not only recovering without free silver, but its recovery dates from the taking of efficient steps to maintain the dollar at its present value, just as the disaster itself came when there was imminent danger that the value of the dollar would be reduced one-half. So also the greenbacks collapsed under the prosperity which the country began to enjoy as soon as it got the dollar back to its gold value.

Prices are advancing and trade is increasing without materially increasing the volume of the currency and this destroys the corner-stone of free silverism. Prices are advancing in gold, which completely refutes the dogma that prices in gold have been declining on account of the scarcity of the metal and must continue to decline. The South has seen cotton go up 60 per cent in a few months without free silver, and knows that free silver is not essential to an advance in the prices.

The present improvement will not, in a certain literal sense, be permanent. Business will have its vicissitudes in the future as it has had in the past. But if the free silver men will abandon their efforts to reduce the value of the dollar the revival of business will be permanent in the ordinary sense of the term, and so many silver men will be convinced by the logic of events that the remainder will be too few to be dangerous.

A SCHOOL GIRL AT 66.

From the Tuskaloosa Gazette.

Francis Martin is the name of a colored woman sixty-six years of age, who is, we believe, the oldest school girl, white or black, in Alabama. About a year or more since she started out in the colored public school with the intention of learning how to read and write, and although she was sixty-five years old at the time she learned with a marked degree of rapidity. She was so well pleased with her progress that she has decided to keep up her study. She now reads very well and writes a plain legible hand. She will again attend the public school this winter, and expects to make greater advances than ever during the coming session. This ought to teach a great lesson to the many hundreds of people who cannot read and write, for if this poor ignorant colored woman can do this there is no reason why every one should not do the same. There is positively no excuse for any person to live in ignorance in this good land of ours where the schools are open to all who wish to learn.

Every mother should know that croup can be prevented. The first symptom of true croup is hoarseness. This is followed by a peculiar rough cough. If Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is given freely as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even after the cough has developed it will prevent the attack. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Parker & Armstrong.

WHAT AILS KOLB?

From the Savannah News.

What can be the matter with Kolb, of Alabama? The fellow is actually talking in a hopeful strain. He is telling how farmers may realize 10 cents a pound for their cotton this winter. And the queerest part of it is, in his advice he recognizes the controlling influence of the law of supply and demand. He has not a word to say about free silver coinage as the sovereign remedy for low prices of cotton. Is he in the midst of a lucid interval after a long period of mental abberation? Is he about to take his departure from the populist party? He can't remain a populist in good standing and talk hopefully of the future. He cannot predicate 10-cent cotton upon any other basis than free coinage and remain a faithful populist. Are not the gold bugs still in possession of the government? Are not the Shylocks still cutting their pounds of flesh? Is not the money power still grinding its heel upon the forehead of prostrate labor? Is not the infamous work of raising wages and paying higher prices for products still going on under the Cleveland administration? And yet Kolb says if the cotton producers will tackle and get the best of the law of supply and demand by withholding their cotton from the markets until the buyers want it, 10 cents or more may be paid for it, and the farmers may be "once more a prosperous and happy people." Happy without populists in office! Happy without 50-cent dollars! Happy without a calamity wail! Perish the thought in all populist minds!

There is no medicine so often needed in every home and so admirably adapted to the purposes for which it is intended, as Chamberlain's Pain Balm. Hardly a week passes but some member of the family has need of it. A toothache or headache may be cured by it. A touch of rheumatism or neuralgia quieted. The severe pain of a burn or scald promptly relieved and the sore healed in much less time than when medicine has to be sent for. A sprain may be promptly treated before inflammation sets in, which insures a cure in about one-third of the time otherwise required. Cuts and bruises should receive immediate treatment before the parts become swollen, which can only be done when Pain Balm is kept at hand. A sore throat may be cured before it becomes serious. A troublesome corn may be removed by applying it twice a day for a week or two. A lame back may be cured and several days of valuable time saved or a pain in the side or chest relieved without paying a doctor bill. Procure a 50 cent bottle at once and you will never regret it. For sale by Parker & Armstrong.

POPS IN A HOLE.

From the Huntsville Mercury.

There is no denying that the populists are in a hole this year in Alabama. Originally they were independents, then greenbackers, afterward getting possession of the alliance organization and causing it to sink with their weight, they finally grasp the free silver straw. In all the former "isms" they have had the support of the republican committees and republican money; but this year they can hope for no assistance from this quarter, as Chairman Moseley has declared against an alliance with them. The opportunity will be given them to vote for a straight democrat or a straight republican for governor next year.

Another Blow to Silver.

From the Cincinnati Enquirer.

"Well, there has been another fall in silver," said Mr. Asbury Peppers as he tucked the corners of his napkin into his vest pockets.

"What!" shouted the populist boarder. "Ever since the infamous crime of 1873—"

"Oh, this wasn't much of a fall," interrupted Mr. Peppers. "I was on the car today and saw the conductor knock down a quarter."

W. F. THETFORD, JR.,

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

THIRTY years' observation of Castoria with the patronage of millions of persons, permit us to speak of it without guessing. It is unquestionably the best remedy for Infants and Children the world has ever known. It is harmless. Children like it. It gives them health. It will save their lives. In it Mothers have something which is absolutely safe and practically perfect as a child's medicine.

Castoria destroys Worms.
Castoria allays Feverishness.
Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd.
Castoria cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic.
Castoria relieves Teething Troubles.
Castoria cures Constipation and Flatulency.

Castoria neutralizes the effects of carbonic acid gas or poisonous air.
Castoria does not contain morphine, opium, or other narcotic property.
Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep.
Castoria is put up in one-size bottles only. It is not sold in bulk.
Don't allow any one to sell you anything else on the plea or promise that it is "just as good" and "will answer every purpose."
See that you get C-A-S-T-O-R-I-A.

THE PLAN.

Each county is organized into a separate organization. Get a policy for thirty years for five dollars per thousand dollars without renewal. You only pay your pro-rata share of the loss of a brother member in your own county. In Kentucky, South Carolina, Georgia and Virginia the average cost has not been more than two dollars per annum in each thousand dollars of insurance.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS.

Mrs. Charles Sparks was a visitor in our city Monday.

WANTED—A county commissioner who can count thirty.

J. A. Haward, of Bridgeton, paid us an appeciated call Monday.

Miss Edna Nelson is absent in Birmingham for a short stay.

Frost yesterday morning. Rather early, but welcome nevertheless.

Mrs. W. S. Meroney and children, of Blocton, are on a visit here to relatives.

Mrs. Mat. Mitchel, of Vincent, was a guest of Mrs. Emma Roper last week.

Mrs. I. D. Mason and Mrs. Henry Milner have been visiting relatives in Childersburg.

W. C. Benton, of Siluria, was in our city Monday, and favored us with a pleasant call.

Mrs. Woodruff is spending awhile with Mrs. Jim McGowan four miles east of town.

Rev. J. P. Word and family, of Quitman, Ga., visited Rev. W. I. Sinnott's family this week.

Mrs. Campbell, of Montgomery, was a guest of her daughter, Mrs. John Spencer, last week.

Misses Annie McMillan and Myrtle Swain will leave tomorrow for Livingston to enter college.

Walter Hubbard, of Harpersville, spent last week in town, guest of his sister, Mrs. E. B. Nelson.

Rev. W. I. Sinnott left Tuesday for Birmingham to attend the meeting of the North Alabama Presbytery.

Hon. E. S. Lyman and family, of Montevallo, visited the family of our mayor, W. B. Browne this week.

Miss Eloise Bell one of Shelby's prettiest young ladies, was a guest of her friend Miss Annie McMillan Saturday.

G. W. Averyt, one of Shelby's hustling merchants, passed through our city Tuesday en route to the Atlanta exposition.

Miss Lucy Smith is attending Presbytery in Birmingham this week. Her position in school is being filled by Miss Elva Greek.

James Kifer, of Shelby, has quite a number of hands at work on the coal switch, preparatory to shipping coal from this point again.

Cotton has reached 8¼ cents per pound in this market, and is still climbing. If Cleveland don't hurry up and resign it will soon reach 10 cents.

Messrs. John Mosely and Will Walker, two of Shelby's gallant beaux, took in our city Sunday. It is evident their team was accustomed to our streets.

The revenue officers made quite a haul last week just below Chancellor's Islands on the Coosa river, near Harpersville. They captured four men whose names we could not learn, a 65-gallon still, a lot of liquor, etc. The prisoners were taken to Montgomery. We are inclined to the belief that there is still more work in this county for revenue officers, and if they will keep their eyes peeled other fields await them.

A Brilliant Wedding.

NELSON-TEAGUE—Married at the Baptist church in this place, Thursday evening, Sept 26, 1895, by Rev. B. F. Giles, of East Lake, Dr. T. G. Nelson, of Harpersville, and Miss Louella Teague, of this place.

This wedding was one of the prettiest we ever had the pleasure of attending. All during Thursday a happy, busy crowd of young ladies, assisted by two or three young men, were engaged in decorating the church, and ere they finished it was enchanting to behold. They did not confine themselves to styles of past years, but originated new and tasty designs that displayed their genius in this line.

The ceremony was announced to take place at 8 o'clock, and by that hour the church was crowded to its full seating capacity with the friends and well-wishes of the popular couple to be wedded. And they were not allowed to grow impatient waiting, for at exactly 8 o'clock Miss Myrtle Swain took her seat at the organ and began the wedding march. Two pretty flower girls, Allie Nelson and Florence Spencer led the way, opening the gate made of evergreens at the end of the aisle at the side of the altar. Following came the bride and groom. Miss Louella looked beautiful dressed in white silk, trimmed with lace and passementerie, silk tulle veil and natural flowers. She was the perfection of beauty, style and neatness. Dr. Nelson looked particularly handsome being dressed in most becoming style. As they marched slowly down the aisle they absorbed the entire attention of the large audience, and as they took position in front of the altar, the numerous tapers arranged about the pulpit shedding their delicate light upon them, and standing 'neath an arch of evergreens and flowers, the scene was both impressive and beautiful. Rev. B. F. Giles performed the ceremony in a short but appropriate manner, closing with a brief prayer.

Again the sweet strains of the organ were heard, and the recently united couple marched out through the opposite aisle by which they came.

The bride and groom accompanied by a large number of friends then repaired to the residence of Mrs. Laura Armstrong where they were tendered a handsome reception. Mrs. Armstrong is an adept in the art of entertaining, and it has seldom been her pleasure to have as her guests a happier, jollier crowd than on that evening. Refreshments consisting of ice cream, cake, fruits, candies, nuts, etc, were served and were partaken of with that keen relish that showed appreciation.

Dr. Nelson is a Columbiana boy by birth, and since he graduated with honor as a physician he has located at Harpersville, where he injoys a lucrative practice and the entire confidence of the community. Miss Louella is one of our sweetest and most charming girls. Endowed with a sunny disposition, a confiding nature, contented and happy at all times, finely educated, refined, modest, she has a peculiarly bright future before her.

The happy couple left Friday for Harpersville, where a new dwelling, recently built and furnished awaited them.

The Chronicle wishes for them all of the happiness possible in this world, and perfect bliss in the world to come.

We had a glaring illustration this week of the fact that a little negligence frequently causes a deal of annoyance, trouble and expense. The law plainly says that the jury commissioners must draw thirty names for each petit jury. Monday morning last when Judge Brewer commenced to make up the juries for the week, the discovery was made that only twenty-eight names had been placed on the veniric. He stopped the proceedings at once, and upon investigation found that he could proceed no further. A small matter, truly, to bust a court, but it did it most effectually, and there will be no criminal cases tried until next spring. A little caution might not be a bad thing to exercise by those who are entrusted with these small but very important duties.

We learned from Judge Brewer before he left the city Tuesday that he would call an extra session of the circuit court for some date early in December, to continue two weeks. He hopes to try about fifteen or twenty civil cases if possiple during that term, and thereby reduce the docket very considerably.

W. H. Wimpee and family left yesterday for Whitewright, Texas, where they will reside in future. They have lived here a number of years, and we regret their departure, but hope they may be prosperous and contented in their new home.

Thomas McGibony left yesterday for Birmingham having been called there by telegram stating his cousin Charley McGibony had his leg broken in a railroad wreck and it would have to be amputated.

Frank Nelson, Jr., of Anniston, was called here last week by the serious illness of both his father and mother. We trust they may be soon restored to health.

Hon. James Crook, of Jacksonville, was in town Monday and Tuesday.

Report of Grand Jury.

To the Hon. George E. Brewer, Judge Presiding.

The grand jury empannelled and sworn at this term of the court having finished its labors begs to submit the following as its final report.

We have investigated the books, papers, etc., of all the county officers as the statutes require and find them correctly and neatly kept.

We have examined the county jail and find it in good condition and the prisoners properly cared for.

We have also examined the condition of the county poor house and find twenty-seven inmates securing all neccessary attention.

We find the court house in tolerable good repair, but would reccommend to the commissioners court that they have the wood-work on outside of building repainted as soon as practicable.

We have examined into the condition of the bonds of all the county officers and find them all sufficient in amounts and security except in the following cases:

John Black, justice of the peace in beat 3, bond insufficient on account of death of R N. Pilgreen.

French Nabors, notary public in beat 4, bond insufficient on account of the death of Henry Wilson.

J. F. Bates, constable in beat 10, bond not good. We therefore reccommend that the bonds of the above mentioned officers be made good and sufficient.

We have investigated forty-nine cases and herewith return twenty-five indictments.

We have heard of a number of complaints about the manner in which our public roads are worked and kept. We earnestly appeal to all officers of the public roads to do their full duty to work their respective roads when needed and not wait until just before court times, as experience teaches us that this kind of working is not satisfactory. It is all important that our public roads be kept in good condition.

We return thanks to your honor, our solicitor and our bailiff for services rendered, and having finished our labors beg to be discharged.

JOHN M. FANCHER, Foreman.

Wilsonville Waifs.

The cold wave has struck us at last.

One hundred and ten bales of cotton have been shipped from here this season.

Ed Nivens has been quite sick for several days, but is improving now.

Will Smith who has been on the sick list since his return from the West, has recovered.

"Brown Eyes" you are a good old gun but you were most shot when you announced that the letters "F. A. K." on our badges stood for "Fool Alabama Kickers." Try it again and perhaps out of a million guesses you will get it right.

The brick yard men have finished burning the brick for Mr. Pope's store house and the building will soon begin.

The girls here have organized a society. On their badges may be seen W. S. S. i. e. We Sweet School girls. Now don't they think they are some pumpkin.

Quite a crowd from here attended the teachers institute at Four Mile Saturday. They report a fine time.

Someone said the colored lady that was married at the star Thursday night turned as pale as a piece of cotton; "she was scared, poor thing.

Mr. Jimpson you are right lonesome, ain't you.

We had another small wreck on the Southern railroad at this point Saturday evening; fortunately no one was injured.

Quite a crowd of young folks visited the brick yard Thursday night to see the kiln in full blaze. All of them seemed to enjoy themselves very much except Mr. E. Williamson, and he was having a good time until somebody got him hacked.

Miss Pearl Adkins, of Calera, is here attending school. We are glad to have her with us, some of the boys especially.

BUTCH, JR.

J. W. Bolin went to Anniston, Atlanta and Chattanooga on business last week. He took in the exposition while in Atlanta and reported it to be a grand affair.

Our young people regret the closing of the brick yard very much for they took a moon-light walk up there every night or two.

Mr. Sinnott preached at the Presbyterian church last Wednesday evening. The sermon was enjoyed by all who were present.

On last Sunday eve out on the prairies not so very far from town two young ladies and two young gentlemen enjoyed a watermelon feast in the shade of a hay stack, as it was the last of the season we imagine they enjoyed it very much.

Our school grows larger every week. We have about five new pupils every week.

We are glad to report that Will Smith who came back from the Indian Territory sick is now able to be out. Will, it seems like old times to see you going around again.

Quite a crowd of young people attended the Teachers Institute at Four Mile Saturday and enjoyed it very much. All talks by the teachers were interesting and the essay by Miss Cooper was especially interesting and very well gotten up.

Frisk called on Brownie last Sunday; she reported a pleasant trip.

The F. and K. took in three new members Saturday night and it incontinues much longer the Southern will have to build a new depot.

10 a. m. How shall next Sunday's lesson be taught? Primary, Intermediate—W. B. Greek. Adult—E. T. Witherby, J. L. Peters.
11 a. m. Worship in Sunday schools—I. D. Mason, T. A. Huston, J. S. DeLache.
11:30 a. m. Reviews—A. H. Avery.
1:30 p. m. Devotional exercises—Rev. H. P. Berry.
2 p. m. What shall we do for our country? General discussion.
2:30 p. m. What have I learned from the convention! General discussion and experience meeting.

Pastors and Sunday school superintendents are ex-officio members. Each school is allowed three delegates. There are many Sunday school workers in the county whose names do not appear on the program from the fact that the committee could not ascertain who they were. We are anxious that every school in the county be represented in this convention, that we may become acquainted with each other and be prepared to more effectually push forward the work in our county. Bring your Bibles. Come praying God's blessings on the convention. All delegates will be entertained free of charge.

Report to J. F. AVERYT,
Chairman of Committee on Entertainment.

Woman's Inconsistency.

From Spare Moments.

Mrs. Gradley (tearfully)—"I don't care who knows it. My husband has got to give up either me or his lodge! He gets worse and worse; I don't believe he'll ever be any account, the worthless brute!"

Neighbor (soothingly)—"I didn't think it was so bad. But Mrs. Gossiper did tell me that your husband was a poor creature at best."

Mrs. Gradley (flaring up)—"Oh! she did, did she? Well, I'll just let that backbiting gossip know she can't run around slandering the best man in this town! Poor creature, indeed! He's worth a thousand Tom Gossipers and I'll let her know it. Wait till I get my bonnet!"

Five Feet Long.

From the Decatur News.

We were shown a curiosity this week by Mr. H. A. Vaughan. It was a "cannon squash," or rather several of them, growing on an arbor. The specimens he showed us were about the size of a man's arm, and from three to five feet in length. The cannon squash is an edible vegetable, of delicious flavor, and originally a native of the West Indies. It grows to a length of eight feet. The remarkable feature of the vegetable is, when a meal off one is wanted, the end is cut off, the remainder being left on the vine, and the severed end tied over with a cloth, where a new growth will be formed, to serve for future purposes. These are the first specimens we have ever seen.

Two Lives Saved.

Mrs. Phoebe Thomas, of Junction City, Ill., was told by her doctors she had consumption and that there was no hope for her, but two bottles Dr. King's New Discovery completely cured her and she says it saved her life. Mr. Thos Eggers, 139 Florida St., San Francisco, suffered from a dreadful cold, approaching consumption, tried without result everything else then bought one bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery and in two weeks was cured. He is naturally thankful. It is such results, of which these are samples, that prove the wonderful efficacy of the medicine in coughs and colds. Free trial bottles at Parker & Armstrong's drug store. Regular size 50c and $1.00.

At the End of His Rope.

From the Chicago Tribune.

Populist Editor—"James, is there anything more in the papers this morning about that reported injury to the corn crop?"

Assistant—"Yes, there's a lot about it. There ain't any truth in the story. The corn crop is going to be the biggest the country ever had."

Populist Editor (with a heavy sigh)—"James, you may run in that article that's been on the standing galley for the last two or three weeks headed 'Valedictory' and we'll go to press."

All Free.

Those who have used Dr. King's New Discovery know its value, and those who have not, have now the opportunity to try it Free. Call on the advertised druggist and get a trial bottle, free. Send your name and address to H. E. Bucklen & Co., Chicago, and get a sample box of Dr. King's New Life Pills, free, as well as a copy of Guide to Health and Household Instructor, free. All of which is guaranteed to do you good and cost you nothing. For sale by Parker & Armstrong, Druggists, Columbiana, Ala.

DOROTHY'S DRIVE.

THE contest raged in South Bilkshire with a fury unparalleled even in that sturdy English constituency. The tories did not want to fight, but, by jingo, if they did—! and the radicals of Rottenham had for years only wanted a man to lead them. They had now found him in Jeremiah Clink, of Sharpus & Clink, solicitors; his firm had long acted for one of the leading "trade protection societies" in Rottenham, which gave him power in quarters where he wanted popularity; and with the rest of the constituency his success surprised everyone, including himself. Having cultivated mustard and cress from boyhood, first on his sponge and subsequently in an old chocolate box, and having recently developed a pear tree and a potato patch in his back garden, he posed as an authority on matters agricultural and promised more in the name of his party than any candidate had ever promised before. The agricultural laborer was attracted by what he understood to be the prospect of free land for the asking; and Rottenhamites, who had been contented with six geraniums in flower pots and a tomcat, now dreamed of acres of fertile soil tenanted by the contemplated cow and the prolific—or, as a local speaker phrased it, "profligate"—pig. Sir George Redworthy, who had represented the constituency in the conservative interest for fifteen years, felt that he had his work cut out and he buckled to like a man. It was annoying to be interrupted at such a time by domestic questions; but love, which laughs at locksmiths, jeers at politicians, and his eldest son and Miss Dorothy Ditchford, the rector's daughter, selected the morning of the nomination day for informing him that they had resolved to become man and wife at an early date, subject to his consent. Needless to say, Dick Redworthy met with a very unpleasant reception when he broached the subject in the library after breakfast, and that Dolly Ditchford entered an hour later with a beating heart to see what she could do. She was a great favorite with the old gentleman, but he had never before regarded her in the light of a future daughter-in-law; time flies, and he had always thought her a child. After ten minutes' talk with her he knew that if she was only just out of her teens she was certainly a child no longer.

"Well, my little girl," he said, good-humoredly, "if I get in again, and the party is in power, I dare say I can get them to give Dick something to keep him going till I am under the daisies. I never asked it for anything before."

"But suppose they don't get in?" said Dolly, ruefully.

"Well, you'll have to wait; but mind, I can't have any engagement till the election is over. Meanwhile, you make everyone in the parish vote right, and you'll have done your best to help, eh? They won't be able to say no to you. My agent tells me I shall only win by a few, if at all," and Sir George took up his pen. Dolly went to the door, hesitated, and came back. "Sir George," she said, shyly, "if you get into parliament, may we be engaged, anyhow?"

"Bless my soul," said Sir George, looking up. "If I keep my seat, though, I don't know what I won't consent to; if I lose it, I advise Dick and everybody else to keep clear of me for a bit."

"If I can get him a dozen votes, and he only wins by ten or so, he'll feel he owes it to me, and then I am sure he will say yes," said Dolly to Dick as they walked up among the shrubbery, "and you can tell my father then." And that afternoon she went into the village with a sheaf of leaflets in her hand, and failed miserably when heckled on topics of the very existence of which she had never heard before. As a matter of fact, she won votes for the squire without knowing it, but she was nearly crying at what she thought was her want of success, when she met Dick Redworthy as she came out of the last cottage. She felt better after leaving him, and better still when she had had a gallop after tea. It may be mentioned that the downs of South Bilkshire are free to everyone, and there was nothing surprising in Dick Redworthy taking a ride there, too.

It was a tug of war with a vengeance, and there were many interests to be considered. "Sir George's ticket at the army and navy stores is No. —" was the placard which met the baronet one day in Rottenham, borne by a dozen sandwich men, with all the small tradesmen rushing to their doors to look at it. "Ask Mrs. Clink where she got her red silk stockings," was the counterblast which brought matters level. Dorothy Ditchford had met the radical candidate's wife in the "hosiery department" at the stores a few days after it was known that Mr. Clink would stand and that scarlet would be his color, and Dorothy had an observant eye. Her own blue and orange hat was a "dream," worked out under her own directions by a Rottenham modiste. It was in the window for three days and she saw herself distinctly reflected by the belles of Rottenham at every turn. When she had done the parish she went further afield, and the rectory pair did some hard trotting in those few fleeting days. "They all say they think they'll vote for your father if I'll drive them to the poll. Some of them can't walk, poor old things," said Dorothy, and she lined the family wagonette with brown holland and decked it with blue and yellow, while the horses' blinkers could not be seen for ribbons. They were a sober pair of nags, but with her on the box they did wonders on the great day. The effort, however, was reserved for the evening, when the men got home from work.

"Shall we be there by eight?" asked Dorothy, as Dick Redworthy dashed by her in his dogcart, nearly swinging two of his father's stanchest supporters into space as they turned into Rotterham road. "We've got a grand load—nine votes, seven of whom I thought were going the other way."

"I don't know that there's much hurry, miss," said the old man who was standing behind her (he was Sir George's head keeper). "Bill Stumps says this lot's wrong 'uns all through, and I reckon he's right."

"Wrong 'uns?"

"Yes, miss. They've got the squire's colors on to get you to drive them to the poll. That's their little joke, that is," said old Harry Blackwater, grimly, and Bill Stumps, the underkeeper, nudged him and told him not to make a row. But the men behind were all singing a patriotic song loudly and merrily. Miss Ditchford thought she caught a few words in it which were not in the original when she composed it.

"I won't drive them," she said, beginning to pull up.

"Better be careful, miss; they're a desprit lot, and there's only two of us," said Bill Stumps.

Dorothy set her lips; she was not in the habit of feeling afraid.

"Ain't there any ancient woter to be collected up Deadman's hill way, miss?" whispered Bill Stumps, with a grin.

Dorothy laughed, too; round went the horses into a narrow lane, and up an incline dignified by the name of hill.

"Hi, miss! you're going the wrong way," cried John Bradds behind her. He was a cobbler from Clay Lane, and a radical as she thought till she found him waiting to be taken to the poll with a blue and orange rosette in his hat.

"You're going wrong! Turn round or we'll be late!" cried some one else.

"Can't turn," said Dorothy, decisively, glancing at the hedges on both sides of her. Presently the road got wider, and she had to acknowledge she could turn.

"Tip the whole cartload into the ditch, miss," whispered Bill Stumps;

"OUT OF THE WAY THERE!" HE SHOUTED.

"I'll take care o' you." But she reflected that the hedge was low and the field beyond flinty, and to turn a vanload of poachers out in cold blood was one thing, but when it included rolling with them, even in the protecting grasp of tobaccoey Bill Stumps, it looked an unpleasant prospect. And she drove back into the Rottenham road; thinking with satisfaction, as she glanced at the tiny watch in the bangle Dick had given her that morning, that five minutes were gone, and it was quite a quarter to eight, and a good mile from the polling station. They were shouting to her to hurry up, led by John Bradds, the cobbler, and Bill Stumps and the headkeeper were turning round to face the angry men in the wagonette. She was glad she had allowed no one on the box beside her. The hedge looked soft and green. Would an upset hurt her very much? There was a good deal of holly just there. But the question was not left entirely for her to settle. What was it coming up behind? There was a radical horse dealer at Rotterham (a "coper," Dick Redworthy called him) whom Sir George had once fined for an assault. He had been taking voters to the poll all day in his biggest four-horse brake.

Up it came, brimfull, at a furious pace behind her, with Mr. Crookinger himself on the box. "Out of the way there!" he shouted, while those behind him jeered and hooted at Sir George's colors.

"You've plenty of room," said Dolly to herself, and she did not give way an inch. "Out of the way!" they yelled.

She says she did not pull to the right, but some of them say she did, and she certainly looked round as the leaders came up, but she kept her pair back, and they had not been doing more than a steady six miles an hour for at least three hundred yards when Mr. Crookinger let his horses go with a curse. There was a grinding crash, and in the next second Dorothy Ditchford was looking as dignified as she could in the middle of a privet bush, hoping that the horses were not going to kick, and that her father's carriage was not injured. It had two wheels in the ditch, and the other two were spinning round aimlessly clear of the ground.

"I'm afraid they were in time," she said to Dick Redworthy five minutes later, when he picked her up with his dogcart. "They had ten minutes to do it in by my watch."

"Then I'll lay against them, Dolly," he said. "I put that little watch five minutes slow just before I gave it to you, to keep you longer with me."

"Oh, Dick!" she said. "how could you?"

And she said "O, Dick!" again next morning when he galloped up to the rectory to say that Mr. Crookinger's brake had driven up the night before at exactly thirty seconds past eight, and that the poll had been declared with a majority of twenty-three in Sir George's favor, and she added:

"There were twenty at least in the big brake, and I had seven of them in the wagonette."

So the engagement was announced that day.—St. James Budget.

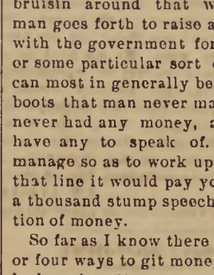
SQUIRE RUFUS SANDERS

And His Story of the "Durn Dictionary Document."

Some Rocky Creek Logic On the Money Question—"You Can't Take Your Hamper Basket and Go and Git Somethin for Nothin"—A Land Trade With Confederate Money.

(Copyright, 1895.)

Money is a mighty good thing in its place, and I reckon no doubts I know as much as the average man about the right and proper place for it. Here lately I have seen and heard a whole tremendious big sight from the papers and politicians in regards to the great question of money. Some folks say there ain't enough money floatin around in the country. Of course not. There never was enough, and there never will be enough for everybody. We never will come to that pass where the common run of people will not want jest a few more, if you please. Some people will get rich and stay rich, whilst others will start poor, or git poor, and stay poor. For thus it was written down.



Rocky Creek Logic.

It raley looks to me like if there was a gracious plenty of money in the country, and it runnin loose and free so every man could go and help himself, you understand, the general machinery would soon run down and stop. Accordin to my doxology, it ain't money, but the general bankerin after it that holds this old government down and keeps up a constant hummin and hustlin all along the line.

I have likewise also took notice in my bruisin around that whensomever a man goes forth to raise a mighty muss with the government for more money, or some particular sort of money, you can most in generally bet your Sunday boots that man never made any money, never had any money, and never will have any to speak of. If you could manage so as to work up a few bets o that line it would pay you better than a thousand stump speeches on the question of money.

So far as I know there ain't but three or four ways to git money. You mought be born into it, you mought git somethin in the way of boot when you marry, you can work for it and earn it, or you can steal it. But git out your little note book now and set this down:

You can't take your hamper basket and go and git somethin for nothin.

When I was a boy we use to sing a little song that started off as follows:

"Where greenbacks grow on white oak trees,
And the rivers flow with brandy,
Where the streets are paved with chicken pie,
And the girls are sweet as candy."

But as yet I never have been able to round myself up in that pleasant country. The general combination is quite altogether too gorgeous like and rich for a plain and common old plug like me.

So long as a dollar will buy a dollar's worth of dry goods and groceries, with a bottle of vegetable matter thrown in for good measure, you understand, and so long as I can keep a few of the documents put away in my old sock, I am not the man to go out and kick up a big dust with the general government in regards to money matters. And it don't make a continential bit of difference with me whether my share comes in gold, or silver or paper. At our house money is money every day in the year.

When Money Was Plenty.

But I have seen the times, fellow citizens, when there was money a plenty and to spare in this great and growin country. And some of these old stagers that have now got the snow and hay seed in their hair never can live long enough to disremember that time.

When the bottom dropped out of the Confederate government naturally of course our money went up the spout. We then had more money than most anything else. You could get your hat full of money for a barlow knife or a plug of sorry tobacco. You could sell one square meal for $50 spot cash. There was dead oodles of money in them days, you understand, but it took a heap of pushin to make it go, and it wouldn't fetch much when it went. It must of been somewhat like the old man up in the hill country said about the State bank money—"too durn new, and too much of a kind." It was sorter like the man that went to town after nothin and took along his ox cart to haul it home in. Right along there before it passes out of my mind I want to say that another old-fashion shootin, fightin, killin war would be a good thing to make some men out of simlin-headed dudes, and put a stop to the general howl about "hard times" and "skeerce money."

In them dark and tryin days when money was so tremendius plenty and times so almighty hard to spend I made one trade that put me ahead of the hounds, as it were, with time to spare and no fences to climb. I sold a piney woods farm over in the hills for $2,500 and bought a plantation down on Deer Creek for $2,300. I sold out to old man Billy Stringer and took his note for the money. Then I bought from Tobe Crittenden and give him my note—no waverly note, no mortgage and no lien, you understand, but jest a plain, honest, everyday, Hardshell Baptist note.

When Pay Day Come.

All of the papers in the two trades fell due along in the fall, and that was the last year of the war. The government was now ruther shaky at the knees and money was easy and plentiful as pig tracks. When pay day come old man Billy Stringer's horse was tied up to the rack at our front gate before breakfast, and the old man come right down to business as soon as he could.

"I have come over this mornin to take up my note, Rufus," says he.

"Well, I am tbunderin glad to see you, Uncle Billy," says I.

"But I aint got nothin but Confederate money," he went on. "I didn't come to force it on you, but I will only say I have got it here in my wallet for you if you want it."

"I am still bettin on the gray jackets of the South as agin the blue coats of the North," says I, "and what is money with you, Uncle Billy, is also money with me. Count it out and take your note."

So he counted out the stuff, put the note in his pocket and rode of toward home.

Now it so come to pass that old man Jeremiah Jernigan was over to my house that day when old man Billy come for a settlement. Old man Jeremiah was way yonder the most richest man in the county, and had lots of money loaned out on short time and long interest. He was already feelin tolerable skittish about Confederate money, though he couldn't keep from takin it as long as it went with everybody else. But he was powerful anxious for somebody to refuse it, so he could follow suit and call for nothin but gold and silver when people he had loaned to come to take up their notes. He looked at me with a nervious, dont-you-take-it sort of a look that day when Uncle Billy showed down with his Confederate money. But I could see some further ahead than the end of my nose, and so the wink didn't work worth a cent with me. I didn't go and forget that Tobe Crittenden was holdin my note for $2,300, and I wanted to bring that note home with me and put it away good before the whole country broke away from Confederate money. You can see how it was that I couldn't make the first break and save myself.

Off After That Hardshell Note.

The very next day my note to Tobe Crittenden fell due, so bright and early that mornin I saddled up and mounted my nag and started off after it. The road to Tobe's place took me right by old man Jeremiah Jernigan's, and when I got along there the old man come out and hailed me and wanted to know where I was bound for. I told him where I was goin and what I was goin after.

"Well, if he don't take it," says I, "it will be because you have been down there and put him up to refusin, and if you want a heap older than me I would give you my plain, personal opinions of a man that would play a game like that amongst his friends and neighbors. I am on my way to Tobe Crittenden's, and I am goin after that note."

"And I'll jest bet my mare mule Kit agin the scrriest steer calf on your place that you don't git it," says old man Jeremiah.

"I'll take that bet if I loose," says I, shakin hands with him to clinch it. "Good mornin, Uncle Jerry."

When I hove in sight of the Crittenden place Tobe he was walkin fast up and down his front piaza, and smokin and puffin with his pipe like a steam engine.

"Good mornin, Tobe," says I.

"Good mornin, sir," says he.

"You needn't too make out like you don't know me," says I, "cause I was warmin up at his cold and highferlutin talk."

"Yes, I do know you," says he. "That is Rufus Sanders. Light and git down and come in."

I went in and let him know from the jump that I had come after that note.

"You can git it," says he, "providin if you have come heeled with the right sort of rocks, but let me tell you now, I am not goin to take any of your durn Confederate money."

"What was old man Jeremiah Jernigan doin down here yesterday?" says I.

"He was down here on business," says Tobe, "but that aint got nothin to do with your durn Confederate money. I wouldn't touch it with a forty-foot pole."

"Well and good, Mister Crittenden," says I, "but you have got to sign a paper refusin to take it. A man that talks as big as you do ought to be willin to put it in black and white."

Tobe lowed he was willin to sign his name, and we went in the house to fix up the paper.

That "Durn Dictionary Document."

Sorry spellin has always been one of my mainest weak pints. I always would spell a word accordin to the way it sounds. My spellin is done mostly by ear, as it were, and if the letters don't run along with the sound of the word I am more than probable to make a mess of it.

Now Tobe Crittenden was good and kind-hearted, but at the same time he was one of these nervious, restless, suspicious sort of men. He wouldn't believe his own dear daddy on a Bible oath, and he wouldn't trust his best friend as far as you could throw a camp-meetin by the tail. And besides that, Tobe was monstrous dull in books. The school teachers use to say that the onlyest way to put any learnin in Tobe's head was to split the thing open, put the book in it and sew the whole business up.

It was my job to write the paper, and I didn't go so very far before I struck a knot and called for a dictionary. Tobe went and got the book and then wanted to know what I was goin to do with it.

"I have struck a hard word to spell," says I, "and I need the book to pull me through."

"Look a here, Rufe Sanders," says he, "don't you go and put nothin in that paper which I can't understand."

"I will read it out when I git through," says I to Tobe, "and make every word as plain as a painted horse rack."

But at the same time I saw right where Tobe's weak pint come in, and after that I would write a few words and then pull the dictionary on him. He was walkin around in his nervious, fretful way, and every time I picked up the book he would shake his fist and foam at the mouth and tell me not to put nothin in the paper that he couldn't understand. I told him over and over to hold on till I got through and then I would read it out loud to him and make everything clear as a bell and plum satisfactional. But Tobe he was dancin around by this time like a man with the seven years itch. Presently he brought himself up quick and suddent in front of me and said, says he:

"Hold on right there, Rufe Sanders! Blamed if I wouldn't ruther take your durn Confederate money than your durn dictionary document."

Henceforwards from that time on I have told mother that she hadn't ought to take on so about my bad spellin. It is a weak pint I know, but you can see where it saved us $2,300 with that "durn dictionary document."

Now then, to cut the story short, when I went to sleep that night the note which Tobe Crittenden had been holdin on me was safe at the bottom of the family chest, whilst old man Jernigan's mare mule Kit was lookin to me for her corn and fodder. Rufus Sanders.

THOSE ATROCITIES,

Alleged to Have Been Committed on Amenian Christians, Largely a Mass of Exaggerations — One of the European Delegation Declares That There is No Evidence to Support the Stories of Wholesale Massacres Sent Out.

LONDON, Oct. 5.—The correspondent of the Pall Mall Gazette in Constantinople sends an interview with a European delegate attached to the commission of inquiry, which has been conducting an examination at Sassoun into the alleged atrocities committed in that part of Armenia. The delegate declares that the statements of the press correspondents in regard to the atrocities, especially those of Mr. Dillon in the Daily Telegraph, of London, and his English contemporaries, are gross exaggerations. When the report of the commission is published, he says, it will be found that the number of killed in the fighting attending the capture of the villages of Semal, Shemak, Chelighuzan and in the fighting elsewhere did not exceed from 300 to 500. There is no evidence, says the delegate, that numbers of persons were killed in cold blood or that there was any mutilation of women and children. The finding of forty bodies buried in a pit at Chelighuzan, out of which the correspondents made so much capital, as well as the story of women throwing themselves over a cliff to escape dishonor, was absolutely fictitious. The report of the commissioners, the delegate asserts, will also disprove all of the stories of wholesale massacres and violations of women, and show that only a flying column of Turkish regulars operated against the Armenians, who were well supplied with firearms.

The correspondent of the Exchange Telgraph Co. at Constantinople wires that the report of the commission of inquiry sitting at Sassoun will entirely discredit the sensational stories of massacres, violations, etc., which have been so persistently circulated. Instead of 30,000 Christians having been driven into exile, as alleged, the report will show that the entire number of inhabitants of the disturbed district, Moslem and Christian, did not exceed 4,000. It will also be shown that the Armenians, instead of being remorslessly butchered while in a condition of helplessness, being unarmed, were well armed and made a most spirited stand against the troops. The stories of the depredations and horrible cruelties of the Kurds in the conflicts are pure fiction, as there were no Kurds engaged in any of the battles. In short, the correspondent says, the whole affair has been most grossly exaggerated, the absolutely baseless stories of horrible butcheries being invented by Armenian lying, and inspired by political motives.

MR. GLADSTONE

Confesses That the Liquor Question, as a Whole, Baffles Him.

LONDON, Oct. 5.—Mr. Gladstone has written a letter to the temperance congress, in which he says:

"While profoundly sensible of the immense importance of the liquor question, I can not pretend that I have mastered its difficulties. I see it clearly in certain of its aspects, but as a whole it baffles me. I have no doubt that the local option principle is sound, but they must be of very sanguine temperament who believe it is sufficient to dispose of the entire question. The method of the sale of liquor for public account which exists in parts of Scandinavia, presents great advantages, and if adopted here ought to be adopted in its best forms. The plan of free trade with strict police supervisions and adequate taxation was, unfortunately, refused a fair trial in Great Britain."

GREAT BRITIAN'S ATTITUDE

With Regard to the Island of Trinidad—She Starts On a New Tack.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—The relations between Great Britian and Brazil in regard to the island of Trinidad are still far from an amicable settlement.

Great Britain has withdrawn entirely her claim to the island as previously set up, regarding the proof of prior discovery as complete and unimpeachable in favor of the Portuguese, but now raises the contention that the republic of Brazil, as the successor of the Portuguese discoverers, has forfeited its claim to the island by reason of neglect and abandonment, and that, proceeding on this basis, now proposes to revitalize the Harden-Hickey claim and to acquire the island by purchase.

TWO LIVES LOST

And Nine Valuable Horses Cremated by an Incendiary Fire.

KENDALLVILLE, Ind., Oct. 5.—At the second day's meeting of the Noble County Fair association in this city Thursday a disastrous and fatal incendiary fire occurred. While the crowd of 12,000 people were watching the race, five fires were started in the piles of straw in the paddock stalls. The row of buildings flashed up like tinder, and before an alarm could be given a regular conflagration was in progress. Late at night it was found that two lives were lost as a result of the fire. A horseman named Jackson was burned to death and an unidentified woman died from burns received.

Nine valuable draft horses, entered for prizes, were roasted alive.

They've Both Been There Before.

COLUMBUS, Ind., Oct. 4.—Christopher Roberts, aged 81 years, and Mrs. Eliza Jane Williams, aged 50 years, were married by a justice of the peace, being the third matrimonial venture for the bride and the second for the groom.

Fatalities at Pittsburgh.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 5.—Mrs. Peter Conyekow was run down by a Pittsburgh, McKeesport & Youghiogheny train at a street crossing.

David Stocker, aged 40, a glass blower at McKee's factory, was killed by falling into a swing hole.

MONEY FOR MISSIONS.

The All-Absorbing Theme at the Episcopal Convention—A General Demand for More Means—The Church in America Charged with Neglect of Its Foreign Missionaries—Sympathy for Armenians—A Good Word for Texas.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Oct. 5.—"Money for Missions" was the all-day theme of the two houses of the Episcopal convention, and which, in accordance with the constitution, sat together as the general board of missions yesterday. The fathers of the church told of the work that had been done, of the difficulties surrounding it, and of the need of finances without stint, and ministerial recruits without number, to the end that the church, both abroad and at home might be pushed forward in the name of the Master. The majority of the narrations bristled with criticisms of the failure of the American church to adequately hold up the hands of its representatives in other lands.

After the adoption of a resolution commendatory of Gov. Culburson and the Texas legislature, voluminous printed reports on foreign and domestic missions were presented in behalf of the board for managers. It showed that the gross receipts of the board for the year were, including the balance of last year and a personal loan of $65,000 from Mr. George Bliss, $784,829, and the disbursements $716,278, leaving a balance of $68,551 in hand on September 1. The loan from Mr. Bliss had been returned. The report of the Women's auxiliary showed that it had collected $167,643 for the fiscal year, of which $99,833 had been disbursed without coming into the central treasury.

The report was referred to committees, and then the missionary bishops were presented in regular order. Bishop Ferguson, of Africa, a colored man, protested that the church had not done its duty in regard to foreign missions.

Bishop Graves, of China, was next presented, and made an appeal for money.

Bishop McKim, of Japan, said that the war had taught the Japanese a lesson, for there were hundreds of Christians in the front of battle, and the way they fought was known all over. It was now recognized that a man was no less a Japanese because he had become a Christian.

The work of the colored commissioner was represented by Bishop Nelson, of Georgia. He said that his diocese was 90 per cent. missionary, and yet the total moneys received last year for the building up of this jurisdiction only averaged seven and a half cents a head of the people reached. The Episcopal church was the only one making any advance in the moral condition of the people of the south.

Reports on the mission fields of Mexico and Brazil were made by Bishop McLaren, Dr. Forrester, of Mexico city, and others.

THE STEAMER ST. PAUL.

A Creditable Performance on Her First Trial Trip—Can Carry the Mails.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Oct. 5.—In her official trial run yesterday between Cap Ann, Mass., and Cape Porpoise, a distance 44.96 knots, the International Navigation Co.'s new steamer St. Paul averaged 20.50 knots an hour for four consecutive hours, and established the right of being numbered among the auxiliary cruisers of the United States and carrying the United States mail.

Throughout the run the engines worked smoothly and easily, and no accident or hitch of any kind occurred.

The St. Paul's time did not equal that of her sister ship, the St. Louis, by 1.72 knots for the official time, but the couditions under which the run of the latter ship was made was much more favorable, and the performance yesterday of the St. Paul bears favorable comparison with that of the St. Louis.

PUBLIC HEALTH ASSOCIATION

Officers Elected at Denver—To Meet in Buffalo Next Year.

DENVER, Col., Oct. 5.—The American Public Health association concluded its labors and elected the following officers for the year: President, Dr. Eduardo Liceago, City of Mexico; vice-presidents, Surgeons A. A. Woodhall and Henry Savill, United States army, Denver; secretary, Dr. Irving A. Watson, Concord, N. H.; treasurer, Dr. Henry D. Holton, Brattleboro, Vt. Executive committee—Dr. J. C. Schrader, Iowa City; Dr. R. C. Goodwin, Thomaston, Conn., and Dr. L. McShane, Baltimore. Buffalo was selected as the next meeting place.

REV. HINSHAW'S CASE

May be Taken to the Supreme Court If a New Trial is Not Granted.

DANVILLE, Ind., Oct. 5.—The attorneys for Rev. Hinshaw, the convicted wife murderer, have decided to carry the case to the supreme court if they do not get a new trial here. Detectives who are working on the case are said to have struck a trail at Sheridan, Ind., where they have two men under suspicion as being the burglars who killed Mrs. Hinshaw. The request of the attorneys for the defense for another week in which to file a motion for a new trial has been granted.

PECULIAR ACCIDENT.

A Young Stranger Seriously Injured Near Jefferson City.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Oct. 5.—A well-dressed young stranger, supposed to be Wm. Ortman, of Columbus, O., was standing on the steps of a passenger coach when a cow raised up from a ditch on the side of the track, and the force of the collision tore the steps from the coach.

Mr. Ortman's leg was broken by the fall, and he received injuries about the head that have rendered him semi-conscious ever since.

DUN'S COMMERCIAL REVIEW

Covering Transactions for the Third Quarter of 1895, and Comparisons with Other Years—Astonishing Improvement in Some Branches, Though with a Falling Off in Others Which Certain Branches of Industry Begin to Feel.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—R. G. Dun & Co. in their weekly review of trade issued to-day say:

Commercial failures in the third quarter of 1895 were 2,792, with liabilities of $32,167,179, averaging $11,521 per firm, against $10,028 last year, about 15 per cent. more.

Highly important comparisons of prices this week show about October 3 the lowest range ever known for wholesale prices of all commodities.

Under the appropriate headings are given details of the different products with their cause, the most important being the unprecedented crop of corn and oats, a larger crop of wheat than false representations led the world to expect, an enormous demand for manufactured goods to replenish depleted stocks when prices began to raise, and a decrease in yield of cotton.

The cotton market has mounted above 9 cents and holds, in spite of realizing, but as the crop is late and quite largely held back, does not yet feel the influence of the receipts natural at this date.

Wheat is a shade weaker, while western receipts have been 6,550,494 bushels, against 4,487,104 last year, while Atlantic exports have been only 1,038,179 bushels, against 2,791,489 last year.

Reports from other cities at the end of the quarter are highly cheering in facts recorded, and reflects a hopeful spirit. Beyond question the quarter has shown astonishing improvement in some branches, and retail distribution has generally been good, though not commensurate with speculative wholesale purchases, as prices were rising. Hence there is a marked decrease in buying, which some branches of industry begin to feel.

Railroad earnings for nine months are analyzed on another page, showing by classes of roads the gain or loss each month compared with 1894 and 1892, every month showing some aggregate gain this year over 1894, though not in all classes. Compared with 1892, all classes fall beyond each month. September shows a gain of 3.5 per cent. over last year, but a loss of 12.2 per cent. compared with 1892.

The Pennsylvania has ordered 40,000 tons of steel rails, and other roads 85,000, but the steel makers having bought their pig, Bessemer is lower, and also gray forge, and the demand for finished product is decidedly smaller, so that the average of iron prices turns downward for the first time since February.

Coke workers gain 6 per cent. more wages, and coke is raised 18 to 33 per cent.

The market is stronger with heavy demands from the interior. All fears of gold exports have ceased.

LIVED BEYOND HIS MEANS

And Now Must Meet a Charge of Embezzlement.

CHICAGO, Oct. 5.—Harry J. L. Martin, railroad teller for the Commercial national bank of Chicago, was placed under arrest by United States Deputy Marshal Allan last night, on the charge of embezzlement. The young man, who was married only two years ago, has wealthy relatives in Douglas, Mich., who it is said, will help him out of his difficulty.

The first known of the shortage was when Bank Examiner McKean began counting funds for certain accounts which he had not examined for some time, and in which the embezzlement was found to have existed for a period of nearly four years. In three days it was learned the shortage amounted to $4,500 and was still growing. The American Surety Co. of New York is on Martin's bond for $5,000.

Martin is now in the custody of the deputy marshal, where he will remain until taken before United States Commissioner Foote to-day. Young Martin has a pleasant home on Jackson boulevard, where he has lived since he was married. It is said the young man lived beyond his means, as it is known his habits were of the best.

NOT A CANDIDATE

Ex-Secretary Whitney Says He is Not a Candidate for the Presidency

CHICAGO, Oct. 5.—A Washington special to an evening paper says:

Ex-Secretary Whitney, when his name was suggested for the presidency by a southern democratic senator one day this week, said:

"Your kind mention of my name in connection with the presidency is very gratifying, but I have no desire to be considered a candidate. In fact, I shall not become a candidate, and if I thought it should become necessary for me to make a public statement to that effect I would do so in the daily press. The democratic party does not lack for men of ability and statesmanship from whom to select a leader. Whenever the party gets together and its now somewhat discordant elements are unified on a general policy—then the right man will spring up to lead the way to victory."

The southerner came back from New York and repeated what Mr. Whitney said to him. It created some surprise and comment here, where Whitney has been put down as foremost in the list of active aspirants for the democratic nomination.

IN IMITATION OF CULBERSON

Gov. Brown of Kentucky Takes Measures to Stop a Prize Fight.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Oct. 5.—Gov. Brown has stopped the Murphy-Griffin fight. He arrived in Louisville yesterday morning and met Mayor Tyler by appointment. He explained the terms under which the men were to meet. The mayor then assured him that the fight will not be allowed to take place.

Bill Thompson, the manager of the affair, will test the right of the authorities to stop the "go," which he says, is not a prize-fight.

SOUTHERN GLEANINGS.

Disinherited His Daughter.

Judge M. B. Templeton has been retained in a suit at Waxahachie, Tex., that will interest many people in Texas and Georgia. Last May P. N. Gray, whom everyone in Waxahachie thought to be a bachelor, died and left an estate valued at $25,000. Gray left a will bequeating the entire estate to his five brothers and sisters, all of whom reside in southwest Georgia. The other day Judge Templeton received a communication from Attorneys Duncan & Dew, of Perry, Ga., retaining him to look after the interest of Miss Claudie Gray, of that place, who is said to be the 16-year-old daughter of the late P. N. Gray. The story goes that Mr. Gray married the mother of this young woman a couple of months prior to Miss Claudie's birth, but soon deserted mother and child and went to Texas, where he resided up to the time of his death last spring. Judge Templeton will file suit in the district court at Waxahachie, which convenes in December, for one-half interest in Mr. Gray's estate, on behalf of his alleged heir, whom none of Mr. Gray's intimate friends knew was in existence in all these years.

Rev. George W. Holland.

Rev. George W. Holland, D.D., Ph.D., died suddenly of heart disease at Columbia, S. C. Dr. Holland was born in Augusta county, Va., fifty-seven years ago. He graduated from Roanoke college in 1857, and studied theology in Union theological seminary, New York, and in Gettysburg (Pa.) seminary, graduating from the latter in 1860. He joined the confederate army in 1861, serving until 1863, when he lost an arm in the northern Virginia campaign. After serving three years as professor in Roanoke college and six years as pastor in Harrisburg, Va., he went to South Carolina in 1873, and became a professor in Greek in Newbury college. In 1878 he was elected president of that institution, which office he held at the time of his death.

Town Marshal Assassinated.

Marshal J. P. Lamb of Palatka, Fla., left town the other day to join a party of bear hunters about 10 miles distant. The hunters returned two days later, and when asked about the marshal said they had not seen him. Search was instituted, and the body of Lamb was found about 5 miles from town, concealed in undergrowth. The head had been shot off, and the body riddled. The trail over which the body was dragged to its place of concealment was plainly visible. The place where the assassins waited for their victim was also found. Marshal Lamb incurred the enmity of the gamblers by the vigorous way in which he enforced the city ordinances, and it is believed they procured his assassination. Feeling is very bitter.

The Chinese Colony at Atlanta.

A government immigration inspector has been sent to Atlanta to watch the colony of Chinese men, women and children brought to the Atlanta exposition. In a report the inspector states that there are 135 men in the Chinese village who are doing absolutely nothing, and who evidently bought their way into America for the purpose of remaining here. He states that the whole crowd intends to evade the officers and remain in this country. The women, he suggests, are to be sold. The whole scheme, he declares, was organized by wealthy Chinamen who do not live in America.

Swinging from the Rafters.

G. A. Northington, aged 67, proprietor of the Clifton house at Verbena, Ala., committed suicide by hanging in his barn. He climbed into a buggy, tied a plow line around his neck and to the rafters, and pushed the vehicle from under him. His son, Hendley Northington, was so much distressed at the circumstance that he attempted to end his own life by drowning in a well. Mr. Northington leaves a widow and five children.

Boiled His Victim in Cane Juice.

Near Edwardsville, Ala., while R. L. Humphreys and James Bryant, white farmers, were engaged in making cane sirup, a dispute arose and Humphreys struck Bryant on the head with a billet and then threw him into a cauldron of boiling cane. He then fished his victim out and attempted to throw his body in the furnace, but was prevented by bystanders. Humphreys secured a Winchester and escaped to the mountains.

The Age-Herald Changes Hands.

The Daily State, the free silver democratic morning paper of Birmingham, Ala., has bought out the Birmingham Age-Herald, sound money democratic paper, for $26,000. The State will be discontinued and the Age-Herald transferred into a free silver organ. Col. Joseph Hodgson will be editor-in-chief and H. M. Wilson managing editor. Col. Hodgson has been editor of the State.

A Little Previous.

Got No Satisfaction.

The customs collector at New Orleans called on Secretary Carlisle and made a plea for the sugar bounty amendments, but got no satisfaction.

THE * CHRONICLE.

C. C. DuBOSE, Editor and Proprietor.

COLUMBIANA, OCT. 10, 1895.

"ONE of the easiest ways to make people go abroad to trade is to neglect advertising at home," truthfully remarks the Decatur Herald.

THE Philadelphia Times wants to bet that no matter what comes, the head of the New Woman will be found resting on a man's shoulder.

THE six richest men in the world are Li Hung Chang, John D. Rockefeller, Colonel North, the Duke of Westminster, Cornelius Vanderbilt, and Woh Qua, the Chinese tea magnate, whose total fortunes aggregate $1,080,000,000.

ALONG with the news of a big corn crop and high prices for cotton comes the statement that the South's rice crop this year is enormous. Reliable estimates indicate that it will reach at least 175,000,000 pounds, which is over 40 per cent more than the crop of last year.

HERE'S the sort of advice that the Dalton (Ga.) Tribune ladles out to its readers: "Young men, don't swear. There is no occasion for it outside of a printing office, where it is useful when the paper is behind time. It also comes in handy in the proof reading, and is indispensable when the ink works bad and the press begins to buck. It has been known to entirely remove that tired feeling of an editor when he looks over the paper after it is printed. Outside of a printing office it is a foolish habit."

A KANSAS man with "a strong indorsement from two well-known citizens of Winfield," dropped into Topeka the other day with an entirely original remedy for silver and general currency troubles. His scheme calls upon the government to buy silver of the mine owners at a valuation of 16 to 1, and then issue it as coin at ratio of 1 to 1. This plan, the Kansas man believes will give the free coinage advocates all they desire, the parity of the metals remaining the same of course at his suggested ratio, and he ends with the statement that "he who makes $16 out of what was only $1 before should be hailed as the world's benefactor." Yet this man would be the first man to grow furious when the corn of the Kansas farmer fell from forty to twenty cents a bushel under the new adjustment of values. Sixteen dollars can be made out of one dollar, but it requires genius and safe investment to do it, and not a stamping machine.

THE Jacksonville Republican of the 5th in a long article on the probable candidates for congress from the fourth district next year, says:

We hear it whispered that Talladega will again present the name of Hon. Cecil Browne. When a candidate before he had a strong delegation from Talladega and Shelby. During the last two years Mr. Browne has made many warm friends in this district, while it is equally true that he has made some enemies in the lower portion of the district. All in all though we believe he would be a stronger man before the people of the district than he would have been two years ago. We know this to be true in Calhoun, for during the last two years he has made many friends in this county.

SOUTHERN PROSPERITY.

Commenting on the remarks of the New York Sun as to the prosperous condition of the South, as compared with other sections of the union, the Atlanta Journal observes:

"When the Sun says that the South is today 'the most prosperous part of the union, it does not use the words of idle compliment, but states what every well-informed person knows to be true. The condition of the whole country has improved immensely in the last twelve months, but as the South has suffered less than any other section from the panic, it was naturally the first to feel the effect of returning prosperity. It has recently attracted the attention of capital, enterprise and intelligent immigration in a larger degree than ever before and the fullest demonstration of its possibilities yet made is to be seen at our exposition. The Sun is right when it says 'the South is now only in the beginning of its progress,' and is not extravagant in its estimate of the probable progress of this section during the next twenty years."

It May Do as Much for You.

Mr. Fred Miller, of Irving, Ill., writes that he had a severe kidney trouble for many years, with severe pains in his back and also that his bladder was affected. He tried many so-called kidney cures but without any good result. About a year ago he began use of Electric Bitters and found relief at once. Electric Bitters is especially adapted to cure of all kidney and liver troubles and often gives almost instant relief. One trial will prove our statement. Price only 50c for large bottle. At Parker & Armstrong's drug store.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve.

The best salve in the world for cuts, bruises, sores, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns, and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by Parker & Armstrong.

There is no medicine so often needed in every home and so admirably adapted to the purposes for which it is intended, as Chamberlain's Pain Balm. Hardly a week passes but some member of the family has need of it. A toothache or headache may be cured by it. A touch of rheumatism or neuralgia quieted. The severe pain of a burn or scald promptly relieved and the sore healed in much less time than when medicine has to be sent for. A sprain may be promptly treated before inflammation sets in, which insures a cure in about one-third of the time otherwise required. Cuts and bruises should receive immediate treatment before the parts become swollen, which can only be done when Pain Balm is kept at hand. A sore throat may be cured before it becomes serious. A troublesome corn may be removed by applying it twice a day for a week or two. A lame back may be cured and several days of valuable time saved or a pain in the side or chest relieved without paying a doctor bill. Procure a 50 cent bottle at once and you will never regret it. For sale by Parker & Armstrong.

Knights of the Maccabees.

The State Commander writes us from Lincoln, Neb., as follows: "After trying other medicines for what seemed to be a very obstinate cough in our two children we tried Dr. King's New Discovery and at the end of two days the cough entirely left them. We will not be without it hereafter, as our experience proves that it cures where all other remedies fail."—Signed F. W. Stevens, State Com. Why not give this great medicine a trial, as it is guaranteed and trial bottles are free at Parker & Armstrong's drug store. Regular size 50c and $1.00.

Making That Constitution.

From the Mobile Register.

What we need in Alabama is not a commissioner of agriculture to prophesy what amount of cotton is in the growing crop, but a commissioner of roads, who will see that the planters can get the crop conveyed cheaply and promptly to the railroad station or the river landing. Give us this with a new constitution.

"Many of the citizens of Rainsville, Indiana, are never without a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house," says Jacob Brown, the leading merchant of the place. This Remedy has proven of so much value for colds and croup in children that few mothers who know its worth are willing to be without it. For sale by Parker & Armstrong.

So Far, So Good.

From the Union Springs Herald.

Sound money is the only policy under which a government can prosper. No land under the sun can afford to make a value for a thing and keep that value up by paying the difference—thus being the proprietor of a losing business. That is what the country was doing a few years, and she found that the thing had to be stopped. That is what the silverites desire to have reinstated. The majority of the people disagree with them, and at the proper time will so make it known.

The states that have already expressed themselves stand as follows: For sound money, New York, Kentucky, Ohio, Iowa, Maryland and Pennsylvania; for free silver, Mississippi. In Nebraska there is a split and two conventions were held, one declaring for sound money, and the other for free silver.

And The Silverites?

From the Wheeling Register.

With the country floating high on the tide of prosperity what on earth will our republican friends find to talk about in 1696?

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

Health Restored

ALL RUN DOWN

No Strength nor Energy

Miserable IN THE EXTREME. Hands COVERED —with— SORES.

CURED BY USING

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

"Several years ago, my blood was in bad condition, my system all run down, and my general health very much impaired. My hands were covered with large sores, discharging all the time. I had no strength nor energy and my feelings were miserable in the extreme. At last, I commenced taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla and soon noticed a change for the better. My appetite returned and with it, renewed strength. Encouraged by these results, I kept on taking the Sarsaparilla, till I had used six bottles, and my health was restored."—A. A. Towns, prop. TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS.

Dr. J. J. DuBose, of Decatur, Ga., is home on a visit.

E. W. Bell, of Blocton, spent Sunday and Monday in town.

J. T. Leeper has been absent several days in Birmingham.

E. S. Lyman, of Montevallo, was a visitor in our city Tuesday.

W. C. Cannon, of Sylacauga, was in town Tuesday and Wednesday.

James Seale, of Childersburg, spent Sunday with his father's family.

The Commissioners court has been in session four days of this week.

Miss Lucy Backus, of Birmingham, was here last week taking orders for millinery.

Mrs. J. S. Leeper left Monday for Bessemer with John Jr., who enters school there.

Misses Annie McMillan and Myrtle Swain left Friday for Livingston to enter college.

E. W. Bell & Co., have moved their stock of goods from the brick into the Elliott old store.

Misses Lucy Smith and Edna Nelson were absent in Birmingham last week returning home Friday.

W. L. Davis was again the successful competitor for the position of keeper of the poor house for another year.

Mrs. Eliza Jackson, for many years a resident of this place, but now of Anniston, is on a visit here to relatives.

As will be seen by reference to announcement elsewhere in this issue, there will be a special term of two weeks of the circuit court, beginning December 9th, for the trial of civil cases only.

Commissioner Walker says that he knows how to count thirty, but was not present when the juries for the recent circuit court were drawn, being sick at home. This explanation, we presume, will be entirely satisfactory, but he must get thirty jurors next term.

Bremond Bristow, of Calera, and Miss Lizzie Riddick, of Shelby, were married Tuesday morning at Shelby. They came here immediately after the ceremony and took the north-bound Southern train for Atlanta, where they will spend several days at the Exposition. They have our best wishes.

J. A. Herzfeld & Co., live, wide-awake, progressive merchants of Sylacauga, have an advertisement in this issue that should be carefully read. Prices are given on a number of articles of common use, and they are low down. They are reaching out for trade and they are on the right road to secure it. First sell goods cheap, then advertise the fact so people can find it out.

Just as we go to press we have received the sad news that Hon. John S. Leeper, judge of probate of this county died suddenly of apoplexy last night at his home in this town. His death was a great shock to his friends and the entire community. He retired last night in his usual health and was discovered in bed this morning cold in death, having passed away peacefully during the night. A more extended notice will appear next week. Funeral services will be held over the remains tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock at the Presbyterian church.

To Trustees of Schools.

"I can now safely say that the divided sheet will not reach the county superintendents before the 20th of October, and perhaps not before November 1st."

The above is an extract from a letter of State Superintendent of education dated Sept. 17th. I think it will be of no avail that trustees hold their school meeting until they know the amount of funds for their townships. The same law which says they shall meet and locate the schools, also says they shall at the same time apportion the money to these schools as located. I would suggest that trustees call their school meetings Oct. 28th, giving due notice (10 days previous) in three public places in your township. Be very explicit and clear in locating your schools, dividing the funds with these schools, arranging for transfers. Keep a full copy of minutes of your meeting and furnish me a copy of same. Very Respectfully,

T. A. Huston.

Sudden Death of Miss Burdie Teague.

Our community was greatly shocked on Thursday morning when it was announced that Miss Burdie Teague, daughter of Rev. Dr. E. B. Teague, pastor of the Baptist church at this place had died suddenly during the night from hemorrhage of the lungs. Though Miss Teague had been in feeble health for some time, her friends were unprepared for the sad announcement of her sudden death.

Miss Burdie was greatly beloved by all who knew her. Endowed by nature with a fine mind, which had been thoroughly cultivated; a bright, cheerful disposition; a sensitive, tender, affectionate heart, ever alive to the troubles of others, rendered her a companionable, devoted friend, whose presence left comfort and sunshine wherever she went. Though a child of affliction from her cradle, she bore her sufferings with fortitude and uncomplaining resignation. Energy, that greatest of all the attributes of human character, attained in her its full development. Wet or dry, hot or cold, sick or well, she was ever ready to respond to the call of duty. Duty was her watchword, unselfish devotion to the interest of others, putting her whole soul into every duty of life; actuated by a high and noble purpose to be useful to others, was one of the characteristics of this whole souled, noble young lady. She will be sadly missed by those intimate friends who knew and appreciated the nobility and purity of her exalted character. They will cherish her memory, embalmed as it is in a halo of glorious reminiscences of good deeds performed in obedience to the commands of Him who came to earth "to seek and to save," "going about doing good." On Him she trusted. Through Him she has attained that reward which awaiteth the pure in heart, "Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God."

Wilsonville Waifs.

J. F. Pope made a business trip to Oxford Monday.

Messrs. J. L. Ray, J. R. Robertson and Prof. Kilpatrick went to Columbiana Saturday.

Mrs. J. F. Pope and children have returned from Talladega Springs.

R. L. Jackson has returned from a visit to the Atlanta exposition.

Dr. Lightcap, of Talladega, was in town last week.

The farmers are disposing of their cotton very fast in this vicinity.

Dr. Berkstresser, of Sylacauga, was in town last week.

Mr. Galliher has at last succeeded in moving Mr. Pope's store. We understand that they will begin work on the new one this week.

Jim Ray has learned the painters trade.

Our barber has failed to show himself in two weeks. Get after him, Mr. Weldon, we need our wool gathered; or do you intend for us to wait until the weather gets cold, so we can pour water on it, let it freeze and break it off?

A piano tuner, from Birmingham, was in town Saturday and Monday.

P. B. Lilly, watchman at the Coosa river bridge, was thrown out of employment a few days ago by the Southern railway dismissing all their bridge watchmen. We are glad to report, however, that he has secured a position near Birmingham.

Buck Daniels missed his breakfast Sunday morning by sleeping too late.

C. Butler has moved his family here and has put his children in our excellent school.

Rev. W. A. Montgomery preached a very interesting sermon at the Methodist church Sunday morning, followed by a still more interesting one at night.

The timber inspector for the Southern Railway Co. was here last week and received six car loads of lumber, which was shipped by Mr. C. Butler to Round Mountain, Ala.

Messrs. Will Tinney and Chas. Arnold engaged a hack Sunday afternoon, filled it with girls, seated themselves upon the dash-board, and enjoyed a long drive.

J. L. Ray's coalchute and a loaded car were burned last Friday night. The fire originated from a hot load of coal that was put on the yard late Thursday evening.

Some mischievous boys tied the Methodist church bell rope up Thursday night, making it nearly impossible for the bell to be rung; they also tied a car pin to the whistle at the gin, making it nearly impossible for it to stop blowing.

Our school is increasing in numbers every day and the teachers are calling for more room. It is not right to have the pupils crowded up as they now are. The people should investigate this, and if more room is needed give it to them.

Butch, Jr.

THE FAMOUS GRACIE THOMAS.

One of the distinguishing features with the grandest and best shows, which will be seen in all their unapproachable completeness at Columbiana Oct., 24th is the notable equestrian act performed by the world's most famous Miss Gracie Thomas, a petite and handsome young horsewoman, whose surprising accomplishments have made her the idol of every European city. No other lady rider has ever achieved that high grade of excellence accomplished by this gifted young artist. Even her professional rivals accord her the palm of superiority and point with pride to her as their leader. No prettier picture can be conceived than this young girl, endowed by nature with rare beauty of form and face, dancing and pirouetting upon the back of a swiftly running horse with the same ease, grace and abandon as a premier behind the footlights of the mimic stage. Miss Thomas is, however, only one of the scores of exclusive features which are daily presented by this colossal tented exposition, which, as a whole, far surpasses any amusement enterprise the world has ever known.

Wilsonville Warblings.

Oh! did you see the bride and groom Monday?

Cotton is rushed rapidly into market.

The dust! Oh! the dust!

Mr. Pope's store is moved at last. Wilsonville will be a city yet.

Misses Meta Bolin and Juddie Kilpatrick, of our town, spent a few days with Major Wallace's family, and of course had a splendid time.

Well, boys, I am afraid you missed the W. S. S., as a number told me it was the Wilsonville Simpleton Society.

Mrs. J. F. Pope returned Saturday from Talladega Springs, where she has been spending several days.

Prof. J. H. Hammond spent two days in Birmingham last week.

The Epworth League met last Sunday evening. An interesting talk was delivered by Rev. J. A. Montgomery.

Mrs. Johnston, of Columbiana, is spending a few days with Mrs. Ray.

Polly Ann.

Items from Sterrett.

There is some sickness in our community but none of a serious nature.

Miss Mattie McGinnis returned Sunday evening from a lengthy visit to friends and relatives at Blocton.

On the fifth Sunday ultimo, Rev. J. D. Martin, of Pelham, preached the funeral sermon of Mrs. Millie Kincaid, who died last May. Rev. Martin had a large crowd to greet him.

Sim and Miss Leona Lawley, of Woodlawn, came over Thursday to attend the exhibition and returned Saturday evening.

H. A. White left Sunday evening for Bessemer to secure a job. Arthur attended school this summer and added much to the success of the exhibition. We wish him unbounded success in life.

R. M. Hobbs and Miss Ellie Falkner have been on the sick list, but are now convalescent; also Bob Black, who has been sick for a number of weeks, is still slowly improving.

C. Butler has removed his family to Wilsonville. We regretted to give them up but our loss is Wilsonville's gain, and we can cheerfully recommend them to that people.

Jack Johnson, a few days ago, while repairing Allen & Co's. "dinkey," fell and dislocated his elbow, and it has given him great pain. We hope he may soon recover.

Miss Bessie Harris and brother, of Vincent, attended the exhibition last Thursday night, and, in fact, people came from every direction, even Mr. W. C. Evans, of Yellow Leaf, put in his smiling appearance.

Prof. J. P. Kinnett's second school will open on Monday, Nov. 4. So let everybody be ready, and we might say that board can be had very cheap.

The Sunday school at this place is making some efforts to be represented in the convention to be held at Shelby soon.

Jeff Salter and family have removed to Birmingham.

The happiest event that has been the pleasure of our people to enjoy in many moons took place Thursday night, when one of, if not the most, successful schools ever taught here, closed with a grand exhibition. Prof. Kinnett, for some time had been making preparations with the assistance of some of his largest pupils, and had a nice program arranged which was rendered nicely with good music between the pieces to help entertain the large audience of at least 400 people; the people seemed in high spirits and went home praising the pupils and teacher. All of the pupils deserve praise, while some might be specially mentioned but think it improper. The exhibition opened at 6:30 p. m., and closed near 12 o'clock. Some of the crowd, owing to the cool night, left before it was over, but those who remained did not regret it. Good order prevailed, and the children were applauded all the way through. Its equal has never been at Sterrett. The music was simply "out of sight;" the players, two ladies and two gentlemen, well knew their business and deserve much praise.

Prof. Kinnett has added many laurels to his good name since moving into our community, and the people are so well pleased that they have employed him for another year. The school that has just closed was the largest ever taught here, there being 103 pupils enrolled during the session. Long may the Prof. live to teach the young ideas "how to shoot."

Bonami.

A "Tremendius Big Streak of Bad Luck." Tears and Groans and Prayers All for "a Scandlous Little Nothin"—Andy Lucas and Old "Blue Eyes." Aunt Nancy Newton Dead and Gone.

(Copyright, 1895.)

Hit raley seems to me like most everybody in this pleasant strip of country must of saw the new moon through the brush and tree tops this month, or started somewheres and then turned back without makin the necessary cross mark and spittin in it—or moved some house cats—or toted a hoe through the big house—or maybe found some pins with the pints a pintin the other way. At any rates, somethin come to pass to bring a tremendius big streak of bad luck in the settlement. And blamed if it don't look to me like everybody and everything would turn loose and fall into a well, and in some cases kick the bucket.

"A Scandlous Little Nothin."

In the first outstart I met Jule Nabors at the big ford down on Turkey Creek. I was headed for the hill country on a visit, you understand, whilst Jule he was comin in home from huntin. I could see at onest that Jule was foamin mad about somethin or other, so I pulled up in the shade and ask him what terrible thing had come to pass. I soon found out that he didn't want to give out the facts in the case, but I popped the questions to him so fast and furious till finally at last he had to unbutton his lips and open up and come forth with the truth.

"It was the dadblamdest and most gonebyest fool scrape that a white man ever backed himself into, Rufe," says Jule, "and to be plum honest with you, I do hate like all fury to tell it and let it leak out on me. And I would ruther tell it to any livin man than to you, cause I know I mought as well to tell the women folks or go put it in the papers at onest and let it spread to the four corners of the earth. But John Andrew Milligan come along about the time I was pullin myself out of the confusionment, and whilst he give me his word he wouldn't tell it on me, I reckon it is most too good for him to keep. John Andrew is a reglar goldbug Democrat, you understand, and I am for free silver or bust, and you know he is monstrous handy with his mouth. So I reckon I mought as well to cut the strings right here and let it go.

"Well—I do mortally hate to tell it, Rufe—but I was over there in the old fields turkey huntin this mornin, and I found the bulliest sort of a muscadine vine growin down low on some plum bushes. Whilst wadin around eatin a big bait by hokeys I fell feet-foremost into an old well, which I hadn't saw and didn't know it was there. I had my gun in one hand, but as I went down I grabbed the vines and briers as best I could, and right there I hung up and helt on like a seed tick to a nigger shin for three long and terrible hours it seems to me. I had a monstrous short holt on the vines and grass and briers, and only one hand to hold with. I helt my gun in the other hand and was skeered to let it drop for fear when it hit the bottom it mought go off and shoot me from the rear flanks, you understand. So there I was, hopin and hollerin and sweatin and prayin at the top of my voice. I couldn't look and see back down below, and consequentially I didn't know for certain how deep the old well was. I raley don't reckon I knowed anything for certain about that time, Rufe. But I had took up a notion that the old thing was about a hundred feet deep, with frogs and snakes and the like of that piled up three feet thick at the bottom.

"Now you know me, Rufe, and you know I don't put in no big claims to religion, but if a poor devil ever prayed in this world—prayed loud and long and dead in earnest—it was me right then and there. Little by little my holt was slippin and I thought every minnit would be the last with me. I thought of all the past meanness and devilment that I had ever done in the flesh, and prayed to git forgiveness before it was everlastinly too late. I helt on as o-n-g as I could, and when I saw the time had come for the terrible drap I ask the good Lord to have mercy on my lost and ruint soul, and turned loose and down I went. But the blamed old well want but seven feet deep, Rufe, and I had jest exactly three inches to drap. If I had but only stretched out a little, you understand, instead of drawin up there and hollerin and prayin like a dadburn fool I could of touched the bottom with my feet. Them are the general facts in the case, Rufe, and that's what makes me mad—to think of the terrible fears and torments and tears, and moans and groans and prayers I went through with, and all for nothin—a measly, scandlous little nothin."

It Had to Be "Did."

On the second day followin after I met Jule Nabors and got the news concernin the terrible tryin times he had in the old well and all on account of a "scandlous little nothin," Andy Lucas he rid by our house on his way to town. He was ridin of a big fine lookin bay horse, with dark blue eyes, which he was mighty bad scarred and skint up about the back and hind legs.

"By gatlins, I am ridin swappin stock today, Rufe," says Andy as he throwed one long leg sideways over the horn of his saddle. "You have took notice that I have been tryin my level durndest here lately to fill out and round up this old plug with plenty of green stuff. Well, night before last I turned him out to graze, and sometime indurin of the night he backed his fool self into that old well down there in the paster. The onlyest thing that saved him from breakin his neck was owin to the fact that he went in tail foremost.

"So naturally of course I had to go into the minin business, as it were, and dig a slopin tunnel into the well in ordermout to git him out. It wouldn't of been so infernal bad on me, Rufe, only from the fact that the well was so clost to the big road. I know as well as anybody—and a whole lot better than some people I could name—that the horse can't see any to speak of under his feet, but I had been blowin calomel and spittin tobacco juice into his eyes in ordorment to clear 'em up a little in the maintime. And by gatlins, Rufe, blamed if it didn't look to me like everybody in all these regions—particlar them that has swappin stock—would pass along the big road yesterday mornin and see me minin for my horse and diggin him outen the well. Finally at last I got some of the neighbors to come over and help me, and when we did git him out he was all scarred and skint up like you see him now.

"The news has been a spreadin like a prairie fire with a high wind, you understand, and if somethin don't come to pass now presently I will have to feed old Blue Eyes hensoforwards forever, or turn him out for crow bait. So when I come home tonight I will leave the horse behind me if I have to tote my saddle. Naturally of course somebody is more than probable to suffer in the trade, but I can't help that. The deed jest simply must be did, Rufe."

Late along in the shank of the evenin Andy rid by on his return back home from town mounted on a right good plug of a mule.

"I feel like I mought be clost kin to a man that had stole a mule, you understand, Rufe," says Andy in talkin over the trade, "but it was like I told you this mornin. Old Blue Eyes hat et up his welcome at my house, and the deed had to be did."

Well, Well, Well!

The very next day after Andy Lucas returned back from town, leavin old "Blue Eyes" behind him, Blev Scroggins come in from down in the Flat Woods and brought some terrible startlin news concernin old Parson Ransom. The parson he had an old blind mule named Mandy, which he said she was mighty kind and gentle—they most in generally always are kind and gentle, you understand, when they get old and go blind—and bless gracious old Mandy she went out foragin and perusin around one night last week and stumbled heels over appetite into a well. Then the next mornin, when the parson found out what had come to pass in regards to his kind and gentle mule—he went out fumblin and foolin around the old well, and presently he took and fell in right slap kerdab astraddle of old Mandy.

"I couldn't tell for certain as to whether Mandy was dead or only crippled," says the old parson to the neighbors when they come over to hear the news, "and in foolin around tryin to find out I lost my balance and went in with her."

And from the way Blev gives the news, I reckon it turned out that old Mandy was only crippled. She put in to kickin the parson, and before the neighbors could pull him out she had skint and bruised him up considerable. But old Mandy also kicked the bucket before human help could save her, and so they had to fill up one old well and turn it into a graveyard.

Aunt Nancy Dead and Gone.

But to me the most saddest news that has took place this year comes from down in the old Panther Creek Settlement. My Aunt Nancy Newton—God bless her dear, delightful old soul—is dead and gone.

Now, whilst I have said in plain black and white that aunt Nancy Newton was dead and gone, I wouldn't take no Bible oath to that extent, and I don't know for certain that I could prove it. But the last time she was up to our house, when she started off on her return back home she borrowed a plug of fine store-bought tobacco from me, and went on to say, says she:

"I willl return it back to you, Rufus, by the middle of September, if I live."

And from that good day to this blessed hour I never have heard tell of Aunt Nancy or that plug of store-bought tobacco. Whereas, I reckon she must be dead. It is perfectly all right with me, you understand, in regards to the tobacco. And as far as me and Aun Nancy are concerned, if anybody has told a little white one I hope and trust it was me. Expert Thieves.

"When I was in India," said the man who had traveled, "the native thieves stole the sheets from under me while I slept and I never knew it."

"Yes, and when I was in the northwest during the boom," said the man who will never admit that America can be outdone, "I had to sleep in a room where there were four real estate agents, and one of them stole a porous plaster from my back without awakening me."—Indianapolis Journal.

His Reason.

She was rather proud of her ears and she blushed with pleasure when he blurted out:

"I'm mighty glad you never had your ears pierced."

"Why?" she asked, in expectation of a compliment.

"Why, hang it all, it costs money to buy earrings," he returned.

That's why she considers him a "mean thing."—Chicago Evening Post.

SOLDIERS.

IT is proposed in England to build warships in docks instead of on slips, and thereby reduce the expense and danger of launching.

AN Austrian mountain battery division recently managed to get two batteries, guns, horses and full equipment, from the Zillerthal in Tyrol to the top of the Pfister Joch, which is seven thousand three hundred feet high.

EVERY soldier knows that a horse will not step on a man intentionally. It is a standing order in the British cavalry if a trooper becomes dismounted he must lie still. If he does this the whole squadron will pass over him without doing him injury.

DESERTIONS from the French foreign legion have, it is said, been numerous of late, owing to the rigid discipline of the corps. A list of absentees has been published in some of the newspapers, and it includes the name of one British subject, an Irishman, among the others, which are principally those of German or Swiss.

SARAH BERNHARDT is to act the part of Empress Josephine in a play written for her by Emile Bergerat and called "Le Divorce Imperial."

CAUSED BY VACCINATION.

From the Journal, Detroit, Mich.

Every one in the vicinity of Meldrum avenue and Champlain street, Detroit, knows Mrs. McDonald, and many a neighbor has reason to feel grateful to her for the kind and friendly interest she has manifested in cases of illness.

She is a kind-hearted friend, a natural nurse, and an intelligent and refined lady.

To a reporter she recently talked at some length about Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, giving some very interesting instances in her own immediate knowledge of marvelous cures, and the universal beneficence of the remedy to those who had used it.

"I have reason to know," said Mrs. McDonald, "something of the worth of this medicine, for it has been demonstrated in my own immediate family. My daughter Kittie is attending high school, and has never been very strong since she began. I suppose she studied hard, and she has quite a distance to go every day. When the smallpox broke out all of the school children had to be vaccinated. I took her over to Dr. Jameson and he vaccinated her. I never saw such an arm in my life and the doctor said he never did. She was broken out on her shoulders and back and was just as sick as she could be. To add to it all neuralgia set in, and the poor child was in misery. She is naturally of a nervous temperament and she suffered most awfully. Even after she recovered the neuralgia did not leave her. Stormy days or days that were damp or preceded a storm, she could not go out at all. She was pale and thin, and had no appetite.

"I have forgotten just who told me about the Pink Pills, but I got some for her and they cured her right up. She has a nice color in her face, eats and sleeps well, goes to school every day, and is well and strong in every particular. I have never heard of anything to build up the blood to compare with Pink Pills. I shall always keep them in the house and recommend them to my neighbors."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are considered an unfailing specific in such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effects of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions, that tired feeling resulting from nervous prostration; all diseases resulting from vitiated humors in the blood, such as scrofula, chronic erysipelas, etc. They are also a specific for troubles peculiar to females, such as suppressions, irregularities, and all forms of weakness. In men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork, or excesses of whatever nature. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent post paid on receipt of price (50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50—they are never sold in bulk or by 100) by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

PERSONAL AND LITERARY.

—Joseph II., the son of the famous Maria Theresa, was known among his subjects as the "Hatted King." He never consented to the formal ceremony of coronation.

—By the will of the late Joseph T. Perkins, of Brooklyn, the following bequests for charitable purposes are made: Twenty-five thousand dollars to the Church Charity foundation, of Long Island; $25,000 to the Brooklyn home for aged men; $20,000 to the Brooklyn Industrial School association and home for destitute children. He also gives $10,000 to the Brooklyn institute of arts and sciences.

—The will of the late Mrs. Hope Potter Walker, of Boston, gives the greater part of her estate, which amounts to about $30,000 to the Bristol Old Ladies' Home, Bristol, R. I., under the conditions that the managers of the home build or buy a suitable building for the use of the inmates instead of the one now in use. It is the only bequest of any great consequence that the institution has received heretofore.

—French royalists are thinking of throwing the Duc d'Orleans, on account of his behavior at the wedding of his sister; he was exclusive, dining in one room with a few friends, while most of his adherents had to sit at a second table in another room. Nineteen courses were served at his dinner and only fifteen at theirs, but the hardest thing to bear seems to be that rose sherbet was provided for him and not for his followers.

—Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria has announced that on the occasion of the fiftieth anniversary of his accession to the throne in 1898 he will present to the city of Vienna the Prater, the famous park of Vienna, and the Augarten, a royal park in a densely-populated part of the city, to which the public was first admitted by the Emperor Joseph II. Both Prater and Augarten are to be preserved forever as public recreation grounds for the people of Vienna.

—Upset prices for the Comte de Paris' landed property have been fixed by the Seine civil court in order to settle up his estate. The chateau d' Eu is to be sold for $1,000,000, the chateau d' Amboise for $12,000, the estate at Bories for $80,000, that at Cannes for $30,000, and the other lands in France for $46,000. The Spanish palace at Villa Manrique is assessed at $80,000. All will be bought in by the family, as the prices do not represent the value of the property, and the sale is only a formality required by the French probate laws.

—Nelson's and Hood's names are both humiliated by Viscount Bridport, the grandnephew of the two great admirals and the bearer of Nelson's Sicilian title of duke of Bronte, offering for sale at public auction the medals and other relics of England's naval hero. They include the ten medals and orders he wore when shot down on the deck of the Victory, the gold sword hilt presented to him by his captains after the battle of the Nile, the diamond aigrette given to him by the sultan, the jewels from the sword of honor given by the king of Naples, his inkstand, and the gold casket presented with the freedom of the city of London.

HUMOROUS.

—"Emma, I just saw the lieutenant kissing you. Don't let me see that again." "Certainly, mamma. We shall be more cautious hereafter."—Lustige Blatter.

—"I wish I had a place in your heart," said the summer young man. "Yes?" said the summer girl. "Yes, indeed. It is so delightfully cold."—Indianapolis Journal.

—Small Margery had just been stung by a wasp. "I wouldn't a-minded its walking all over my hand," she said, between her sobs, "if—if it hadn't sat down so hard."—N. Y. Sun.

—"Yes," said Mrs. Hunnimune, "I learned to cook without a difficulty at all. There was only one trouble about it." "What was that?" "Educating my husband's appetite."—Washington Star.

DRESS JUGGLERY.

A Clever Woman Who Contrives Several Costumes Out of One.

The economics of the toilet is a complex question that every woman answers more or less satisfactorily, according to her lights and purse, through all the variations of dress, from a calico gown and checked sunbonnet to a temperate selection among the dainties displayed in the shops this month of foreign importations. But for the woman who has a little money to buy, a little time to scheme and a vast desire to make always a sweet, smart and suitable appearance, what shall she do?

Let her draw first an inspiration and lay a lasting cornerstone on which to erect dainty, effective little varieties of toilet by buying a good black silk.

To begin with, the silk gown needs to be made of good armure or peau de soie weave, also, says the feminine authority, who has tried and proved this plan, it requires linings at seventy cents a yard. The skirt ought to be made four and three-quarters yards wide at the bottom and fit the hips snugly, the waist cut absolutely plain, with sleeves of generous but not extravagant volume, the neck completed with a high, stiff collar band and the skirt so finished as to fit up smoothly over the basque's bottom.

With the six yards of lining needed and twelve yards and three-quarters of silk such a pattern calls for, the cost of the materials can be easily calculated, adding an item of three dollars and fifty cents for the well-chosen findings. The expense of dressmaking ought to be reckoned by the personal skill of the purchaser, plus the aid of a seamstress in the house for two or three days.

Here, then, is the gown for the stateliest entertainments of the winter, to be worn with a stock and girdle of clear peachskin velvet and a bag front, made of plaited black chiffon, spangled over with fine green iridescent beads, sewed on by the wearer's nimble fingers. Just in a morning and out of pretty bits saved from old gowns and bonnets can be put together enough girdles, stocks, fronts, lappets and collars to give the plain body all the needed decoration for general use, while the skirt calls for no ornamentation. However, here are planned three full metamorphoses of toilet, with the black silk as a foundation that will exalt its somber simplicity into a variety of elegance, fitting a theater party, grand reception, tea or wedding breakfast.

For the afternoon tea change make a high full stock of white satin, then buy a piece of white, double width chiffon, one yard and an eighth long. Turn up a finger deep hem on the chiffon all about and herring bone it down firmly, with split white floss. Just above the herring boning frill full on a narow edging of cream valenciennes lace, cut exactly in the center of the square a hole large enough to slip the head through, and let the soft fabric fall in airy folds and points from neck to knees about and over the black silk under dress.

Now, for the theater party, the fichu is in order, and as the chiffon square called for one dollar and a half's worth of goods with ninety cent's worth of lace, the fichu, as shown in the cut, needs as much cream India muslin as one dollar and eighty cents will buy, with seven yards of lace edging and ten of inserting, costing, in prettily tinted imitation Brussels, four dollars and fifty cents. The white satin stock should show lace and muslin points under the chin and at the breast, the front laps of the fichu need to be caught up with a cluster of loose silk, variegated roses or poppies.

Silk tissue, in rainbow like tints of yellow, rose and green, comes double width at one dollar and a fraction a yard. In yellow or green over black, asking no other trimming than its own cloudy, shimmering folds, one thickness in skirt and loose waist over the black silk gown composes a costume worthy of all admiration. The lighter and more airy the fold, the more satisfying the result in beauty, for everywhere it flies out to show the clean lines of the black skirt and body beneath and lends a delicious youthful grace and slenderness to the wearer's figure.—Detroit Free Press.

PURIFIED HIS SPIRIT.

William's Widow Had His Mortal Remains Preserved for Future Reference.

"What's that copper can for? Colorin' pickles?" inquired Mrs. Jones of Widow Brown.

"No; them is all that's mortal of poor William," explained the widow, as she wiped away a tear.

"Goodness, me; you don't mean to say you've had him canned like corned beef," exclaimed Mrs. Jones.

"My, no; I sent his body to the creamery and had him insinuated and them is his mortal remains—just a handful of dust, Mrs. Jones," and the poor widow sighed and wiped away two tears.

"I don't believe in that. I think it's downright weeked," declared Mrs. Jones, with a show of asperity calculated to induce an explanation.

"It does kind o' seem so, don't it, Mrs. Jones," moaned Widow Brown, tearfully, "but it was mortifyin' the flesh to purify the speret. William wasn't a downright weeked man, though his sinfulness would crop out once in awhile, more especially when I tried to convert him. He'd allus laugh right in my face an' say: 'Mary Jane, you can't make me believe that fire an' brimstone business hereafter. I bet a gettin' my share of it right along.'"

Mrs. Jones rolled her eyes toward the ceiling in horror and the widow moaned.

"Then when I got roused up an' more eloquenter, he'd say: 'Mary Jane, you can't never convince me that there's a hotter place than right here.'"

Mrs. Jones groaned.

"But I allus declared I'd convince him, if it was my last act, an' if his speret is in them ashes I'd just like to ask him if it was hot enough for him."—San Francisco Post.

Crepons Still Popular.

Crepons will not lose favor yet. On the contrary, they are likely to be in high vogue for the seasons to come—gauffre, creped and relief effects with high raised designs will be among the novel autumn patterns that will take the lead, not, however, to the forsaking of the plainer crepons which very many women prefer. The handsome crepons are high priced, and the inferior grades soon show wear, the cheap-priced varieties being a most undesirable and unsatisfactory purchase.—St. Louis Republic.

WHETHER or not sin dates from the first apple-eating, it is pretty generally conceded that new habits were acquired by our first parents very soon after their indulgence in the fruit of the apple tree.—Boston Transcript.

Mrs. Collins' Story.

I am thirty-three years old, have been married seventeen years, and have four living children. My health has not been good since my first child was born. Twelve months ago I was confined, but my baby only lived a few days. Soon after that I was attacked with irritation of the bladder, choking spells, heart palpitation, fainting spells and great nervousness. In this terrible condition I was confined to my bed eight months. I thought I was dying many times. My dear little helpless children, in kissing me at night, often said: "Please don't die, mamma;" or "Papa, don't let mamma die to-night." My little boy brought me a Ladies' Birthday Almanac one day, and after reading it I decided to try the Wine of Cardui Treatment. I have taken two bottles of McElree's Wine of Cardui and three small packages of Thedford's Black-Draught, and am better than I have been for ten years. I am visiting my neighbors on foot, doing my work with ease, and eat better than I have for years. God only knows how grateful I am for this wonderful medicine that has worked this great transformation.

When your kidneys and bladder are inactive they are making a silent appeal for help. Don't disregard it, but with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters safely impel them to activity. DENVER, Sept. 10.—My journey from Chicago was over the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad, one of the best managed systems in the country. I should says judging by the civility of the employes, the comfort I experienced, the excellence of it, roadbed, and the punctuality of arrival. I actually reached Denver ahead of time. The Burlington Route is also the best to St. Paul, Minneapolis, Omaha and Kansas City.

THE United States spent $96,000,000 for coffee during the past fiscal year.

AGRICULTURAL department experts have been investigating the cotton boll weevil, but they cannot find a way to stop its spread.

THE three principal street railway systems of Philadelphia have been consolidated under one company, making 425 miles of road, operated with a capital of more than $108,600,000.

A REPORT just issued by the geological survey shows that the quarry value of the stone produced in 1894 was $37,377,816, of which $33,000,000 was used for the construction of buildings.

THE recent report of the state mine inspector of Pennsylvania showed that the Hungarian and Polish element had complete possession of the anthracite mining region and that fully five-sixths of them were unnaturalized.

A STEAMER of 20,000 tons capacity has just been ordered by one of the large transatlantic companies. The new vessel is to be built for freight, but there will be accommodations for 200 cabin and 1,500 steerage passengers.

AS a result of experiments by the German war office it has been determined that sixty pounds is the maximum weight which an average man can carry 25 miles a day for several consecutive days without injury to himself.

ACCORDING to statistics compiled by the Railroad Gazette there were 132 railroad accidents in August, of which fifty-three were collisions, seventy-one were derailments and eight due to other causes. Forty-nine people were killed and 140 injured.

THE speculative gold mining fever raging in London and Paris leads an Australian correspondent to predict that the result will be such a vast production of gold that the metal will depreciate in value until "gold bugs will clutch at the 16 to 1 offer of the silverites."

THE Philadelphia Press, commenting on the downward prices of books, said: Before long the great mass of English literature will be accessible in fair type, on poor paper, but still legible, for 5 cents a volume. Books will be bought and thrown away as are newspapers.

THE German leathermakers have been obliged to turn to America to learn the latest developments in their trade in order to keep pace in the competition for business, and they are making strenuous efforts to discover the process of manufacture in this country.

DR. J. W. WAS, of West Pullman, Ill., is said to have discovered a cure for diphtheria which far exceeds anti-toxine in efficacy. Dr. Was' remedy is electricity, which is applied directly to the throat. It is claimed to have been successful in a large number of recent virulent cases.

THE Chicago Times-Herald says that the country will firmly sustain President Cleveland and Secretary Olney in every rational application of the Monroe doctrine upon the American continent, but there was no reason for assuming that any such emergency had arrived in the contention between Great Britain and Venezuela.

THE French embassy at Washington has received from the international wine exhibition at Bordeaux, France, a bulletin on the wine production of the world. It makes the statement that the United States is fifteenth in importance in the wine-producing countries, being preceded by Chili, Roumania, Servia, Greece, Argentine Republic, Switzerland and other small countries.

HEALTH departments generally are giving increased attention to the subject of contagion in schools. The New York authorities have ordered the exclusion of slates and sponges, and forbidden the transfer of pens and pencils from one pupil to another. Books carried home must be freshly covered with manilla paper each month, and each pupil is to have an individual drinking cup.

THE Chicago Times-Herald says: Of the forty-four state governors in the American union, thirty-nine are avowed believers in religion, twenty-nine being professed Christians. Among them there are ten Presbyterians, five Congregationalists, five Episcopalians, four Methodists, three Unitarians, one Baptist, one Christian and sixteen unconnected with church organizations.

THE sale of a big block of Anaconda stock in England is being projected. The Montana mine is rich in silver as well as copper. It is the greatest producer in this country of both copper and silver, its output averaging about 10,000,000 pounds of copper, 500,000 ounces of silver and 2,000 ounces of gold per month. It has turned out more of the white metal in the last four or five years than any other mine in the world except one in Australia. In the production of copper it has no equal. The company was recently reorganized with a capitalization of $30,000,000.

ENGLAND AND CHINA.

An Urgent Cabinet Council Called at London.

BODES NO GOOD FOR THE CELESTIALS.

Probably Only a Movement Precedent to Drastic Measures for Bringing the Chinese to Properly Respect Other Powers.

[Special Cable Letter.]

LONDON, Oct. 12.—Rt. Hon. George J. Goschen, first lord of the admiralty; the duke of Devonshire, president of the council, and Rt. Hon. Arthur J. Balfour, first lord of the treasury, have been summoned by Prime Minister Salisbury for a conference in London. The officials named, with Rt. Hon. Joseph Chamberlain, secretary of state for the colonies, form a council in the cabinet. They are preparing decisions upon which the plenary council's opinion will be taken. Mr. Goschen's hurried arrival from Switzerland Friday, and his long subsequent stay at the admiralty created the impression that dangerous developments are impending, involving action on the present British Mediterranean squadron. Reliable foreign office opinion is, however, that it is not the Turkish government, but that of China which is urgently engaging the attention of the ministers.

Viceroy Chang Chi Tung, undaunted by the demonstration made lately by the British fleet on the Min river and the Yang-Tse-Kiang, has curtly refused to be used as a medium to convey to Pekin the British demands for a fuller inquiry into the Ku-Cheng massacre and reparation therefor. It is not believed that Great Britain will remain content with the action she has already taken. It is generally expected that another ultimatum will be sent simultaneously to Chang Chi Tung and the government at Pekin within the next few days. Probably Lord Salisbury will consult with the full cabinet before the ultimatum is sent, as the official expectation is that the issue of this ultimatum will be the action on the part of the British squadron in Chinese waters.

The position recalls a speech that was made by Lord Salisbury as far back as 1871 during a debate in the house of lords on the massacre of missionaries in Tien-Tsin. He then said that the government of China did not have the power, even if it had the will, to prevent the native feeling against foreigners culminating in outrages. The only way to deter the Chinese from committing such outrages was to inspire fear in the places where they occurred. It is the conviction in official circles that Lord Salisbury is inspired by the same opinion now, and that he means to take decisive action. It is believed that the ultimatum will demand the summary degradation of Chang Chi Tung. If the Pekin government hesitates in conceding the British demands, startling reprisals will be made within the region accessible to the squadron on the expiration of the period fixed by the ultimatum. As Chang Chi Tung is, next to Li Hung Chang, the most potent man in China, it is feared that the tsung li yamen will try to evade the demands.

BRADSTREET'S REVIEW.

The Demand for Staples Stimulated by Cooler Weather.

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—Bradstreet's weekly review says:

Cooler weather has stimulated a seasonable demand for staple dry goods, millinery and clothing, and jobbers in these lines in all parts of the country feel the improvement. Relatively the most gain has been made at the south, where an improvement is reported in almost all lines. Interior merchants are placing more liberal orders than several years ago and large distributing centers report sales of goods to the cotton belt and collections therefrom exceptionally free.

The more unfavorable features are found in disappointment at the moderation with which wheat is exported from week to week, the reported weakness in pig iron and steel billets and in the competition suffered by domestic woolen manufacturers from abroad. But an examination of the conditions indicates that if reports of the size of the wheat crop and of wheat stocks carried out be accepted, average weekly exports from this country, if kept up to the end the crop year, will exhaust the amount of wheat available for shipment abroad.

Exports of wheat, flour included as wheat, from both coasts of the United States this week amount to 2,241,000 bushels, compared with 2,613,000 bushels last week, 3,317,000 bushels in the week a year ago, 2,862,000 two years ago and with 3,625,000 three years ago.

DOWN THE WILD MISSOURI.

The Long Voyage of a Fur-Laden Steamer Bound For New Orleans.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Oct. 12.—The steamboat Diamond William, from Fort Benton, Mont., with a cargo of furs, deer antlers, buffalo horns and a variety of curiosities, is moored at the foot of Francis street, having arrived in this port after a voyage of 6,000 miles. The destination of the boat is New Orleans. This is the first boat from such a distant point that has arrived here in many years, the Missouir river having been considered too shallow and the sandbars too frequent for navigation.

WILLIAM EDWARDS' HEIRS.

Inquiries for Some of Them Who Settled in Illinois in 1835.

JOLIET, Ill., Oct. 12.—Inquiries have been received from Owensboro, Ky., inquiring the whereabouts of the heirs of William Edwards, who is supposed to have settled somewhere in Illinois in 1835. Recent developments in a long-contested case, involving a large sum of money in New York city, have made it very important to locate the living heirs at once.

Guilty, With the Death Penalty.

FREEPORT, Ill., Oct. 12.—The jury in the case of Frank Harris, professional ball player, tried for the murder of Charles Bengle, whom he shot last May, returned a verdict of guilty and fixed the death penalty. The defense was emotional insanity.

A FORTY-NINER.

Death of Col. Hampton L. Denman at Washington.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12.—Col. Hampton L. Denman died at his residence in this city Friday evening. He was born in Ohio in 1830, going to California in 1849. He was prominent in affairs during that period. After returning from California Col. Denman settled in the city of Leavenworth, Kas., occupying positions of honor and prominence, serving three terms as mayor of that city, being afterward elected to the Kansas legislature. He has lived in this city for many years.

A VALUABLE CARGO

Brought to San Francisco by the Russian Steamer Kotik.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 12.—The Russian steamer Kotik arrived from Petropaulovski Friday after a fair run of thirty-three days. She bore one of the most valuable cargoes that has come to San Francisco this year. It consisted of 17,920 seal skins, 13 land otter skins, 16 sable and 17 fox skins. Altogether the consignment is worth in the neighborhood of half a million dollars.

LOUIS STERN.

Will Forfeit His Bail Rather Than Return to Bavaria and a Prison.

MUNICH, Oct. 12.—The Nachrichten asserts that Louis Stern, of New York, whose sentence of fine and imprisonment for insulting the deputy commissioner of the Spa at Kissingen, has been confirmed by the refusal of an application for pardon, will not return to Bavaria to serve his fourteen days' imprisonment, preferring to forfeit his bail. Since his release on bail Stern has been sojourning in Paris.

THE INDIANA

Gone Out for Her Trial Trip Off the Capes of Delaware.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 12.—The battleship Indiana left Cramps' shipyard shortly after 7 a. m. for her trial trip off the New England coast. The vessel moved down the river as far as Chester, where she anchored to await high tide, about 6 p. m. She then proceeded down the river and bay to the capes.

Murderous Assaul.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 12.—Jacob Weissmann, aged 85, was murderously assaulted in a pew of a Jewish synagogue with a pair of brass knuckles on the hand of Fey Hartmann, in the presence of the entire congregation, and so badly injured that Hartmann may have to answer for murder.

ALABAMA'S BUILDING

Formally Opened at the Cotton States Exposition.

DIRECTORS ARRANGING FOR CUBA DAY.

The Iowa Press Association Present Two Hundred Strong—Ohioans of Georgia Preparing to Receive Friends December 5 and 6.

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 12.—The Alabamians formally opened their state building at the exposition Friday. Addresses were made by Gov. Oates of Alabama and President Collier of the exposition. The state was well represented in attendance, and when the hour came for serving lunch, the state building was thronged.

The directors of the exposition are arranging for a Cuban day. Invitations are being sent to some of the most distinguished orators and public men of this country to attend and deliver addresses. As yet the plans are vague, but they will be rapidly shaped up and the day will certainly be before congress meets.

The Iowa Press association came in Friday 200 strong.

The Ohioans of Georgia are preparing to receive their friends on Ohio and Cincinnati days, which will be December 5 and 6 respectively. Cincinnati desires a day for herself, and the directors have fixed it for December 6. Cincinnati has more exhibits at the fair than any other city outside of Georgia.

NATIONAL COUNCIL OF WOMEN.

Miss Sadie America, of Chicago, read the opening paper at Friday's session of the National Council of Women, entitled "National Council of Jewish Women."

Mrs. Elizabeth Grannis followed with a paper on the "National League for the Promotion of Social Purity."

Dr. Abbey Cox Rooney, of Illinois, spoke on local councils; Helen Campbell delivered a paper on "Household Economies as University Movement," and Miss Helen A. F. Goesman read a paper on "Woman's Position in the Industrial World."

WAY OF THE TRANSGRESSOR.

JOLIET, Ill., Oct. 12.—Henry Failing, alias L. H. Hill, completed a one-year sentence at the penitentiary Friday, and as he left the big building he was arrested by Sheriff McCormick of Lee county, Ia., and was taken back to that county. Under the name of Henry Failing he was sent from Rockford for forgery. Two years ago he was confined in the Lee county jail to await trial for forgery, but escaped by knocking the jailer down, gagging and tying him so that he could make no resistance or outcry. From Lee county he went to Rockford, where he was captured and sent to Joliet.

HERR LIEBKNECHT

Likely to Find Trouble for Letting His Tongue Wag Too Freely.

BRESLAU, Oct. 12.—It is reported that Herr Liebknecht, president of the socialist congress, will be charged with lese majeste on account of remarks contained in his inaugural address to the congress, delivered last Monday. Herr Liebknecht remarked on that occasion that no matter how many bayonets were at the disposal of those who wished a trial of strength with the socialist, if the people wanted a fight, the social democrats were with them. He went on then with a direct defiance to the emperor, referring to the latter's anti-socialist speech in better language.

AN ITALIAN VICTORY

Over the Abyssinians at Debraailat—The Enemy Routed.

ROME, Oct. 12.—Advices received from Massowah state that, on October 9, Gen. Baratieri, commanding the Italian forces in Abyssinia, made an advance and carried the strong native position at Debraailat, held by 1,300 Abyssinians, commanded by Ras Malgascia. The enemy was unable to withstand the force of the attack, and after a brief but sharp fight, fled to the southward, pursued by the Italians, who captured many prisoners.

IMPRISONMENT FOR LIFE.

The Fate of George Coward, Who Killed Ed Prewitt.

QUINCY, Ill., Oct. 12.—In the criminal court here George Coward was found guilty of the murder of Edward Prewitt and sentenced to the Chester penitentiary for life. Seven of the jury favored hanging on the first ballot. Coward killed Ed Prewitt on account of his relations with his (Coward's) step-daughter, relations which Coward himself was enjoying.

SWEPT BY FIRE.

The Business Portion of Campbell, N. Y. Laid in Ashes.

BATH, N. Y., Oct. 12.—The village of Campbell, a town between this village and Corning, on the Erie railroad, suffered the worst fire in its history, by which the entire business portion was reduced to ashes. Five families were rendered homeless. The loss will be between $35,000 and $50,000, on which there was about $25,000 insurance.

May Resume Business.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12.—The First national bank of Franklin, O., which suspended payment August 23, 1893, having complied with all of the conditions imposed by the comptroller of the currency, precedent to its resumption, and its capital stock being now unimpaired, has been permitted to reopen its doors for business.

Fire at Knoxville, Tenn.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Oct. 12.—Fire in the wholesale grocery house of Hazen & Lotspeich, Friday, caused a loss of $70,000, which is covered by insurance.

WARRING STUDENTS.

Butler University at Indianapolis the Scene of Lively Times.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Oct. 12.—Butler university is in a state of miniature war. On Thursday night the seniors held a meeting at the residence of President Butler, whose son is a senior, and members of the under classes attempted to break it up. Arthur Carpenter, a senior, was caught on the lawn and bound with the president's clothes line, and was being dragged away when his chums heard his cries and ran to his rescue.

A pitched battle followed, in which students were knocked down, but the seniors finally succeeded in dragging Carpenter into the house, where the doors were barred and the attacking party kept out.

Friday morning the seniors appeared in class with pieces of rope tied in the button holes of their coats as trophies of their victory, and an attempt was made by members of the under classes to divest them of the offensive badges. A scuffle followed during the first hour, but the men were finally separated. As the seniors came down stairs at 10 o'clock they were met by a determined force and the fight was renewed in an effort on one side to get the pieces of rope, and to retain them on the other.

The members of the faculty rushed to the scene to separate the combatants, but it was a half hour before order was restored. Several students on both sides were badly bruised in the row. Another encounter is expected, as the seniors express a determination to wear the pieces of rope as badges, and the underclass men declare that they will not permit it.

ATTACKED BY A LIONESS.

Narrow Escape of Matt Johnson, an Animal Trainer at St. Louis.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 12.—As Matt Johnson, one of the trainers in an animal show at the fair grounds, started to begin the performance with the lioness, Sultana II., Friday night, the animal proved sulky and refused to obey. Johnson finally struck her, whereupon she sprang upon him, throwing him to the floor, seizing Johnson's arm, tearing it to the bone.

The sight of the blood served further to enrage Saltana and for a time it seemed as though no human power could save the trainer's life. Manager Bostock, however, jumped into the cage and beat the lioness off. Taking advantage of her momentary subjection, he managed to drag Johnson out of the cage.

Dr. Hall, veterinary surgeon at the fair grounds, was hastily summoned. He sewed seven stitches in Johnson's arm, which was found to be severely lacerated. But the wound is not necessarily fatal. A lion or tiger bite often results in blood poisoning, however, and that fact is worrying Johnson.

FROM PILLAR TO POST.

The Lot of the Champion Pugilist is Not a Happy One.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Oct. 12.—Jim Corbett received a telegram from Gov. Clarke of Arkansas Friday night informing him that the fight would not be permitted to take place in Arkansas, and advising him to keep out of the state. This telegram has convinced Corbett that it will be impossible for the fight to be pulled off at Hot Springs, and he stated to the United Press correspondent that the only chance now remaining for him to meet Fitzsimmons in the ring was for them to go to some quiet spot and have it out.

Corbett will not go to Hot Springs to train unless he receives a telegram ordering him to do so from Manager Brady, who is now on his way to that place.

Advices have been received here from Austin stating that it is likely that Corbett will be arrested on indictment of the Travis county grand jury.

THE DEATH KNELL

To the Miners' "Pluck Me" Store System in Pennsylvania.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 12.—The joint convention of operators and miners concluded its work by adopting the report of the committee on dead work. This report demanded the wage scale of 1892 whereby the pay is increased and decreased in proportion to the price paid to the miners. The resolution fixing the differential rate on and after January 1, presented Friday evening, and which was withdrawn, was again offered, and after considerable discussion was adopted. It provides that on and after January 1, 1896, the proper differential payment between cash and store orders for mining coal shall be twenty cents per ton. This is believed by all concerned to be the death knell to the company store system.

MRS. CAROLINE A. GRAFFON,

Charged with Murdering Her Husband, Discharged for Lack of Evidence.

BUTLER, Pa., Oct. 12.—Mrs. Carolina A. Graffon, recently arrested on the charge of murdering her husband in Colorado six months ago, has been set at liberty by Judge Greer. The sheriff had wired for information, and as at the time set for the hearing no evidence was received from the Denver officials, Judge Greer ordered her discharged.

Love Laughs at Age.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, Ind., Oct. 12.—Samuel Richards, aged 84, was married Friday to Mrs. Martha Heath, aged 77, of Lebanon. Last Sunday Richards drove to Lebanon with his son-in-law and met Mrs. Heath for the first time. They were together only half an hour and in that time fell in love and became engaged. Both are wealthy.

Little Hope for Mrs. Clara Doty Bates.

CHICAGO, Oct. 12.—There was no improvement this morning in the condition of Mrs. Clara Doty Bates, the well-known writer of children's stories, who is seriously ill in this city. Her physicians have little or no hope of her recovery.

FEAR SPANISH GUNS.

The Authorities of the Central and Southern American Republics

FULLY IN SYMPATHY WITH THE CUBANS,

But Dare Not Take the Initiative in According Them Belligerent Rights For Fear of What Spain Might Do to Them.

Afraid of Spanish Guns.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12.—It is learned from an authoritative source that none of the central or South American governments will take the initiative in recognizing the belligerency of the revolutionists in Cuba. The press of those countries, so far as it can be judged from this point, is unanimous in its sympathy with the Cubans. The fear is expressed, however, that the recognition of the revolutionists by Venezuela, Nicaragua, Brazil, Guatemala, or even Mexico, would be followed by the dispatch of several Spanish men-of-war to their principal ports, demanding both an explanation and satisfaction. As Spain has a navy about equal to that of the United States, she would have, under these circumstances, a sufficient number of vessels for this purpose at half a dozen points on the American continent. As none of the countries on the western hemisphere, excepting the United States and Chili, possess a navy worthy of the name, no recognition of Cuban rights will be made by them for fear of the consequences.

It is said that as soon as the United States or Great Britain, or some of the continental powers move in the matter, their action will be speedily followed by all the Spanish American republics on this continent.

RIOT IN SPAIN.

The Arrest of an Editor Leads to a Violent Popular Demonstration.

LONDON, Oct. 12.—At Ferrol, Spain, the son of the captain-general of the province (Coruna) assaulted the editor of a socialist newspaper and afterward arrested him. A mob of 400 workmen made a violent protest against the editor's arrest, and marched through the streets to the palace, several of the large windows of which they smashed with stones. The military finally dispersed the mob, whereupon the workmen in the dock yards declared that they would go on strike. Ferrol is one of the pricipal naval arsenals of Spain and a large number of men are employed there as dockmen and in other capacities.

HOFFMAN WILL FIGHT

Against Going to New York to Be Tried for Forgery.

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—Assistant District Attorney Battle says that Horace J. Hoffman, president of the Hoffman Office File Co., who was arrested in Chicago Friday for forgery in connection with securing a contract for supplies for the new criminal court building, would not consent to come to New York for trial, but proposes to make a stubborn fight in the Chicago courts against extradition. The contract price for the supplies furnished by the Hoffman company was $18,000. It is claimed that the market value of the supplies was only $32,000. It is possible that a representative of the district attorney will go to Chicago to press the complaint against Hoffman.

THE LONDON CHRONICLE

Reviews the Struggle Between the Republicans and Tammany.

LONDON, Oct. 12.—A radical review of the struggle between the republicans and Tammany hall in New York was given in the Chronicle's leader. The paper says that the final overthrow of Tammany hall will be an event of world-wide importance, and adds that it can not be doubted that the bad government of some of the American cities, especially New York, has been a setback to democracy the world over.

EXCITEMENT AT HOT SPRINGS

Over the Latest Phase of the Prize-Fight Controversy.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., Oct. 12.—The letters written by Gov. James P. Clarke of this state to Judge Duffie and the sheriff here, and to Dan Stuart and the principals in the approaching fistic event, Corbett and Fitzsimmons, and the governor's statement that he will do all in his power, supplemented by the state and county officers to suppress the contest, have created much excitement hereabouts.

BANK CLOSED.

The State Bank of Everest, Kas., Fails to Open Its Doors.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 12.—A special to the World from Topeka says: The state bank of Everest, Brown county, failed to open its doors for business. It has a capital of $12,000, with deposits and time certificates amounting to nearly $30,000. Gov. Morrill's bank at Hiawatha was its correspondent, and the stockholders are wealthy men.

Weekly Bank Statement.

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—The weekly statement of the associated banks shows the following changes:

Reserve, decrease	$ 2,291,625
Loans, decrease	3,596,200
Specie, decrease	76,000
Legal tenders, decrease	3,370,700
Deposits, decrease	6,608,300
Circulation, increase	13,700

The banks now hold $14,176,900 in excess of the requirements of the 25-per-cent. rule.

Want Improved Mail Service.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12.—Hon. Don M. Dickinson and a party of citizens of Detroit had a conference with Postmaster-General Wilson and Second Assistant Postmaster-General Neilson in regard to an improved mail service between Detroit and eastern cities. The conference lasted several hours, but no decision in the matter has yet been reached.

Death of Gen. Wm. Jennings Landrum.

THE * CHRONICLE.

C. C. DuBOSE, Editor and Proprietor.

COLUMBIANA, OCT. 17, 1895.

THE VACANT JUDGESHIP.

Again there is a vacancy in the office of probate judge of this county, caused by the death of Hon. J. S. Leeper, and again the governor will be called upon to appoint a capable man to fill this important position.

Up to this writing there are four applicants, Hon. D. R. McMillan, of this place; Hon. E. S. Lyman, of Montevallo; Col. W. T. Smith, of Wilsonville; and Editor N. A. Graham, of Calera, all of them true democrats, honorable, upright gentlemen and competent to discharge the duties of the office to which they aspire.

To decide between these worthy gentlemen as to whom was best qualified is no easy task, and we have given the matter serious consideration, and after mature reflection we have espoused the candidacy of Hon. D. R. McMillan, but in doing so we shall not have a word to say against either of his competitors. We hold them all in high esteem, and shall endeavor to accord them every possible courtesy and consideration. We wish there was an office for all of them, but as there is not we shall claim our privilege to take our choice, but if peradventure Mr. McMillan should not get the appointment we hope the other three will.

It is true Mr. McMillan is one of our fellow-townsmen, and all things being equal it would be both natural and just that we should support him, but there are other and weightier reasons that influenced us in our selection, a few of which we shall mention.

First, he is thoroughly qualified in every sense of the term for this now very important office. He has been engaged actively here for the past twelve years in the practice of law, and stands in the forefront of his profession at this bar. The day has been when legal attainments were not absolutely necessary for the incumbent of this office to possess, but under the special act governing our county courts, the probate judge should be a well posted lawyer, else a deal of trouble and confusion will follow. We have seen the folly of this course, and should avoid this error in future.

Mr. McMillan is in the prime of life, having yet scarcely reached the meridian, is active, zealous, painstaking and vigorous, but withal is careful, prudent and conscientious in the discharge of every duty. His record here where he has lived many years, and where he is intimately known is spotless and above reproach.

The Chronicle is a strong believer in the doctrine that efficient service to the party should be rewarded, and without in the least disparaging the claims of the other applicants, we beg to submit a brief review of his political history in this county.

In the notable struggle of 1890, Mr. McMillan made a state reputation by his bold and courageous stand against Kolbism. It will be remembered he was placed at the head of one faction of the party in this county which was composed of true democrats, and John W. Pitts was chairman of the other faction who claimed to be democrats. Delegations from both factions were sent to the state convention. A bitter struggle followed, but it was finally made clear who represented the real democracy of Shelby county, and Mr. McMillan and his entire delegation were seated. This practically sealed the fate of Kolb, for Jones was nominated and afterwards elected. Mr. McMillan displayed such a high degree of ability and courage in this memorable struggle that he was placed at once upon the state democratic executive committee, where he rendered active and efficient service until 1894, when he was removed on account of his valliant fight for Oates in this county. The Johnson men were in the majority in this district, and they placed Sidney J. Bowie, of Talladega, in his stead on the committee. While a member of this committee he made a gallant fight against the proposition to let down the bars and allow Kolb and his followers to vote in the democratic primaries. Although the proposition developed considerable strength, Mr. McMillan won and thus preserved the purity of the party.

Mr. McMillan has always been an active and faithful democrat, and has in every campaign since he lived in this county taken the stump and waged a vigorous warfare against the enemies of his party. He made the race for the probate judgeship in 1892, and had a strong and devoted following. He was defeated for the nomination by Hon. J. S. Leeper, recently deceased, in the convention by a bare scratch, but he accepted his defeat gracefully and took the stump as vigorously for his opponent as he could have done for himself.

Should Governor Oates see proper to appoint Mr. McMillan now to this position, it will be a grateful recognition of his worth, and will give intense satisfaction to the democracy of Shelby county.

The circulation per capita on October 1st was $22.57, based on an estimated population of 70,253,000.

President Smith, of the Atlanta & West Point and the Western of Alabama railroads, has been encouraging the cultivation of tobacco, fruit raising and other enterprises along the line of his roads with good results. The last issue of the Southern Tobacco Journal contained an article showing what has already been done in the tobacco line. The Montgomery Advertiser, commenting on it, says: "Tobacco will grow on those lands, and can be made a source of great profit. It is the solution of the problem and will fill up the waste places that have hitherto stood idle."

Now let Corbett and Fitzsimmons go into a big empty barn some morning about daylight and fight it out. Nobody will stop them. If we had a proper kind of a barn, we would lend it to them with pleasure. But, no! It is not the fighting they are after at all. It is the gambling and gate money.

So far as our observation goes, says a well-posted business man, the prospects for a good trade this season are encouraging, and advertisers putting out their money judiciously will receive more than average returns.

The Selma Journal contains announcements for seven candidates for sheriff, four for tax collector and four for assessor, and the season has hardly begun.

The sale of farms in North Mississippi to northern farmers continues at a very lively rate.

One Editor is Ready.

From the Fort Payne Journal.

The latest scare is that Spain is to demand $500,000,000 damages of the United States for violating the neutrality laws by permitting Cuban sympathizers to arm and organize in the United States for fighting the Spaniards in Cuba, and that she is to be backed in this demand by Mexico, Italy and England. All right. The United States can lick the whole capoodle. Then we will capture and annex Cuba, Mexico and Canada. We've been itching for an excuse for some time. Trot out your greasers, hidalgos, dagoes and red coats.

Four Big Successes.

Having the needed merit to more than make good all the advertising claimed for them, the following four remedies have reached a phenomenal sale. Dr. King's New Discovery, for consumption, coughs and colds, each bottle guaranteed—Electric Bitters, the great remedy for Liver, Stomach and Kidneys. Bucklen's Arnica Salve, the best in the world, and Dr. King's New Life Pills, which are a perfect pill. All these remedies are guaranteed to do just what is claimed for them, and the dealer whose name is attached herewith will be glad to tell you more about them. Sold at Parker & Armstrong's drug store.

"I would rather trust that medicine than any doctor I know of," Says Mrs. Hattie Mason, of Chilton, Carter Co., Mo., in speaking of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. For sale by Parker & Armstrong.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve.

The best salve in the world for cuts, bruises, sores, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns, and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by Parker & Armstrong.

"Many of the citizens of Rainsville, Indiana, are never without a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house," says Jacob Brown, the leading merchant of the place. This Remedy has proven of so much value for colds and croup in children that few mothers who know its worth are willing to be without it. For sale by Parker & Armstrong.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Dimendale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitancy in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist church, at Rives' Junction, she was brought down with Pneumonia succeeding La Grippe. Terrible paroxisms of coughing would last hours with little interruption, and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results." Trial bottles free at Parker & Armstrong's drug store. Regular size 50c and $1.00.

LIFE SAVED BY

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL

"Seven years ago, my wife had a severe attack of lung trouble which the physicians pronounced consumption. The cough was extremely distressing, especially at night, and was frequently attended with the spitting of blood. The doctors being unable to help her, I induced her to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and was surprised at the great relief it gave. Before using one whole bottle, she was cured, so that now she is quite strong and healthy. That this medicine saved my wife's life, I have not the least doubt."—K. MORRIS, Memphis, Tenn.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS.

Dr. T. G. Nelson and wife, of Harpersville, are here on a visit.

Mrs. P. T. Wagner, of Birmingham, is on a visit to relatives here.

Evander Morrison made a business trip to Birmingham Tuesday.

N. A. Graham and family, of Calera, were visitors in town last week.

H. A. Jackson, of Wilsonville, paid us an appreciated call yesterday.

Mrs. Dr. T. N. Anglin, of Birmingham, is on a visit to relatives here.

H. E. Reynolds, of Blocton, spent Monday and Tuesday here with friends.

Mrs. Augusta Wilson left Tuesday for Montevallo, having spent a week with relatives here.

Mrs. Charlotte Roberts, of Birmingham, is spending a short time here with friends and relatives.

John Porter, of Blocton, inimitable John, came over Sunday and remained until yesterday with his family.

We regret to learn that E. B. Teague is quite ill with fever, but sincerely trust he may soon be restored to health.

Frank Nelson, Jr., and wife, of Anniston, came down Friday to attend the funeral of Judge J. S. Leeper returning home Sunday.

Rev. J. B. Kilpatrick, of Wilsonville, filled Dr. Teague's appointments at the Baptist church Sunday, and preached instructive sermons both morning and evening.

New pupils are constantly being added to our school, and its prospects were never more flattering than now. We expect great things of this school, and we feel surer than ever that we will not be disappointed.

A Card.

We shall never be able suitably to thank the people of Columbiana for the tender, delicate attention paid us during the illness and at the obsequies of our poor "Burdie." This is not the first time such offices have been rendered at their hands. Our beloved family physician, Dr. W. S. DuBose, attended our departed one with a devotion and affectionateness we have never known, though often waited on by the noblest of that noble profession. May Heaven reward you, dear friends!

E. B. TEAGUE.

There is no medicine so often needed in every home and so admirably adapted to the purposes for which it is intended, as Chamberlain's Pain Balm. Hardly a week passes but some member of the family has need of it. A toothache or headache may be cured by it. A touch of rheumatism or neuralgia quieted. The severe pain of a burn or scald promptly relieved and the sore healed in much less time than when medicine has to be sent for. A sprain may be promptly treated before inflammation sets in, which insures a cure in about one-third of the time otherwise required. Cuts and bruises should receive immediate treatment before the parts become swollen, which can only be done when Pain Balm is kept at hand. A sore throat may be cured before it becomes serious. A troublesome corn may be removed by applying it twice a day for a week or two. A lame back may be cured and several days of valuable time saved or a pain in the side or chest relieved without paying a doctor bill. Procure a 50 cent bottle at once and you will never regret it. For sale by Parker & Armstrong.

WALTER L. MAIN'S HOLIDAY.

Every one is on the "qui vive" over the fact that the great Walter L. Main shows are coming to Columbiana Thursday Oct. 24th. This biggest of all big shows has everywhere met with the most enthusiastic reception, and the press of other cities do not hesitate in proclaiming it the most wonderful exhibition ever seen under canvas. In point of novelty or in the number of features, no other amusement enterprise can even approach it. Its many exclusive features make it beyond question the representative big shows of the world. It requires four massive trains of especially constructed cars to transport it from town to town, four of the most thoroughly equipped and handsomely decorated advertising cars ever built are brought into service to herald its coming, and more than one thousand people employed, besides three hundred of the finest horses ever owned by any amusement institution. There are three rings, two elevated stages and a quarter-mile hippodrome track all going at one time during the performance. The zoological display contains more rare wild beasts than any other two shows, and the largest water proof tents ever constructed are required to properly give this massive entertainment and accommodate the vast audiences which daily throng to see the many wonders contained in these shows that can be seen nowhere else on earth.

The November Number of The Delineator.

Is called the Thanksgiving number, and illustrates a bewildering wealth of Autumn and Winter Fashions, the collection of Stylish and Becoming Garments being particularly complete. A novel departure in Millinery is noted, and the colors and combinations in the Season's Dress goods and the glint and glitter of their spangled and jewelled trimmings are attractively described. Mrs. Roger A. Pryor furnishes a gossipy and circumstantial account of dinner-giving in society, and Juliet Corson writes interestingly on domestic service as an employment. The best kind of a Thanksgiving dinner is described, with recipes for all its dishes; and a timely article on carving tells just how to gracefully dismember the noble bird that occupies the place of honor in the menu given. Helen Marshall North details varied industrial instruction to be had at Pratt Institute, Brooklyn. Both children and adults will be delighted to learn just how the crepe-paper brownies are made, and with the pictures of these amusing little figures. Harriet Keith Fobes shows how burnt work decorations may be applied to friezes, portieres and furniture, and Sarah Miller Kirby describes and defends Froebel's Own Manual of Kindergarten Work. J. Bell Landfear gives illustrated instructions for a beautiful Greek pantomime drill. There is the usual entertaining tea-table chat, as well as papers on oriental rugs, some artistic screens, floral work for the month, a novel entertainment and the latest ideas in knitting, tatting, lace-making, etc.

Resolutions of Respect.

Our Y. P. C. E. society has been called for the sad duty of doing honor to one of our honorary members, Judge John S. Leeper. And it is particularly meet that we should do so in this instance, and that each and every one of us should bear witness to his worth and to our esteem for him. When the spirit leaves its earthly habitation of the tangible man and soars to unknown worlds, good deeds receive their just recognition and have that curtain whose woof and warp is charity and forgiveness, drawn before them. Such is the habit of us here, but so exceptional was the character of our friend and brother that the thinnest veil would hide his greatest fault, and no encomiums are rich enough in lustre and brightness to paint his virtue with. His life has been a tower of light from foundation to capstan. Inate were his virtues that pointed to the skies, and when we look at his life our eyes are turned upwards to exalted heights, which few have attained in our knowledge of men. We know no words by which to describe him, but sweet memory will enshrine him with us all. Therefore, be it RESOLVED First, That we sincerely mourn the sudden death of Judge John S. Leeper; that his relations with us were such as to greatly endear him to us.

Second, The ways of a wise Providence are inscrutable, and we bow with humble submission to Him who doeth all things for the best, however great and heavy the grievous burdens may be.

Third, We tender our deep sympathy to the bereaved wife and grief-stricken family in the great and irreparable loss they have sustained.

Fourth, That these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of our society and copies thereof be transmitted to the wife and family of the deceased and to be published in our city papers.

Dr. Beatty who has been very sick is now convalescent.

Mr. Satterwhite's child, who has been very sick, is now improving.

J. E. Morris, proprietor of this place, is now on a visit to Verbena.

J. B. Morgan is a juror at Birmingham this week.

Dan Morgan, of Woodlawn, was in Saginaw city Saturday on business.

Jim Wagner, our old sawyer, is now to be seen early and late pulling the lever.

Dr. Leonard, the company's physician, is a constant visitor at Mr. Smithermans.

Prof. T. F. Farrell, of Yellowleaf, was in town today. Don't know whether he was drawn by blue eyes or not.

Will Galloway, the woods boss, of this place purchased his wedding costume in Birmingham today. Will-full would like to have a card.

Sam Eastham has returned to Ohio. Don't cry Miss N—!

The beautiful homes of J. E. Morris and C. P. McLane will be completed this week.

W. A. Walburn, the noted yank and engineer of this place, will be a citizen at an early date.

Clay Fulton has abandoned the old farm, and is now checking lumber for the Saginaw Lumber Co.

The writer mourns the death of Judge Leeper, and extends heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved family.

WILL-FULL.

Wilsonville Waifs.

Jim Wilder, of Vincent, was in town Sunday.

Messrs. G. W. McGowen and Col. W. T. Smith went to Columbiana Friday.

Prof. J. H. Hammond made a business trip to Columbiana Friday.

Morgan Fowler made a business trip to Talladega Saturday.

Oscar Tinney's smiling countenance was seen among the girls Sunday afternoon.

Claude Jackson summoned up courage enough to escort a young lady to prayer meeting Sunday night.

J. W. Bolin is rebuilding his saw mill at Bolin's Switch. We understand that he will commence shipping lumber soon.

Our barber put in his appearance Saturday after an absence of three weeks; we all got a hair cut and shave and have five cents left.

The merchants say business is better now than it has been for years.

The boys here are always getting into it someway. This time they have turned all the wheels around on a man's buggy, that is they put the front wheels behind and the rear ones in front. J. H. Hammond is supposed to investigate this, as he has been kind enough in the past to investigate similar cases of this nature.

BUTCH, JR.

Wilsonville Warblings.

The brick store is going up very rapidly.

Horace Hammond came up from Columbiana Sunday.

Will Tinney has returned from Piedmont, Oxford and Anniston where he has been for the last few days.

Mrs. J. F. Pope visited Columbiana Friday to attend the burial of her friend, Miss Burdie Teague.

We are very sorry to report the serious illness of Arlen Jackson's baby. We wish for it a speedy recovery.

Rev. W. A. Montgomery has postponed the protracted meeting at the M. E. church, until after crops are gathered.

A small party from our little town contemplate visiting the Atlanta exposition some time this week.

We had no preaching at the Baptist church Sunday on account of the illness of the pastor, Rev. J. M. McCord.

The Marguerite society met at the M. E. church Sunday afternoon.

Rev. J. B. Kilpatrick left Saturday for Columbiana, where he preached Sunday morning and night, returning home Monday morn.

Quite a crowd of young people enjoyed the sociable at the residence of Mrs. Sanders, in honor of Miss Pearl Adkins, of Calera, Friday evening. More would have attended but for the drizzling rain which began to fall about 7 o'clock.

The prospects for our school are very fine. Movements are being made to enlarge the house. New pupils enter every few days.

"NELLIE BLY."

Harpersville Echoes.

Since my last communication there has been several changes one way and another of which I will mention a few. Death has entered the homes of some and made them dessolate; some homes have been made happy by marriage. Cotton has advanced to a price that will enable most of the farmers to get out of debt.

Miss Sallie Martin has charge of the music department over at the Atheneum.

Mrs. Gorman moved over to East Lake last week to patronize the Howard.

Mr. Caldwell paid Birmingham a business trip one day last week.

Miss Zilla Sparks, who has been spending sometime here, returned home last week.

The Harpersville school is progressing finely.

Mrs. G. Kidd is visiting her sister, Mrs Sparks, at Talladega this week.

Judge Russell has his office all covered over with show pictures. I suppose that he is going to start him up a circus.

Jim Self left here a few days ago to attend the Greensboro university, where they make preachers of boys.

Misses Jeffie Bell and Katie Gorman have gone over to attend the Atheneum the present session.

Mr. Martin's gin caught on fire one day last week, but by hard work and plenty of water was put under control before any damage was done.

We are all indeed sorry to hear of the death of Judge Leeper and Miss Burdie Teague. They both were well known here, and to the bereaved families we extend our sympathies.

The mail route from here to Pell City by horse has been discontinued, and a new route from here to Vincent has been established.

The cotton crop will all soon be gathered, and while the crop is very short the advance in price makes up for the shortage. There has been a very large crop of sorghum made while the ribbon cane is very sorry on account of the dry weather. There is plenty of corn made to do if our farmers will only take care of it. Most everybody will have some meat to kill; in fact, everything looks brighter and the chronic grumbler who sits around stores and public places whitling on goods boxes and cursing Cleveland and the democratic party, will have to seek another occupation.

She Did Not Purchase.

Woman—Have you any stove lifters?

Hardware Clerk (from Boston)—We have stovelid lifters, madame. I presume that is what you mean.

Woman (defiantly)—I mean stove lifters.

Clerk (patronizingly)—A stove lifter would be something to lift up a stove. A jackscrew, for instance.

Woman (angrily)—Have you any jackscrews?

Clerk (surprised)—Y-e-s, madame, I believe so, in the basement.

Woman (meditatively)—Are they silver plated?

Clerk (dumfounded)—No, madame.

Woman (triumphantly)—Then I don't want any. I wouldn't be seen putting up a stove with a jackscrew that wasn't silver plated. I'll go deal at some store where they have a better class of custom and keep aristocratic goods. Good morning.—N. Y. Weekly.

Against All Precedent.

"It pains me to report," said the chairman of the investigating committee, "that we have been grievously betrayed, grossly deceived."

"How?" asked several members in unison.

"I have just learned," explained the chairman, regretfully, "that there are some members of this committee who really wish to investigate."—Chicago Evening Post.

He Knew Too Well.

Actress (to editor)—See here! In this article you say that I am about to start out on a "starving tour," when I distinctly told your reporter that it was to be a "starring tour."

Esmerelda Longcoffin—I saw you kiss Miss Elderly yesterday when you met her on the street. I thought you and she were at daggers' points. I know she talked shamefully about you.

Birdie McHenepin—I know it, too, but she has grown so old and ugly that I have forgiven her everything.—Texas Siftings.

Her Reason.

Mr. Younghubbe—Don't you think, my dear, that you cook twice as much as we need?

Mrs. Younghubbe (artlessly)—I did it on purpose, darling; I want to try some of those "Hints for Housekeepers—How to make dainty dishes from what was left over from yesterday."—Detroit Sun.

Helping His Friend.

Bagley—You might help a fellow, if you wanted to. I'd like to have Gertrude find out all about my good points from an outsider.

Bailey—I'm helping you, Bagley. Why, it is only yesterday that I did my best to convince her that you were no fool!—Puck.

After the Quadrille.

He—Ah, mademoiselle, if I were rich and lovely as you are I know what I would do.

She—Marry a count, I suppose.

He—Not at all.

She—What then?

He—If I were you I'd marry me.—Judge.

A Blood and Death Question Raised in Arkansas—What Was the Matter With Old Buck?—The Gold and Silver Issue—Aunt Nancy Newton "Ain't Gone Nowheres."

(Copyright, 1895.)

It was one of them bright and bracin days in October. A tremendius big white frost had fell that mornin, but the wind had shifted around to the northwest and was blowin at a fast and furious lick acrost the country. A natural-born saddle horse, with a long swingin fox trot, had took me out through North Texas and over the Red River the day before, and I was now plungin into the hill country of Arkansas.

A Blood and Death Question.

The sun was now on the greasy side, you understand, and slippin down fast behind the western slopes. It was fifteen miles, or maybe a little better, to the closest railroad station, and the road was takin me through the roughest and wildest and most lonesomest country on the broad bosom of the earth perhaps. Down in Texas they have got a whole lot of devilment stacked up agin the great and growin State of Arkansas, and somehow I couldn't turn loose and forget the bloody and thrillin stories that had come to me in regards to robbers and murders and hold-ups, and the like of that. So I had figgered it out that there would be plenty of horses for other people to ride after I was dead and gone, and I was headed for the station, and ridin for blood, as it were.

Presently a suddent turn in the road brought me to a log cabin settlement. Two long, tall, ganglin boys, with red hair and freckly faces, come up out of the clearin, and stopped and stood me up in the middle of the road. I didn't know for certain what was comin next, but I didn't have so very long to lay low and say nothin and wait.

"From your general trappins and the critter you ride, I reckon as how you must of come from Texas," said the biggest one of the boys, and blamed if it didn't seem to me like he was standin seven feet high in his bare feet. They had me spotted right, the truth was more safer than a lie, so I owned up to it that I was fresh from Texas.

"In that case, stranger, you are the very man we are lookin for," the boy went on to say. "Me and my brother Bill have got tangled up together in a terrible disputation, and you will have to settle the pints between us as to which is which and who is who. Old Buck, our steer, took mighty sick last night. I lowed it was the holler horn, whilst Bill he lowed it was the botts, and so we had it, up and down, and over and under. You can see the steer layin out there in the clearin, and if it ain't a clear case of the holler horn then I have told the lie and will sign the papers to that extent."

"Spose you bore some holes in his horns and split his tail open," says I. "That's the way they stop the hollow horn in Texas."

'Exactly, precisely to a nat's heel what I said from the jump," replied the boy, "but Bill he swore it want the holler horn, and the steer was as much hisin as mine. So there we was argifyin and disputin, whilst old Buck was sufferin death."

"Spose you drench him with sweet milk and sperits of turpentine," says I. "That is a dead shot for the botts in Texas."

"Didn't I tell you so?" says Bill as he bristled up to his bigger brother. "Didn't I go and git the milk and sperits of turpentine and bring a bottle to do the drenchin with? And didn't you rip and snort and swear by seventeen devils that it was the holler horn and not the botts, and old Buck should never be drenched to death with sich a mess? Didn't I tell you so?"

"Night is comin on, boys, and I have got a long ride ahead," says I. "My horse is leg weary, but we must make it to the station in time to catch the first train goin south. You will have to settle this question amongst yourselves and let me go."

"It will never do, stranger," says the biggest boy—"it will never do in the round created world. If you don't tell us which is which and who is who me and my brother Bill will have to pitch in and fight it out. We do hate to spill family blood, but one is right ahd one is wrong, and the pint must be settled. I ain't in no ways hankerin after a chance to stain the soil of Arkansas with a brother's blood, and neither is Bill, but last night old Buck took the holler horn, or he took the botts. Somethin must be done, or blood will have to flow."

By this time the sun had went down, and that long and lonesome road still stretched out between me and the railroad station. Naturally of course I was nervious and restless and in a monstrous hurry to move on.

"From the way you boys give in the facts, I reckon your steer must of took the hollow horn and the botts both at the same time," says I.

"Mebbe he did," says the biggest boy.

"Mebbe he did," says Bill.

"And in that case you mought bore his horns and split his tail and drench him with sweet milk and sperits turpentine," says I. "You will be more than probable to hit it right one way or the other. But I must hurry on, boys, and I reckon the sooner you git your fixments and go to work the better it will be for the steer."

"We are much obleeged to you, stranger," says the biggest boy, "but it ain't no use now. Old Buck died this mornin."

And as I rode on over that long and lonesome road I had some tremendius solemn thoughts in regard to them boys and their old steer, Buck. But I didn't write out the things that I thought, and I never will. At any rates, the train had went by twenty minutes before I got to the station.

The Gold and Silver Issue.

Man born of woman is a monstrous curious thing. Little Bank Weatherford is the wildest and woolliest free silver man in our whole entire settlement. He turned out on that line last spring, and he has went on from bad to worse, and more of it till now to hear him talk you would think it was bread and meat and life and death and free silver on one side, and the world, the flesh and the devil and the goldbugs on the other.

But I was in town one day last week, and little Bunk he had went in that mornin with two bales of cotton. The price had jumped up considerable and he got somethin better than 8 cents a pound for his load.

Now the Weatherfords are all debtpayin, dram-drinkin people, and little Bunk went to work and paid up his store account the first thing. Then he bought a few dry goods and a quart of "sperits-of-cats-a-fightin," as Blev Scroggins were wont to call it, and had forty silver dollars left clean and clear.

And what do you reckon come next? Little Bunk Weatherford, the great free silver man, put out he did and chased all around town tryin to swap his silver for forty dollars in gold. After so long a time he found a man that had two twenty dollar gold pieces and made the trade and went home happy.

"I am still for free silver or bust, Rufe," says little Bunk when he found out that I had caught him in the act, "but I have got forty dollars to put away in my old sock, you understand, and the silver is too blamed onhandy to keep."

Whereas, I have likewise also took notice in regards to that—there is more than one Bunk Weatherford in this glorious old country we call home.

Aunt Nancy Still Lives.

Now in these days it comes to pass that I was ruther somewhat too previous in givin it out that Aunt Nancy Newton had went the way of all human flesh. Her brother Andrew Jim come by with the wagons the other day. He brought me a plug of store-bought tobacco and a letter from Aunt Nancy. And this is what she had to say:

PANTHER CREEK, October, 1895.

"Dere Rufus: The weather has been so pleasant, and everybody so busy or so sick, till I couldn't find no way to git off a visitin. Chills and fevers are goin about thick and terrible in the settlement now, and you know how handy these plain old women are in case of sickness. The men folks talk big and act big and feel big, and think they are runnin of the country, whilst one sick baby is about ten times too many for a cow pen full of 'em. It has been clost about two years now since I give it out as my own personal private opinion that the third party was the devil come in a new suit of sheep clothes to raise a fresh rumpus on the earth, and after that old man Rip Davis wouldn't speak to me when we met in the big road. But the chills and fevers broke out in his family. His wife was first took down, and then the children tumbled over one by one till finally at last he was the onlyest one left up and about. And one night last week here come old man Rip bilin over to our house. What was he after? Aunt Nancy, of course. The whole family was sick abed and the baby havin spasms, and in a pushency like that Aunt Nancy was somebody. To be certainly I went, and I had to stay and remain over there three days and nights. They are all on the mend now, and the next time we meet in the big road I reckon maybe old man Rip will be so kind, condescendin and obligin as to say 'Good mornin. Aunt Nancy.'

"I can't say for certain when it will be so I can leave home on a visit, but in the maintime I will live in hopes of breakin bread with you along about Thanksgivin. AUNT NANCY."

The world still needs these plain old flint-and-steel women, and I am glad—glad to the bottom of my heart—that there is yet one perusin around on Panther Creek, and my Aunt Nancy Newton ain't gone nowheres.

CUTLETS AND ONION SAUCE.

The Preparation of a Dish That Is Very Palatable.

There is an undoubted prejudice against onions still existing in country districts. French cookery has largely rooted out this prejudice in the cities, and many city housewives do not attempt their soup or meat braizes and stews without a little of the flavor of the onion. Most croquettes and minces of meat and other "made" meat dishes require this among the many flavors of herb and vegetable which go to making them perfect. In all these dishes the onion is used sparingly, and does not assert itself as it does in soubise sauces and onion soup, of which it is a component part. The onion is one of the most wholesome and valuable vegetables we have, and it is an ignorant prejudice that has so largely prohibited its use in general cookery. For cutlets with soubise sauce egg bread crumbs and fry in boiling fat six nice cutlets. Those taken from the shoulder and neck are juicy and inexpensive. Be careful to trim them if they are lamb or mutton, removing all the fat you can, especially on the outside of the chop, as this is the fat that often imparts a strong flavor. To prepare the soubise or onion sauce boil three white onions in water for half an hour, take them up, throw off the water, put them into a mixture of half water and half milk, and let them cook for a quarter of an hour longer, or until they are soft enough to mash through a colander. Thin this puree of onion with a little cream sauce or white sauce; let it boil up once and pour it around the chops.—N. Y. Tribune.

Stub Ends of Thought.

The superlative egotist is the individual who finds fault with everything except himself.

Prosperity is one of the things we don't think we have until we lose it.

A man never thinks but once that a woman's temper isn't loaded.

SOUTHERN GLEANINGS.

Editor Beale H. Richardson.

Col. Beale H. Richardson, editor of the Columbus (Ga.) Enquirer-Sun, and secretary of the Georgia Democratic state central committee, died suddenly in Columbus. He was a confederate soldier, and since the war was a prominent factor in southern journalism. His father was a well-known editor of Georgia. When the war broke out his paper took the side of the south, and was suppressed in 1863. The son was then a boy, but went into the army as a member of a confederate cavalry troop and was on Gen. Ewell's staff. The close of the war found him in Mobile, Ala. He was one of those to revive the Mobile Tribune, and was associate editor of the paper. He established the Mobile Times, and afterward returned to Georgia, where he was for a number of years editor of the Savannah News. For eight years he owned and controlled the Columbus Enquirer-Sun, and he was a power in politics.

Killed by the Cars.

Miss Mattie Murdoch, aged 38, a wealthy lady of Mount Meigs, Montgomery county, Ala., was crushed to death under the wheels of a locomotive at the depot near her home. She was preparing to leave for Atlanta, and expected to take the morning train. By the new schedule this train does not stop at Mount Meigs. It is supposed she was not aware of this, and Miss Murdoch, who was standing on or near the track, was struck and thrown in front of the tender. She had a purse in her hand containing $800, and the money was distributed along the track for a hundred yards.

Killed by Lightning.

During a storm at Burgin, Ky. lightning struck the house of Carey Hunn, colored, demolishing the upstairs portion of the house and killing him instantly. He was on the floor by the stove in the room asleep. None of the other members of the family were hurt, although one of his little children was playing beside him, and others were in the room.

Dispensary Law Sustained.

In the United States court at Charleston, S. C., Circuit Judge Simonton rendered a decision in the case of Lowenstein & Co., of Statesburg, S. C., who tried to have the dispensary law declared unconstitutional on the ground of its being a monopoly. The decision sustained the law and the suit was dismissed.

A Newspaper's Opinion.

What we need in Alabama is not a commissioner of agriculture to prophesy what amount of cotton is in the growing crop, but a commissioner of roads who will see that the planters can get the crop conveyed cheaply and promptly to the railroad station or the river landing. Parents Outwitted.

By agreement W. A. Hudson, of La Grange, Ga., and Miss Lovelia Leitch, of Liberty, Mo., met in Birmingham, Ala., and were married in the parlor of a hotel by a justice of the peace. The hotel clerk and a guest were the witnesses of the marriage. There was parental objection.

Decapitated His Son.

Sheriff McCarver returned to Memphis from Tipton county, Tenn., the other day, and reported a horrible case of murder on one of the Mississippi river islands. A father and son fell out and the father knocked the son on the head with an ax, then cut the head from the body.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

germ-life

The doctors tell us, now-a-days, that disease germs are everywhere; in the air, in the water, in our food, clothes, money; that they get into our bodies, live there, thrive and grow, if they find anything to thrive on.

Consumption is the destruction of lung-tissue by germs where the lung is too weak to conquer them. The remedy is strength—vital force.

Scott's Emulsion, with hypophosphites, means the adjustment of lung strength to overcome germ-life. It is fighting the germ with the odds in our favor. These tiny little drops of fat-food make their way into the system and re-fresh and re-invigorate it. Whether you succeed with it or not depends on how good a start the germs had, and how carefully you can live. The shortest way to health is the patient one. The gain is often slow.

A TANDEM LAUNCHING

The Gunboats Nashville and Wilmington Take Water,

BOTH SLIDING FROM THE SAME WAYS.

The Day Made a Gala One at Newport News, Va., and the North Atlantic Squadron Gathered to Witness the Ceremony.

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., Oct. 19.—The launch of the gunboats Nashville and Wilmington was made the occasion of an unusual naval demonstration, Admiral Bunce assembling the North Atlantic squadron in Hampton Roads opposite the shipyard, and Secretary Herbert, with a distinguished party, coming from Washington by special steamer to participate. Ashore and afloat a profusion of flags and large crowds of people made a brilliant spectacle.

The event was remarable as to the first instance on record of the two warships being launched on the same day from a single set of ways. The vessels had been placed one ahead of the other, tandem fashion, on a continuous incline, the Nashville nearer the water with her bow a few feet from the Wilmington, both vessels taking water stern foremost. This arrangement was due to the fact that the works of the contractors, in accordance with modern notions, had been installed for the erection of ships of the largest size, the building slips being of such length as to accommodate a 500-foot vessel, while the combined length of the Nashville and Wilmington is only 485 feet, 3½ inches. Not only was ample space available for both ships, but it was also possible to deliver in position all the material used in their construction by a single crane, which traveled alongside on a track 80 feet above the ground. This great crane, with a lifting capacity of 8,000 pounds at the end of its 125 foot arm, also served an adjoining similar slip from which the steamer Newport News was recently launched, and upon which now stands a fine partly-finished steamer of the Plant line. Other large locomotive cranes take all the material from cars or vessels on arrival at the yards, distribute it to the various shops and reassemble it in place on the ways. This elaborate system dispenses to a great extent with manual labor and enables all work to proceed expeditiously. The youngest of American ship yards, that at Newport News, is famed for progressiveness, and naval experts pronounced its facilities for rapidly building battle ships and larger ocean liners unsurpassed even abroad.

At 9:48 the Nashville started majestically, while Miss Emma Thompson, of Tennessee's capital, christened her with champagne.

Seventeen seconds later, amid the din of steamer whistles and shouts of the crowd, drowning the national airs played by the artillery band from Fortress Monroe, the ship floated in deep water.

The Nashville's cradle having been scraped of most of the tallow from that portion of the ways over which it moved, a delay of more than an hour was required in order that additional lubricant could be applied to expedite the Wilmington's passage, and the shore and keel blocks had to be moved, so that it was 11:10 when the Wilmington slid into the water.

Miss Anne Gray, Senator Gray's daughter, was given the signal that the ship was beginning to move almost imperceptibly and she swung the champagne bottle christening the Wilmington. With rapidly increasing velocity the ship moved seaward with salutes like those which had greeted the Nashville, and in forty-eight seconds completed her journey. The two new additions to the navy were then towed past Admiral Bunce's fleet and moored at the docks where their machinery will be installed.

THE BIG FIGHT.

Little Probability of Its Being Pulled Off at Hot Springs.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., Oct. 19.—The United Press has the highest authority on the fighters side of the question for stating that there is little or no likelihood of the contest between Corbett and Fitzsimmons taking place here, and that across the river from El Paso, on Mexican soil, is the only place left where there is a probability of their fighting.

The pay car on the Grand Rapids & Indiana railroad was wrecked at Ceylon, Ind., and three men killed and several badly injured.

Frank Smith, a treasury ex-employe, was found dead on the Long bridge across the Potomac at Washington—wife, five children, no work, took poison.

Mrs. Charles Merrett, of Alton, Ill., who was badly burned while fighting a prairie fire at the home of her sister, Mrs. Lloyd Gregory, near Wier City, Kas., is dead.

The German Reformed church of Peoria, Ill., is worked up to white heat over the trial of its pastor for christening a child not belonging to his congregation.

James Blake, a veteran of 1812, and the father of twenty-seven children, celebrated his ninety-fifth birthday anniversary at Mason City, Ia. He is still full of virility.

It seems very well settled in Washington social circles that ex-Minister to Persia Truxton Beale and wife, who was Mrs. Blaine's youngest daughter, have separated permanently.

One of the singular facts in the wholesale decapitations in the St. Louis police force is that the men dropped are, for the most part, those who have had the cleanest records.

William Stephenson, one of the two men who were given corrosive sublimate at the St. Louis city hospital by mistake Wednesday morning, died from the effects of the poison Friday night.

George Roberts, a prominant and wealthy citizen of Ossawatomie, Kas., while his family were absent at dinner, went upstairs in his house and shot himself through the heart. He wrote a brief note, saying: "Poor health and old age answers all."

A HANGING POSTPONED

Because of the Absence of the Most Interested Party.

MOUNT PLEASANT, Ky., Oct. 19.—Bud Overton was to have been hanged here Friday for the double murder of Gus Loed, an old peddler, and his wife, but the event was indefinitely postponed by the escape, several weeks ago, of Overton, and there is still no clew to the whereabouts of the murderer.

Weekly Bank Statement.

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—The weekly statement of the associated banks shows the following changes:

Reserve, increase	$ 1,263,275
Loans, decrease	2,278,500
Specie, increase	990,600
Legal tenders, decrease	178,300
Deposits, decrease	1,5 7,100
Circulation, decrease	176,200

The banks now hold $15,380,175 in excess of the requirements of the 25-per-cent. rule.

A Candidate Withdrawn.

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 19.—The State republican committee received a telegram this morning from the Darke county republican committee that C. W. Heoffer has withdrawn from the ticket as candidate for the legislature on account of a scandalous exposure of double dealing.

A Fatal Pleasure Trip.

QUINCY, Ill., Oct. 19.—A. J. Miller, ex-mayor of Canton, Mo., and an old prominent citizen, and Henry Clay were drowned while sailing up the river Friday. A. Hills, Frank Ferris, Dan Tibbles and Jake Kellis, members of the party, were rescued after being in the water an hour and a half.

JOHN W. MACKAY, JR.

The Elder Son of the Bonanza King Meets an Untimely End.

THROWN FROM HIS HORSE IN PARIS,

And Within a Few Hours a Corpse—His Aged Father, in San Francisco, Bowed Down with Grief Over His Bereavement.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 19.—John W. Mackey, Jr., the elder of the two sons of John W. Mackay, was accidentally killed in Paris, Thursday, by being thrown from his horse. The first intimation of the sad occurrence reached the father Friday evening through a cablegram sent to his private secretary by Clarence, the younger son of the bonanza king. This conveyed the information that Willie, as the unfortunate young man was called, to distinguish him more readily from his father, was sick, and then came the foreboding and significant instruction, terse, but all too comprehensive: "Notify father to prepare for the worst."

When the news was imparted to Mr. Mackay in his room at the Palace hotel, he hastened at once to the office of the Postal Telegraph and Cable Co., diagonally opposite, and every effort was put forth by Supt. Storrer to obtain further intelligence regarding the condition of young Mackay. But the instrument which sounded the cable messages remained obstinately silent until near the midnight hour, when the most heartrending news to the father clicked slowly off that death had robbed the mining magnate of one of his most cherished earthly treasures. The facts were meager, but only too much to the point. They came from Clarence, at Paris, and stated that:

"Willie was thrown from a horse yesterday and never recovered consciousness. He died last evening."

There were no further particulars, but it was enough and too much for the nearly heartbroken father. The few hours of anxiety made greater inroads into his mind and body than years of toil and trouble. He sat in a chair in the private office of Supt. Storrer and held his bowed and silvered head in his hands, and his silent, quiet grief effectually repeled any attempt at condolences, and none were attempted.

When the fact of the bereavement was realized by Mr. Storrer he dispatched messages for John Rosenfeld and Edmond Godchaux, two of Mr. Mackay's most intimate friends, but not even with them would he vouchsafe a word regarding his deep sorrow. They could simply stand by and mourn with him in silence. Finally, about 1 a. m., after all attempts to secure additional particulars had failed, Mr. Mackay was prevailed upon to retire to his room at the hotel, to which he was escorted by his two friends.

Further Particulars.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 19.—John W. Mackay received some further particulars from Paris about John W. Mackay, Jr.'s death. A cablegram stated his death occurred while the young man was out riding. His horse ran away, dashing him against a tree. Young Mackay died of concussion of the brain. It is stated to be Mr. Mackay's present intention to have the the remains of his son embalmed and brought to this city for burial.

PRINCE CHRISTIAN WON

In a Thirty-Mile Bicycle Race with Prince Henry of Prussia.

LONDON, Oct. 19.—The royal circle has been affected by the bicycle craze, and wheels are all the rage there. Prince Henry of Prussia, brother of Emperor Willian and Prince Christian Victor, recently competed in a 30-mile race for a prize given by the queen. The course was between Balmoral and Braemer castle. Grooms were placed along the route with water and sponges to assuage the thirst and cool the heads and necks of the royal racers. Prince Christian proved to be the better rider and he had better staying qualities than his opponent. Prince Henry was literally beaten out of sight, Prince Christian winning by half an hour.

ON BEHALF OF WALLER.

A Petition Presented to the President and Referred to Secretary Olney.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—John C. Jones, a colored attorney of Chicago, called on President Cleveland, accompanied by Senator Cullom, and presented a petition on behalf of John L. Waller, the ex-United States consul to Tamatave, Madagascar, at present imprisoned in France. The petition urges the president to do all that can be done to secure release and redress for Waller, and is signed by many members of the Chicago bar and leading jurists of that city. Mr. Cleveland suggested that the petition be laid before Secretary Olney, and Mr. Jones and Cullom did this without delay.

Nez Perces Land to Be Opened for Settlement.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—The president will soon issue a proclamation opening for settlement 546,000 acres of land in the Nez Perces reservation in Idaho. There are about 2,000 of the Indians. The price the settlers will have to pay for the lands has been fixed at $3.75 per acre for agricultural lands and $5 per acre for stone, timber and mineral lands.

The Toledo Bicycle Factory Strike.

TOLEDO, O., Oct. 19.—The situation in the strike of local bicycle factory employes is unchanged. Neither side gives indication of being willing to capitulate. The manufacturers have been in session all the forenoon, but adjourned without doing anything.

THE POPE'S LETTER

Looked Upon as a Blow to the Movement Toward Christian Unity.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—Among high ecclesiastics here it is felt that the pope's letter to American archbishops urging non-participation by Catholics in "Promiscuous religious congresses," opens up a question of more importance than the sectarian school question, the Cahensley movement, or the other issues which have been presented in recent years.

It is said that the pope's opposition to religious congresses does not affect the Catholic church alone, but has a bearing on the entire movement toward Christian unity, which began in England and has spread through this country. The purpose of this movement was to harmonize and unify all divergent sects on non-essentials, bringing them together on the one essential tenet of Christianity. There has been division of opinion as to whether the Catholic church could entertain this plan of unity. An eminent Catholic preached a series of sermons in Washington, showing there was but one plan of unity possible, and that was the return of all sects to the Catholic church. Some of the clergy, however, have taken a more liberal view, and this broader sentiment found expression in the attendance of Cardinal Gibbons at Congress of Religions at Chicago. At that time Mgr. Satolli was in Chicago, but took no part in the congress. The cardinal's paper and subsequent magazine articles showing common grounds on which all sects might stand attracted much attention.

The language of the pope's letter is said to leave no room for doubt as to the position of Rome on the holding of congresses, or the broader question of church unity, as the following direct statement makes clear: "But, although these premiscuous conventions have unto this day been tolerated with prudent silence, it would nevertheless be more advisable that Catholics should hold their conventions separate."

It is said that this statement is so direct as not to be open to interpretation, and doubt is expressed as to the very liberal interpretation placed by Archbishop Ireland on such a clear statement from the pope. It is believed also that if there is any misunderstanding or broad interpretation given to the pope's language, he will speedily issue a second letter as he did when the Knights of Pythias' letter was liberally construed, leaving no room for doubt as to his position on promiscuous congresses.

BRADSTREET'S REVIEW.

Less Push Noticeable in the General Commercial Movement.

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—Bradstreet's weekly trade review says:

There is less push to the general commercial movement this week. There are, of course, noteworthy exceptions, Baltimore merchants finding relatively more satisfactory trade. This is largely due to the remarkably favorable conditions at the south. In general, the volume of business appears slightly smaller this week, but with a widespread, although somewhat irregular, demand.

Throughout the west there are favorable trade conditions, except north of Missouri and Kansas, where there is no change from the previous moderate volume, or where the recent weather conditions have checked trading somewhat. All lake ports report an active demand for tonnage, and firm rates. Kansas City announces an active week in commercial circles, as do Chicago and St. Louis, with the outlook for a good season's business. At the northwest, "hold your wheat" sentiment is spreading, but thus far does not appear to have had much effect.

Exports of wheat from both coasts of the United States this week (flour included as wheat), amount to 2,409,000 bushels, against 2,244,000 last week, as compared with 3,192,000 in the same week a year ago, 2,709,000 two years ago, and with 3,270,000 in the week of 1892.

MAUD LEWIS GUILTY

Of Murder in the Second Degree Says the St. Louis Jury.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 19.—Maud Lewis, charged with the murder of State Senator Peter Morrissey, whose trial has occupied the criminal court for the greater part of the past week, was found guilty by the jury, after seventeen hours' deliberation, of murder in the second degree.

The prisoner appeared surprised when the verdict was rendered, but quickly recovered herself. Her attorneys at once moved for a new trial.

The maximum sentence, under the verdict, fifteen years' imprisonment, was imposed.

MOONSHINE RAID

In Monroe County, W. Va.—Four Illicit Distillers Captured.

CENTRAL CITY, W. Va., Oct. 19.—For several months a number of moonshine stills have been in operation on Green Brier river in Monroe county, and all efforts to capture the illicit distillers proved futile up to Friday night. United States Marshal M. B. Vinson and a posse raided the camp at midnight and captured J. A. Poole, Tom Screwster, James Quinlan and Harry Torrence, while three others made their escape in the pine thickets. Several hundred gallons of pomace and brandy were found.

Mayor Pingree Unanimously Renominated.

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 19.—The republican city convention was held here to nominate a city ticket. There was no opposition when Mayor Pingree was renominated for a fourth term and his nomination was made unanimous. The remainder of the ticket was filled by the "Pingree" nominees.

A. K. Ward's Forgeries.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Oct. 19.—Developments in the shortage of A. K. Ward show that his forgeries will amount to about $300,000. Of this $75,000 were held by the local banks, $40,000 are in New York city, $12,000 in Chicago and the remainder by firms and individuals in Memphis.

Jail Breaker Recaptured.

TOLEDO, O., Oct. 19.—Henry Utsinger, one of the five prisoners who escaped from the county jail here three months ago, was caught at Mongpa, near Oil City, Pa. Utsinger robbed a letter box at Findlay, O., and rifled the letters of their contents.

A SECRET MISSION

Just Concluded by Lord Salisbury's Confidential Secretary

TO CONSTANTINOPLE ON THE QUIET.

The Result Not Yet Made Known, But Supposed to be Fraught with Interest to the Sultan and His Shaky Empire.

[Special Cable Letter.]

LONDON, Oct. 19.—Much interest has been excited in diplomatic and political circles by the return to London of Hon. Schomberg McDonnell, the private secretary to Lord Salisbury, who was not generally known to have left England. It transpires that he returned on Wednesday from Constantinople. Outside of the most intimate foreign office circles his presence in Constantinople was kept a close secret, and the fact that he had been sent on a mission to the Turkish capital was not known to either the English or European press. Mr. McDonnell occupies toward Lord Salisbury a confidential position similar to that held by Montague Lowry-Gorry, now Lord Rowton, toward the earl of Beaconsfield. He is trusted to convey verbally the opinions that the prime minister may deem inadvisable to commit to writing, and he is equally trusted to report to the prime minister what he hears or learns. It is, therefore, no wonder that his return is full of interest to the diplomatic circle. Though nothing has been made known as to the result of his mission, it is significant that coincident with his presence here the official apprehension regarding the gravity of the situation in Turkey has increased. The submission of the porte to the demands made by Great Britain, France and Russia relative to the reform of the administration in Armenia appears to be considered as only a brief respite from the gravest developments. According to thoroughly reliable information, the Mohammedan reform party, which aims at the deposition of the sultan and the formation of a government under a constitution, relies upon the support of Great Britain in the event of a revolution proving even partly successful. On the other hand, it is understood that the sultan has obtained an assurance that the three powers will support him against any movements tending to anarchy if he adheres faithfully to his Armenian compact. No interference of the allied powers can go beyond moral support without rupturing the alliance, owing to the diversity of the interests involved. With a view to striking in when the upheaval of the Turks comes, Austria has joined the existing entente between Great Britain, Russia and France. In high official circles here the undoubted expectation is that a climax in the fate of the Turks will not be long delayed.

LONDON, Oct. 19.—The officials of the foreign office practically confirm the statement made by the St. James Gazette that Lord Salisbury has forwarded an ultimatum to the president of the Venezuelan republic.

BATTLE SHIP VICTORIA

Launched at the Chatham (England) Dock Yard.

LONDON, Oct. 19.—The new battle ship Victorious was launched from the Chatham dock yard. She is 390 feet long and has 75 feet beam and 21½ feet draught. Her armament will consist of four breech-loading forty-six ton guns, twelve 6-inch quick-firing guns, sixteen 12-pounders, with several 3-pounder Hotchkiss guns and Maxims. She will also carry four submerged torpedo tubes and one above water. The ship was launched in the presence of a distinguished company of spectators. She was christened by Mrs. Goschen, wife of the first lord of the admiralty.

JOHN BURNS

Gained Knowledge and Experience on an Expenditure of One Hundred Pounds.

LONDON, Oct. 19.—John Burns, responding to statements concerning his large money receipts during his recent lecturing tour in the United States, writes that he traveled 17,000 miles in seven weeks, and that he visited eighteen cities and spoke to 70,000 people for a little over £100. All this sum had gone for expenses, and he had gained nothing beyond knowledge and experience.

THE JAPANESE LEGATION

Recalled From Corea—Report Anent the Queen's Murder Confirmed.

YOKOHAMA, Oct. 19.—It is reported here that on October 14 Viscount Mura, the Japanese minister to Corea, and the other members of the Japanese legation, together with a number of military officers at Seoul, were recalled.

The report that Japanese Soshi were implicated in the murder of the queen of Corea is confirmed.

A Flood of Petroleum.

MUNCIE, Ind., Oct. 19.—The farm of Eli Petersen, near Granville, is being flooded with oil. The big well which was developed so unexpectedly by gas drillers ten days ago, and capped up so as to conceal the find, until leases could be secured, burst open and the oil shot out of the pipe high into the air.

A House, Not a Steamboat.

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 19.—A special to the Journal from St. Ignace, Mich., says that the report sent out from there last night that a steamer at anchor under St. Helena island was burned proves the rumor to have been a mistake. It was a house that was burned.

THE REPUBLICAN PROGRAMME.

Scheme of the Protectionists for Raising the Revenue.

The Washington correspondent of the Chicago Tribune is authority for the announcement that the republican leaders have practically agreed upon their financial programme for the coming session of congress. "The idea of more revenue through a revenue tariff on wool, with the Allison notes for emergencies, will be the republican financial scheme," says this correspondent.

Whether he has learned this directly from the republicans or by making a survey of the situation on his own account, very likely he is right. The republican leaders may not have come to a distinct understanding yet, but logically they cannot vote to increase the revenue without at the same time voting to protect somebody. Just now the wool growers are the most clamorous of all the late republican proteges, and naturally their demands will be the first considered. Other producers of raw materials, such as coal and iron ore, are still protected to some extent, and there will be a certain degree of plausibility in the claim that the farmers who grow wool are as much entitled to protection as the cap italists who are concerned in the production of other raw materials.

But the republicans cannot well vote to increase the duties on wool without at the same time voting to increase the duties on woolen goods. The woolen manufacturers must have more protection if the price of their raw material is to be increased by protective duties. The republicans always have legislated upon this principle and they always must adhere to it, not only for the sake of consistency, but also in order to retain the support of their most valuable allies, the manufacturers.

When they increase the duties on manufactures of wool in order to compensate for the duties imposed on the raw material they will admit that the effect of a duty, or, at least, the intended effect, is to raise the price of the article on which it is laid. They admit that a duty on wool is intended to raise the price of wool. They must, then, admit that an increase in the duties on woolen goods is intended to increase the price of those goods. Otherwise raising those duties would not compensate at all for the duties laid on wool. Are the republicans prepared to admit that they wish to increase the prices of all woolen goods? What do they think consumers will have to say to that? They must make the admission, and the democrats are willing that they should.

As for the "Allison notes," it will be necessary to issue securities of some kind if the government needs thirty million dollars more revenue, as the republicans claim, and if no more revenue is to be provided except from wool. No duties which the republicans will dare propose on wool and woolens would provide more than half that sum.

It is estimated that this republican programme has been agreed upon on the assumption that the administration will not take the responsibility of recommending any plan for raising more revenue. "The administration," we are told, "would like the revenue without the responsibility." If the republican programme is wholly contingent upon this assumption we may rest assured that it will never be entered upon. President Cleveland has never yet hesitated to recommend any measure that he deemed necessary or of great importance and there is no reason to think that he is going to show the political white feather at this late day. If he thinks there is a real need for more revenue he will not hesitate to say so or to let congress know that what he wants is revenue and enough of it, and not tariff protection for the Ohio shepherds or anybody else.—Chicago Chronicle.

WHEAT EXPORTS.

Improving Conditions Under the Wilson Law.

A high tariff contemporary claims that Europe bought more "high-priced wheat from us under the McKinley law than low-priced wheat under the Wilson law."

Yes, it did in 1892 because of crop shortages that year and the year before in Europe. Crop damages were so great that some of the European countries suspended their duties on grain and otherwise favored by legislation the import of American wheat. But McKinleyism couldn't help our farmers after that. Not only did our wheat exports fall off in 1893 over forty million bushels, but the price per bushel fell twenty per cent.

Instead of recovering the lost ground in the next year of McKinleyism, wheat continued to fall in price. Not until the Wilson bill had taken effect was any improvement perceptible. The average export price of No. 2 red wheat has been higher this year than at any time since Europe's crop shortage in 1892. The average for the year has also been higher than during the corresponding period of last year under the McKinley bill.

When we compare quantities we find that up to the 1st of August about two million three hundred thousand bushels more were exported than during the corresponding period of last year. Our crop shortage this year in winter wheat cut down exports considably until the spring wheat crop was harvested, but since the middle of September they have exceeded last year's exports. We are ahead now of 1894 and are likely to make gains every week for several months over the year 1893 as well as last year. Wheat is higher now than it was a year ago and as high as it was in October, 1893.

There is this difference, however. While the tendency of the market two years ago was downward it is now upward.—St. Louis Republic.

——Delusive comparisons of our trade during the panic year and the one that followed it are well enough for organs of monopoly, but they are unworthy of anyone who aspires to be a statesman.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

NOT SO RUINOUS.

Fallacious Predictions of Republicans Regarding the Iron Trade.

The prediction of the ruin of our industries that was to follow the passage of the Wilson bill are still fresh in the minds of the people. Even their authors have not forgotten them, though they are praying for some "sweet oblivious antidote" that will remove them from the memory of others.

The iron trade has long been regarded as a sort of barometer indicating the state of general business. It furnishes the implements of production to such an extent that it must be virtually affected by either an increase or decrease of activity in productive industries. The statistics of the business are carefully collected and published, the Iron Age being a leading authority.

On March 1, 1892, the Iron Age reported the weekly production of American furnaces to be 193,902 tons of iron. This was the largest production ever attained up to that date. It was high-water mark under the McKinley bill or any previous tariff bill. It was never equaled in any subsequent week before the repeal of the McKinley act.

On August 1, 1894, the beginning of the last month of the life of the "bill of abomination," the weekly production of the furnaces was 115,113 tons. On August 28 the new tariff bill became a law. On September 1, 1894, the weekly capacity of the furnaces had risen to 151,113 tons. A year later, on September 1, 1895, the weekly output had risen to 194,029.

This is not a large increase over the greatest previous production, but it is an increase. It is a new high-water mark, established under a tariff law which, however imperfect from the standpoint of tariff reform, was condemned everywhere in protection circles as a free trade measure and as certain to ruin our industries. Against these reckless and unfounded predictions, which we denounced at the time they were made, we have the satisfaction of setting the testimony of a protection author that the "barometer of trade" now registers a higher figure than it ever did before.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

SADDENED BY PROSPERITY.

Republicans Distressed by Improved Business Conditions.

The improvement in the finances of the country and in the general condition of business has disclosed the existence of a painful state of mind among the editors of certain republican papers. The announcement that the receipts of the treasury for the month will exceed the disbursements causes them deep distress. The estimate that the continuous deficit of the past two years will hereafter be replaced by a steadily increasing surplus is received by them with every indication of genuine sorrow. They try not to believe it.

They even go so far as to argue that it must be a mistake. They accuse the treasury department of withholding payments, of starving the government service, of juggling with the transaction of public business, of seeking to force a balance for the purpose of influencing the elections.

What kind of Americans are these whose hearts are saddened at the evidences of their country's prosperity? What kind of patriotism is it which carries partisanship to such an extreme? Above all, where is the intelligence in acting the part of a mere calamity howler in a country in which prosperity is inevitable?—N. Y. World.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

——In the language of the yachtsmen the McKinley boom shows signs of buckling.—Chicago Chronicle.

——Mr. Reed hasn't been consulted in the proposed withdrawal of Harrison in favor of McKinley.—St. Paul Globe.

——If this tide of prosperity keeps on rising, what will our republican friends have to talk about in the campaign of 1896?—Philadelphia Record.

——Latest returns from the anxious bench are to the effect that Gen. Harrison is still on the lookout for that "great emergency."—Grand Rapids Democrat.

——The republicans could talk with a good deal more assurance of the beauties of protection if McKinley were not such an embarrassing fact.—Indianapolis News.

——A few republicans attribute the return of prosperity to the republican congress that hasn't met yet. No wonder the lunatic asylums are crowded.—Anderson (Ind.) Democrat.

——Now that Tom Reed has had an engine company in Kentucky named after him, it is time for Gen. Harrison and Maj. McKinley to do something noticeable quick.—Boston Globe.

——Mr. Harrison wishes it distinctly understood that while he is not and will not be a candidate for the presidency, he must not be understood as recommending either Mr. McKinley or Brer Reed.—N. Y. Journal.

——With the new tariff law producing sufficient revenue, it looks as if the next republican congress will not be troubled with the question that seemed to worry Senator Sherman the other day about the relief of the United States treasury.—Utica (N. Y.) Observer.

——The south is in clover. Cotton and tobacco are bringing higher prices than for years. Correspondingly the demand for free coinage is abating. It will get so low after awhile that Tom Reed and Napoleon McKinley may be able to muster courage to tell how they stand.—Pittsburgh Post.

——The republican national committee is shy forty thousand dollars and will locate the convention in the city that subscribes the amount. That scheme failing, possibly Andrew Carnegie or some other manufacturer who has made millions out of the protection policy of the republican party and is planning to make more in the event of the return of McKinleyism might be induced to put it up.—Kansas City Star.

THE * CHRONICLE.

C. C. DuBOSE, Editor and Proprietor.

COLUMBIANA, OCT. 24, 1895.

"OLD CLEVELAND."

"Old Cleveland" was the cause of five cent cotton, but we hear no one of the accusers giving him credit for the rapid advance in the price of cotton. "Old Cleveland" brought on all the bad things but has no credit for any of the good things, yet they come along side by side during the same "Old Cleveland" administration.

"Consistency is indeed a jewel." We hear prattling babies complaining of the discipline of their old fogy parents which reminds us of our "Old Cleveland" howlers who know no more of national finance and bond issues and real need of our government than infant children know about the government of a family.

The people have been clamoring for a fifty-cent dollar as a matter of right and honesty, while cotton sold for 5c to pay debts contracted under 10c cotton. Now let us see how many are honest and sincere in making such demand. This spring debts are contracted under 5c cotton and we are hoping this fall to get ten cents for cotton. Who is willing to pay $2 for one dollar of debt contracted this spring? Let us emphasize who. Again it is and has been for several years a general understanding in the country to report short cotton crops to advance the price of cotton, and this year because of a real shortage of about three million bales, we are expecting to reap the benefit of a good price. Yet the very people who expect to be benefitted by the short supply of cotton deny that supply and demand have anything to do with the price of cotton, wheat, iron, silver or any other article, and attribute all short prices to manipulation and "Old Cleveland."—Alexander City Outlook.

THE mischievous effect of having the government mixed up in banking and compelled not only to furnish all the currency for domestic use, but to furnish all the gold that may be required for foreign payments, has had a striking illustration in the last few days. The financial world has been kept in a state of uneasiness by the rise in the price of cotton. Normally this would be inspiriting to business, giving added value to one of our most important crops. But it checks the exportation of cotton, which was counted on to balance exchanges with Liverpool and London, and bankers were afraid that they would have to export gold, which, of course, they would draw from the United States treasury. Thus what should be a commercial advantage becomes a cause of distrust, through the operation of our preposterous currency system.

GOVERNOR ALTGELD, of Illinois, will certainly hold the belt as the champion executive of the country in the matter of pardons. His latest example is the pardon of 112 girls committed for various offenses to the Evanston Industrial School. The details of this wholesale jail delivery are somewhat meagre, but the pardons seem to have been granted as the result of an investigation into the management of the institution. If there has been mismanagement and the officials are convicted the kind-hearted Governor will probably pardon them too, as he appears to proceed upon the theory that everybody should be pardoned except those who behave themselves and obey the laws.

THE efforts of Mr. Harrison's friends to acquit him of complicity in the McKinley tariff indicate a realizing sense upon their part of the enormity of that monumental blunder. It is quite safe to say, in view of the present tendencies of trade, that no party will dare to advocate a return to McKinleyism. The attempt to make the tariff again a campaign issue has signally failed and the anxiety of the more level-headed partisans to drop the subject is simply a recognition of evident truth.

There is no medicine so often needed in every home and so admirably adapted to the purposes for which it is intended, as Chamberlain's Pain Balm. Hardly a week passes but some member of the family has need of it. A toothache or headache may be cured by it. A touch of rheumatism or neuralgia quieted. The severe pain of a burn or scald promptly relieved and the sore healed in much less time than when medicine has to be sent for. A sprain may be promptly treated before inflammation sets in, which insures a cure in about one-third of the time otherwise required. Cuts and bruises should receive immediate treatment before the parts become swollen, which can only be done when Pain Balm is kept at hand. A sore throat may be cured before it becomes serious. A troublesome corn may be removed by applying it twice a day for a week or two. A lame back may be cured and several days of valuable time saved or a pain in the side or chest relieved without paying a doctor bill. Procure a 50 cent bottle at once and you will never regret it. WHY LATIN IS USED.

From the New York Herald.

"I don't see," said the man who was leaning against the drug store counter, "why a doctor can't write his prescriptions in English, instead of Latin. Suppose I need some whiskey on one of these Roosevelt Sundays. Suppose my system absolutely requires whiskey; that my health and future usefulness to society depend upon it. Well, I go to my doctor and get a prescription. It calls for spiritus frumenti. Now, that ain't what I want. I want whiskey. Why can't he come out flatfooted and say so? But I suppose he thinks that would be giving the game away. I suppose he would rather I'd take his wisdom with a grain of chloride of sodium than with a grain of salt. Isn't that it?"

The druggist smiled and said: "You've got the same idea most people have. You think, I suppose, that the doctor writes his prescription in Latin so it can't be read so easily—so the layman can't steal his trade and learn what he is giving him. But that's all wrong. In the first place, Latin is a more exact and concise language than English, and, being a dead language, does not change, as all living languages do.

"Then, again, since a very large part of all the drugs in use are botanical, they have in the pharmacopoeia the same names that they have in botany—the scientific names. Two-thirds of such drugs haven't any English names, and so couldn't be written in English.

"But suppose a doctor did write a prescription in English for an uneducated patient. The patient reads it, thinks he remembers it and so tries to get it filled from memory the second time. Suppose, for instance, it called for iodide of potassium and he got it confused with cyanide of potassium. He could safely take ten grains of the first but one grain of the second would kill him as dead as a mackerel. That's an exaggerated case, but it will serve for an illustration. Don't you see how the Latin is a protection and a safeguard to the patient? Prescriptions in Latin he can't read, and consequently does not try to remember.

"Now for a final reason. Latin is a language that is used by scientific men the world over, and no other language is. You can get a Latin prescription filled in any country on the face of the earth where there is a drug store. We had a prescription come in here the other day which we had put up originally, and which had since been stamped by druggists in London, Paris, Berlin, Constantinople, Cairo and Calcutta. What good would an English prescription be in St. Petersburg?"

"Got any good tooth powder?" asked the man leaning against the counter.

"I would rather trust that medicine than any doctor I know of," Says Mrs. Hattie Mason, of Chilton, Carter Co., Mo., in speaking of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. For sale by Parker & Armstrong.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve.

The best salve in the world for cuts, bruises, sores, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns, and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by Parker & Armstrong.

"Many of the citizens of Rainsville, Indiana, are never without a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house," says Jacob Brown, the leading merchant of the place. This Remedy has proven of so much value for colds and croup in children that few mothers who know its worth are willing to be without it. For sale by Parker & Armstrong.

The Discovery Saved His Life.

Mr. G. Cailloute, Druggist, Beaversville, Ill., says: "To Dr. Ring's New Discovery I owe my life. Was taken with La Grippe and tried all the physicians for miles about, but of no avail and was given up and told I could not live. Having Dr. King's New Discovery in my store I sent for a bottle and began its use and from the first dose began to get better, and after using three bottles was up and about again. It is worth its weight in gold. We won't keep store or house without it." Get a free trial at Parker & Armstrong's drug store.

ADMITTED

READ RULE XV.

"Articles that are in any way dangerous or offensive, also patent medicines, nostrums, and empirical preparations, whose ingredients are concealed, will not be admitted to the Exposition."

Why was Ayer's Sarsaparilla admitted? Because it is not a patent medicine, not a nostrum, nor a secret preparation, not dangerous, not an experiment, and because it is all that a family medicine should be.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS.

Miss Essie Mason has returned home from Athens.

E. B. Nelson, of British, is at home for several days.

Mrs. Anna Burt, of Courtland, Ala., is a guest of her father, Dr. W. S. DuBose.

Tommie H. Watersworth, of Burnsville, spent Saturday and Sunday in the city with friends.

Mrs. Emma Roper with Chester and Margurite Brown, spent Saturday and Sunday in Montevallo.

Miss Nannie Roberts, of Sylacauga, was a guest of her sister, Mrs. A. M. Elliott, Saturday and Sunday.

Mrs. M. A. Sparks and Mrs. A. H. Avery, of Shelby, were guests of friends Tuesday night in our city.

Mr. Chas. Sparks and Charlie Avery were up Tuesday evening to see the Stereopticon views at the Methodist church.

The many friends of Mrs. Hardy Nelson, Jr., will be glad to hear that she is very much better, and is in a fair way to recovery.

Jas. R. White has been quite sick with fever since his return from Montgomery last Saturday, but is now on the road to recovery.

Miss Agnes Averyt and her brother Earnest Averyt, of Shelby, spent Sunday afternoon with their friends, Misses Belle and Katie Huyett.

W. A. Thompson had a successful operation performed on his eyes last week in Atlanta, and returned home this week feeling quite relieved.

The Columbiana delegates desire to express their sincere thanks to the kind people of Shelby for their extreme kindness to them during the recent Sunday school convention.

E. D. Hall has rented the Spencer Hotel property, and on or about the first of November will open this hostelry to the public. Mr. Spencer will move his family into the residence now occupied by Mr. Hall.

Last week there were four applicants for the Probate Judgship, but Col. W. T. Smith has withdrawn from the race leaving only three. Will the governor have to withdraw two of those remaining?

Rev. Wm. Shaw, of Atlanta, was in town Tuesday and Wednesday. He is a genial, christian gentleman, and every one welcomes him to our town. His magic pictures, which he exhibited to a large audience at the M. E. church, were a great success and much enjoyed.

John Porter, of Blocton, came over last week and spent two days with his family, and started back to Blocton to resume his position, but was taken quite sick on his way over and was compelled to return here, where he is now quite ill with fever. In company with his many warm friends we earnestly hope for his early recovery.

Prof. F. W. Stookey, the king of the air, and having various other handles, was advertised to walk the tight rope here last Thursday. He stretched a large wire rope from the top of Milner's store over the street to the Elliott old store, and at 3 o'clock in the afternoon a large crowd having assembled to witness his wonderful feats, Prof. Stookey concluded to take one more tug at the rope and make it a little tighter, when it parted and came down with a crash, thus nipping his awe-inspiring feats in the bud. Such is life in large cities.

Shelby W. Nelson was attacked Tuesday morning by a negro, on his farm three miles west of this place, and was very seriously injured. The facts as we have been able to gather them are these: Mr. Nelson was at his sorghum mill superintending the work. Among the negroes working at the mill were two young darkies Walter Brown and Will Jefferson. Mr. Nelson reprimanded Walter Brown pretty sharply for leaivng the fence down somewhere on the farm and letting in a lot of cattle; while he was talking to Walter, Will Jefferson seized a billet of wood and made a savage lick with it stricking Mr. Nelson on the right side of the face and breaking his jaw-bone into two or three pieces. The wound is an ugly and very serious one. Dr. John Williams was called in to dress his wounds, and he is now resting comparatively easy. Both negroes were promptly arrested and placed in jail.

Shelby Siftings.

The marriage of Miss Lizzie Riddick, of Shelby, and Mr. Bremond Bristow took place at the residence of the bride's parents in this place Oct. 9, 1895. It was strictly a private affair none but the relatives were present to witness the ceremony. This plan was carried out on account of the recent death of a near relative. Otherwise the wedding would have been celebrated in the church where the host of friends of both parties would have been cordially invited. The parlor where the ceremony was performed was handsomely and artistically fitted up to enliven an occasion so important in the lives of the two young souls who were to cast their lots together. The scenic effects produced by the decorations with fresh and lovely flowers and the coterie of loved ones who had gathered to greet the young couple and bid them God speed on their journey through life was all that could be wished. The minister beautifully spoke the words that made them one and after he had finished, the bride and groom immediately prepared themselves for a journey to the Exposition at Atlanta. The concourse of guests gathered on the porch as they mounted into the conveyances and as they sped away for the depot old shoes of luck and good cheer were cast with a gusto. The presents were very many consisting mostly of costly silver ware and other articles of great practical value. Thus two hearts that beat as one have launched their bark upon life's stormy main.

Wilsonville Warblings.

Mrs. J. W. Bolin, Misses Lula and Blossom Densler, and Mary, Charles and John Bolin left our town Friday for the Exposition. Mr. Arnold says he is going too.

"Buck is you got any lemons?" They were very much in demand Monday but those that were demanding lemons received a yard stick instead.

Turnip greens is a rarity, much to the regret of we old folks.

Mr. Williamson lead the prayer meeting Sunday night. Boys we hope to see you all fall in line.

Otis Hendricks, of Fayetteville, is visiting our little town.

The young ladies down at Mr. Bolin's got quite a sweet and lengthy serenade Friday night and seemed to enjoy it very much.

Kissing has a bad effect on parties engaged in Wilsonville.

Miss Mary Bolin is expected to assist Prof. Hutchingson in teaching a school in Tallapoosa.

Three young ladies went to ride Sunday evening and stopped at Mr. Bolin's. I guess they forgot that Charles and John were gone.

On last Friday I saw a letter given out addressed "To the school girls" Wilsonville, Ala. care of Institute. The young people seemed greatly excited over it and I managed to get one peep at it and saw that it was post marked East Lake. I heard two little girls talking about it that day but I could not find out any thing, they are awful particular when we old folks are about but I heard one say, "Well I wonder what made him sign his name Mr. Slimboy?" That was all I wanted to know, but I did wonder who that letter was from.

"GRANDMA."

Saginaw Drop Shots.

Since our last communication many changes have taken place. Some homes have been made sad by the visitation of death.

The sick ones at present are convalescent.

The S. L. Co., is shipping 40,000 feet of lumber daily. Orders for lumber are like spring showers, every day.

Many extensive improvements are being made daily.

J. E. Morriss, of Birmingham, has removed to this place.

John Aldridge spent Sunday with home folks at Calera.

C. P. McLane transacted business in Birmingham Thursday.

Mr. McGibbon who has been attend- the Atlanta exposition has returned and reports having had a huge time.

W. L. Butler, of Montevallo, was in town Sunday dear hunting.

E. H. Wingate is the handsomest man in town but has little experience in turkey hunting. Has he Clay?

A large school house has been erected at this place.

Henry Wilson, of Longview, the adopted son of E. L. Fulton was in Saginaw Friday p. m. Come again Henry, Miss L— is always glad to see you.

Miss Ida O'Hara, of Columbiana will commence her school at Elliottsville, a surburb of Saginaw, Oct. 21st.

The great Angel of death has spread her broad wings over the home of Mr. Saterwhite, seizing and bear away his beloved child aged 10 months. May God console the bereaved family.

Go home little dear. There is not an angel added to the host of Heaven but does its blessed work on earth in those that loved it here.

WILL-FULL

Resolutions of Respect.

WHEREAS, It has pleased the all wise Father to take from our midst our beloved sister, Burdie Teague, and death, the "silent reaper" came in the still watch of the night and stole away another lovely flower, to be transplanted from earth to the beautiful Eden above, we pause to mingle our tears with the surviving aged father, with sisters and brothers, whose hearts are stricken with deepest sorrow at the loss of a loved one, whose presence was joy, and whose life of suffering and disinterested devotion to those around whom her best affections were entwined, made her the idol of her home, and of a loving circle of friends. We sorrow with them, but with them, are comforted with the assurance that she is now a welcome guest of ministering spirits long since freed from earthly care, in a brighter and better home, where sickness and sorrow never come, and where the weary are forever at rest.

RESOLVED, 1st, That while we mourn the loss of her beautiful christian life and example, the memory of them will linger with us, and inspire us all to higher attainments in christian life, and more earnest endeavor in the Master's cause.

RESOLVED, 2ND, That we will ever cherish her memory, and strive to emulate her example in the exercise of those christian graces which are the chief adornment of human character, and which will shine out as a beacon light to us in life's pilgrimage.

RESOLVED, 3RD, That we tender to the bereaved father, sisters and brothers, our sincere sympathy in their sad bereavement, and commend them to Him whom she loved and adored through all the suffering years of her life.

Oh, deem not they are blest alone,
Whose lives a peaceful tenor keep;
The Power who pities man hath shown
A blessing for the eyes that weep.

The light of smiles shall fill again
The lids that overflow with tears;
And weary hours of woe and pain,
Are promises of happier years.

There is a day of sunny rest,
For every dark, and troubled night;
And grief may bide an evening guest,
But joy shall come with early light.

For God has marked each sorrowing day,
And numbered every secret tear;
And heaven's long age of bliss shall pay
For all His children suffer here.

RESOLVED, 4TH, That this report be spread upon the minutes of our church book, and a copy be sent to the Alabama Baptist for publication.

Respectfully submitted,
J. L. PETERS,
MRS. LAURA ARMSTRONG,
MRS. J. G. PARKER.

WHAT ELECTRICITY IS DOING.

The Mining and Scientific Press thus sums up the uses to which electricity is applied. It enters into the preparation of what we eat, drink and wear, and there are many articles of utility now produced by its aid. The residents of many cities in the United States have their houses protected, lighted and heated by electricity. They go to their places of business in cars run by electricity, the elevator by which they reach their office in high buildings, or the machinery in their factory, is run by electricity. The bell which summons them to church is rung by electricity and the church organ is played by electricity. Electricity brings the news to them from all parts of the earth; stamps their letters, automatically sounds the alarm in case of fire, rings the door bell, cooks the food, and fans them while eating it. When they go to the dentist their teeth are drilled and filled by electricity, and miniature electric lamps are now constructed for the use of doctors in diagonizing diseases. The patient swallows a lighted lamp which illuminates his person so as to enable the physician to make a correct diagnosis. The barber cuts or singes the hair by means of electricity, the streets are lighted and the farm cultivated by it. By means of it we can talk with our friends 500 or 1,000 miles away and hear their voices as distinctly as though they were in the same room. The telephone is perhaps in more general use in this country than electric lighting. Even in small towns telephones form a part of the furniture of many private houses, and are used to transmit orders to the butcher, baker, etc. There are now some 85 electric railways in the United States and 9,000 miles of track employing 23,000 cars. With the aid of electricity natural forces which have heretofore run to waste are being turned to the service of mankind. The American river has already been made to furnish motor power by which Sacramento is lighted, and by which its street cars and factories are run, and new projects are in progress all over the state.

Cure for Headache.

As a remedy for all forms of headache Electric Bitters has proved to be the very best. It effects a permanent cure and the most dreaded habitual sick headache yields to its influence. We urge all who are afflicted to procure a bottle, and give this remedy a fair trial. In cases of habitual constipation Electric Bitters cures by giving the needed tone to the bowels, and few cases long resist the use of this medicine. Try it once. Large bottles only fifty cents at Parker & Armstrong's drug store.

A Book for Women.

To assist modest, afflicted women in the successful treatment of diseases peculiar to their sex, a book has been prepared under the direction of Rev. R. L. McElree, assisted by eminent physicians and specialists, entitled Home Treatment of Female Diseases.

The book is written in simple language, easily understood, and contains:

1st.—A description of the female organism.

2d.—Instructions for detecting the approach of the menstrual age, and for treatment during the monthly period, and to insure its regular return.

3rd.—A minute description of diseases affecting the genital, urinary and menstrual organs of women, giving their cause, symptoms and treatment.

A paper edition of this great book has been prepared, copies of which can be secured for six cents in postage. Write, Rev. R. L. McElree, St. Elmo, Tenn.

An Irish newspaper once said, in announcing an accident: "Our fellow townsman Mr. Hooligan fell out of the second-story window yesterday and broke his neck and suffered internal injuries. His friends will be glad to know that the latter are not serious."—Harper's Bazar.

A Big Regular Army.

The mightiest host of this sort is the army of invalids whose bowels, livers and stomachs have been regulated by Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. A regular habit of body is brought about through using the Bitters, not by violently agitating and griping the intestines, but by reinforcing their energy and causing a flow of the bile into its proper channel. Malaria, la grippe, dyspepsia, and a tendency to inactivity of the kidneys, are conquered by the Bitters.

Stirring Document From the Sage of Rocky Creek.

Dry Humor and Homely Philosophy Blended in the Quaintest Way—A Plea for Broader and Better Building. "But Dick Rose He Was a Fool."

(Copyright, 1895.)

The weather hit was "jest simply amphibious," as Handy Stribblin were wont to say—people that got up soon enough that mornin could see a light sprinkle of frost on the fodder stack—you mought go down in the woods and look around and see the hand paintin of the Indian summer among the trees, with all the colors you ever read of or heard tell about from poke berry red to yaller buff—the wind was comin out of the north, cool and stiff enough to be pleasant—and the sinkin sun had painted a royal bobtail flush on the western sky—when Dick Rose died.

"But Dick He Was a Fool."

Everybody in the whole entire settlement—and everything so far as I know, even to the little niggers and the dogs—loved Dick Rose. But Dick he was a fool. When the sad and solemcholy news leaked out that the last remainin member of the old Rose family had let loose the vain and fleetin things of this world and stumbled over the last final ditch there was weopin on the hilltops and wailin in the low grounds. But yet still at the same time Dick he was a fool. He didn't mean no particlar harm by that, and he couldn't help it. He was jest naturally born without any brains to speak of, but you raley couldn't blame him for that. The good Lord made Dick Rose the same as me and you, and if He give us a small smatterin of brains and left Dick out of the game at that pint, there ain't nobody to blame. It never was give unto one man like Dick to whirl in and change the general plans of creation, and the good Lord don't make no mistakes. So then, Dick Rose was a good man—as good and as white and brave and true as me and you.

But Dick he was the gonebyest fool in the settlement. He was built on a narrow foundation and scandlous short pegs. You could look at the man and tell that he never had eat no soup with Solomon, as it were. If the good Lord, in His boundless grace and mercy, had give Dick Rose a hamper basket full of brains the poor man wouldn't of had no place to tote 'em. His head was but scarcely bigger than my fist. You have took notice by now I reckon that a man most in generally always must tote his brains in his hat, and if his hat is too little bless gracious he can't tote 'em in his pocket.

And consequentially, Dick Rose he was a fool. Everybody loved him in spite of that, whereas some people would laugh and poke fun at him because he didn't have as many brains as the law allows. Naturally of course when they wanted to smite him under the fifth rib, so to say, they smote when he want lookin. For why? Well, whilst Dick Rose was a tremendius big fool he never was a coward. He would fight the devil in the big road with an army of banners, you understand. He didn't have a lick of sense in a case like that. And as for me, when I have got anything to say in regards to one of my friends and fellow-citizens I will say it to his face, or forever henceforwards wear a padlock on my lips. I wouldn't say a word about Dick Rose since he is dead and gone that I haven't said to his face whilst he was still perusin around in the land of the livin. He was a good man, a brave man and a white man through and through, but he was dead sot in his ways and the blamdest fool--and more different sorts of a fool—that ever lived his day out anywheres in forty miles of Rocky Creek.

"Different Sorts of a Fool."

In politics and religion, in love and courtin—and in all the relationments of life—Dick Rose he was a fool. He was a Baptist, "tooth and toe nail," as Aunt Nancy Newton would put it in her flint-and-steel way, and he hated the very ground that a Methodist walked on. He didn't blow in no precious time nor waste any love to speak of on anything but a Baptist. To hear him tell it everything else was vanity and vexation. But he jest naturally couldn't stand the name of a Methodist. He never was known to darken the door of a Methodist church, and if his own people got the Methodist circuit rider to come by and give them a sermont on an off Sunday, Dick he remained at home or stayed away.

No doubts the nastiest and most bloodiest fight that ever come to pass in all these regions was between Dick Rose and a red-headed Methodist preacher by the name of Parson Pepperment. They met up together one mornin over in the Stribblin lane, and after argifyin considerable touchin the great question of religion they dismounted and got down and went at it. So there they fit and fought, and fought and fit till there was blood and hair and the ground tore up as from a bear fight. Dick he never would give out the facts as to who brung on the fight, or who got the worst of it, and neither would the preacher. But it stood to reason with everybody that they had went through a red hot, rough and tumble religious discussion right there in the big road. And from their general appearments for three weeks after that I reckon one must of got tired and quit and the other was monstrous glad of it. Parson Pepperment was a Methodist preacher with a red hed and a freckly face. To be certainly he would fight.

And as I said before, Dick Rose he was a fool. He missed the best and about the onlyest chance he ever had of marryin himself off to a good woman because he was a fool. In his young days Dick fell heels over appetite in love with Miss Callie Green, which she was a good, smart, stirrin woman. But she had been borned and brung up in the Methodist Church and she was a Methodist all the way. She would go to all the big Methodist meetins. Sometimes she got happy and sometimes she shouted. She thought a power of Dick, and she was plum willin to mix clothes with him, you understand, and change her name to Rose. But she wouldn't quit the Methodist Church and call herself a Baptist. So finally at last when the time come, and the weddin supper was on the table, and the preacher was there, the bridegroom which they looked for never came. Dick had took out at the eleventh hour and quit. And that's what makes me say Dick Rose he was a fool.

Even in Politics.

Now in regards to the great game of American politics, me and Dick Rose we never could work and pull together in double harness. He went one way and me the other. And consequentially it would come to pass right frequent—particlar along in election times—that he would fly up and get foamin mad with me. I always maintained that I was on the right side, yet at the same time I could see how the other fellow mought maybe come around right oncst in a while. But Dick he always stuck to it that he was dead right, and the other fellow was bound to be dead wrong. Accordin to my doxology there is somethin bad the matter with a man when religion will make him cry and politics makes him mad.

So there you are. Dick Rose he was a fool. I recollect the same as if it was yesterday, the last time me and Dick got mixed up together in a political confabulation. He got furious mad and wanted to fight, but I held him off and talked to him—talked to him like he was folks.

"It would be a whole lot better, Dick—better for me and you, better for the settlement and better for the country—if we could always pull together in politics," says I. "Honest to God, I wish it was so we could. I am willin to split the difference with you and meet you half way, if you will only but say the word. But if you are so dead sot in your way till you can't turn to the right hand nor to the left, we have now come up to the forks of the road touchin the question of politics. You must go your way whilst I go mine, for thus it was written down. But we must try and remember, Dick, that we are both grown and free and white. By-and-by I hope and trust that we will come together onest more at the Cross Roads. In the maintime, Dick, if you need a neighbor and a friend don't forget the road that leads to my house. And in case of a pinch I would ruther call on you than any man in the settlement exceptin Blev Scroggins and Andy Lucas. For I know good and well, Dick, that if the time ever comes when men should hold the good name and honor and glory of their country and their people higher than anybody's politics, we will strike hands and touch elbows and both be in the fight."

I didn't give that little song and dance to Dick in orderment to rub the hair down smooth the right way. I didn't have to do that. But even if Dick Rose was a fool, I brought him to his senses that day. There was a whole tremendius big lot of good in that man, but it seems to me as if he was cut and made for one particlar place. He was the best and most handyest man I ever saw in a bad case of sickness. If I was flat of my back today, with a long and terrible spell of sickness ahead, and Dick Rose could come forth oncst more in the flesh, I would ruther have him with me than any man in the world. Yes, by gracious, I would ruther have him than anybody in the world exceptin Mother and Aunt Nancy Newton.

I remember oncst upon a time when old man Bunk Weatherford took down sick abed with the slow fever and everybody thought it was the last rattle out of the box for him. Now old man Bunk was a shoutin Methodist and a snortin Democrat, whereas Dick Rose thought he was the meanest man in the whole discovered world. But when the news went out that the old man was sick abed, and maybe sick unto death, it want more than two hours before Dick rid up and turned his mule in the lot. Then he took his place by old man Bunk's bed, and there he stuck and stayed, by day and by night, for three weeks. He could tell better than half of the doctors what to do, and he knowed better than anybody else how to do it. Soon as ever old man Bunk passed over the danger line Dick got on his mule and went back home. Mind you, now, he hadn't spoke to old man Bunk before in two years, and I don't know for certain that he ever spoke to him after that. But at any rates, in his place, and in his own blame fool way, Dick Rose was a good and useful man.

"Finally, Brethren and Friends."

Dick Rose is dead and gone now, and I reckon he is happy, if in case he didn't meet up with no shootin Methodists over there on the other side.

But whilst Dick was a fool he want the onlyest fool in this wide and wicked world. God Almighty made him, as we found him. And if the good Lord give me and you a little bit more brains than He give Dick Rose and some other people we ought to give thanks and blame nobody. If we have got the foundation to stand on and the materials to work with hit raley seems to me like we ought to build up higher and broader and bigger and better every day and every hour as we go on down into the valley of dry bones.

THE GUARD'S STORY.

From the State Journal, Lincoln, Neb.

There is probably not a stronger man or more trustworthy guard employed at the Nebraska State Penitentiary than J. T. Ralston. To a stranger he appears a very good example of the man who boasts that he never was sick a day in his life.

For many years Mr. Ralston lived at Syracuse, Nebraska, and the old residents there remember him as one of the strongest and healthiest of their number.

In '89 or thereabouts, when the "grip" first broke forth in this section of the country, it claimed him as one of its earliest victims. Like most men with a strong physique, he sneered at the disease and did not guard properly against it. For days he lay in bed and left it only as a confirmed invalid.

About this time he moved with his family to Peru, Nebraska, where some of his children were attending the State Normal School. He hoped the change would do him good, but he was disappointed. He doctored with the local physicians, and even with his own son who was practicing medicine. All seemed to no avail, and, miserable in mind and body, the poor man told his family that he feared there was no hope for him.

A happy thought of his own led him to try strong stimulants. He was again able to work. But he soon found that his relief was but temporary, and when bad weather came on he was subject to severe attacks of the "grip" as before.

Two years ago Mr. Ralston was employed at the Nebraska State Penitentiary at Lincoln, the state capital, and enjoyed comparative ease while performing the duties of usher. Last fall, however, he was put out on the wall, and with his change of work came his old trouble in even more aggravated form. He was not only troubled with the usual miserable feelings of the "grip," but he found himself short of breath and generally weak, these things unfitting him for the duties of his position.

Once more, almost in despair, he sought a cure, and purchased a box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. He used them according to directions and felt better. Five more boxes followed the first and the ong sufferer was a well man.

Said he to a Journal reporter, to whom he had just given the above facts: "I feel now as though I could stack more hay than any man in Nebraska, and if I needed a position now I would hunt one on a harvest field. Why, only last Sunday night I took a severe cold, which a year ago would have laid me up with the 'grip,' but now it causes me only temporary annoyance, and I simply live it off."

Mr. Ralston has been long and favorably known in many parts of Nebraska both as a private citizen and as a leader in the original Farmers' Alliance movement, and hosts of friends rejoice with him in his remarkable recovery, for which he unhesitatingly gives the credit to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. Pink Pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent post paid on receipt of price 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50—(they are never sold in bulk or by the 100) by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

WHAT THE NEW WOMAN READS.

Does the "new woman" read a different class of books from her predecessor, the old-fashioned woman?

This is a query I gave some librarians to answer, and learned in return that the new woman does. "I don't mean to say," one replied, "that every woman who comes in to get a book eschews the romantic and new, but the surprising fact is that so many actually asked for the deepest works on political subjects. My assistant and myself were at first amused: now we regard it as a significant movement."

The change began, I gathered from a consensus of reports, about three years ago; since then it has rapidly broadened and deepened. All works on sociology and political science are called for as eagerly by one sex as the other. The favorites seem to be Prof. Ely's series on political science. All governmental questions are carefully studied, and anything that relates to the tariff is popular.

"To my mind," said an aged keeper of books, "the American woman, as she is represented in New York by her reading, is developing in a political way marvelously; not that it will have any effect in helping them to obtain suffrage, but such knowledge will make them powers behind the throne."

Take the French woman of De Stael's era and the English woman of to-day—they are amazingly learned in local political meanings. I do not consider that this reading is an evidence of the "new woman," but rather that the Americans do not wish to be behind women of other countries in their ability to compete intellectually with men on national subjects.

"Yes," said another librarian, "there is no use denying that women are calling for heavy political works more every day, but," he thoughtfully added, "it has long been a question with me as to their reading them; I think, possibly, the husbands had sent for them."—Chicago Tribune.

THE ANT-LION LIES LOW.

But as Soon as an Ant Falls Into His Trap He Is Much in Evidence.

A curious and most interesting insect is the ant-lion, which may be found just at present in almost any sandy place frequented by the unwary ant. These creatures delve out a perfectly conical hole, often an inch deep. The sides are made of the finest and driest sand or earth, and the digging is all done by the insect going around in perfect, but always lessening circles, throwing the sand aside with vigorous flicks of the tail. The excavated sand is carefully leveled all around the mouth of the hole, and then the ant-lion takes his post at the bottom and waits for his prey.

It is not long before some ant, rushing to and fro in search of food, goes tumbling down the side of the pit. The ant at once realizes its danger and tries to clamber out, but the foothold is treacherous, and the ant-lion begins a perfect cannonade by flicking fine sand at the ant each time it tries to climb up the side. At last the ant, thoroughly exhausted, falls back to the bottom of the pit, and the ant-lion seizes it with his powerful mandibles, and there is one ant less in the world.

The ant-lion seldom grows to be more than a quarter of an inch in length, and is exactly the color of the ground in which he lives. When grown to maturity he weaves a round cocoon about twice the size of a pea, and hatches out in a long-bodied fly, with four gauzy wings not unlike a small dragon-fly. As a fly he is a fierce enemy of lice and blight, and, take him all in all, the ant-lion is a useful little fellow.—N. Y. Tribune.

Where He Failed.

"How has Bluffton been doing?" asked the man who had been away from his native community for some time.

"Well, he has made a great deal of money"——

"Getting along well, is he?"

"Well, he seemed to get along first rate till he tried pass some of it."

PERSONAL AND IMPERSONAL.

—Christopher Columbus, a direct descendant of the great Genoese navigator, is in Cuba, fighting for Spain. He is a sub-lieutenant of the Second battalion, Peninsular, troops of the line, and a nephew of the duke of Veragua. He has a good military record, and says he hopes to become a captain before the revolution ends.

—W. S. Stratton, the Indiana carpenter who went to Cripple Creek and is now fast becoming a millionaire, was at one time after he reached there in the greatest destitution and is said to have offered Senator Walcott a half interest in his mine for three hundred dollars. Stratton is as plain and democratic a man as he was before he "struck it rich."

—"To the last," says London Figaro, "the duke of Cambridge clung to the idea that he would be continued in his office by the new government, and it is understood that when he received the news at Homburg of his definite supersession by Lord Wolseley he was deeply chagrined. His friends do not hesitate to say his enforced retirement will hasten his end."

—Prof. Heim, a Swiss savant at the Alpine club in Zurich, declares that one of "the most convenient, elegant and agreeable" of all manners of death is that which follows a fall from some Alpine height. There is neither physical nor moral suffering, in Prof. Heim's opinion, in being hurled through space; only a "delicious fine taste of the celestial beatitudes."

—One of the notorieties of Paris is Inquet, who was official coachman of Napoleon III. during all his imperial career. After the latter's downfall Linquet became driver of the hearse for the great burial company of Paris. He recently officiated in that capacity for President Carnot, and had previously presided at the funerals of Thiers, Victor Hugo and Gambetta.

—Lord Verulam, who died recently at eighty-six, was the last survivor of the first Winchester and Harrow elevens, which met in 1825, seventy years to a day before the earl's death. The Winchester captain was Christopher Wordsworth, afterward bishop of Lincoln; the captain of Harrow was Charles Wordsworth, later bishop of St. Andrews, and on his eleven was Cardinal Manning, who was caught out by the bishop of Lincoln for a goose egg.

—The bicycle has not yet penetrated to Lincoln county, Wash., but when it does the maidens of that region will probably make some records that will cause some of the girls in the east who are publicly priding themselves on their stamina and vigor to sing more softly of their achievements. One girl living at a remote settlement there wanted badly to attend the Fourth of July ball, held at the town of Newport, forty-six miles away, but could not be spared for more than the one day. This was all she wanted, however, and she rode on horseback the forty-six miles to the ball on the afternoon of the Fourth, danced all through the night, and left the ball room only to remount her horse and ride back the forty-six miles home, arriving there in good season on the 5th.

The question of the expediency of disbanding the militia company was being agitated one town-meeting day in a certain hamlet not a thousand miles from Boston. The tavernkeeper, a most pompous individual, who had courteously preserved silence during several noisy harangues, threw a final terrible bomb into the camp of the iconoclasts by the solemn interrogatory, delivered in his most impressive manner, "Gentlemen, let me ask you this: What could we do without the militia in case of a resurrection?"—Harper's Magazine.

Sarsaparilla Sense.

Any sarsaparilla is sarsaparilla. True. So any tea is tea. So any flour is flour. But grades differ. You want the best. It's so with sarsaparilla. There are grades. You want the best. If you understood sarsaparilla as well as you do tea and flour it would be easy to determine. But you don't. How should you?

When you are going to buy a commodity whose value you don't know, you pick out an old established house to trade with, and trust their experience and reputation. Do so when buying sarsaparilla.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla has been on the market fifty years. Your grandfather used Ayer's. It is a reputable medicine. There are many sarsaparillas. But only one Ayer's. IT CURES.

CURRENT COMMENT.

THE recent earthquake shocks in the United States were felt in at least eighteen states.

THE City of Marysville, Wash., hitherto unknown to fame, will levy no taxes next year, as its surplus and receipts from licenses will meet all expenses.

THE president and secretary of war have changed the name of Sandy Hook to Fort Hancock, in honor of the late Gen. Hancock. The action was taken on the recommendation of Gen. Miles.

THE Orange Judd Farmer's latest estimate places the acreage sown to fall wheat at about 26,000,000. The total corn yield is placed at 2,272,000,000 bushels and the potato crop at 290,000,000 bushels.

Two men were to start at Green Bay, Wis., November 1, and roll two kegs of beer to St. Louis. The race is the result of an argument, and the winner will be the man who reaches his destination first.

THE conclusion has been reached at Fresno, Cal., from data recently gathered, that the orange crop will be comparatively short in comparison with last year's output. The shortage is variously estimated at from 250 to 1,000 cars.

ACCORDING to statistics compiled by the Railroad Gazette there were in September 108 accidents, in which 38 persons were killed and 179 injured. Fifty accidents were caused by collisions, 54 by derailment and 4 were due to other causes.

FOR thirty days members of the trades unions connected with the federated metal trades throughout the United States will vote on a proposition to make a united demand on employers on May 1, 1896, that eight hours shall constitute a day's work.

A. BIENKOWSKI, a newsboy, recently left San Francisco to tour the world. He has a phonograph which sings a collection of songs in forty different languages. The boy intends to travel through all the countries of the world and will gather from each a sample of its music.

MR. HAMLIN, the assistant secretary of the treasury, in a recent speech, urged the redemption and cancellation of outstanding greenbacks and treasury notes by issuing bonds payable in gold not to exceed $300,000,000, the balance needed, not over $50,000,000, to be raised by taxation.

THE Seventh Day Adventists in Michigan, the chief center of the sect, are proposing to discard the present names of the days of the week, because of their heathen origin. They will designate them by numbers, as is done in the Bible, except that they will, of course, call Saturday the Sabbath.

DR. LINDE, the inventor of the refrigerating system bearing his name, has devised an apparatus hardly more complicated than a refrigerating machine, whereby liquid air can be produced on a commercial scale. The process is still in its infancy, and its commercial value has still to be determined, but it is worth nothing as a brilliant discovery.

A RECENT dispatch from Washington said that as a result of the examinations of enlisted and non-commissioned army officers who were presented for promotion to the commissioned grades out of twenty-one candidates fourteen were found fit for promotion. As there are only two vacancies in the lieutenancies at present, all below No. 2 in the examination must wait for commissions.

REPRESENTATIVE LITTLE, of the Fort Smith congressional district, stated recently that 257 murders had been committed in the Indian territory since the 4th of last March and that thirty men had been sentenced to death for crimes since the last congress adjourned. Things were getting worse in that country every day, he said, and the time was here when there should be a breaking up of the murderous gangs that infested that country.

TESTS of the audible block signal, were made recently which proved the apparatus to be superior to anything yet invented for preventing collisions, derailments by open switches or from broken rails. It was shown that the system will ring a bell and give timely alarm to the engineer of a moving train when approaching a standing or moving car or locomotive on the same track, and of an occupied grade crossing, an open switch or drawbridge or a car projecting from a side track over the main track.

A RECENT cablegram to the Boston Herald said that Queen Victoria was passing again through one of those phases of semi-insanity which recalls that she is George III.'s granddaughter. The attack seems to have had its origin in the death of a young nephew of John Brown, who had some obscure post about Balmoral, but for whom the queen burst forth in a vehement mourning which took all by surprise. Since then she has been going to his grave and to Brown's in all weathers, and doing other extraordinary things, which it was impossible any longer to ignore.

IT HAS PETERED OUT.

The Championship Battle, So Far as Arkansas is Concerned,

IS MORIBUND BEYOND RESURRECTION.

The Cases Against the Pugilists Dismissed on Condition That They Leave the State—The Result of a Mutual Understanding.

The Fight Will Not Take Place in Arkansas.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Nov. 2.—The championship fight is already what Senator Ingalls would style a "putrid reminescence."

It was considerably after 9:30 o'clock, the hour set for the hearing of the Fitzsimmons case, when Judge Martin ascended the bench in the court-room. The usual crowd was in attendance, and the prisoners had to force their way through a mass of humanity in the corridors in order to reach the court-room.

Assistant Attorney-General Hemingway was the first to ask the attention of the court. He said that after a consultation with the attorneys for the defense he would ask for a postponement until 2 o'clock. He was confident, he said, that by that time an arrangement would be completed which would obviate the necessity for further litigation.

Judge Martin replied that he disliked to postpone the case further, but if there was a good prospect of an arrangement he would consent. The case then went over.

This, of course, settles the matter, as it is pretty sure evidence that the governor or his representatives have made arrangements by which Fitzsimmons and Julian will be set at liberty on condition of their leaving the state. It is believed that a similar course will be pursued toward Corbett and Brady, unless Chancellor Martin proves obstinate.

The announcement by the attorney-general was not altogether unexpected, but it was not thought that the truce would be patched up so soon. The general impression was that the governor meant to keep the pugilists on tenter hooks for three or four days before allowing them to get away. The above developments have put everyone in good humor, however. The prize-fighting contingent will be only too glad to get out of Arkansas, and the people of the state will be glad to see the last of them.

Seeking the Easiest Way Out.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Nov. 2.—At 10:25 a. m. a conference was begun in Gov. Clarke's office at which Brady, Julian, Attorney-General Kinsworthy and Col. Murphy, representing the pugilists, were present. It was held behind closed doors, and the members of the press were excluded. Before going into the conference Attorney-General Kinsworthy said to the United Press representative: "I can not, of course, speak positively, but I think you may safely say that all the trouble will be over and the pugilists will be out of town within twenty-four hours. Everything will have to be done in accordance with legal forms, of course, and hence there is a possibility of delay, but I do not believe there will be any."

Col. Murphy assented to the general's statement. "We are convinced," said he, "that there is no hope of securing the liberty of these men within a reasonable time through a legal struggle, and the prospect of a fight is almost nothing. Therefore we shall take the easiest way out of the mess. The men will leave the state and the authorities will let the legal proceedings drop. That will be the end of the matter."

Gen. George P. Taylor, commander of the state militia, is the authority for the statement that Gov. Clarke will use his influence to stop the proceedings against the pugilists. The governor says he has no desire to see the men persecuted, and if they will get out of the state he will be glad to see them go, so that he can devote his energies to certain residents and officials of Hot Springs, with whom he is not yet done by any means.

Hot Springs Nearly Deserted Again.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., Nov. 2.—Of the hundreds of visitors that had been attracted here by expectations of the championship fight less than a score remain, and these, like Parson Davies, John L. Sullivan and Paddy Ryan, are merely resting up for a day or two before returning to the north. Before leaving Dan Stuart presented the gloves which were to have been worn by Corbett and Fitzsimmons to Val Hoffman, the Chicago brewer, in recognition of the latter's liberality in offering a $5,000 purse for the men to fight for in private.

The Cases Dismissed and the Pugs Free to Leave.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Nov. 2.—At noon Assistant Attorney-General Hemingway appeared in the circuit court and stated that the state had received assurance that the defendants, Fitzsimmons and Julian, would abstain from any unlawful undertaking in the state. They also agreed to leave the state.

Upon that assurance the state was willing to dismiss the peace warrant cases with the understanding that if the defendants violated their pledge the case should be reinstituted.

Mr. South for the governor stated that this was satisfactory.

The court said that the desired order would be entered, and the cases were accordingly dismissed.

Neither Fitzsimmons nor Julian was present. The attorney-general then proceeded to Chancellor Martin's court, where a similar motion was made and granted as to Corbett and Brady. This leaves the pugilists free from legal restrictions, except as to the injunction issued Friday, which still holds good, and will be used should there be any attempt to pull off a fight.

Corbett and Brady will probably leave for New York. Julian and Fitzsimmons have not yet fixed their plans. Julian thought they might go to Memphis.

THE STATE OF TRADE

As Indicated by Bradstreet's Weekly Review.

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—Bradstreet's, in its weekly review, says:

The volume of general business has been smaller this week, due, in part, to drought, although the widespread rains during the latter portion of the week have gone far to break the dry spell. West and northwest the commercial demand has been mainly for staples, but with a falling off in volume. Extremes are found at Cincinnati, where business has been dull, and at Kansas City, where it is up to the average at this time, with heavy mail orders. Distributing centers at the northwest from Chicago to Omaha and Duluth to Sioux Falls report a reaction in demand, which is likely to await the arrival of winter weather. Large eastern business centers felt the effect of the falling off in demand at the west, notably Boston, Philadelphia and Pittsburgh. The situation at Buffalo, as at other lake ports, is better, owing to an active season on the lakes. No marked changes are reported from the Pacific coast. At San Francisco improvement in prices is shown in a few lines, notably wheat. At Seattle the volume of business last month was larger than in September. Trade in Tacoma is quiet, but imports during October were valued at nearly $5,000,000. Portland advices are that the large shipments are being made to China, Mexico and California, while sales at the east are heavier and prices higher. Exports of wheat (flour included as wheat) from both coasts of the United States and from Montreal aggregate 2,713,000 bushels this week, against 2,618,000 last week, 2,931,000 in the week one year ago, 2,860,000 two years ago and 3,714,000 in the like week three years ago.

Business failures throughout the United States number 299 for the week, and show a considerable increase over last week, as well as the like week a year ago, which were respectively 250 and 253, this week's gains being very generally distributed. The total number of mercantile failures reported from Canada this week is forty-eight. Last week the total was thirty-six, and in the week one year ago it was forty-six.

SATOLLI'S ELEVATION

Regarded with Pleasure by Archbishop Ireland.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Nov. 2.—When the attention of Archbishop Ireland was called to the fact that the red hat had been given to Mgr. Satolli, he was manifestly greatly pleased, and in the course of an interview, said:

"The elevation of Mgr. Satolli to the cardinalate is the crowning act in the establishment of the apostolic delegation in the United States, and at the same time a solemn recognition of his own personal merits. The apostolic delegation was an innovation in the government of the church in America. With the elevation of the delegate to the cardinalate will come, no doubt, an enlargement of authority. After exercising the new authority for awhile Mgr. Satolli will return to Rome, where the American church will continue to find in him a loyal friend and a fearless representative. American Catholics have reason to rejoice, and do rejoice, in the elevation of Mgr. Satolli to the cardinalate."

DURRANT FOUND GUILTY

On the First Ballot of the Murder of Blanche Lamont.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 2.—Theodore Durrant, assistant superintendent of Emmanuel Baptist Sunday-school, was convicted Friday evening of the murder of Blanche Lamont, for which he had been on trial since July 22 last. The jury was out twenty minutes, and arrived at the verdict on the first ballot. As there was no recommendation of mercy the punishment was fixed at death.

Durrant's Counsel Surprised at the Verdict.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 2.—In an interview Friday evening at Sausilito, Gen. Dickinson, one of Durrant's counsel, said that his clie was still a long way from the gallows.

"A new trial will be asked for, and the case, if necessary, will be appealed to the supreme court," said he. "We had expected the jury would disagree," he continued, "and were surprised at the verdict."

COMING AND GOING.

That's the Way the Separate Coach Law Catches Kentucky Railroads.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 2.—The Kentucky court of appeals has decided a case, giving a negro woman damages against the Louisville & Nashville Railroad Co., because a white man, in passing through the car, used blasphemous language. On the other hand, the federal court in Kentucky has awarded damages against the road in two cases to negroes because they were compelled to ride in a separate coach. The federal court holds the law unconstitutional, and the Kentucky court of appeals maintains such a law is necessary as a police regulation. Unless a compromise is reached, unscrupulous lawyers can cause all Kentucky railroads to be eaten up with damage judgments.

CONTRACTS AWARDED

For Building the Six New Composite Gunboats.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2. — Secretary Herbert has awarded the contracts for the six composite gunboats authorized by last congress. Two of the vessels, the twin screw, will be built by the Union iron works, San Francisco; one by Dialogue & Sons, of Camden, N. J.; one by Louis Nixon, the Crescent Shipbuilding Co., Elizabethport, N. J., and two by the Bath iron works, Bath, Me.

ARKANSAS TEA.

A Negro Grows Two Hundred Pounds on His Plantation.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Nov. 2.—Burrell Bond, a negro planter and ex-slave, farming in Crittenden county, Ark., has consigned 200 pounds of tea to a local wholesale grocery house.

The tea was grown on his farm. It is the first ever produced in Arkansas, and the first domestic product ever offered in this market.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—The "Daily News" announces that a Tyneside firm has just received a Japanese order to build three new battle-ships.

REV. JUDSON SMITH,

Secretary of the Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions,

TALKS ABOUT OUTRAGES IN ARMENIA.

The Armenian Revolutionists, Like the Nihilists of Russia, Are Continually Stirring Up Strife and Accomplishing No Good.

BOSTON, Nov. 2.—Rev. Judson Smith, secretary of the American board of commissioners for foreign missions, talked Friday night in regard to the reported attempt to burn the American college at Marsovan, Asia Minor. He said in substance:

"While I have no definite information in regard to the details, I doubt if the Turks themselves are responsible. Strange as it may seem, we have more to fear continually from Armenians than we have from the Mohammedans. The reason for this fact is found in the inimical feeling aroused among the members of the Armenian revolutionist society who have been expelled from the college at various times during several years past because we can not approve of their present course, and are consequently unwilling to be held in any way responsible for their unlawful measures or actions.

"American missionaries have always been loyal to the Turkish government and laws, and have avoided everything in any way calculated to indicate sympathy with Armenian revolutionary plots. Those revolutionists are like the Russian nihilists, and can not accomplish any good purpose. The whole aim of the Armenian revolutionists seems to be to keep up such a perpetual broil in the Turkish empire that eventually Europe will feel compelled to break up the power of the Turk. Whether Armenians commit crimes or are themselves the victims of Turkish outrages, is all the same to the revolutionists. Whoever is the victim, their game is still played. This sort of thing is abetted by Armenians in America and elsewhere, and it is a great pity they can not be all kept in their native land.

"This is not the first attempt to burn the institution. Threats have been made against the principal officials of the college for years, and about five years ago a new building connected with it was burned.

"We have always suspected the Armenian revolutionists of being guilty of that offense, but we never absolutely fixed it on any individual. There was evidence, however, of the presence of Turkish police officials, under such circumstances as to render it almost certain that they were at least indifferent spectators of the affair, and although very unwillingly, the Turkish government was brought by the United States to so regard the matter that they ultimately gave us our $2,000 toward a new building.

THE ST. LOUIS FLYER

On the Chicago & Alton Wrecked Near Braidwood, Ill.—Fireman House Killed.

BRAIDWOOD, Ill., Nov. 2.—The St. Louis Flyer on the Chicago & Alton road was wrecked near here early this morning. William House, the fireman, jumped when he saw the train would be wrecked and was crushed to death. The engineer also jumped, but was only slightly injured. The train ran through an open switch. An investigation is now being made as to how the switch came to be open at a time when it should have been closed. A full complement of passengers was on board, but none were hurt.

UNUSUAL ACTIVITY

At the Navy Yards and Orders Issued Regarded as Significant.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—Rear Admiral Bunce has been directed by the secretary of the navy to get the vessels of the Atlantic squadron in readiness to sail for the Caribbean sea as early as possible. Orders were issued to the commandants of the New York and Norfolk navy yards to hasten the repairs on the vessels which are to be included in the fleet. The unusual activity displayed by the navy department is regarded as very significant by those who are inclined to expect serious consequences as a result of the firm stand the administration has taken in the Venezuelan question.

GLOUCESTER FISHERMEN.

Their Losses Have Been Less Than Usual, and So Have Their Profits.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Nov. 2.—The statistics setting forth the losses of Gloucester fishing vessels sailors for the year ending November 1 show a large decrease as compared with those of last year. The fleet has not been as successful this year as it has at some other times, but the loss of vessels and men is below the average for the last twenty years. The figures show that eleven vessels with a total valuation of $70,000 have been lost, while ninety men have perished. Last year 137 men were lost.

THE HOLMES CASE.

If Acquitted at Philadelphia Will be Taken to Indianapolis.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 2.—Prof. Reuter Wiltsie said that if Holmes is not found guilty at Philadelphia, steps will at once be taken to bring him here for trial on the charge of murdering Howard Pitezel in the house at Irvington. The case against him here is considered strong.

Perry, the Train Robber, in an Asylum.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Nov. 2.—Oliver Curtis Perry, the train robber, who left Auburn prison Friday night, in charge of two keepers, has arrived at the Matteawan state hospital for the criminal insane.

Uncle of Mrs. Cleveland, Shoots Himself, Probably Fatally, at Chicago.

CHICAGO, Nov. 2.—John W. Cadman, an uncle of Mrs. Cleveland, wife of the president, attempted to commit suicide by shooting himself in the mouth with a revolver. He was removed to the hospital, where it is stated by the physicians that he can not recover. The scene of the shooting was in the office of J. O. Berry, No. 18 West Randolph street.

Mr. Cadman is a prominent citizen of Jackson, Mich. He was appointed Indian agent by President Cleveland. It is not known what caused him to commit suicide.

DYING OF RABIES.

A Grand Island (Neb.) Boy in the Face of a Horrible Death.

LINCOLN, Neb., Nov. 2.—Six weeks ago the 16-year-old son of A. Thorp, of Grand Island, was bitten by a dog supposed to be mad. He was taken to Wymore, near Lincoln, to have a madstone applied, but it would not adhere. The boy was thought to be out of danger. Friday he became ill at school, and was sent home. During the night he became violent, and now he is a raving maniac, frothing at the mouth and giving every evidence of rabies. There is no hope for his recovery.

NOT AT LAKE PORTS.

The President Upholds Secretary Herbert's Decision as to Gunboats.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—A few days ago Secretary Herbert decided that it would be a violation of treaty obligations to permit one of the new gunboats to be built upon the great lakes. Hon. Don. M. Dickinson appealed to the president for a reversal of Secretary Herbert's decision. The president has announced his approval of the position taken by the secretary of the navy, and the contract will not, therefore, be given to the Detroit Dry Dock Co., the lowest bidder.

Favor the Cubans.

COLON, Colombia, Nov. 2.—The Brazilians, according to a Rio de Janeiro dispatch, are determined to recognize Cuba. In Chili the democrats especially are using violent language in regard to Spain. A conflict between the democrats and the Spanish in Chili is imminent.

A CHILD OF LIBERTY

Newly Born on the Soil of the Dominion of Canada.

AN "INDEPENDENCE OF CANADA" CLUB

Organized at Windsor, Ont., for Essex County—The Platform on Which the New Political Party Proposes to Go Before the Country.

WINDSOR, Ont., Nov. 2.—The citizens of Windsor and Essex county who formed an "Independence of Canada" club a week ago are now a political party. They adopted a plan for Friday night, and will promulgate its principles throughout the dominion. The campaign will be started in Essex county, and the heads of the party believe that they can elect a candidate to parliament who will champion the issue of the independence Canada.

Friday night's meeting was largely attended and much enthusiasm was manifested. It gave promise that the new-born child of liberty had come to stay. Speeches were made showing the disadvantages under which Canada labors at the present time. The following platform was adopted:

"We are of the opinion that the Dominion of Canada has arrived at such a stage of growth and development as to be able to maintain herself as an independent nation, and that such a change would be willingly granted to us by the imperial parliament in case our parliament requested it; and that under such a change the best interests of Canada and the Canadian people would be subserved, therefore, we indorse and adopt the following platform:

"The political freedom and independence of Canada to be obtained in an amicable and constitutional manner.

"The establishment of a republican form of government with such a constitution as would be suitable to our requirements.

"Reduction in the cost of government and strict economy in the public expenditures.

"Constitutional guarantee of full religious liberty to all denominations.

"The adoption of such legislative measures as would be necessary to effectually put down monopolies and combines.

"A more just and equitable distribution of the burden of taxation.

"Public lands to be disposed of to adult settlers.

"Appointment of public officers and civil servants by reason of merit and not to satisfy political influence.

"The cultivation of friendly relations with other countries.

"All international disputes to be settled by arbitration.

"The extension of our trade and commerce by reciprocity treaties with such countries as may be desirable."

SAD SUICIDE.

Miss Lucy, Daughter of Col. Phelps, of Springfield, Mo., Took Prussic Acid.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Nov. 2.—Miss Lucy Phelps, daughter of Col. John E. Phelps, and granddaughter of the late Gov. Phelps, committed suicide at her home here Friday by taking prussic acid. The cause of the suicide is said to have been ill health, though many connect it with the marriage of George H. Teft, a prominent young business man, which is to occur November 7, when he will wed Miss Lulu Marion Sanford, of Kansas City.

Miss Phelps was the daughter of Col. John E. Phelps, being a granddaughter of Gov. John S. Phelps. She was about 25 years old, petite and beautiful. Her hair was dark, and her features expressive. She was fond of society, and was a favorite in all functions and entertainments.

THE RAM KATAHDIN

Stands Rejected by the Government Under the Terms of the Contract.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—The official speed of the Ammen ram Katahdin is 16.13 knots as reported to Secretary Herbert by the trial board, and the vessel stands rejected under her contract, bearing the distinction of being the first vessel of the new navy failing to reach contract requirements. Unless special provision is made by the next session of congress, the Bath iron works, of Maine, which built the hull and machinery, must rely on selling her to some foreign governmedt to recoup their expenditures, in which case a complication would arise, as $700,000 worth of armor belonging to the United States is fastened in place on the vessel, and is valueless for other purposes.

DOUBTLESS A MURDER.

Terrible Discovery Made by an Affianced Kentucky Girl.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Nov. 2.—The dead body of Doc Ellington, aged about 23, was found Friday afternoon by Miss Alma Crouch, a 17-year-old girl, to whom he was engaged to be married next week. The girl was walking through some high rag weeds in her father's orchard when she stumbled and fell over the body. The face was pierced with fully 100 bird shot, and the eyes destroyed. There was no weapon in the vicinity of the body, and there is no doubt but that murder had been committed.

A CORRECTION

In the Title of Hon. Thomas F. Bayard's Lecture to be Delivered in Edinburgh.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—It is announced that the title of the lecture which is to be delivered by Hon. Thomas F. Bayard, United States ambassador, before the Edinburgh Philosophical society is "Individual Freedom, the Germ of National Prosperity and Permanence," instead of "Individual Liberty, the Germ of National Prosperity and Permanence," as was given out last week.

MOTORCYCLE CONTEST

From Chicago to Waukegan, Ill., and Return—Three Starters.

CHICAGO, Nov. 2.—Only three vehicles started in the Times-Herald motorcycle contest for a special prize of $500 offered by Mr. Kohlsaat on account of the great race having been postponed till Thanksgiving day. H. Mueller and Co., Decatur, Ill.; Chas. E. Duryea, Springfield, Mass., and the Kane, Pennington Co., Racine, Wis., were the contestants. The start was made about 9 a. m. from the corner of Fifty-fifth street and Halstead street over a course extending to Waukegan and return, a distance of 100 miles. The prize of $500 will be divided equally between the competitors who go over the entire course, irrespective of the time occupied.

Weekly Bank Statement.

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—The weekly statement of the associated banks shows the following changes:

Reserve, increase	$ 904,700
Loans, decrease	1,801,000
Specie, increase	1,067,100
Legal tenders, decrease	350,100
Deposits, decrease	790,800

The banks now hold $17,914,400 in excess of the requirements of the 25-per-cent. rule.

Instructions to Hydrographic Officers.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—Commodore Sigsbee, chief of the hydrograph office, navy department, has instructed his officers stationed on the great lakes to take advantage of the low water to make observations of obstructions to navigation, so they can show on hydrographic office charts.

Awaiting an Heir.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—A local news agency circulates a dispatch from St. Petersburg saying that the accouchement of the czarina is now expected at any hour. Her physicians and the minister of state are in constant attendance awaiting the event.

BROWN CHEMICAL CO. BALTIMORE, MD.

THE * CHRONICLE.

C. C. DuBOSE, Editor and Proprietor.

COLUMBIANA, NOV. 7, 1895.

THE GIRLS' INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL.

As is generally known, this very important institution of learning has been permanently located in Montevallo, in this county. The wide-awake citizens of that place by persistent effort and great personal sacrifice have secured this prize. Their princely liberality and patriotic zeal has been amply rewarded by the acquisition of a school that is destined to be one of the most potent factors in the upbuilding of this immediate section.

We said the citizens of Montevallo had accomplished this by great personal sacrifice. They gave property valued at about $40,000, besides several thousand in cash. For a community of limited size and whose inhabitants are in moderate circumstances that is a handsome donation. In order to do this every person gave all they possibly could, and in this way the burden was made easier for all.

But now they are confronted with a new condition. At a recent meeting of the board of trustees of this school they concluded that it would be preferable to have Montevallo repair the institute donated and erect all the necessary buildings, in lieu of the coal lands offered by that place. This will impose an additional cash burden of $9,000, and having about exhausted their resources, they cannot meet this requirement without outside aid.

Now, while this school will benefit Montevallo directly, by adding to her population and increasing the trade of that place, it will also be a benefit to every section of this county, and we are exceedingly anxious that it be retained where it is. This can readily be done, and we feel confident that it will be done if every man in the county has to run his hand down in his pocket and give a dollar for that purpose. Our county pride should stimulate us to use every honorable means in our power to keep this school in Montevallo. It is not a question of location within the county, but it should be kept where it is at all hazards. Montevallo has done more than her share, and entirely unaided, but she has now imposed upon her a burden under which she is staggering, and we feel that it is the duty of the people of this county to uphold her. If once shown the immense advantage this school will be to the entire county, we know there would be no trouble to raise the requisite funds.

There is one point settled. We cannot afford to let this school be moved from this, the central county of the state, to some inaccessible town where we would be wholly cut off from its many advantages. We must help Montevallo build this school, and she in return will educate our daughters.

We would suggest that meetings be held in every town in the county during next week and prompt and vigorous steps be taken to help our sister town out of her difficulties. If this is done, it will inspire confidence. If not the school may be lost, and that would be a calamity the extent of which we may never fully realize. By all means let's help Montevallo, if we must do it by private subscription. We must not lose this prize that has already cost so much toil and sacrifice.

WHY is it that the free silver men in speaking of administration democrats, lay so much stress on the words "single gold standard?" Do they think that they can find an administration democrat in the land, with three grains of common sense, who wants only gold money in circulation? If so they are surely fit subjects for the lunatic asylum. We heard a free silver man say a few days ago that "Grover Cleveland and Carlisle wanted to retire silver and paper money entirely, and have no other money but gold." This is rather a strange assertion for democrats to make in the face of the Chicago platform, which says: "We hold to the use of both gold and silver as the standard money of the country, * * And we demand that all paper currency shall be kept at par with and redeemable in such coin. We insist on this policy as especially necessary for the protection of the farmers and laboring classes, the first and most defenseless victims of unstable money and a fluctuating currency." For a man to advocate no other kind of money but gold shows conclusively that he has let his prejudices run away with his better judgment; the assertion of the silver men that the president and administration democrats favor such a policy is so supremely ridiculous that it does not deserve even a passing notice.—Florence Gazette.

SEVERAL states held elections Tuesday, and the result is not pleasant to contemplate. The republicans carried New York state by 80,000 plurality, New Jersey by over 15,000, Maryland by 10,000, and claim Kentucky. Besides swinging these states over into the republican column, they increased their usual majorities in Massachusetts, Ohio, Iowa, and all other states where elections were held. The result in Maryland will be a republican senator in place of Gibson, and in Ohio Brice will be left out.

THE New York Financial Record, in a recent issue, said: "The business outlook in the South is very encouraging. It has been popular lately to bear southern railroad shares on account of the small crop of cotton, but high cotton yields a good profit. The South has comparatively a small debt, and all of its interests seem to be in a prosperous condition."

THE continued dry weather is holding the coal floats up north, as there is not enough water in the rivers to float them. Meanwhile the coal mines around Birmingham are reaping a harvest selling the sugar planters all the coal they want.

LADY MARY HAMILTON DOUGLAS, the richest young woman in England, will come into $1,000,000 a year when she reaches her 21st birthday.

DON'T freeze up, or burn up, but come to Alabama and grow up, remarks the Hartselle Enquirer.

A MAN who is not a complete master of his temper ought not to talk politics, says an exchange.

THE Alabama Baptist state convention will meet in Selma Wednesday, November 13.

THURSDAY, November 28, has been appointed Thanksgiving day by the president.

THE GROWING COLD PRODUCTION

One of the stock assertions of the free coinage advocates is that the gold production of the world does not keep pace with the world's needs; that it is largely absorbed in the manufacture of jewelry, restricting the amount available for coinage and tending to increase its value, and thus to increase the actual wealth of capitalists to the impoverishment of the masses. The trouble with this assertion is that it is not truthful.

The reports of the United States mint for the years 1893 and 1894 place the entire gold production of the world for 1893 at $157,000,000 and for 1894 at $180,000,000. Advance estimates for the current year indicate an increase of $20,000,000 over 1894, or a total of $200,000,000, making an aggregate gold production for the three years of $537,000,000. No one possessed of common sense believes that this vast sum has been consumed in the arts, or that the amount devoted to coinage purposes has failed to keep pace with expanding financial requirements.

The mere publication of these statistics should dispose of the idea of the necessity of free silver coinage because of a lack of gold for money purposes. The further fact that the United States produced $46,000,000 of gold for 1895, leading all other countries except South Africa, demonstrates the absolute folly of the proposition that this country shall abandon the gold standard, and reduce its financial standard to that of the half-civilized and pagan nations. The country that leads all other countries in gold production can best of all other nations afford to maintain its currency at the gold standard, and least of all others afford to do anything else.

An Undeserving Creature.

"I reiterate it!"

It was an emancipated woman who spoke, and her earnest tone betrayed her depth of feeling.

"I reiterate it, I say! A woman who will beat her husband, the tender timid darling she has vowed to protect and cherish, does not deserve to have one."—Truth.

MAMMON WORSHIP.

From the Talladega News-Reporter.

Property wealth is merely relative wealth. The pioneer in the frontier forests is rich with an ax: poor without one. The man with a thousand dollars may be rich in one community and poor in another. A millionaire in Alabama is a curiosity; in New York hardly worth noticing. So we are rich or poor in worldly goods by comparison only. The poorest widow can always see others with whom she would not exchange miseries, and the princes of fortune would often enter the realms of mediocrity if for nothing more than diversion. There is other wealth than that measured in dollars and cents, and how often it is overlooked. How often it is given up for gold. Peace of conscience, good health, a contented disposition—all sacrificed willingly to the dead, dumb brute, the golden calf. This is the fashion now-a-days—this is the money making era. Learning is to be desired—if negotiable. "Get wisdom, my son—that kind that accumulates gold"—is the parental advice. Relieve the sick—there is money in it. Defend the innocent—with a fat retainer fee. Preach the gospel—big city salaries await you, and so on, rings out the maddening cry. What for? Merely to satisfy that selfish passion in our nature which delights in possessing that which others want. What can the man with already a million want with another and another, if not simply to possess that which others are striving to get? He has fed his passion, like the drunkard has his, until only a brutal, beastly appetite actuates him, and he finds delight in looking down from his golden throne upon the struggling thousands wriggling in their frenzy to get at his treasures, with a delight akin to a demon's, it would seem to a philosopher. And yet his wants and theirs are largely imaginary and unfounded. The dying consumptive wants air—fresh air. The famishing traveler of the desert wants water—sweet water. These are legitimate wants; has the millionaire such? Has the man with a thousand such? How many of us, rich or poor, have a single legitimate want? In all Alabama there isn't a man who is afraid he will starve to death or freeze to death or die from want.

When we go about whining over hard times and growling at our lot in life we are not alone base ingrates, but consummate fools besides. If we had what we think we ought to have, it would ruin us just as certain as the child with a loaded bomb for a plaything would get the worst of it. The eternal fitness of things is about as nearly perfect as can be made, and the irrevocable laws that put us where we are, as we are, will hardly be considered because we are worms in the dust wiggling about their application. A careful study of their nature and how to avoid violating them would go much further towards that "consummation devoutly to be wished." But that consummation is not wealth in worldly goods, neither the woodman's axe nor the banker's millions. Make not that popular error. True happiness is contentment with our lot, which state is reached through peace of conscience and good physical health. Therefore whatever can contribute to peace of conscience, moral health and the health of the body brings contentment or the richest of blessings. For the best growth and health there has been no more logical treatise than the Holy Bible. For the highest state of physical perfection, bodily comfort is perhaps the best guide when we are careful to profit by its lessons. But least of all that is calculated to bring contentment is the hoarding of that for which we have not daily need. In a land where wood and water are in reach at every step of the traveler's journey he is a fool who loads himself down with both to drag along to the end only to leave it for others.

Well, Why Not?

From the Louisville Courier-Journal.

Senator Vest would be willing to accept a 20 to 1 ratio. But if the 16 to 1 ratio is to be surrendered by the free silverites, why pitch upon 20 to 1? If a lot of crossroads politicians can get together at Washington and simply because they call themselves a congress, pass a law which has the magic power to make twenty ounces of silver the equal of one ounce of gold, whereas two seconds before thirty ounces of silver were not equal to one ounce of gold, why not draw up that law so as to make one ounce of silver equal to one ounce of gold? If parity can be created by the mere "Be it enacted" of congress, let us have a parity that is parity—silver equal to gold, pound for pound, ounce for ounce, grain for grain, no favors asked and no discrimination shown. That would be bimetallism sure enough.

The Point of Resemblance.

From the Chicago Post.

That boy takes after you, John, she said as she poured out his coffee at breakfast.

Do you think so? he asked, his face beaming with pleasure at the suggestion.

I'm sure of it.

I can't see that he looks like me, he said doubtfully.

No; it isn't in that he resembles you, she admitted.

And he isn't old enough to have developed any strong traits of character, he added.

No; it isn't that either, she said pleasantly.

What is there about him that suggests me, then?

He snores, she said with an aggravatingly cheery smile.

More Gold—Less Talk About Silver.

From the New York Herald.

One reason why we are hearing less from the silverite orators of the South is unquestionably to be found in the fact that cotton is 50 per cent. higher than it was a year ago.

This advance has demonstrated to the masses of that section the falsity of the statement that their staple was depressed by the fall of silver and could not advance unless the white metal were coined without limit at an over valuation of two to one.

Not only in our own country, but all over the world, the clamor for a "rehabilitation" is dying out. This is due to the increased production of gold, not only from South Africa, but from our own mines and from half a dozen other sources. The ever augmented stream of yellow metal flowing into the markets from all parts of the globe demolishes the silly plea of the silverites that gold was "cornered."

Brimstone Prediction.

From the LaFayette Sun.

When will the world get good, and all sinners quit their meanness, and everybody quit quarreling and go to paying debts, and all editors get the cash for their papers, and this earth be a heaven? When, we say: When the daydawn of judgment comes, and not before, and then there will be lots of fools who will ask to be excused from any part in the pyrotechnical display in the world below, simply because they paid the editor in rotten fodder, and voted the democratic ticket. Look out, old soaker, or you will be one of the fire-punchers.

Offering to Educate Them.

From the Luverne Freeman.

You free silverites, come around and read the Freeman occasionally; it will do you good, instruct you in facts. Don't be fearful that you will be seen in the act—be seen reading democratic facts. We have a cellar dug under our office in which you can hide from the public while you are digesting pure doctrine; there you can wrestle with your conscience and kick yourself for being "off" on reason and the outsiders will be none the wiser of your repentance until you have thoroughly purged yourself of all impurities. Don't crowd us; come one at a time!

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS.

Robert Bowdon, of Calera, was in town Tuesday.

W. S. Cary, of Montevallo, was a visitor in our town Tuesday.

E. B. Nelson and family returned Friday last from the Exposition.

Mardis place for rent. Apply to W. F. THETFORD, JR., Agent.

Miss Elvina Verchot left Thursday for New York, where she will reside.

Miss Belle Barnett was a guest of Wilsonville friends Sunday and Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Brown returned Tuesday from the Atlanta Exposition.

J. P. Spencer moved Saturday into the residence recently vacated by E. D. Hall.

John Russell, supreme judge of beat 10, spent a few hours in town Monday.

John Upshaw and son, Adkins, of Coosa county, visited relatives here last week.

Mrs. Bettie Averyt, of Shelby, spent Wednesday in town, the guest of Mrs. M. P. Huyett.

James Seale, of Childersburg, spent Sunday here with his father's family and with a "friend."

Judge McMillan took the oath of office Tuesday morning, and is now probate judge of Shelby county.

J. W. Payne, formerly of this county, but now of Judson, this state, was in town Tuesday and gave us a pleasant call.

We were glad to meet Shelby Nelson on our streets this week. He has not yet fully recovered, but is improving rapidly.

Mrs. T. G. Nelson, who has been spending several weeks with her father, Dr. E. B. Teague, returned to Harpersville Monday

Mrs. T. Woodruff, a most loveable old lady, leaves today for Gadsden, where she will reside in future with her son, George Woodruff.

We publish this week a list of the petit jurors drawn for the county court, which will convene Monday, November 25, and will continue two weeks.

Gordon DuBose has been appointed register in chancery, vice D. R. McMillan, resigned. He has made his bond, and will likely take charge of the office this week.

Henry Milner and wife, with Mrs. I. D. Mason, Mrs. D. R. McMillan, Misses Pattie Mason and Annie Milner, left Monday for Atlanta, to spend a week in sight-seeing at the Exposition.

The hotel known for years as the Spencer house, but which has been closed for about a year, was reopened Monday by E. D. Hall, and will be known in future as the Colonial.

A change of schedule went into effect Sunday morning last at 6 a. m. The passenger train northbound passes here at 3:43 p. m., and the southbound at 11:57 a. m. This schedule may suit the road, but it don't suit us, a little bit.

Deputy T. L. Seale came in Tuesday from Birmingham with two prisoners, both white men—Jim Bunch, charged with assault and battery and public drunkenness, and M. V. Lowery, with embezzlement. Both were placed in jail to await the trial of their cases in county court.

C. C. Crail, the converted tramp, will deliver a lecture tonight at the Baptist church. Subject: "The two roads—downwards and upwards." No charge for admittance. A letter addressed to W. L. Davis, of this place, from the pastor of the church in Northport, of which Mr. Crail is a member, says he is what he represents himself, and that it will repay the people here to go and hear his lecture.

Great Is Atlanta.

Wilsonville Waifs.

Mr. J. H. Weldon visited Anniston last week.

Everybody came out in new hats and capes Sunday.

Hickorynuts are very pleantiful. I think the boys and girls of the Institute enjoy them very much.

Prof. Kilpatrick visited Columbiana last Saturday, intending to come back that evening, but—Professor, did you ever get left?

Rev. W. A. Montgomery preached his farewell sermon on Sunday last, which was very interesting. We regret very much to give him up.

Mr. Will Tinney and Mr. Buck Daniels carried all the young ladies to ride last Sunday evening, but did not have to take a seat on the dashboard this time.

We hear that Miss Sallie Bolin, one of Wilsonville's most charming young ladies, is to be married next Saturday night. We regret to give you up, Miss Sallie, but we guess we will have to, as he seems to be very much in love. GRANDMA.

He Was Extravagant.

He—It doesn't seem possible, dearest, that just one week from tonight you will be my own, sweet little wife.

She (dreamily)—Doesn't it? But (sweetly) if you are always as good to me as you have been during our engagement, I shall have no cause to complain.

He—I didn't know that I had been so good to you.

She—Indeed you have. Why, just look at the lovely engagement ring you gave me! It's almost twice as large as any of the other girls'—

He (remembering the bill)—True, my darling. I wanted you to have the best.

She—And look at all the other beautiful things you have given me.

He (modestly)—You deserved them, dear.

She—And think of the lovely wedding trip we are going on.

He—I am glad that you are pleased with it. By the way, I have something else for you. Something in diamonds for your wedding present.

She (clapping her hands)—Oh, I just know it is perfectly elegant! Can't I have a peep at it beforehand?

He—Certainly. I want you to. It will be ready tomorrow.

She—And will you let me see it tomorrow night?

He—I am afraid not, dearest. You see, tomorrow night I have arranged to give my ushers a little dinner.

She (coldly)—Do you think it necessary to give your ushers a dinner?

He—Certainly. Why not?

She (reproachfully)—Have you considered, dear, how much it will cost? —Tom Mason, in Truth.

CITY PRIDE.

The following is from the Rome Tribune, and more truth and better advice could not be put into the same number of lines:

Stick to your town. If if is only a collection of cabins, stand by it and pick out its most attractive features when speaking of it. Your share of the universe amounts to the place where your days are spent. Your city is the best of all cities, your people the foremost of all people. Talk it, preach it, teach it, till the world believes it, and if you are in any way doubtful you will soon get to believing it yourself.

Speak up for your city. No matter where you are, pull for the place where your home is and where your friends are. That is the secret of progress. You can find plenty of objectionable features about any city. Make yourself as nearly oblivious as possible to the shortcomings of your own.

Remember that your own people are the people you know best. As a matter of course you are more familiar with them than you are with strangers with whose good points only you have become acquainted.

Paint out the scars when you draw a picture of your home folks. Leave out the blots when charting your surroundings. If you practice a healthy, appreciative sentiment in speaking and thinking about your environments you will soon forget your cynicism and your home will become what it should be, the fairest spot on earth.

Stick to your own city. Make its surroundings the most agreeable, its scenes the most beautiful, its location the most admirable, its resources the nearest inexhaustible of all places in the world.

Preach it, teach it, believe it and impress it upon others. You will be happier by cultivating such a spirit of patriotism. Your friends will like you better, your associates will be more agreeable, your work will please you better, if you stick to your city and people.

TOO MUCH POLITICS.

From the Fort Payne Journal.

Already, all over the country the lines are being formed and the brigades are preparing for the great political events of the next year. As we have stated often we are scarcely over with one campaign before the next one is precipitated upon us. The roar of the battle of 1694 has scarcely died away when we hear the pickets firing to usher in the great contest of 1896.

That our system of elections, producing as it does almost unceasing political turmoil and strife, has a deleterous effect upon the business and prosperity of the country cannot be denied. There is the constant fear of change in the policy of the government. The financial policy of the country and the legislation with reference to the tariff are two important factors in the growth and development of business, and when these questions are forever changing like the scenes in a kaleidoscope there cannot be that healthy growth and expansion, along all lines, which there would be with a settled policy. We are in a condition of eternal ferment and unrest which is destructive of permanent prosperity, all on account of too much politics.

In Alabama the political pot is boiling. The pops and republicans are already holding conventions and the democrats are maneuvering for advantages. In almost every county candidates are beating the bushes and the people have no chance to enjoy in peace the bounties which nature's God has bestowed upon them.

There should be a change, and there would be but for the politicans and office seekers. There should be longer tenure of office, fewer elections and shorter campaigns. Every officer, from president to constable, should be elected on the same day and should hold office for the same length of time, say six years. If you get a bad one you can impeach him and fill all vacancies by appointment. Every officer should be elected also by direct vote of the people. Our method of electing the president, vice-president and senators is unfair and undemocratic.

YOUNG MEN'S OPPORTUNITIES.

Edward W. Bok is one of the most sensible and practical young writers in America today. He frequently puts forth advice in his magazine articles which is well worthy of being heeded. In the Ladies' Home Journal for October he discusses young men's opportunities for successful careers and draws the following conclusion, which contains a world of common sense:

"If the young men of the present day, who are starting out in life would combat the modern tendency to go to the great centers of population, and cast their lines in some of the smaller cities, it would be better for the country and it would be better for them. I know of no young man whom I envy more today than he who, having energy and ability, has the wisdom and the determination to remain in one of these smaller cities, or go to one of them and start upon a business career with any sort of prospective success. The happiest kind of a life is before him. With a more limited field before him than in a vaster and to him more meaningless city, he can concentrate his efforts and cement his connections in a way that is impossible in a large city. With honest dealing as his watchword every step he takes is noticed. Every advantage counts just as much for him. He is in direct touch with the people who make up the life of his community; his acts are known of all men. He grows with the community, and in time becomes part of its best life, and the degree of his success depends entirely upon his own efforts and opportunities."

To Our Lady Readers.

Nine-tenths of the women of the world are afflicted with some of the complaints familiarly known as "Female Diseases," or "Womb Troubles." There is scarcely a family but has an idolized daughter, a cherished sister, or a dearly loved mother who suffers agonies that are endured in silence to protect her modesty. Proper treatment is postponed from month to month by dread of a physician's humiliating examination, or surgeon's knife. Most of these dangerous diseases can be successfully treated at home, but there is wide-spread ignorance among even the most intelligent classes of women regarding their natural functions and organs of generation, owing to so little information having been published in regard to this subject and a modesty that shrinks from investigating such a disagreeable matter. The Wine of Cardui treatment of female diseases cures thousands of cases of this kind of troubles every year. It can be used successfully in the privacy of the home and is cheap and effective. Ask your druggist for McElree's Wine of Cardui.

RIDGEWAY, Mo., Aug. 17, 1895.

THE PISO COMPANY,
Warren, Pa.

Gentlemen:

Six years ago last Spring I took a severe cold, which settled on my lungs. I coughed and spit blood until my husband was alarmed about me. I told him to go to the drug store and get me a bottle of Piso's Cure for Consumption. He did so, and by the time I had taken its contents according to directions I was very much better. He then bought two more bottles, and they cured me.

In fact, we could hardly keep house without Piso's Cure for Consumption. My husband is subject to a cough every Winter, and he says nothing (and he has tried every cough medicine on the market) helps him as does Piso's Cure.

You may publish the above if you so desire.

Very truly yours,

KENNEDY'S MEDICAL DISCOVERY.

DONALD KENNEDY, of ROXBURY, MASS., Has discovered in one of our common pasture weeds a remedy that cures every kind of Humor, from the worst Scrofula down to a common Pimple.

He has tried it in over eleven hundred cases, and never failed except in two cases (both thunder humor.) He has now in his possession over two hundred certificates of its value, all within twenty miles of Boston. Send postal card for book.

A benefit is always experienced from the first bottle, and a perfect cure is warranted when the right quantity is taken.

When the lungs are affected it causes shooting pains, like needles passing through them; the same with the Liver or Bowels. This is caused by the ducts being stopped, and always disappears in a week after taking it. Read the label.

If the stomach is foul or bilious it will cause squeamish feelings at first.

No change of diet ever necessary. Eat the best you can get, and enough of it. Dose, one tablespoonful in water at bedtime. Sold by all Druggists.

PLAIN RUFE SANDERS,

The Old Folks Raisin Some "Mighty Pecurious Children" Nowadays—You Can Always Get the News at the Stribblin Place—The Last Pull at Old Man Poke.

(Copyright, 1895.)

"The old folks are raisin mighty pecurious children nowadays," said Aunt Nancy Newton in a general family talk with me onest upon a time. And the longer I live, and the more I think about it, the plainer I can see wherein the old lady spoke a tremendius big gob of truth. Everybody is more or less curious to some extent. It must be a family disease with the human race, but some people have it a whole lot worse and give up to it a sight more than others.

Remember the Stribblin Place.

If it ever comes to pass that you mought run down into the Rocky Creek Settlement—and then if you want to find out everything about everybody in all the regions around, go over on the Jackson Trail road and put up and spend the night with old man Asey Stribblin. What little old man Asey don't know in regards to the general history of the country and the people must of been tore out of the books forty years ago. And if you aint too tired to stay up late and listen the old man will tell you all he knows before you go to bed. From general appearments the old folks put in to raisin some "mighty pecurious children" about the time old man Asey was born, and sometimes he talks a whole passle jest simply because he has got somethin to talk with.

But if you want to git all the news don't forget to spend a night at the Stribblin place. Old man Asey can take me up one side and down the other and tell you a blame sight more about my family records and my general reputation than you ever could find out from me. He is more than probable to tell you about some things concernin which I don't want everybody to know. If it so happens that I have ever got myself mixed up in any scandalations and flirtationments in the settlement old man Asey can give you all the facts, with a few extry touches and fancy trimmins for good measure. He is general headquarters for everything in that line. He can tell you to a nat's heel how much money I have got, or how much I owe—when I got it, and where I got it, and who holds the waverly notes agin me. He can tell you how many horses and cows and hogs and pigs and chickens and children we have got in the Sanders family. Sometimes I wonder in my soul where the old man gits all his facts. So far as me and him's concerned I would see him sick abed with a fever and ten miles from water before I would tell him anything. But if there is any news in the settlement—particlar if it is right fresh and ruther dirty—old man Asey can most in generally always manage so as to pick it up "comin and a-gwine."

Late along last summer I got rich and reckless and went up into Tennessee and bought me a good saddle horse. Andy Lucas went with me and rid the horse back home through the country. The general facts in the case had already leaked out in the settlement before we landed the new horse at home. Bright and early the next mornin old man Asey come bilin over after the news. Bless gracious, he was at the front gate before I got through breakfast. He come over in such a tremendius hurry and flurry till, by gatlins, he was sweatin like a free nigger on election day. And he remained over and hung around till way in the shank of the evenin tryin his level blamdest to find out what I had give for my saddle horse. He saw me, and he saw the horse, but that was all so far as me and him's concerned. But yet at the same time, if you want to know where I got that horse, and who I got him from, and what I paid for him to a dollar and a cent, don't forget to put up and spend the night with old man Asey Stribblin. I have never told him—I have never even told Andy Lucas—but I'll bet the horse right now agin the sorriest steer calf in the settlement that old man Asey can tell you all about it. He has got the facts in the case before now if he had to write on back to Murray county, Tennessee, and ask the man which I bought the horse from.

Those Lily-White Hands.

It is a blessed good thing, I reckon, that it takes a heap of various and sundry different sorts of people to make up the world. As for me, I love these good, plain American people around Rocky Creek. They are always honest enough and brave enough to be natural and true. They are my fellow-citizens, my neighbors and my friends. We have all come down togother from the aristocracy of honest hearts and hard knuckles. But now in regards to their business—they must tend to that for themselves. I haven't got the turn nor the time to look after it for them. Life is too short and time is too skeerce, and I am too everlastin busy. It takes all my time to keep up the corners and make the edges cut at home. And I have to stay out late and git up soon in orderment to do that. I hope old man Asey Stribblin is out of debt and ahead of the hounds, with meat in the smoke house, and meal in the barrel, and money in his flanks. But I don't know a blame thing about it. It is none of my business. And I haven't got the time to go and find out. It is a thousand wonders to me that he has got a shelter to sleep under. If I spent as much time runnin about and "jest pilferin around" tendin to other peoples' business for them as he does my home would now be over the hills and far away in the Poor House.

Now you maybe mought think that I am one of them pecurious children myself, but if old man Asey will only tend to his own business right and proper I can manage my own without any help from him. I haven't got so very much, but it is all mine. I want borned into it, and I didn't marry it, and I didn't steal it. By gracious, I made it—made it with my own mutton head and my own lily-white hands.

One More "Pecurious Child."

Old Mises Nettleton (Aunt Pliny, as everybody calls her), which lives over on Huckleberry Ridge, is one more of them pecurious children. She is the onlyest one like her on the broad bosom of the earth, I reckon. She is way past seventy years old, but she never saw the moon in day time till one day last week. It was somethin new and marvelsome to Aunt Pliny. She always thought that the sun was made for day and the moon for night, and then to see the moon in broad, open day time was quite altogether too many for her. She thought the world was comin to an end right away immediately, if not sooner. She was out in the garden when she saw the marvelsome sight, and from there she flew into the house and went to prayin to beat six bits.

The Last Pull at Poke.

Old man Poke Nettleton, which he was the husband of Aunt Pliny, you understand, was likewise also one of them "pecurious children." He was a right tolerable good man in the common way, but tough enough for wedge wood, and green—by gracious he was so green till you could rake it off with a shuck. And then old man Poke was a terrible hard drinker till he went down under the water. You see, Aunt Pliny is a Baptist from High Log all the way, whilst old man Poke called himself a debt-payin dram-drinkin Methodist.

"As to me, I was borned and brung up in a Baptist family, Rufus," said Aunt Pliny to me one Saturday evenin when old man Poke had went home as mellow as a Maypop. "I was fed and raised on Baptist milk, and Baptist potatoes, and Baptist bread and Baptist bacon, and, thank goodness I'm a Baptist all the way. And if it ever comes to pass that I can put Poke into a notion to jine the Baptist Church and go down under the water he will be a new and different man. He is a member of the Methodist Church now, and he has been sprinkled, but it will take somethin more than a little sprinkle to wash away the sins of Poke Nettleton. That mought maybe sorter do for women and children, but if Poke don't go down heels and head under the water he is a lost and ruint man."

Well, naturally of course in the run of time Aunt Pliny—woman like—brought old man Poke around to her way of thinkin, and the very next Sunday he went over with her into the Baptist Church. And then on the following Tuesday they had a baptizin at the big ford over on Murder Creek, and old man Poke went down under the water. It so come to pass that I met the crowd along the road on their return back from the creek, and soon as Aunt Pliny saw me she opened up and let in:

"He is a clean man now, Rufus—thank the Lord Poke Nettleton is a clean man. He has went down under the water, and his sins are washed away. White as snow, Rufus, white as snow. You can tell the sheriff and the police they have put their hands on Poke Nettleton for the last time. No more cussin and no more comin up drunk at our house. He is on the rock now, Rufus—safe on the rock which fadeth not away."

To be certainly I was in hopes that Aunt Pliny was right, but I had some serious doubts in the case. I didn't dispute her word in regards to old man Poke bein safe on the rock and white as snow, though I didn't know how long he would stay clean and keep his feet under him. But from that Tuesday evenin, when he went down under the waters of Murder Creek, to his dyin day the old man never cussed an oath nor took a drop of sperits. I don't know for certain whether it was the water or Aunt Pliny or the good Lord—or all three put together—but at any rates, when the last final shower come, and old man Poke Nettleton had to take out and go in he was "safe on the rock and white as snow." ODD AND SERIOUS.

A woman's heart was really broken, burst into halves, in England recently, not from love or sorrow, but from eating too hearty a supper.

Forty-seven thousand tons of tea, valued at over $17,000,000, have been received at Tacoma, Wash., from China and Japan this season.

A couple in Carrollton, Mo., with their baby, were on their way to the circus, and stopped at a physician's office to learn why the child was so quiet. He declared it was dead. They then asked permission to leave the dead child at his house while they went to the show, and he obligingly consented.

A cinder entered the ear of a negro in Athens, Ga., and caused much pain. A physician removed it and demanded a dollar. The man refused to pay it. The doctor put him in the chair again, replaced the cinder in his ear, and in a few moments the negro was glad to pay the dollar to have it removed.

A funny young man at Delhi, N. Y., arrayed himself in ghostly garb, and, striding solemnly on stilts, stopped four female bicyclists in a lonely road. Three of them ran away, but the fourth, Miss Grace Holden, of Jersey City, struck the ghost violently in the side with a cobblestone, and he had to be carried home for repairs.

PERSONAL PICKINGS.

Rev. Mr. Slick of Atwood, is said to be one of the most smooth-tongued preachers in Kansas.

Mrs. Mary Hovey Hooper, of East Franklin, Me., died last week, within two weeks after celebrating her 100th birthday.

Prof. Prothero, besides superintending the preparation for the press of Prof. Seeley's posthumous work, is writing a memoir of the author.

Six bouncing boys are sons of Mr. and Mrs. Harmon Coleman, of Finesta, Pa. One is six feet in height, another is six feet two inches, two are six feet three inches, and two others six feet five inches.

One of Senator Gorman's peculiarities is that he neither drinks nor smokes, and if he can help it he will not allow anyone to do so in his presence. Even on a night of a general election if anyone comes into his room smoking a cigar he will ask him to lay it aside.

SCHOOL AND CHURCH.

—Salvation Army work has penetrated Denmark.

—All branches of Protestantism have in Europe an estimated membership of 80,812,000.

—Beloit college has thrown open its doors to women. Thirty-three girls entered with this year's freshman class.

—St. Paul's American Institute at Tarsus, Asia Minor, a school founded by the late Elliott F. Shepard, was attacked by a Turkish mob which maltreated the students and threatened the missionaries.

—The annual report of the foreign missions of the Moravian church shows a deficit of $27,115, due very largely to a falling off in receipts from legacies, which were $25,714 less in 1894 than in the previous year.

—The American Baptist Telugu mission, India, records 881 baptisms in 1894, and has a membership now of 53,502, with 8,048 Christian pupils in the schools and 5,456 in Sunday-schools. The medical work is increasing, with 3,204 new patients treated during the year.

—Cornell university opened for the year on the 26th of September. President Schurman in his address said that up to date there were 194 more new students registered than at the same time a year ago. Between 500 and 600 new students have entered the university this year. This shows that the raising of the entrance requirements has not reduced the number of applicants.

—Living in the open air all the past summer has improved the pope's health, which was never better than it is now. He is entirely free from the fainting spells that used to come upon him in the spring months and when pressed with business. Dr. Lapponi says: "If nothing unforeseen happens, the Holy Father's constitution is so sound that he may well attain his hundredth year."

—The holy city of Jerusalem is becoming modernized. There are now eight printing offices in the city, five of which are in connection with monastic establishments. The most important is that of the Catholic convent, which is fitted with up-to-date appliances. The work turned out consists largely of Latin and Arabic books. The three general printing offices are those of the local Hebrew newspapers, respectively entitled the "Hoar" (Light), "Hacharazeleth" (the Flower) and "Jeruscholajim."

—The freshman class at Brown university numbers about 250, including 36 young women. The total number of students in the university, including graduate students, will probably reach 900; and by another year, if present indications hold good, the one-thousand mark will be passed. The faculty has been strengthened by the addition of several well-known educators, and the financial condition of the institution is reported prosperous, although there have been no large individual donations for some years.

WOOD TURNED TO STONE.

Peculiar Effect the "Creeping Clay" in Comstock Lode Has Upon Timbers.

In half a dozen mining offices in San Francisco there are small slabs of hard black wood, four by ten inches, that always puzzle strangers, especially workers in wood from the east. These four-inch slabs were once seventeen-by-seventeen inch timbers of Nevada pine, and their present condition is due to the fact that for a few years they were subjected to tremendous pressure exerted by millions upon millions of tons of earth. The fibers of this wood are so closely crowded together that when polished the slabs look more like stone than wood.

All the history of the Comstock lode, speaking recently of this wood, governed and regulated as it has always been by men in San Francisco, is peculiar, but of all the stories in the mines of this lode there is none more peculiar than the "creeping clay" and the compressed timbers. From 1874 to 1877 the Big Bonanza was worked down to a fifteen-hundred-foot level, but at one thousand one hundred feet the managers stopped and concluded to drift off to the east. This brought them to a position where a large proportion of a side of a mountain was pressing upon the quartz bed. There was a body of ore shaped like a watermelon and in size about equal to four Palace hotels. It was this ore that made the fortunes of so many men. There was a wall running down at an angle of about forty-five degrees and this wall marked the limits of the loose earth which contained this watermelon of ore, and this same loose earth was continually moving.

Immediately surrounding the lump of ore was clay, and this clay so moved and crept in the natural process of nature's action that by the miners it was called "creeping clay," and watched continually. So irresistible was its force that nothing could stand against it. From the eleven-hundred-foot level the drift was set in toward this body of ore. There was a gallery where the car ran along for the taking out of the ore, and from this gallery ran the smaller drifts. Above, below and on the sides of these smaller drifts there were heavy timbers of Nevada pine. There was between the timbers a space of about, on the average, seven feet in height and five in width. There were square sets, and it was these timbers that, by the action of the loose earth around them, were so compressed that pieces of them look more like stone than wood.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Everybody Was Quiet.

The recent Indian uprising in Wyoming recalls to mind an incident of a similar uprising in Idaho back in the seventies.

A report reached army headquarters that the Indians had swarmed down on a little village and murdered every inhabitant. A second lieutenant who had just received his commission was dispatched to the scene to ascertain the authenticity of the rumor. A few hours after his arrival in the village he sent this dispatch to the commanding officer.

"Everybody is quiet here."

Whereupon the commanding officer replied:

"Your report is unintelligible. We have it from responsible source that Indians have massacred every inhabitant."

The lieutenant answered:

"Report is correct. Everybody has been massacred. Everybody is quiet."—N. Y. Journal.

A connoisseur in cats, living in Westfield, Mass., has 23 cats in his house. One he values at $1,000.

Two candidates for positions on the New York police force were found to have increased their height by artificial means. One, with a blow with a club, has raised a half-inch bump on his head, and the other wore a wig an inch thick.

A woman drummer for a cigar factory appeared in Valdosta, Ga., a few days ago, and surprised the merchants. She further surprised them later by proving that she was an expert in handling cigars and understood her business thoroughly.

A brave New York woman, whose name is not related, remained all night alone in a camp in the Ripogenus region, away above Moosehead, in the Maine forest, recently while her husband carried the sick guide out to civilization.

A mad dog pursued a little girl in Harrison, N. J., and she took refuge in an insurance office. The dog was close at her heels, and as the girl hastily closed the door she squeezed the animal between the door and the frame, and there held it until a young man knocked the brute lifeless with a club.

A Parisian had the remains of his brother cremated. The ashes were put in a leather bag, and sent by rail to the brother's home. The bag was mislaid, and suit has been instituted by the brother against the railroad company for the value of the dead man's ashes.

PEN, INK AND PENCIL.

Blue ink was first made in London.

The "lead" of the pencils ordinarily used is made of graphite.

Pens are polished with emery powder in a large revolving drum.

The basis of most indelible inks is the ordinary nitrate of silver.

"Lead pencils" are a misomer. There is no lead in their composition.

Alloys of iridum and osmium are now very generally used to point gold pens.

The quill pens now used in England come from Germany and the Netherlands.

From 1803 to 1812 many attempts were made to fasten metal points to quill pens.

Over two thousand patents have been issued in the United States for the manufacture of inks.

THE LAST CHANCE.

Mrs. Johnson Had Only One Chance to Save Her Life.

Now Does the Work of Three Average Women.

From the Ledger, Mexico, Mo

Mrs. Lucinda Johnson lives in Mexico, Mo. The Ledger has just succeeded in obtaining an interview with her. This is the substance of her story:

In the winter of '92 and '93 Mrs. Johnson was, like many of her friends, attacked with la grippe. Yes, we've most of us had it, and know its wrecking powers, when it gets in its work on a good constitution. Well, Mrs. Johnson, along about Christmas, was prostrated. All the medical aid here in the city only "brought her around," as an "herbs and roots" female gymnastics expressed it, and she was left in a debilitated and exhausted condition and experienced a constant pain in her left side. She was wholly unfit for her domestic duties and was unable to do any work about the house, even after the la grippe fever and its characteristic sickness had left her. She is a consistent member of the church, and one Sunday, between the Sunday school and church services, being barely able to be conveyed there, she heard of a miracle that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People had performed and she resolved to try them. It was like the drowning man grabbing at the last straw. It was her last and only chance to save her life. She procured one box of these pills from the south side druggists, French & Garrett, in this city, and by the time she had used half the box she and her watchful friends noticed a marked improvement in her condition. Taking the rest of the box of pills and one more box she recovered remarkably in an exceedingly short time. Before she had used the first box she resumed her household duties and has been steadily at work for the last eighteen months. I took only a few boxes, perhaps five or six, to entirely cure her. Since then she was attacked by rheumatism, caused from careless exposure, but by at once taking the Pink Pills for Pale People, she drove that painful and dreadful malady away. She told the reporter that whenever she felt that she was going to be ill, she took one two of the pills and she never got sick. Mrs. Johnson is perfectly healthy now and promises to live to a ripe old age. Her friends have never ceased to talk about her almost miraculous recovery and are loud in their praise of the Pink Pills for Pale People, and all who have tried them say they would not be without them under any conditions.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are not looked upon as a patent medicine, but rather as a prescription. An analysis of their properties shows that they contain, in condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effects of la grippe, palpitations of the heart, pale and sallow complexion, and the tired feeling resulting from nervous prostration, all diseases resulting from vitiated humors in the blood, such as scrofula, chronic erysipelas, etc. They are also a specific for troubles peculiar to females, such as suppressions, irregularities and all forms of weakness. They are for sale by all druggists, or may be had by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y., for 50c per box, or six boxes for $2.50.

Bubbles or Medals.

"Best sarsaparillas." When you think of it how contradictory that term is. For there can be only one best in anything—one best sarsaparilla, as there is one highest mountain, one longest river, one deepest ocean. And that best sarsaparilla is———? . . . . There's the rub! You can measure mountain height and ocean depth, but how test sarsaparilla? You could, if you were chemists. But then, do you need to test it? The World's Fair Committee tested it,—and thoroughly. They went behind the label on the bottle. What did this sarsaparilla test result in? Every make of sarsaparilla shut out of the Fair, except Ayer's. So it was that Ayer's was the only sarsaparilla admitted to the World's Fair. The committee found it the best. They had no room for anything that was not the best. And as the best, Ayer's Sarsaparilla received the medal and awards due its merits. Remember the word "best" is a bubble any breath can blow; but there are pins to prick such bubbles. Those others are blowing more "best sarsaparilla" bubbles since the World's Fair pricked the old ones. True, but Ayer's Sarsaparilla has the medal. The pin that scratches the medal proves it gold. The pin that pricks the bubble proves it wind. We point to medals, not bubbles, when we say: The best sarsaparilla is Ayer's.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

PERSONAL AND POLITICAL.

A MESSAGE from Tahlequah, I. T., on the 8th stated that much excitement and intense feeling between political factions was prevailing and bloodshed was likely to result unless compromised. The conditions were similar to those of eight years ago when many men were killed. The national party was contesting the election of Sam Mayes as chief of the Downing ticket, and the Indians were collected in the capital armed to the teeth, determined to aid their friends.

EX-SENATOR ALLEN G. THURMAN, of Columbus, O., was reported seriously sick on the 8th with but little hope of his recovery. The venerable statesman recently fell and hurt his hip.

IN Constantinople the rumors of palace conspiracies continued to be talked about on the 8th. The name of the deposed sultan, Mohammed Murad, removed from the throne because he was alleged to be suffering from idiocy, was mentioned as being a likely candidate for the throne.

AT a meeting at Paris, France, of delegates representing Armenian colonies in various parts of Europe, it was resolved to address an appeal to the six powers which signed the Berlin treaty urging immediate intervention to stop "the methodical extermination of the Armenians which is being carried out by the Ottoman government."

JAMES C. MATTHEWS, colored, recorder of deeds at Washington in President Cleveland's first administration, has been elected judge of the recorder's court of New York, which office carries with it powers of a supreme court judge. It is the highest judicial office ever held by a man of his race in this country.

GEORGE R. SHERMAN expired suddenly with heart disease at Port Henry, N. Y., on the 7th. He was the richest iron man in northern New York, being worth $10,000,000.

OVER 2,000 political prisoners, it was estimated, have been sent to Ceuta, Africa, from Cuba since the beginning of the revolution in that island.

THE legislature of the Chickasaw nation has passed a bill declaring the intermarried persons of that nation noncitizens and not only disfranchising them, but taking away their right of holding land, participating in annuities and holding any official position under the Chickasaw government. There was great excitement in the nation and the question will be fought in the courts and in congress, as the law will make all those coming under it paupers.

THE wedding of Miss Consuelo Vanderbilt and the duke of Marlborough took place at St. Thomas church, New York, before a brilliant assembly of society people. The church was elegantly decorated, and Walter Damrosch and his symphony orchestra played selections. Bishop Littlejohn was assisted in his duties by Bishop Potter and Rev. John W. Brown, rector of the church. William K. Vanderbilt gave his daughter away and then left the church. The wedding party afterwards went to Mrs. Vanderbilt's house, where the reception and breakfast followed, after which the newly married pair left for Mr. Vanderbilt's country house, "Idle Hour," at Oakland, L. I., to spend their honeymoon.

A DISPATCH from Constantinople said that owing to the recurring disturbance in various parts of the Turkish empire the ambassadors of the powers went to the porte separately and urged that immediate measures for the restoration of order be taken, declaring that otherwise the powers, acting in concert, would take their own steps in the matter.

INDEPENDENT reports received from Armenia do not confirm the official statement that the Armenians provoked the different disturbances which have taken place there recently. At Erzeroum alone the bodies of 320 Armenians have been found and only the corpses of six Turks were among them.

THE republicans carried most of the states where elections were held on the 5th, Virginia and Mississippi being about the only ones going democratic.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE failures for the week ended November 8 (Dun's report) were 280 in the United States, against 261 last year, and 49 in Canada, against 42 last year.

A CABLEGRAM to the New York World stated that the five Chinese vegetarian leaders in the recent massacre of missionaries at Hwasang had been beheaded.

IN view of the president's decision in the case of the bid of the Detroit Dry Dock Co. that under existing treaties naval vessels cannot be built on the great lakes, the navy department will now press upon congress the importance of allowing its estimate of $500,000 for the accumulation of a supply of rapid fire rifles for the auxiliary navy. With a proper supply of guns on hand it is argued that a large number of the magnificent American lake steamers could be rapidly armed in an emergency and could easily overpower the British gunboats, which are not armored vessels.

JOHN R. GENTRY was ignominiously beaten by Joe Patchen at Richmond, Va., on the 7th. Patchen won the first two heats easily in 2:15¼ and 2:15. Gentry was distanced in the second heat and withdrawn. Patchen paced the third heat against a running mate in 2:11. The track was slow.

HON. THOMAS F. BAYARD, United States ambassador to England, delivered the inaugural address to the Philosophic society at Edinburg, Scotland. The ambassador glorified the institutions of the United States and denounced socialism and protection.

SECRETARY SMITH has rendered a decision constructing a provision in the sundry civil bill of 1894 relative to soldiers' additional homestead entries. He reverses a former ruling of the department, and holds that the law intended to validate all such certificates issued.

SECRETARY SMITH has sent to he president a draft of the proclamation opening the Nez Perces lands to settlement.

THE Chicago Evening Post asserted on the 8th that the Nicaragua canal would be built by New York and London capitalists and that all attempts to secure financial aid from the United States government would be abandoned. Between $70,000,000 and $85,000,000, had been guaranteed.

THE president has approved an amendment to the civil service rules, which will result in bringing many postmasters and employes within the classified service.

DURING a dense fog in Chesapeake bay on the 8th the Norfolk and Washington line steamer Newport News ran down and sunk the tug Katie. The crew of the steamer Louise, which was near the scene of the accident, heard the two vessels crash together and the cries of the men in distress, but the fog was so heavy that they were unable to render any assistance. When they arrived at the scene of the disaster they found the bodies of the cook and fireman floating near the sunken tug.

CLEARING house returns for the principal cities in the United States for the week ended November 8 showed an average increase as compared with the corresponding week last year of 18.2; in New York the increase was 23.4; outside New York the increase was 12.5.

PRACTICALLY all of the Clyde engineers were idle on the 7th, as the bulk of them had refused to go to work as a protest against the action of the ship-builders locking out 25 per cent. of the union employes in their yards, and the extent to which the other industries were affected was incalculable, for when the ship-building on the Clyde is at a stand-still a general stagnation of business in the west of Scotland is the result. The coal and iron industries were most affected, and numbers of miners and iron workers will probably be thrown out of work.

MONA MCDONALD, the 18-year old son of H. D. McDonald, proprietor of the Oxford (Kan.) Register, was murdered in Chicago on the 7th by one of three burglars whom he surprised while attempting to rob a house where he was staying. McDonald entered the house alone and found the burglars at work. One of them shot him through the head as soon as he stepped inside. He lived only a few moments. All the men escaped.

A SAN FRANCISCO paper said that the Fair will case has been settled out of court, and what promised to be a bitter contest over an estate valued at $40,000,000 has been abandoned. Those interested in the matter, however, denied that there had been any compromise made.

THE seven gas companies in Brooklyn have determined to consolidate. The proposed capital is $30,000,000.

AN attempt was made to wreck a Great Northern westbound passenger train near Columbia Falls, Mont. A torch was applied to a bridge, and the fire was just gaining headway as the train dashed on to the bridge. The engineer applied the air brakes and the train was stopped on the bridge. A reward has been offered for the apprehension of the person who attempted to wreck the train.

A DISPATCH from Alton, Ill., said that the steamer Belle of Calhoun sunk a barge near Clifton on which were 3,000 barrels of apples.

WILLIAM BENNET, of Ashland, Pa., was driving with his wife and family in a wagon when the horses slipped and fell. After getting his family out the team disappeared. The ground had dropped into an abandoned mine.

JAMES R. GARFIELD, son of the late president, was elected state senator from the Twenty-fourth and Twenty-sixth Ohio districts by an enormous pluraility. The district is normally republican by 10,000, but he has carried it by over 14,000.

THE annual session of the national non-partisan W. C. T. U. opened at Oberlin, O., on the 5th.

THE strike on the Great Northern railroad has gone into effect. At Devil's Lake, N. D., no trains were moving, the men refusing to obey calls. The business men were disgusted with the state of affairs, all the elevators being full of wheat and no cars to move it.

EVERY colliery and coal stripping in the Lehigh (Pa.) region, which were forced to shut down several weeks ago on account of the drought, has resumed work, giving employment to nearly 5,000 men.

THE 5th was a great day at Pittsburgh, Pa., the city not only receiving the magnificent gift of a million dollar library, music hall and art gallery from Andrew Carnegie, but the pleasing announcement was made that Mr. Carnegie would endow the art gallery with $1,000,000 and also proposed erecting for the greater Pittsburgh free libraries at Duquesne, Carnegie and Homestead.

A BIG fire started in Keep's shirt factory at New York on the 5th, and before it was controlled damage was done to the amount of $1,000,000. About twenty-five firemen were injured, but none seriously.

THE Harvard observatory has discovered a new star in the constellation Carina.

CAPT. FREDERICK LANG and his wife were found dead in bed at their home in Gardnerville, a suburb of Baltimore, Md., on the 5th. Their skulls had been crushed and the house ransacked. It was supposed that robbery was the incentive for the double murder.

AT Munich a portion of the newly constructed Schwanthaler passage collapsed with a dreadful crash on the 5th, burying fifteen workmen under the ruins. Five were taken out dead and six were dying. The others were still under the debris.

THE LATEST RETURNS

Of the Recent Elections Emphasize Earlier Reports

And Indicate Pronounced Republican Successes in All the States Voting With the Exception of Mississippi and Virginia.

CHICAGO, Nov. 6.—Elections were held Tuesday in thirteen states and one territory, and in only two of them—Mississippi and Virginia—are democratic victories conceded.

In Illinois the free silver candidate, Edward Lane (dem.) was defeated by W. F. Hadley (rep.).

In most parts of the country, where elections were held, the financial question was only a side issue. Tammany is on top again in New York city by a plurality estimated by the victors at about 21,000, but the state went republican by from 50,000 to 60,000 majority, according to conservative estimates made by both sides.

Maryland went republican by from 10,000 to 20,000 majority as conceded by the democratic committee.

Late returns indicate that New Jersey is now on the republican side by from 12,000 to 15,000 majority.

Iowa, Ohio, Illinois, Massachusetts, Nebraska, Pennsylvania and Kansas have reverted to their old majorities, and in some cases increased them.

The republicans have probably got a little the best of the deal in Utah, but the result will be very close there, and later returns will be required before a definite statement can be made. Utah chooses two United States senators for the first time, but the complexion of the legislature is as yet rather uncertain.

It is certain that the republicans have gained two senators—one in Maryland and one in Ohio. In addition to the state elections there was a municipal election in Detroit, Mich., in which Mayor Pingree was lifted to the dignity of a fourth term by 10,000 republican majority. The city council also gained some republican members.

Late bulletins to the United Press give the history of the election in detail as follows:

NEW YORK.

New York state has been carried by the republicans by pluralities ranging from 48,000 to 55,000, compared with a plurality of 24,484 for the head of the ticket two years ago. Returns from more than one-half of the election districts outside of the cities of New York and Brooklyn show a net republican gain of 12,803, compared with the vote of two years ago. Maintaining the same average the gains will reach 23,000 outside of greater New York. In the two cities below the Harlem the democrats concede that the democratic plurality of 60,343 two years ago has reduced by 12,000, giving the state to the head of the republican ticket by about 50,000 in round numbers. The state legislature will be about two-thirds republican. The fusion ticket was beaten in the city by Tammany, the principal issue being on Sunday closing of saloons.

MARYLAND.

For the first time since 1867 the republicans have elected a governor in Maryland and a mayor in the city of Baltimore. The result is taken as a rebuke to Senator Gorman by his opponents. In Baltimore a majority of 12,000 for Brown, the democratic candidate for governor in 1891, has been changed to a majority of about 10,000 in round numbers for Lowndes, the present candidate of the republican ticket. It is pretty certain that the legislature will be substantially republican.

KENTUCKY.

Although the result for governor in Kentucky will be very close, the republicans have every reason to be congratulated on the result in that state, even on the showing up to date. Owing to the use of the blanket ballot returns are coming in slowly, but both sides are claiming the election of their gubernatorial candidate. The vote was light, and it is certain that many democrats, rather than face the peculiar situation of voting for a free-silver man standing on a gold platform, stayed at home. There was but little scratching of Hardin. In Jefferson county the vote complete (which includes that of the city of Louisville) is Bradly 21,393, Hardin 15,796. The greatest shock the democrats have to face in Kentucky is that the lower house of the legislature will probably be controlled by the republicans. The returns indicate the election of fifty republican representatives, forty-one democrats and nine doubtful. In Lexington, the home of Congressman Breckinridge, the democrats elected all their candidates.

NEW JERSEY.

The best indications are that John W. Griggs, the republican candidate for governor, is elected by a majority which the republicans claim will reach 80,000. The senate of the state is republican through the senators who hold over. There was no special issue in this state and the vote was light. Democrats may find some consolation in the claim made that many of them stayed away from the polls. The latest returns indicate that the assembly will be made up as follows: Democrats, 21; republicans, 39.

NEBRASKA.

The A. P. A. had a successful inning in Nebraska, winning out in Omaha against tickets pronounced in their denunciation of the order. The republicans, however, claim it was a straight republican victory. Democratic papers concede the republican majority in the state for T. L. Norval, candidate for the supreme court bench, to be 15,000.

OHIO.

Ohio republicans are claiming that Gen. Bushnell's plurality will be as high as 110,000, and democrats concede 80,000 plurality. Bushnell's vote may top that given to McKinley by 10,000 when all the returns are in.

KANSAS.

Democrats concede the election of David Martin, the republican candidate for chief-justice of the supreme court, by a substantial majority.

UTAH.

Utah declared for statehood, and probably elected the republican ticket, though it will take some time to tell for certain who was elected, as the returns are coming in very slowly.

ILLINOIS.

Interest in Illinois centered in the Cook county election. The republicans were successful in electing a judicial and drainage ticket. The democrats made substantial gains in Chicago, but not enough to overcome the republican majorities of the last election. In the Eighteenth district W. F. L. Hadley, republican, claims his election by 3,000 majority.

MASSACHUSETTS.

The result of the election in Massachusetts was hardly a surprise. Frederick T. Greenhalge, the republican candidate for governor, and the entire state ticket were elected by possibly 70,000 plurality. The vote differed little from that of last year, the democrats making slight gains.

MISSISSIPPI.

The democrats have every reason to feel proud of Mississippi, which fully maintained its standard. The democrats have carried the state by from 35,000 to 50,000 majority. The republicans did not have a ticket in the field, but the populists had a full slate.

PENNSYLVANIA.

The Quay-Hastings fight kept many republicans from the polls, but not enough to materially effect the result. The best figures indicate that the majority of Haywood, republican candidate for state treasurer, will be 175,000.

VIRGINIA.

Democratic losses are recorded in Virginia, but three-fourths of the legislature will be democratic.

ADDITIONAL RETURNS.

Gen. Hardin Concedes His Defeat in Kentucky.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 6.—A special to the Post from Harrodsburg, Ky., says:

Gen. Hardin, who is at his brother's home in this city, concedes Bradley's election from returns received. He takes his defeat cheerfully. It is probable he will open a law office in either Louisville, Frankfort or Lexington.

Bradley's Plurality in Jefferson County

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 6.—The official return from the city of Louisville and Jefferson county were all in at 9:30 a. m., and the city and county give Bradley 4,100 plurality. Bradley and Hardin both ran a little ahead of their tickets. Chairman Hunter of the republican state central committee estimates Bradley's majority at 5,000. He says the entire republican ticket is elected.

Wurster Elected Mayor of Brooklyn.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—The Brooklyn Eagle says that Wurster (reform) is elected mayor of Brooklyn by 350.

What Late Ohio Returns Show.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 6.—Later election returns do not materially change the result in Ohio. With two senatorial districts and one county in doubt, the republicans have 83 representatives and 29 senators out of 112 representatives and 37 senators. The plurality for Bushnell (rep.) for governor will fall between 90,000 and 100,000. It is generally conceded that the result has placed Gov. McKinley on solid ground in Ohio for support for the presidency next year. The result shows that he and his friends loyally supported the Foraker faction in this election, and the governor has earned and will receive the earnest support of the Foraker faction next year. The state of Ohio will now have two republican senators at the same time, which has not happened before since the war, except for a brief space from 1865 to 1869, when Ben Wade and John Sherman held seats together in the upper branch of congress.

The Republican Success in Maryland.

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 6.—Returns from the state are not yet complete, but the republicans carried nearly every county, and Lloyd Lowndes will have in the neighborhood of 17,000 plurality. The indications are that more than sixty republicans were elected to the house of delegates, a republican gain of about forty, and giving them a majority of about thirty.

The state senate will be close, with the chances favoring a republican majority therein. On joint ballot the republicans have some to spare, and will elect a successor to United States Senator Gibson.

The Utah Legislature Safely Republican.

SALT LAKE, Utah, Nov. 6.—Latest returns indicate the election of Wells, republican candidate for governor over Caine, democrat, by 1,000 to 1,500. Roberts, democratic candidate for congress, is probably elected over Allen, republican, by 500 majority. Democrats elect district judges. Salt Lake City election goes to the republicans by decreased majorities. The legislature will be safely republican, which insures two United States senators for the party. The populist party cut an insignificant figure throughout the territory.

Indications From Scattering Returns in Nebraska.

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 6.—Scattering returns from the rural districts indicate that Norval, for supreme court judge, has about 15,000 plurality. This city and county have gone heavily republican. Judge C. R. Scott, whose career has been familiar to newspaper readers for his imprisonment of Editor Rosewater of the Bee, has been re-elected in spite of the opposition of the entire bar. He is actually ahead of his ticket in many districts, the attacks upon him having apparently helped him.

Latest From Pennsylvania.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 6.—The latest returns indicate a plurality of 161,914 for Haywood (rep.) for state treasurer.

Ex-Gov. Campbell Takes a Cheerful View of His Defeat.

HAMILTON, O., Nov. 7.—When a reporter called upon ex-Gov. Campbell at his home yesterday morning that gentleman was found in a good humor, accepting his defeat calmly. When asked what he had to say about the result, he stated that he was not at all discouraged, but, on the contrary, had reason to, in a measure feel pretty good. He said the vote showed that the democracy of Ohio was more harmonious than elsewhere; that the fact that the vote of last year was exceeded was encouraging; that the duty of democrats now was to pick their flints and get ready to slice off the balance of the republican plurality next year; that instead of being discouraged, every democrat ought to nerve himself to go at the enemy next year more vigorously than ever.

Republican Pluralities Materially Increased.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—Returns received up to midnight materially increase the republican plurality in this state. In all but half a dozen counties the figures have been filed with county clerks, and the results compiled from their figures give Palmer, republican, for secretary of state, a plurality of 90,100. In nearly every county the actual republican vote is heavier than the estimate of Tuesday night indicated.

The standing of the next senate will be: 36 republicans and 14 democrats. The house will be: Republicans, 103; democrats, 47.

Everything Given to the Republican Party.

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 7.—Every branch of state and city government was placed by the people of Maryland in the hands of the republican party at Tuesday's election, Lowndes leading it with a plurality of about 17,000.

A republican will go to the United States senate to succeed Chas. H. Gibson, and fourteen of the senators elected will vote for a successor to Gorman in 1898.

Greenhalge's Plurality.

BOSTON, Nov. 7.—Complete returns from the state give the following vote for governor: Greenhalge, republican, 185,900; Kendall, prohibitionist, 8,766; Williams, democrat, 121,401. Plurality for Greenhalge, 64,499.

AFTER THE BATTLE.

The Field of Carnage as Viewed from the National Capital.

CHICAGO, Nov. 8.—A Washington special says: President Cleveland is charging none of the results of Tuesday's election to his administration, if the word of his officials is to be taken. On the contrary, he is taking a quiet smile over certain features of the returns.

Senator Gorman Charges His Defeat to the Administration.

Senator Gorman declares that President Cleveland's personal followers contributed to the success of Lowndes. The administration democrats appear to be willing to assume the responsibility as another achievement for reform. Herculean efforts were put forth by Senator Gorman during the campaign to secure from the president some expression favorable to the Maryland democratic ticket, but the president, who was urged by many influential democrats in Baltimore to keep hands off, obeyed the behest and remained passive. There seems to be no doubt that they expected and desired the defeat of Gorman's ticket.

Senator Gorman bears up well under his rebuke. Whilethe defeat of his ticket, it is conceded, will weaken his prestige, it does not affect his personal fortunes directly. If the legislature is republican, as now appears from the returns, Senator Gorman's colleague, Gibson, will be succeeded by a republican. The new legislature will not have to deal with Gorman himself.

The Maryland boss undoubtedly sniffed the approaching storm, for he retired to his home Tuesday night and received bulletins there by a private wire. Early in the evening he removed the knob from his door bell, drew the blinds and paid no heed to reporters, who vainly pounded at his door all night long.

Effect of the Election on the Senate.

The success of the republican legislative ticket in four states—Maryland, New York, New Jersey and Ohio—will add four republican senators to the republican column, to succeed Gibson, Hill, Smith and Brice on March 4, 1897. Besides the four democrats who go out, the terms of Palmer (Ill.), Vilas (Wis.), Voorhees (Ind.), democrats, and Kyle (N. D.) and Pfeffer (Kan.), populists, also expire with the close of this congress. Two of these, and possibly all five, will have republican successors. If President Cleveland's successor is a republican he will have a senate of at least ten and possibly twelve republican majority to confirm his nominations.

The effect of the elections Tuesday on the senate will not be apparent till after Utah is admitted as a state. That body at present contains forty-two straight republicans, two silver republicans, four populists, thirty-nine democrats and one vacancy (Delaware). When Dupont (Del.) is seated, the republicans will muster 43 votes. With Utah's two republicans the party will have 45 votes, or just one-half of the senate. On a party vote the republicans would be at a disadvantage against the combination of all other forces, for Vice-President Stevenson's vote would decide against them. The republicans, with the aid of Utah, may be able to organize the senate, for they are relying to some extent on securing the votes of Jones and Stewart, free silver republicans, and may get Pfeffer, populist.

TO UNITE POST OFFICES.

The Department Figuring on a Consolidation Scheme—Employes Protected.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—The president has approved an amendment to the civil service rules, which will result in bringing many postmasters and employes within the classified service. The addition is as follows:

And, whenever, by order of the postmaster-general, any post office shall be consolidated with and made a part of another post office where free delivery is established all the employes of the office thus consolidated whose names appear on the roll of said offices approved by the post office department, including the postmaster thereof, shall from the date of said order, be employes of the said free delivery office and the person holding on the date of said order the position of postmaster at the office thus consolidated with said free delivery office may be assigned to any position therein and given any appropriate designation under the classification act which the postmaster-general may direct.

It is the intention of the post office department to consolidate many offices throughout the country. This will not necessarily do away with the offices, but will establish them as stations of some central point. The department intends to make experiments in this direction and if they prove satisfactory the system will be largely extended. It is probable that presidential offices as well as fourth-class will be included in the consolidations. The order does not mean, however, that when any office is consolidated with another it will be served as a free delivery office or station. It will receive and distribute its mail as at present. The postmaster may become a clerk or chief of the station or he may be discharged and some other person appointed, but as soon as he becomes the clerk in the station he is included in the classified service and protected by it.

TO DEEPEN A RIVER.

Association Formed to Ask Congress to Make the Missouri Navigable to Kansas City.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 9.—The Missouri Improvement association, the headquarters of which are in St. Louis, wants congress to appropriate $1,000,000 a year for a period of three years to make the Missouri river navigable to Kansas City and as much further as possible. If the association's plans are successful this year, all congressmen from this state and from other states whose districts border on the big muddy will be given petitions to be presented to the next congress asking that the desired appropriation be made. Representatives are being sent over the state and into the territory to the north along the river to work up interest in the matter in order that the petitions may be largely signed.

IN DURRANT'S BEHALF.

Attorneys for the Condemned Man Fighting to Save His Neck.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 9.—Theodore Durrant was taken from the county jail to the superior court yesterday for sentence for the murder of Blanche Lamont. The court granted a continuance until November 22, at the request of the prisoner's attorney, who desired two weeks in which to prepare a motion and procure affidavits for a new trial. The charge against Durrant for the murder of Minnie Williams was on motion of the district attorney continued indefinitely. A large crowd awaited the arrival of the prisoner at the new city hall, but no demonstration was made.

LEPERS SUSPECTED.

A Sensation in New York on Account of Two Diseased Chinamen.

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—A small sensation was created at the bureau of contagious diseases yesterday by a report that two Chinese lepers who recently came to New York from Pittsburgh had been discovered in Chinatown. The men are Nip Shing, 40 years old, and Shen Fok, who is some five years younger. They left Pittsburgh three weeks ago. Nip Shing has been in America twenty years. It is said they kept a laundry in Pittsburgh. The bureau has detailed an inspector to work on the case. Intelligent Chinamen discredit the story.

SANTA FE WRECK.

Five Persons Injured Near Girard, Kan., One of Whom May Die.

GIRARD, Kan., Nov. 9.—A disconnected part of a Santa Fe local ran into an extra freight on a grade 10 miles north of Girard last night, smashing up a coach of the local and five cars. Five persons were injured, one of whom may die. The crews escaped by jumping. Those injured are: C. W. French, drummer, of Chicago; Charles Abend, drummer, of Cincinnati; Messrs. Armstrong and Solomon and an unknown man who was working on the Santa Fe bridge gang.

KENTUCKY LEGISLATURE TIED.

Each Side Claims to Have Sixty-nine Votes on Joint Ballot.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 9.—The Evening Post says that the general assembly will be a tie when it meets, and the election of a successor to Senator Blackburn is a matter of conjecture. The democrats will have 68 votes and 1 democratic-populist vote, making a total of 69. The republicans will have 68 and 1 republican-alliance vote, making a total of 69.

The Treasury Situation.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—The statement of the condition of the treasury shows: Available cash balance, $179,076,967; gold reserve, $92,819,037. The cash balance is $40,000 more and the gold reserve $32,000 less than on the preceding day.

Martin's Majority in Kansas.

TOPEKA, Kan., Nov. 9.—J. L. Bristow, secretary of the republican state central committee, says that from returns which he received he is of the opinion that Chief Justice Martin's majority will reach 80,000. The complete returns will not be canvassed until the last Monday in November.

A Dreadful Accident.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 9.—Little 4-year-old Johnny Burns, son of ex-Collector of Customs James Burns, shot himself through the heart while playing with a 44-caliber revolver at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

THE TRADE REVIEW.

The Past Week a Broken One on Account of the Elections.

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: It has been a broken week, and just after elections in the most important states, operations rarely have much significance. Business may be largely affected in time, but as yet there is scarcely any indications what the effect will be. The controlling power at present is the effort to readjust prices after the remarkable rise of last summer in important materials and products in the struggle of great combinations to prevent decline.

Many woolen mills are closing to wait for orders, though the demand is fairly satisfactory for some dress goods and worsteds and the Washington mills open clay worsteds at 10 cents advance. But prices of these and most qualities of woolens are still uncertain, for manufacturers do not know yet what they have to meet. The reaction from speculative prices of wool abroad, and the stiffness of country holders here, reduce sales to 5,621,300 pounds for the week, against 8,215,000 for the same week of 1892, but stocks of foreign wool here are very large.

Wheat falls back with great reluctance from its summer rise of 20 cents, but has declined 1¼ cents for the week, western receipts being 8,019,910 bushels, against 3,845,032 bushels for the same week last year. The belief in a crop much smaller than last year has to resist actual receipts of 45,725,568 bushels in six weeks, against 30,446,005 last year, and Atlantic exports have been only 9,093,424 bushels, flour included, against 13,347,619 last year. The reports of winter wheat from some states are also better.

Corn comes forward largely, receipts being more than double last year's, and nearly 1,000,000 bushels went abroad. The rapid marketing of supplies of wheat from Russia and Argentina, and the larger exports of corn from this country both tend to lessen the future demand for American wheat.

Failures for the week have been 280 in the United States, against 261 last year, and 49 in Canada, against 42 last year.

NICHOLSON RELEASED.

Domestics Excepted from the Operation of the Alien Contract Law.

TOPEKA, Kan., Nov. 9.—The habeas corpus suit brought some time ago by J. K. Cubbison for the release of W. S. Nicholson, of Kansas City, Kan., who was arrested at the instigation of Labor Commissioner Bird on a charge of violating the alien contract law, was tried yesterday before United States Judge Foster and decided in favor of Nicholson. Nicholson, who is an Englishman, brought a servant girl to this country and afterward sent for her brother, both of whom are employed as domestics. This constituted an offense, according to Mr. Bird's way of thinking, and he commenced proceedings. United States Commissioner Perry bound Nicholson over for trial. When the facts were presented to Judge Foster he ordered Nicholson's release on the ground that domestics are excepted from the operation of the alien contract law.

RUN DOWN A TUG.

The Newport News Sinks the Katie in a Fog in Chesapeake Bay.

NORFOLK, Va., Nov. 9.—During a dense fog off Sewell's point in Chesapeake bay the Norfolk and Washington line steamer Newport News yesterday evening ran down and sunk the tug Katie, belonging to Capt. John Twohy, of this city. The particulars are meager. The crew of the steamer Louise, which was near the scene of the accident, heard the two vessels crash together and the cries of the men in distress, but the fog was so heavy that they were unable to render any assistance. When they arrived at the scene of the disaster they found the bodies of the cook and fireman floating near the sunken tug. It is presumed that the remainder of the crew of the tug were rescued by the steamer, which proceeded to Washington.

CHINESE BEHEADED.

Five Leaders in the Massacre of Missionaries Put to Death.

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—A cablegram to the World from Foo Chow, China, says that the five vegetarian leaders in the massacre of missionaries at Hwasang were publicly beheaded at 9 o'clock yesterday morning. Before they were put to death there was an imposing ceremony in a tent on the grounds. The members of the American and British consular commission who went to Ku Cheng to watch the trial, the Chinese prefect of the province, many British and American residents were present. There was a procession to the grounds, arranged to impress the natives. Arrests of persons implicated in the massacre continue to be made at Ku Cheng.

NEGRO ELECTED JUDGE.

James C. Matthews Elevated to a High Office in New York.

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 9.—James C. Matthews, colored, recorder of deeds at Washington in President Cleveland's first administration, has been elected judge of the recorder's court of this city, which office carries with it powers of a supreme court judge. His majority is over 2,000. He was nominated and elected on the regular democratic ticket. It is the highest judicial office ever held by a man of his race in this country.

MONUMENT TO BISMARCK.

An Imposing Structure Will Be Erected at Berlin by the Kaiser.

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—A cablegram from Berlin to a morning paper says: "It has been officially announced today that his majesty, the kaiser, contemplates erecting an imposing monument to Bismarck, the stanch friend of the imperial dynasty and the real founder of the empire. This grand tribute of gratitude to the greatest diplomat of the age will stand in Holtenau at the entrance of the great Kiel canal, or, as his majesty christened it at the opening, the Kaiser Wilhelm canal."

BROWN CHEMICAL CO. BALTIMORE, MD.

THE * CHRONICLE.

C. C. DuBOSE, Editor and Proprietor.

COLUMBIANA, NOV. 7, 1895.

WE MUST HOLD THE INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL.

Doubtless our readers are aware ere this that we are deeply interested in the Girls' Industrial School remaining in Shelby county. We fear the people of this county do not realize fully the inestimable benefits that will accrue to us through the location of this school at our door, and the sole object we have in pressing this subject is to arouse them to action.

Perhaps many may think that Montevallo will derive more direct benefit from the school than all the rest of the county, and, therefore, should foot all the bills. If that were true we would reason likkwise, but it is just the reverse. Montevallo alone has a very limited number of girls to educate, a mere handful so to speak, as compared to the rest of the county, and can we compare the education of our daughters to the added wealth, be it great or small, that our neighbor town will gain through the agency of this school? If we can allow ourselves to make this comparison, then we who are supposed to have finished our education demonstrate by this reasoning that we have made poor use of our opportunities. To one who fully appreciates the manifold advantages of an education, in the broadest sense of the word, a comparison would be utter nonsense.

That is one view of the subject. Now let's get down to hard facts—to dollars and cents. Montevallo made a fearful sacrifice to get this school. She gave property easily worth $40,000, besides several thousad in cash (the exact amount we have not at hand). This was her bid, and on the strength of this offer, backed by a guarantee that it would be faithfully carried out, the board of trustees located the school there. When Montevallo made her offer she knew what she was doing, and she could easily have made good every provision of the contract.

Her people set to work promptly to carry out their promises, but before they had perfected their plans, the board of trustees met again and changed the conditions of the contract very materially. The board demanded that in lieu of the coal lands donated by Montevallo to the school, the institute building should be put in thorough repair and all the necessary buildings must be erected in a stipulated term.

Rather than give up the schol, this additional load was shouldered, but Montevallo cannot and should not bear it alone. She has done already her full share, and we still believe that the people of this county will go to her rescue.

Now the circumference of the situation is simply this: The conditions of the contract must be carried out to the letter, else the school will be removed from the county. Is there a man, a family or a community in this entire county that is willing to see this reproach brought upon us? Surely not. It would be a stigma that would not be buried with us, but would be an everlasting disgrace to our heritage. These are our honest views candidly expressed, and we firmly believe that our views will be coincided in by all after they have given the matter due consideration.

Let's go down in our pockets and help Montevallo. We don't mean to say, you furnish the money and we the wind, but we are ready to plank down the cash and throw in the wind. What will you do, brother?

NO BOOM IN MONTEVALLO LOTS.

The impression has gone abroad that since Montevallo has secured the Girls' Industrial School town lots are held there at ridiculously high prices. This is all a mistake, and as a matter of simple justice we desire to correct this error. Lots can be bought in Montevallo today as cheap as in any town of its size in the county, and we were informed by a citizen of that place that property can now be bought that before the location of the school there could not have been purchased at any price. These people have not only shown commendable enterprise in obtaining this school, but they now propose to hold their vacant lots at a very moderate price in order to induce as many as possible to purchase lots, build on them and become citizens of the town. It occurs to us this is the only sensible plan for them to pursue, and is another and strong illustration of their sagacity, enterprise and farsightedness. There is no questioning the fact that this policy will pay them handsomely in the end, and is certain to result in a large increase in the population of the town. A town that has the grit, vim and sagacity that Montevallo has exhibited in locating the Industrial school in her midst cannot be held in check. It has hardly yet started on the long and prosperous journey she will undoubtedly travel for many years to come, and we propose to embrace every opportunity that presents itself to give her a shove up the hill. She has gone through the crucial test and has proved to the world that her people are made of the right kind of material and it is only a question now of a very short time when she will begin to reap the rewards of her enterprise and generosity.

A PHILOSOPHICAL VIEW.

Editor Carmack, of the Memphis Commercial-Appeal, is alike a philosopher and humorist. He does not indulge in the abuse of anybody for the results of Tuesday's elections, but seeks solace in comforting proverbs and the fact that the democracy has encountered storms before, but never yet has the old craft failed to float. Here is Carmack's way of putting it:

It is more complimentary to the intelligence of the audience to tell the story and leave your hearers to find the moral and make the application. The story is that the democratic party has been routed all along the line and driven in headlong confusion from the field. Three of the "old reliable" democratic states have been added to the republican column. States optimistically supposed to be "doubtful" have piled their republican majorities so high that the brain swims and the eyeballs ache in contemplating the altitude thereof. In states conceded to be republican, but in which the cheerful democratic fancy reveled in "large democratic gains," the republican gains are simply brutal and inhuman. Without respect to the personality of candidates, the varying beauties of platform literature and the character of local issues, and with magnificent impartiality toward all points of the compass, wherever the democratic party entered the ring it got it in the neck. In the North, the South, the East and the West the same cruel and unusual punishment has been inflicted with characteristic contempt of the constitution of the United States and no respect at all for the constitution of the democratic party. The antipathy seems to have been against the genus democrat and was not confined to any particular species. The moment a candidate announced that he was a democrat, the crowd promptly jumped on him and slugged him in the ear and kicked him in the abdomen before he could explain what kind of a democrat he was. Whether or not the result of the election will have the effect of obliterating factional differences, it is certainly very hard right now to distinguish one kind of democrat from another. All alike have been pounded into a shapeless and featureless mass. A bloody and disfigured conglomeration of chewed ears, broken-down noses, misplaced eyeballs, pulverized jaws and fractured face bones—that is the democratic party this morning.

And still we are moderately gay—not uproariously merry nor obstreperously hilarious, but cheerful in a subdued and chastened sort of a way. It is in such times as this that we love to comfort ourselves with proverbs, such as:

1. Every cloud has a silver lining.
2. The darkest hour is just before the dawn.
3. Sweet are the uses of adversity.
4. Whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth.
5. A kick is more persuasive than an argument to a damphool.
6. Behind a frowning providence he hides a smiling face.
7. Afflictions, though they seem severe, are oft in mercy sent.
8. Nil desperandum.
9. Never give up the ship.
10. E pluribus unum.
11. Blessed are they that mourn.

We advise our democratic readers to get these sayings by heart. We regret to say that they are better reading than anything they will find in our news columns this morning. Our experience has been that in times of affliction a good proverb is better than a drink, though some people have been known to take both. In addition to the comforting words in the foregoing consolations there is also this highly comforting fact—that the democratic party has been used for door-mat and scrubbing-broom purposes a great many times, yet lived to dance on the graves of its enemies. It has been ridden to defeat by solemn, egotistical chumps, it has been knifed by assassins, sold out by traitors, debauched by corrupt and selfish leaders; in short suffered every fate but death. It was the first party on deck in this great country, was present at the birth of every other party and has attended the funeral of most of them. Just at this time it is a little disfigured—an eye or two has been lost in the shuffle, several ears are missing and its front teeth are not with it—but, in the language of the poet, it is still in the ring. A little while in the hospital will bring it around all right.

ALABAMA.

"God made Alabama a fine state. He put a greater variety of good things in the ground there than almost anywhere else. He gave her the most agreeable climate, the greatest abundance of cooling springs and wholesome waters. Her northern zone, the fertile valley of Tennessee, has been pronounced by many the garden spot of the South. Alabama has a richly endowed state university, a handsomely equipped agricultural and mechanical college, many other institutions for the higher education, five normal colleges and a first-class public school system. There are in the state over 200 newspapers, of which seventeen are dailies. Taxes are the lowest in the Union, and a man can get any kind of politics he wants, from high church republican goldbug to fiat money and farm produce currency. What can a man do in Alabama to make a living? Why, he can do nothing, for that matter, and make a living. There is no record of any one ever having starved in the state. There is good money waiting for an industrious man in anything. Nearly half the area of the state is still in timber. 'Come and go with us, and we will do thee good, for surely the Lord hath spoken good concerning Israel.' If you are tired of six months' winters, come, and when you first cast eyes on the Tennessee valley you will feel as the Indians did when they named the state and shouted: 'Alabama! Alabama!' meaning, Here is our rest.'"

MAJOR GUINN, United States engineer in charge of the lighthouses in the New Orleans district says that the lower delta and the sea marshes along the Gulf of Mexico are slowly sinking. For more than a year experiments with the gauges have been in progress at the mouth of the Mississippi river, and, as a result, Major Guinn has reached the conclusion that the level of the gulf has been raised one foot since 1877. This the major attributed to a gradual though irregular subsidence of the land along the coast, and he believes throughout the Mississippi delta and the southern portion of Louisiana.

IT looks now as though it will be Oates and Johnston again. Johnston announced in last Sunday's State-Herald that he was possessed of a strong desire to serve the people in the capacity of governor next year, and Governor Oates has consented to bury his senatorial aspirations temporarily, in order to make the race for governor; provided the people demand it. That settles it; the demand will be made. We thick-headed democrats up in this neck of the woods don't take any stock in "a platform broad enough for men of all parties to stand upon."

IN an interview on the business outlook Senator Calvin S. Brice said: "I think we are on the edge of the most prosperous times we have had for years. I belive for the next eight or ten years at least that this country will see a business prosperity unequalled in its history or in the history of the world. Every one of our 70,000,000 people will feel it, and it will be long before it passes away. There will be a great development along many lines and it will be a permanent development."

Two full moons will come in December. Adventists say this has not occurred since the coming of Christ, 1,896 years ago, and from the coincidence argue his second coming during the approaching holidays.

A New Law Needed.

From the Mobile Register.

The objection raised to the giving of a third term to a president should apply as well to the re-election of senators and representatives. No matter how fine a man the officer is, his equal probably exists; and new blood is the life of a political system. We make a practice of keeping a man in office until he thinks he knows more than the people who chose him; he becomes wedded to the seat in which he has been placed, and to the associations of public life. Often, "intoxicated by the exuberance of his own verbosity"—as Disraeli said of Gladstone—he is in his own imagination raised to the position of statesman. After that—being not truly a great man—he is wholly lost to the people who have given him honor. He sets himself up as bigger than the common herd from which he sprang, as the possessor of superior wisdom and as the only person who knows what is right and what is wrong. Absent for years upon years from his home people, ignorant of their condition and of their opinions, accepting as true the flatteries of such newspapers as have favors received from him to pay for, and also as true the adulation of office-seekers and office-holders, the honest and patriotic citizen of a dozen or so years ago becomes an insufferable prig, whose sole ambition seems to be to hold on to his office, no matter what else may happen. With eyes fixed firmly upon that bright particular star, his seat in congress, he forgets all else, forgets all promises and pledges, forgets all his own declarations and even—misled by the ignis fatuus of desire for office—turns his back upon his party which has honored him and dares to criticise the convention which has probably at no very distant date generously given him endorsement. The time which should be devoted to the interest of his constituents or his state is misspent in log-rolling, wire-pulling, speech-making and the writing of "interviews"—all with the one object in view, the retention of his hold upon the public place which he has long since ceased to ornament, and upon which he may now be truly said to batten.

And this is the fault not of the man but of the system. Few men, however upright and courageous, can resist the terrible influence of office. Once having drunk at the public fount they are ever after bewitched. The desire for office becomes the one and sole pleasure and pain of their lives. Have it they must, even if they trample in the dust family, friends, good name, and even honor itself; and the worst of it is that they are not the only victims of the witchery, for with their moral downfall comes the damage (and ofttimes ruin) of the interests committed to their charge, the neglect of the rights and liberties of the people and the stimulation of false desires, unhealthy policies and ruinous practices whereby the republic is retarded if not wholly stopped in its progress toword the establishment of the universal physical, mental and moral liberty of humanity.

What we need is a fundamental law that will limit the succession in legislative office. We should protect the men who cannot protect themselves, and whose weakness is at our cost.

Passing of the Milkmaid.

From the Savannah News.

One of the sweetest characters in fiction is the milkmaid; the rosy cheek, sunny tempered, Venus limbed and altogether loveable and lovely creature who gets out with her cedar piggin, at dewy morn and dusky eve, to extract the lacteal fluid from the rounded udder of the patient cow. The milkmaid of literature sings a gladsome love song as she strips the teats, the cow thinks herself highly honored by having been drained by those dimpled fingers, and the calf gambols with pure delight because that which should have been his dinner has been squirted into the piggin by so sweet a robber. No bucolic dream of poet is complete without its milkmaid. No city young man packs up for a summer vacation in the country without visions of milkmaid and ecstatic conquests. The milkmaid has been apotheosized, and mortals worship her from afar off.

As a matter of fact, the milkmaid that we read about may be characterized in the now famous language that the Hon. John James Ingalls used when he said that the decalogue in practical politics was a "d—— barren ideality." The ideal milkmaid does not exist outside of love stories and poems, except in the countries where hens have teeth. The real milkmaid in the majority of instances is unkempt, fat, freckled and more than forty, or else wears whiskers, breeches and cow hide boots, and chews tobacco and swears. These real milkmaids never get into story books and poems, but they sometimes get into the station house. They do not figure in romances of the Maud Muller class, but they are expert in mixing bran and romancing about the best milkers that they ever owned or milked.

The real milkmaids, however, are in danger of being shuffled off their stage of usefulness. A smart fellow has invented a mechanical milker, and it runs by steam. Engines and pumps create a vaccuum, the cow's teat is put where the vaccuum can get at it. In a few minutes the vaccuum has been dissipated and the milk is in the pail. It is reported that the cows like the operation better than they do the old-fashioned way of pressing the teats with the hands, and that the saving of milk is considerable. The steam milker was shown at a fair in New York state the other day. The cows were at first disposed to be suspicious of it, but when they found it did not prod them in the side every minute or so and yell, "So, there; back yer foot, darn ye!" they switched their tails and chewed their cuds in apparent commendation of the invention.

Two Lives Saved.

Mrs. Phoebe Thomas, of Junction City, Ill., was told by her doctors she had consumption and that there was no hope for her, but two bottles Dr. King's New Discovery completely cured her and she says it saved her life. Mr. Thos Eggers, 139 Florida St., San Francisco, suffered from a dreadful cold, approaching consumption, tried without result everything else then bought one bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery and in two weeks was cured. He is naturally thankful. It is such results, of which these are samples, that prove the wonderful efficacy of ths medicine in coughs and colds. Free trial bottles at Parker & Armstrong's drug store. Regular size 50c and $1.00.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

CURED BY

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

"Some time since, I had a severe attack of asthma, accompanied with a distressing cough and a general soreness of the joints and muscles. I consulted physicians and tried various remedies, but without getting any relief, until I despaired of ever being well again. Finally, I took Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and in a very short time, was entirely cured. I can, therefore, cordially and confidently commend this medicine to all."—J. Rosells, Victoria, Texas.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS.

Alex Liles visited Maplesville last week.

N. A. Graham, of Calera, was in town Monday.

E. B. Nelson spent two days of last week in Birmingham.

Prof. Kilpatrick, of Wilsonville, was in town Saturday.

James Reynolds, Esq., of Montevallo, spent Friday in town.

Mardis place for rent. Apply to W. F. Thetford, Jr., Agent.

Rev. W. I. Sinnott, with little Ina, spent last week in Selma, attending Synod.

Miss Ida McLane, of Gainesville, Texas, is a guest of her cousin, Rev. W. I. Sinnott.

Mrs. Sallie Pike, of Calera, is spending a short time with her sister, Mrs. George Vasser.

Col. J. K. Milner, the "boss" drummer, of Anniston, was "doing" the town yesterday.

Dr. E. B. Teague is in Selma this week attending a meeting of the Baptist ministers of Alabama.

Misses Nora and Georgia Leeper left Friday morning for Birmingham, where they will reside in future.

Miss Ida O'Hara is spending the week at home while her school room is being improved at Elliottsville.

We are glad to see John Porter out yesterday. He had a pretty tough seige of fever, but will soon be himself again.

Mrs. J. S. Leeper, with John Leeper, left Friday for Bessemer, where Mrs. L. will reside and John enters college.

County court will convene Monday, November 25th, and Judge McMillan will be given his first opportunity to dish out justice.

Quite a number went out to Beeswax creek Thursday afternoon last to witness the batizing of Rufus Leston by Rev. T. M. Wilson.

The probate judge informs us that the Confederate soldiers' pension warrants are in his hands for delivery. Many have already been called for.

Miss Emma DuBose left Tuesday for Fayetville, to act as bridesmaid at the marriage of her friend, Miss Kate Upshaw, who will be married on the 20th.

Mrs. W. A. Walburn and family are spending awhile with the family of S. T. Anchors. They are on their way from Shelby to Saganaw, where they will reside.

J. P. Adams, our own Joe, is at home on a visit. He slings the paint brush with the skill of an artist, and can paint anything desired, not excepting the town.

The teachers of this county will, no doubt, be glad to learn that arrangements have been perfected whereby they will be paid what is due them, and that right away.

The populites held a mass meeting in the court house last Saturday, to select delegates to the Birmingham conference, which met yesterday. Quite a goodly number of the bright and shining lights were here, with quite a sprinkling of "the common masses of the common people."

The many friends of W. C. Cannon will regret to hear of his serious illness. Although living in Sylacauga, he was here on business a great deal and made many friends.

To My Prtrons.

Owing to the fact that I have more business than I can properly attend to, I have placed my notes and accounts in the hands of Brown & Leeper for collection. Please call on them and settle promptly. Thanking all for past favors.

E. D. Hall.

The following marriage licenses have been issued since November 5th, the day Judge McMillan took hold of the probate office: J. M. Johnson to Lena Lee, E. G. Walker to Sarah Lucas, C. G. Brasher to Nancy Brasher, Wm. L. Farley to Daisy Cox, A. C. Hill to A. L. Deshazo. The following are colored: Perry Sams to Rebecca Brown, Sim Cohill to Emma Graham.

To Our Former Customers.

Being anxious to wind up the old business, and not having time to look after it personally, we have placed all our accounts and notes in the hands of W. F. Thetford, Jr., for collection. Please call on him and settle promptly. Thanking you all for past favors, we remain,

E. D. Hall & Co.

Notice.

Mr. J. H. Newton, general agent for The Farmers' Mutual Insurance Association, is in this county assisting Mr. J. W. Moore, local agent insuring property. All the members are requested to meet at the court house on the 20th inst., at 10 a. m., to organize. The general agent has appointed three other men to help insure property in Shelby. He wants to organize with $100,000. Persons can on that day become members. The general agent and others will lecture to the association on that day.

Great Is Atlanta.

Cotton States and International Exposition, Atlanta, Ga., opens September 18th, closes December 31st, 1895. The Southern railway will sell tickets from Columbiana, Ala., at the following rates for the round trip, viz: $3.70, good to return within seven days from date sold; $5.40, good to return within fifteen days from date sold; $7.35, good for return passage until January 7th, 1896. Information in regard to rates, tickets and schedule cheerfully furnished by any representative or agent of the Southern.

Our esteemed county treasurer, W. A. Thompson, came near having a fatal accident Saturday afternoon. He was driving up Main street a rather spirited horse hitched to a light wagon. When on the bridge just beyond the Roper House one of the shafts broke. This frightened the horse and he made a lunge, throwing one wheel of the wagon off the end of the bridge and landing Mr. Thompson on his head in the ditch. He was taken home, where he has been confined until yesterday, when he ventured down town. He was badly shaken up and bruised, but fortunately no serious results will follow. A negro man and boy were in the wagon at the time of the accident, and both of them were thrown out and hurt considerably, but scared a great deal worse.

Harpersville Echoes.

Don't you want a P'sam?

To Judge McMillan, here is our ☞.

The long dry spell was broken Saturday.

Well didn't those elections last week play thunder?

Miss Mattie Kidd is assisting Prof. Florey in his school.

Mr. Martin is building a new mill house at the Glaze Spring.

The colored Baptists are building them a new church near here.

Miss Sallie Martin, of the Atheneum, spent last week at home and went back to East Lake Sunday evening.

Capt. Wilson Borum, president of the Syndicate Quilting Machine Company, spent two days of last week in Talladega.

The last quarterly meeting of the Harpersville circuit was held at Rehoboth church, eight miles north of here last Saturday and Sunday.

The next term of commissioners court will be asked to place a tin dipper at McGowan's Spring for the benefit of the Harpersville democrats who go to Columbiana.

Since Dr. Nelson has married he has given up the presidency of the "possum" club, and W. B. Hubbard and Renfro Martin are highly spoken of for the honered position with Hubbard in the lead.

Mrs. Kidd and the Colonel went over to woodlawn last week to be at the marriage of Mrs. Kidd's sister, Miss Lula Darby, which happy event took place in the Baptist church Thursday night.

Mr. Editor, is it a real fact that John Spencer went off with Main's Show? When we last saw him he was riding of a barrel in their crowd, and we have never heard for certain whether he went with them or not.

We were pleased to meet on our streets one day last week our old time and clever friend Dr. Sam Welch, of Alpine. Although not married yet he seems to think that there is still some chance, and has not given up in despair.

Rev. B. F. Giles will preach at the Baptist church Saturday night to the young people, but the old, the rich, the poor, the blind, the ugly and the "purty" are invited. Let everybody come out and hear the eloquent preacher.

We hear it rumored that the good people up in St. Clair county will ask the Shelby county commissioners to build them a footway across Toe river on the Valley road leading to Easonville, and as this august body never refuses anything of course their request will be granted.

"Jake."

Wilsonville Warblings.

Hickory nuts and walnuts are all the rage.

J. W. Bolin went to Anniston on business Monday.

Miss Susie Self paid Birmingham a flying visit last week.

Say, Mr. Jimpson, ain't you glad Christmas is most here.

Mrs. McGowan left Sunday for Jacksonville to visit her sister, Mrs. Porter.

Mr. Britton, of Anniston, is in our little town engaged as tinner on the brick store.

Frisk and Brownie must be off on a visit, as we have not heard from them in a long time.

The young people of our school have organized a literary society. Let the good work go on.

George Smith, express messenger on the A. G. S., came down Saturday on a visit to home folks.

Mrs. Holland has been on the sick list for several days, but we are glad to hear that she is improving.

Mr. Bolin is getting on very nicely with his saw mill. He thinks he will be able to saw some in about a week.

If wild ducks and geese are a sign of cold weather we will certainly have it. Several large droves were seen Saturday going south.

Miss Lula Stephens, one of our most charming young ladies, returned home Wednesday after a three week's visit to relatives in East Lake.

Mr. Stephens and family think of leaving for Texas the last of this month. May they have good luck and prosperity in their new home.

Red Bird thinks that the Fool Alabama Kickers have about seen their best days. They are keeping awfully quiet. Wonder what's the matter.

The meeting of The Earnest Workers was held Sunday evening at the Baptist church. A very interesting talk on India was rendered by Rev. J. M. McCord.

The residence of Mr. Harkins near this place was destroyed by fire last Wednesday at noon. They saved a few things. We extend to them our sympathies.

The account in last week's paper about Miss Sallie Bolin was a mistake. We regret to report anything so far wrong as that. But people can hear most anything these days. It was only written as a joke on Miss Sallie.

C. C. Crail, the converted tramp, lectured at the Baptist church Wednesday evening. A large crowd was out to hear him. He gave us a real good lecture, is the general verdict. He came to the school the next morning and made a very appropriate talk. We would be glad to hear him again.

Red Bird.

A Puncture Proof Tire.

From the New York Times.

There is a prospect of there being on the market at an early date a new tire, puncture proof and fully resilient, manufactured by Mayor Schieren, of Brooklyn. It is made of leather, with an inner air tube of the usual quality of rubber,

Superintendent of Police McKelvey has a sample of this odd device in his office, and the scheme leaked out through his sending for Fred Burns and Alexander Schwalbach to get their opinion of it. Strange as it may seem, it has thus far met with approval.

The leather is a flexible variety of the style used for shoe soles and has been treated by working sand and grit through the pores so that it is next to impossible to pierce it with any instrument. A tack cannot be driven through it, whatever force is used.

The inflation of the rubber air sheath gives the same yielding quality possessed by other pneumatic tires, and when dropped upon the floor it bounces as high as those having an outer shoe of rubber and fabric. It is claimed that it will not change its character when wet because of having a water-proof surface. The weight of the tire is about the same as the "full road hose pipes."

NEW CHATTANOOGA LABORATORY.

One of the Largest in the World—Wine of Cardui Has an Immense Sale.

The immense new laboratory of the Chattanooga Medicine Company was commenced at Chattanooga, Tenn., Nov. 9th. Nearly an acre of floor space is now used in making McElree's Wine of Cardui and Thedford's Black-Draught, but this new annex doubles the capacity of the plant. This business has become one of the largest in the country and now sends its leading product, Wine of Cardui, to every part of the world. A branch office has been established at St. Louis for the Northwestern trade.

A CLAW-FINGERED PEOPLE.

A Strange Deformity of a Family in Western New York.

The most picturesque stream in western New York is the Cattaraugus. Through most of its course it is the boundary line between the counties of Erie and Cattaraugus, and it is not a large stream, except when melting snows or autumn rains have swelled it into a torrent. Rich farms, wooded slopes, deep gorges whose lofty walls form the high banks, as the natives call them, and a tangled wilderness where nature still runs riot, as she has from the first; these mark the course of the Cattaraugus. The Indian name is itself musically expressive, and recalls the days when only red men occupied its banks. There are still Indians along it, and the reservation named for it contains most of the few remaining members of the Seneca tribe, once the possessor of all the region from Lake Erie to and beyond the Genesee.

The reservation begins near the village of Gowanda, and just above there, shut in by high hills, is the wildest and most inaccessible spot in the whole region, the valley of Zoar. How or from whom the place received its Biblical name, or what is the resemblance between this secluded spot and the city which, in the Old Testament story, figures along with Sodom and Gomorrah, are matters which not even the oldest inhabitant is able to explain. Here among the hills, where strange faces are rarely seen, is concealed a remarkable example of nature's occasional vagaries and the strange persistence of abnormalities through heredity. Among the few residents of Zoar there are several families of claw-fingered persons. They are not wild or hair-covered, at least not more so than most of the folk among the Cattaraugus, but nearly all of them have a curious deformity of the fingers and toes which gives them their name. They have lived here many years, and, although their neighbors are still inclined to look upon them somewhat askance, they are no longer regarded as especially wonderful, and one might travel through the valley a dozen times without once hearing a word about its strange inhabitants.

In driving through the valley recently the writer came across an old farmer loading hemlock bark by the roadside, and inquired for the claw-fingered residents.

"That Robbins tribe?" was the reply. "Yes, I've knowed some of 'em for nigh on forty years, 'cause I was raised right here. Yes, their hands is like claws. Some of 'em. It's a mighty cur'us thing, but 'tain't nuthin' much to look at. Why, folks come all the way from Buffalo (between 30 and 40 miles) to look at 'em, an' you'd think by the way they go on about it that they was goin' to a circus."

The old man shook his head at the unaccountable curiosity of the Buffalo visitors, and turned again to his work.

Although the residents of Zoar usually refer to their strange neighbors as a tribe, they use the word only as it is frequently employed in rural districts in speaking of any large family. They are by no means looked upon as a separate order of beings. Still there is a strong social prejudice against them. Although this prejudice has not been sufficient to prevent marriages with other families in the neighborhood, it has discouraged such marriages. The consequence is that there has been much intermarrying in the family, and this may have something to do with the perpetuation of their deformity.

As well as can be learned, the peculiar digital formation of the claw-fingered folks has existed in Zoar through four generations. In the early part of the century a man named Robbins settled in Zoar. He was remarkable because his fingers and toes were so bent that they resembled claws somewhat more than they did human digits. In other respects there was nothing particularly striking about his appearance. His strange, claw-like hands and toes became objects of considerable curiosity, but it does not appear that Robbins ever explained the origin of his deformity. Of course after it reappeared in his descendants it became the general opinion that Robbins himself inherited it. Others believe that he was the founder of the claw-fingered family, and that he settled in this remote spot because of his disfigurement.—N. Y. Sun.

Severe Test on Complexions.

Among flowers the lily seems to be the most severe test of woman's loveliness. In reality, it is too stiff, too unyielding, to be quite suitable for tucking into the belt or for wearing in the corsage. But the form usually chosen for the lily as a personal decoration is to be seen in pictures, where fair young persons hold sprays of them. The acknowledged beauty and the actress are peculiarly prone to this bit of posing. And the effect is usually unsatisfying. Possibly the cause lies in the formality of this flower; in the fact that it is not adaptable, and is stiff and uncompromising. But there is, perhaps, a deeper reason. The lily has come to symbolize for us the spiritual, and though this is but a convention, it yet influences us, as if it were really a belief. From this arises the effect of unsuitability felt when the stately white sprays are used for personal adornment. It seems too frivolous a treatment of them, and, moreover, few are the faces in which spirituality is so predominant that the lily seems to belong to them.—Chicago Chronicle.

Bunk Weatherford and the Little New Grave Down There in the Orchard—A Story of Stony Grief—Boys a Plenty, and Some to Spare.

(Copyright, 1895.)

Somewheres in the books it is written, "As arrows are in the hand of a mighty man, so are the children of the youth. Blessed is him that hath his quiver full of them." Here lately I have done piles and piles of thinkin along them general lines. Naturally of course I believe what the Word says in regards to that, and everything else. But sometimes the more I think about it the worse I git all mixed and muddled up with myself touchin the great question of children.

"Till Death Do Us Part."

Over there in the hill country lives a man by the name of Bunk Weatherford. Through childhood and boyhood he was my side partner in a thousand clost calls and tight places. He is now my fellow-citizen and my friend till death do us part.

Well, Bunk he rode by one day last week and throwed some new light on the subject at hand. Soon as ever the man hove in sight I knowed good and well that somethin terrible had come to pass over in the hill country. He was ridin of the onlyest ball-face mule in the country, which I would know that mule if I was to meet him in Halifax with a linen duster on. But the man was ridin in a slow walk, and that didn't look like Bunk Weatherford. He want singin and he want whistlin, which that didn't have the usual sound and appearments of Bunk. But it was Bunk.

The news had went the rounds some days before to the extent that Bunk's baby girl, little Mittie, was mighty sick. It was my place to of went over there to see about it, but somehow every time I got ready and started to go I didn't go. If there is anything in this wide and wicked world which I do love it is women and children. But in case of sickness I reckon I am the blamdest most onhandiest man you ever heard tell of. Around where anybody is sick I am as awkward and bad out of place as a blind mule at a shootin match. So I hadn't went over as yet to see about little Mittie. They told me that Aunt Nancy Newton had come up from Panther Creek, with yerbs in her hands and healin in her wings, as it were, and I was plum willin to leave the little one with Aunt Nancy and the good Lord.

A Story of Stony Grief.

Right up to the horse rack rode Bunk Weatherford that day, but he never turned his head or spoke a word. I told him to dismount and git down and hitch and come in, which he went on to do, but he didn't say nothin.

I have seen the mettle of that man Bunk Weatherford under fire and on trial, you understand. I have seen him when the air was full of bowie knives and pistols—with fools and whisky a plenty at both ends of the game—stand up flat-footed and never move a muscle or bat his eye. So when I went out that day and met him at the gate and took his hand and felt it tremlin in mine and saw the tears big as glass marbles standin in his eyes, I knowed good and well what it meant. Fate had laid his hand on little Mittie, and she had went the final way of all human flesh.

It was some time before Bunk could unlimber himself sufficient to open up and do any talkin to speak of. Then he would have to stop oncst in a while to take a long breath and keep from chokin.

"You can see I am all busted and broke up, Rufe," Bunk went on to say presently, "and I reckon you know without any tellin from me how it come to pass. I can't understand it, Rufe—that little new grave which they have made down there in the orchard—blamed if I can understand it. They took and buried our little Mittie there this mornin. They say it is well and right—that it will all work out right somewheres down the line—but it don't look right, and it don't feel right to me now, and hanged if I can see how it will ever come out that way. But me and Aunt Nancy and all the doctors put together couldn't help it. I rode down two young mules huntin up doctors and goin after medicine, and Mandy (that's Bunk's wife) she didn't shet her eyes in sleep for a whole entire week. But we couldn't keep the little one with us any longer.

"Remember, Rufe, she was the onlyest gal we had in the family, and the baby at that. And it is the hardest and most strangest thing in the world to me why we couldn't manage no way to keep the little thing on the earth till some other and further day. The world was a heap more brighter and better place with her than it ever will be without her.

"But I reckon you must be about three-thirds right, Rufe, in regards to one thing—man borned of woman is mighty small potatoes and few in the hill, with the rows six feet apart. By gracious, I brung in the best doctor in the country, and told him I would give him a clear deed to our farm and all the stock on it if he would but only pitch in and go to work and stop that fever and cure our little Mittie. And Mandy lowed she would fling in her cows and chickens and all the house fixments into the bargain. Well, the doctor he pitched in and went to work, but that was all. He couldn't do nothin with the fever, and he couldn't put off the diggin of that little new grave down there on the orchard any more than me and Mandy and Aunt Nancy could."

Boys a Plenty and to Spare.

"There is another pint, Rufe, which sticks in my heart and keeps up a monstrous hurtin there," Bunk went on to say in his sad and solemncholy way. "You know we have got boys a plenty and some to spare at home, and how it ever come to pass that Providence had to take our little Mittie and leave mine of them healthy, hongry yearlin boys around the place passeth all my understandin. Some of our boys are all right, and some of them aint worth havin. In a bunch of nine we raley couldn't expect to get more than five or six to show up all right. Hit maybe mought sound ruther rough and pecurious for me to say so, Rufe, but there are three boys at home which I could spare a blame sight better and more easier than I can spare the little thing they took and buried down there in the orchard. Now, if the good Lord had but only called for one of them triflin boys—or even all three of 'em in a bunch—it would not hurt so awful bad nor look so mighty strange to me.

"Onest upon a time, when you was over to our house, Rufe, I recollect you told me and Mandy how proud and happy we ought to be with that baby girl. You went on to say somethin—and Mandy she aint forgot the words till this day—about the sunshine of her presence and the paterin music of her feet. That's the idea, Rufe, and it covers all the ground, though I never could of put it in that way. And now the sunshine and the music hit aint there. I can see the baby duds and doll rags, and the little shoes and stockins, and the like of that scattered all around the place, Rufe, but the sunshine and the music hit aint there."

Before he went away Bunk lowed he didn't know for certain which to do—whether to go back home, or go crazy or git drunk. But I finally at last put him in the notion to go on back home to Mandy and the boys, like a man, and suffer, and be strong.

"Be Thankful and Say Nothin."

Naturally, of course, I felt mighty sorry for Bunk Weatherford that day. I wanted to make him feel better instead of worse, if I could, and I didn't bring the subject up with him. But it is my own private, personal opinions that him and Mandy use to brag and take on too everlastin much about their boys. For a long time they made out like they didn't want nothin' but boys at their house. Bunk he preached forth the doctrine that poor folks didn't have no business with anything but boys. They wanted plow hands and wood choppers and rail splitters, and, to hear them tell it, they didn't need no girls in their business. But bye-and-bye the good Lord took and give them one little girl baby, anyhow, which they called her name Mittie, and then, by gracious they thought it was the onlyest one in the round created world. No wonder it was so powerful hurtin on them to give up little Mittie.

My notion is that people ought to take what they can git, and be thankful, and say nothin. It don't make a blessed, blame bit of difference with me how many babies the good Lord and the doctors bring around by my house. I wouldn't feel natural and right, and I wouldn't be happy without a gang of them around the place. But I will never stop to put in no questions as to whether they must be boys or girls. And it wouldn't jar my hand any whether they come one or two or three in the burr.

"As arrows are in the hands of a mighty man, so are the children of the youth. Blessed is him that hath his quiver full of them."

THE latest in regard to Hawaii was that a movement was on foot there which might result in the annexation of the islands to the United States before a year passes.

IN fast express trains England leads with an average speed of 51.75 miles per hour, with Germany a close second, 51.25 miles, and Austria the lowest of the great nations, 41.5 miles.

A JOYOUS testimonial to the efficacy of printer's ink was the reunion of Mr. and Mrs. H. Burnett, of Elgin, Ill., who were separated thirty years ago by the war and who were recently brought together by an advertisement.

THE spirit of progress has at last reached to Bull Run and Appomattox. The first battlefield of the war is to be sold at auction, to be divided into small farms and town lots. The sale will take place at Manassas, Va., December 2.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND'S views on the Cuban situation, as expressed in his forthcoming message to congress, will be awaited with considerable interest by the Cubans, who are endeavoring to bring pressure upon congress to give them recognition, at least as belligerents.

VANITY FAIR, a London paper, recently had a dispatch from Paris referring to the recent losses on the bourse there, in which the statement was made that Count Castellane, who recently married Miss Anna, daughter of the late Jay Gould, was one of the heavy losers.

THE Berlin correspondent of the London Times stated that the German Bimetallic league had adopted a resolution that before an international conference was held on the subject of bimetallism the German government ought to debate the subject with America and France.

JOHN PRETTY, a Creek Indian, was convicted in the Indian court at Wewoka, I. T., recently of stealing a saddle and received fifty lashes on his back. Two more Indians were to receive the same punishment for a similar crime. A second offense will, in the Indian court, be punishable by death by shooting.

THERE was a definite understanding among the attaches at the French legation at Washington that ex-Consul Waller would be released before New Year's day. This, it was said, was part of the programme of the new radical ministry of France, to extend amnesty to all political offenders. Waller's release will come as part of a general scheme of forgiveness.

ONE of the interesting topics in military circles is the proposition to mobilize national guardsmen once a year for competitive drill, regular army officers to be constituted as judges. The idea is to do away with state militia encampments and create great military divisions, embracing several states, and once a year have a grand encampment of citizen soldiery.

WHAT the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railway officials termed a phenomenal run was recently made by a passenger train between Chicago and Mendota. The distance is 80 miles and it was made in eighty minutes, including five stops and two slowups. Superintendent Rice estimated the stops and slowups caused a loss of twenty minutes. This makes the actual running time sixty minutes, or at the rate of 80 miles an hour. This was the banner run for the Burlington route.

In a recent article Carol Norton gives some statistics showing the remarkable growth of the cult known as Christian science. It was founded in Boston in 1866 by Dr. Mary Baker Eddy, and now has 200 incorporated churches in the United States, besides others in which less formal services are held. The textbook, "Science and Health," first published by Mrs. Eddy in 1875, is now in its ninety-seventh edition, and the Massachusetts Metaphysical college, where she taught, graduated 4,000 students.

A PETITION bearing sixty thousand signatures and asking that the reading of the Bible be restored to the public schools is to be presented to the Chicago board of education by the Woman's Educational union. It was stated that the union had received a great many communications from the Catholic clergy and in no instance had they opposed the move so long as it was strictly non-sectarian in its nature. It is the plan of the union to prepare select passages of Scripture for use in the public schools which shall be entirely non-sectarian.

THE president of the National Reform association has issued a call for a meeting of that body in Baltimore, Md., December 12 and 13. The object is to "consider the vital issues of the hour, to promote all wise measures of reform and seek such an amendment to the constitution of the United States as will suitably acknowledge God, the authority of the Lord Jesus Christ and the supremacy of His law over the nations." All Christian churches, societies of Christian Endeavor, Christian Temperance unions and all kindred organizations are invited to send delegates.

PHYSICIANS recently made a remarkable test of Thomas Vreeland, an inmate of the hospital for incurables at New York. The man is apparently insensible to all feeling of pain. The doctors jabbed knives into the most sensitive parts of Vreeland's body and jammed their fingers into his eyes. One doctor drew a long pin from the lapel of his waistcoat and stuck it repeatedly into the legs and arms of the old man, as though he had been a pincushion. The doctors were unable to explain the trouble satisfactorily. They called it degeneration of the nervous system.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

PERSONAL AND POLITICAL.

ARMENIANS attacked several Mohammedan villages near Zeitoun and fired the houses. In the village of Kurbel one Mohammedan was burned alive, the place being entirely destroyed, as was also the town of Tchoukourhissar. Several other places were also sacked. The sultan has sent orders that order must be promptly restored and both Christians and Mohammedans equitably treated.

THE executive committee of the American Bimetallic league on the 15th unanimously adopted a resolution accepting the invitation of the national silver committee, of Chicago, in calling a conference of those who believe in the free coinage of gold and silver at 16 to 1, independently of other countries, to meet at Washington, January 22, 1896, for the purpose of arranging for a national convention.

A PROMINENT Spaniard at Mexico City, in close touch with the Spanish government, stated that before Spain would concede Cuban independence or permit the island to go under the protection of the United States she would give England possession of it until that country had collected the advances she had made to carry on the war with Cuba.

AT 9 o'clock on the 15th, at St. Petersburg, a daughter was born to the czar and czarina. The baby has been named Olga.

IN the contest of Wood (rep.) for the seat in the Kentucky legislature of Kaufman (dem.) a discovery has been made which beyond a doubt gives Wood the seat and will thereby give the republicans a clear majority on joint ballot in the legislature. It has been discovered that Kaufman's election, while holding office as a city councilman, was contrary to the statute, and Wood will be seated without further protest.

A CLAIM for $200,000 against the Spanish government was to be filed in Washington in behalf of John Repko, an Italian by birth but a naturalized American citizen, who was the proprietor of the Rome Grand Continental hotel in Havana. Repko claims that one night in the summer he and his family were driven from the hotel by Spanish soldiers and it was confiscated on the ground that he was a sympathizer with the Cuban revolutionists.

SENATOR HARRIS, the chairman of the executive committee of six appointed at the Washington conference of last August to organize for the campaign of 1896 the free silver democrats of the country, has sent a letter to his colleagues stating that he had no hope of democratic success in 1896 unless they could succeed in so organizing the bimetallic democrats as to secure in the national convention a plain declaration in favor of the free and unlimited coinage of both silver and gold, without regard to the financial policies of any country.

REV. DR SAMUEL ASHTON KEAN, a noted evangelist and religious writer, died at Delaware, O., on the 13th of heart trouble, aged 53 years.

THE Georgia house of representatives unanimously adopted a resolution on the 13th inviting Secretary Hoke Smith to address the assembly on the issues of the day on such date as he might find convenient.

BY special invitation, conveyed by joint resolution of both houses, ex-Speaker Crisp addressed the Georgia legislature on the 13th on the political issues of the day. Mr. Crisp confined himself almost exclusively to the financial question and in the course of his remarks he declared himself unequivocally in favor of the free, unlimited and independent coinage of silver at a ratio of 16 to 1.

SENATOR-ELECT P. J. BENNETT, of Carroll county, Md., died suddenly on the 13th. He was elected as a democrat. Gov. Brown will be called upon to order a special election for Carroll county, and upon the result of that election depends the political complexion of the next senate of Maryland.

A RECENT New York dispatch said that an important step had been taken to bring about a union of reform forces for the campaign of 1896. A letter, signed by about 100 men and women of one or the other of the minor parties, was sent to the national committeemen of the populist, prohibition and socialist parties, asking that a subcommittee of three be appointed to confer with reference to a joint national conference.

MISS PAULINE PAYNE WHITNEY, daughter of ex-Secretary Whitney, was married to Mr. Almeric Paget at St. Thomas church, New York. The wedding was a notable event, President Cleveland and many other distinguished persons being present at the ceremony.

MISCELLANEOUS.

UNDER the abandoned military reservation act, the war department has turned over to the interior department, for disposition, the Fort Buford reservation, North Dakota, 440,000 acres; also the Fort Hancock, Tex., 469 acres, and the reserved portions of Cat island, Mississippi sound, Miss., Horn island, in the same sound; Petit Bois island, in the same sound, and all of Round island, in Jackson county, Miss.

A DISPATCH from New York stated that Peter Maher, the pugilist, had challenged any man in the world to fight for the championship. He did not challenge Corbett as Maher had been asked as a personal favor not to do so, as Corbett had retired. Maher was anxious to meet Fitzsimmons. Brady telegraphed to Dan Stuart at El Paso, Tex., saying: "Corbett surrenders championship and belt to Maher and will back Maher for $10,000 against Fitzsimmons." Stuart replied that Corbett had better win the belt before he disposed of it."

FROM 500 to 1,000 cabmen were on strike at New York on the 14th, all the cab service of the hotels and theaters being cut off. The cause of the strike was the employment of non-union men at the stables.

A STEAM launch belonging to the British cruiser Edgar was reported to have been lost in Japanese waters and forty-eight men who were on board of her were drowned.

A NATIONAL organization of agricultural newspaper men was organized at Chicago on the 15th. It was named the Agricultural Press league, and the officers for the coming year are: M. J. Lawrence, president; J. W. Wilson, vice president; J. B. Conner, treasurer. The next meeting of the league will be held in Chicago next March.

CLEARING house returns for the principal cities in the United States for the week ended November 15 showed an average increase as compared with the corresponding week last year of 14.5; in New York the increase was 16.9; outside New York the increase was 11.8.

A YEAR ago John Byers, a farmer, living near Chandler, Ok., was shot and killed while returning along the road from church by Peter Glass, a negro neighbor, who claimed that he was hunting and in the dark mistook Byers for a panther. The jury brought in a verdict of guilty of manslaughter, the punishment being not less than twenty years in the penitentiary.

A WINE merchant at Paris, France, named Domergue, suddenly went insane and shot his wife and mother and then began shooting at passersby from his window, killing three persons and wounding a number of others. After using up all his ammunition he barricaded himself in his house, but was finally arrested by the gendarmes.

IT was recently reported that twenty-five immigrants on their way to California from Oklahoma were in a fearful condition on the Colorado desert. They had abandoned their worn-out horses and their food was almost exhausted. A Southern Pacific train stopped and gave them a barrel of water.

JACK MULVANE and J. B. Martin, living about 20 miles northwest of Perry, Ok., began a fight over a tract of land, when their wives joined in. Mulvane was badly cut by Martin and Mulvane's wife dealt many hard blows to Martin and wife with a hoe. It was thought Mrs. Martin and Mulvane could not live.

EDITH CROW, a 3-year-old daughter of Gus Crow, living at Sherman, Tenn., met a horrible death recently. The child attempted to put out a bonfire burning in her father's back yard, when her clothes took fire and her flesh was literally roasted to the bone.

AT the meeting of the Knights of Labor at Washington on the 13th the address of General Master Workman Sovereign was devoted to the alleged treachery of those who headed the recent revolt against the general officers of the order. He appealed to the assembly to give to his recent order boycotting national bank notes its official sanction and denounced the action of the bankers' convention at Atlanta, Ga. General Worthy Foreman Bishop called attention to the evolution of machinery during the last few years and the elimination of human skill from all forms of productive industries.

THE district court of appeals at Washington has affirmed the decision of Judge McComas in the case of Capt. Henry W. Howgate, convicted of forgery and falsification of accounts. Howgate was sentenced to four years on each of two counts. Howgate has surrendered himself. An application for pardon will be made.

EDWARD WEMPLE, an ex-congressman and an ex-official of New York, was arrested at his home at Fultonville, N. Y., on the charge of arson. His friends claimed that his mind was unbalanced through dissipation.

CONDENSED TELEGRAMS.

JAMES GOINGS, who assaulted Miss Lillie Jones, near Frederick, Md., was taken from the jail by a mob of 300 men on the 17th and hanged to a tree.

A HEAVY electric motor car containing between twenty and thirty passengers went through the draw of a viaduct at Cleveland, Ohio, on the 17th and dropped 101 feet to the river below. Twenty persons were killed.

THE State Department has received a cablegram from United States Minister Terrell confirming the reports from Constantinople concerning the massacre of 800 persons by the Mussulmans at Kharput and the destruction of a large amount of American mission property.

THE Choctaw council has passed a bill making it a crime punishable by death to sell land to a non-citizen, to attempt in any way to curtail the powers of the Choctaw government, or even urge a change of government, the allotment of lands or opening of the country to settlement.

THE shipments of gold from New York during the past week aggregated $3,267,600.

THERE were 279 business failures reported throughout the United States the past week, compared with 260 last week, 280 in the week one year ago and 370 in the week two years ago, and as contrasted with only 205 in the corresponding week of 1892.

THE military cyclists have completed arrangements for a relay ride from Washington to New York City, to begin at noon, Sunday, December 1st. The distance is 249½ miles. The time allowance is twenty-three hours, and twenty men will cover the ten relays.

FOUR masked men held up the participants in a social party at Glenn, I. T., on the 15th and secured $200 and a lot of valuable jewelry. The robbers are members of the Christian gang.

IT IS rumored that the Treasury Department has made a proposition to the New York banks that when the reserve falls to $75,000,000 the banks shall furnish $25,000,000 in gold, for which they will receive 4 per cent bonds on a 3 per cent basis.

AUGUSTA COLLEGE, the most historic building in Augusta, Ky., was totally destroyed by fire on the 16th. It caught at noon, with 400 children in the building. There was a mad rush, and there was great difficulty in rescuing them.

CURRENCY AND STAMPS.

Figures Showing the Product of the Engraving Department and Its Cost.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—Claude M. Johnson, chief of the bureau of engraving and printing, in his annual report to the secretary of the treasury, states that during the year there were completed and delivered 16,211,308 sheets of United States notes, treasury notes, gold and silver certificates, bonds and national bank notes; 31,545,838 sheets of internal revenue stamps; 199,000 sheets of customs stamps, 21,873,682 sheets of adhesive postage stamps, and 1,056,205 checks, certificates, drafts, etc. The aggregate number of sheets was 70,886,033, exceeding the deliveries in any previous year by 15,369,072 sheets. The cost per 1,000 sheets during the year was $20.30 which is the lowest cost ever reached, the next being during the fiscal year of 1894, when it was $23.73. The postage stamps, which he says are better printed than before the work was placed with the bureau, are produced at a saving of from $50,000 to $75,000, over other years. He recommends that the country be furnished new currency more frequently than has been the custom.

ARMENIANS TO BLAME.

They Are Charged with Having Destroyed Several Mussulman Villages.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 16.—Official dispatches received here contain additional accounts of Armenian lawlessness. It is reported that the Armenians have attacked the villages of Forakh, Bitchli and Brehansis, near Zeitoun, firing fifty-seven houses in all. They also burned the village of Kurbel, and one Mohammedan was burned alive. Eighteen Mussulmans of both sexes were killed and fifteen wounded by the rioters at Tchoukourhissar. The town of Tchoukourhissar was totally destroyed by the rioters. The Mussulmans' villages have been sacked in the Azirlon and Tchokmerzemenk district.

The sultan has sent fresh peremptory instructions to the valis of the different districts where the disorders have occurred, as well as to the military commanders, telling them that they must promptly restore order by the just and equitable treatment of both Christians and Mohammedans.

DEATH OF HORACE WILCOX.

Body of an Old-Time Missouri Printer Found in the Woods.

BIRCH TREE, Mo., Nov. 16.—The dead body of Horace Wilcox was found in the woods 3 miles west of town yesterday. Less than thirty years ago Mr. Wilcox was one of the best known men in Missouri. He was an old-time printer, and was holding cases on St. Louis dailies when the war broke out. He enlisted in the union army, and when mustered out engaged in the newspaper business at Rolla, and while there was elected state printer by the legislature. A few years ago he was admitted to the Soldiers' home at Leavenworth, and was granted a furlough to enter a homestead near Monteer, in this county, where he lived alone. He is believed to have had a wife and married daughter at Louisiana, Mo. The authorities at the Soldiers' home have been notified.

IMPORTS AND EXPORTS.

Big Increase in Dutiable Merchandise Brought in During October.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—The monthly statement of imports and exports issued by the bureau of statistics shows the total amount of domestic merchandise exported during October was $85,092,383 as against $82,482,422 during October last year. The imports on dutiable merchandise during October aggregated $37,306,720 as compared with $29,404,318 during the same month in 1894. The exports of gold coin and bullion during October was $1,873,897, and the imports $1,787,776. Silver coin and bullion was exported to the amount of $4,594,477 while the imports aggregated $1,325,127. The number of immigrants who arrived during the month was 32,890 as compared with 27,709 for October, 1894.

NO PAY FOR JUNKETS.

George T. Anthony's Expense Bill Turned Down by the State Auditor.

TOPEKA, Kan., Nov. 16.—George T. Anthony, superintendent of the Kansas insurance department, recently attended the national meeting of insurance superintendents at Battle Creek, Mich., and upon his return presented a bill to the state for $109.50 for expenses. Auditor George E. Cole threw the bill out on the ground that there is no law for the payment of expenses for private junkets of state officials. Anthony claims that he attended the meeting in the interest of his department and his expenses, therefore, should be paid by the state. It is likely that the question will be tested in the supreme court.

FREE SILVER CONFERENCE.

All in Sympathy with the Movement Requested to Meet in Washington January 22.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—The executive committee of the American Bimetallic league yesterday unanimously adopted a resolution accepting the invitation of the national silver committee, of Chicago, in calling a conference of those who believe in the free coinage of gold and silver at 16 to 1, independent of other countries, to meet at Washington, January 22, 1896, for the purpose of arranging for a national convention. By the terms of the resolution each organization is to be equally represented, neither to have more than twenty-five representatives.

An Increase in Specie.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—The cablegram announcing the intention of the Russian government to coin next year 100,000,000 rubles (or about $77,000,000) in gold and 25,000,000 in silver (or $19,250,000), in addition to the subsidiary coinage, has created considerable interest among financiers because of the evident purpose exhibited on the part of Russia of increasing her specie currency. It is thought in some quarters that the general purpose of this increase is to begin preparations for the redemption of the Russian paper, which is the principal currency in circulation in the empire.

THE TRADE OUTLOOK.

Wheat Market Perplexing—Corn Product Will Exceed All Demands.

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade, says: The scare about gold exports had no real significance, and, although $2,250,000 more will go out to-day, the stock market has been recovering. There was and is a substantial cause of difficulty in the fact that exports of products have been too small to meet the greatly increased imports of merchandise. The collapse of Kaffir speculations abroad has forced many to realize on Americans held, and the impression that our government may have to borrow again also operates to our disadvantage. But there is no local disturbance of money markets.

Wheat perplexes the oldest inhabitant. There is really little reason to expect a yield larger than last year's, but western receipts of 8,202,864 bushels, against 4,026,639 last year, do not mean a scarcity of wheat. Probably it is true that the attempt to induce farmers to keep back their wheat in July has ended, as usual, in much bigger sales at lower prices in November, and prices have now declined so far that, for the first time in many months, Atlantic exports exceed those of a year ago, having been for two weeks (flour included) 3,260,384 bushels, against 3,193,111 last year. The decline, nearly 1 cent, is not much, but does not mean confidence in renewed advance.

Corn is scarcely lower, but without the aid of the government report all know that the supply will largely exceed all home and foreign demands. The output of pig iron from November 1 was about 217,306 tons weekly. The startling fact is that the demand for products of iron and steel falls off, notwithstanding the increase in output of pig and though only a few concerns have closed or reduced work or wages on account of lack of orders, prices are sinking, having declined 2.7 per cent. for the week and 6.4 per cent. from the highest point.

For the past week failures have been 283 in the United States, against 270 last year and 49 in Canada, against 38 last year.

DEFENSE WORK.

Gen. Craighill Sums Up the Operations of the Past Year.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—The annual report of Gen. Craighill, chief of engineers, to the secretary of war, has been made public. He says that since the date of the last report the board has prepared projects for the artillery defense of Philadelphia, Key West, San Diego, the mouth of the Columbia river, Galveston and Puget sound. Allotments have been made during the year for emplacement for fourteen 12-inch, twenty-one 10-inch, seven 8-inch guns and eighty 12-inch mortars to be distributed among Portland, Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Washington, Hampton roads, Charleston, Pensacola, Mobile, New Orleans and San Francisco.

Gen. Craighill favors carrying on river and harbor improvements under continuous contracts, for which appropriations have been made in sundry civil acts. The financial statement shows there was expended on rivers and harbors during the past fiscal year, exclusive of the Mississippi river and the Missouri river commissions expenditures, the sum of $15,440,994, making the total for the past two years, $30,904,084. Estimates are submitted in lump for the next two years, which Craighill believes is necessary, of $21,016,197. Of the south pass of the Mississippi during the past fiscal year the legal channel was maintained at the head of the pass and through the pass itself; but during a period of forty-three days, such channel was not maintained through the jetties.

A FORGER FROM CHOICE.

Elliott S. Reynolds, of Fort Scott, Wastes Fame and Fortune Through Crimes.

FORT SCOTT, Kan., Nov. 16.—Attorney Elliott S. Reynolds, who was put in the Bates county, Mo., jail yesterday at Rich Hill, is a member of the Bourbon county bar, a member of a fine family, a handsome, dressy young man of dignified mien, and well educated. He is a criminal of singular tendencies, which many attribute to a mania. The affluence of his family has palliated more than a dozen felonious offenses, which date as far back as his boyhood, and the fortune left by his late father has been spent for his liberty. Six years ago he was sentenced to three years in the Missouri penitentiary for forging a note on W. T. Smith, a merchant at Springfield, but the case was appealed and for some reason he was allowed to forfeit a bond of $3,000 and go free. He is now being prosecuted by the Kansas City, Fort Scott & Memphis for another forgery.

ENGLAND MAY GET CUBA.

Spain's Latest Scheme in Regard to the Island Made Public.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Nov. 16.—A report from Mexico City, says that a prominent Spaniard there, who is in close touch with the Spanish government, says that before Spain will concede Cuban independence or permit the island to come under a United States protectorate or rule she will throw Cuba into the hands of England, conceding to England ostensible possession for a number of years until England collects the sum of money which is due her from Spain for advances made to carry on the war with Cuba.

REPUBLICANS WILL CONTROL.

An Error in the Kentucky Legislative Returns Which Will Give Them a Clear Majority.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Nov. 16.—In the contest of Wood (rep.) for the seat in the legislature of Kaufmann (dem.) a discovery has been made which beyond a doubt gives Wood the seat and will thereby give the republicans a clear majority on joint ballot in the legislature. It has been discovered that Kaufmann's election, while holding office as a city councilman, was contrary to the statute, and Wood will be seated without further protest.

SOUND DEMOCRACY SURVIVES.

The Party Still Retains the Vitality of Truth.

There was little of encouragement, there was much that was disheartening, to the democratic party in the elections. Those democrats whose loyalty to party never flags entered upon preparation for the elections this fall in various states with old-time enthusiasm, deepened by the hope that democratic lethargy would be shaken off and that the party, rousing itself to old-time vigor, would demonstrate that at least it would turn back the tidal wave of republicanism that overwhelmed the country in 1894, and from regained footing advance to the important work of the presidential year.

The party has recovered in some directions, it has lost in others. New York, even, if republican this year, may be made debateable ground next year. The loss of New Jersey, of Maryland and of Kentucky is for the moment more serious. If Gorman, who was false to his party in legislation of the deepest concern, is punished in Maryland, no explanation is given for democratic defeat in New Jersey. Yet we may feel sure that upon a full vote in a presidential year neither Maryland New Jersey nor Kentucky will desert democracy. The party's defeat in New York would have been larger, had it not been for its championship of personal liberty as violated more particularly in New York city, but even this assertion of an old-time democratic doctrine brought upon the party the reproach, effective in rural districts, that it was merely an ally of the liquor interest.

The Chronicle is too ingenuous to deny the importance to the republican party of its present successes at the polls. Attracting to its ranks the hitherto halting and doubtful, it will approach the presidential year with renewed confidence. But its position of apparent power and popularity is also one of danger. Next December a republican house will meet for a long session. This in itself is a great peril. Party leaders will no longer be able to evade declaration on the currency question. Republican bosses, finding themselves strengthened by the result of state elections, will be less cautious in their arrogance and will insist, through combination, upon the selection of a nominee whose first requisite shall be his subserviency to them. Whoever they nominate and whatever their course in congress, the republicans will be compelled to meet next year a full, not a partial, vote, and the prestige which is theirs to-day may be greatly impaired or may wholly disappear before next November.

Success, though much, is not everything. With unimpaired vigor the democratic party has survived repeated defeats. It has always been strong, compact, cheerful and aggressive in adversity. It possesses the vitality of truth, the courage of honesty, the buoyancy of hope. Taking heart of grace, it will enter the presidential year with a vigor and determination which will astound the now jubilant enemy. It will be the same old democratic party, the champion of personal liberty and religious freedom, the foe of protection, the friend of a sound currency.

Nothing in recent results warrants the slightest departure from the time-honored principles of the party. Let him who will in the face of apparent disaster run after false gods. The party as a whole is loyal to the Lord God of Hosts.—Chicago Chronicle.

OHIO AND NEW YORK.

An Important Factor in the Republican Victory.

Ohio went republican by a greatly reduced majority and Campbell came very near accomplishing the miracle which some of his most ardent admirers had credited him with in advance. Had he met the divided opposition which has existed in his state for years past he would have been elected yesterday. But because they had selfish interests to serve which could best be advanced by united effort, all factional elements in the republican party were united. McKinley desires a presidential nomination and could not hope for it should his state show up in the wrong column as the result of the late contest. Foraker aims for the United States senate, and Bushnell, one of his most devoted followers, was at the head of the state ticket. Because of this the party presented a solid front. In view of this and of the great inroads that Campbell made upon the enemy the republicans can claim nothing better than a disastrous victory.

The state of New York went republican and Tammany carried the city. This is the result that was foreshadowed as soon as the excise law was made the issue of the campaign. The sentiment of the rural districts was so strongly in favor of it that no other consideration could divert their support from the republican ticket. In New York the law has been made obnoxious by its rigid enforcements, and in this fact Tammany, so recently dethroned to make way for reform, proved invincible. In this sudden revolution there is raised the question whether it is possible to make successfully operative a law to which a majority of the community where enforcement is sought refuse their sanction or their obedience. Certain it is that Warner Miller's plank in the platform carried the state and rehabilitated Tammany despite Strong, Parkhurst, Roosevelt, the revelations of the Lexow committee and all the other enginery of reform. It is a great object lesson in favor of local option.—Detroit Free Press.

——Sherman insists that he has been swindled out of the presidency several times, and yet he is among those trying to maintain the fiction that he belongs to the party of eminent honesty and respectability. The two claims are paradoxical, senator.—Detroit Free Press.

——Some of the republicans are sorry that John Sherman's memory was not demonetized in 1873.—Atlanta Constitution.

AN INCIDENT OF McKINLEYISM

Labor Impoverished and Degraded by Protectionists.

Under the tariff protection which is said to be laid primarily for the purpose of enriching and ennobling American labor manufacturers have amassed colossal fortunes. American labor has largely disappeared in mills and shops of all kinds. Its place has been taken by Huns, Polacks, Russians and Italians, imported free, there being no custom-house tax upon labor.

Pampered by republican legislation of more than a quarter of a century, laid in its excesses as a war measure and maintained because protected industries had tasted blood and would not readily yield advantage, great corporations in this country have dealt by their labor unjustly, cruelly and harshly. The American laborer has gone into other fields. He has taken up lands or he has found occupation for himself elsewhere. The class of men taking his place are not of the highest, though they are some of the fiercest at times. Companies, instead of enriching and ennobling these men, have used their advantages to treat them as villains and serfs. The insufficient wage they have given them at times has been taken back from them for rents and through truck stores. Stockades have been built about them as though they were prisoners. The law has still looked to the protection of all citizens, even of aliens. To make appeal to the law a nullity insolent employers of labor that have tagged men with numbered bits of brass as if they were cattle instead of men are going so far as to compel the parents or guardians of children upon their pay rolls—children who ought never be there while adult labor is to be had—to sign contracts in their behalf as a condition of their employment that they shall hold the company harmless for any injury that may be sustained by them in the performance of perilous labor.

At the end of a long litigation such a contract might be pronounced void and of no effect, but the tariff which its friends and beneficiaries say was designed to ennoble and enrich American labor does not give that American labor sufficient surplus to warrant its contesting a long litigation. The companies have the benefit of these contracts.

Such treatment of labor as the requirement as to children is monstrous. It comes from those industries that are still clamoring for more protection, still asserting falsely that a high tariff is laid primarily in the interest of labor. It comes from McKinleyites. It is the inevitable accompaniment of McKinleyism, which impoverishes and degrades labor.—Chicago Chronicle.

AT LEAST INSTRUCTIVE.

Suggestions for Democrats in the Republican Victory.

It might have been better; it might have been worse.

In all the big states there have been great democratic gains since last year. The party is regaining its voting strength. In Ohio Campbell has won what is equivalent to a real victory. In spite of painful perplexities the natural vigor of democracy has asserted itself in Kentucky.

The cause of deepest regret is the defeat of Judge Edward Lane in the 18th Illinois district. The leaders and the press of the party made a gallant fight for Judge Lane, laying aside all differences of judgment on single questions. The Republic has earnestly labored in his behalf, and has had the cooperation of the democratic newspapers in the counties of the district.

The result in Illinois is a lesson upon the necessity of full and generous consideration for all the elements of opinion on disputed questions. The party must be able to utilize all its strength. It cannot rely upon any gains whatever from the republican ranks or from those of the populists.

Maryland's turning over of things should have little significance. The democracy will not be benefited and the republicans will reap some advantage from the result. But the state will be in the right column next year. Gorman is not the democratic party of Maryland.

The late election proves that the democracy is abundantly supplied with the votes to win in 1896; but that the votes must be organized, satisfied and honestly led.

Now we know what is before us. We can win if we will.—St. Louis Republic.

PRESS OPINIONS.

——There is room for the lamentable suspicion that Uncle John Sherman has outlived his faculty of concealing political sores.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat (Rep.).

——Gov. McKinley might keep off the tariff if it were not for the putridity of the legislature. Something has to be done to divert public indignation from it.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

——The general result of the state and local elections shows a large falling off from the republican landslide majorities of last year, except, perhaps, in this immediate neighborhood, where the republicans appear to have pretty nearly held their own.—Chicago Chronicle.

——John Sherman has reserved his beneficial public services for the last years of his life. By telling the country how many treacherous fellows are to be found among the pillars of republicanism he is atoning for his past. Has he not something to say about his visiting statesmen colleagues of 1876?—St. Louis Republic.

——Ex-Gov. Campbell accepted his defeat with the utmost good nature. "I have no reason," he said, "to feel discouraged. On the contrary, in a measure I feel good. The vote shows the democrats in Ohio to be more harmonious than elsewhere. The fact that the vote of last year was exceeded is encouraging. It is the duty of every democrat now to pick his flint and get ready to slice off the rest of the republican plurality next year."

THE * CHRONICLE.

C. C. DuBOSE, Editor and Proprietor.

COLUMBIANA, NOV. 21, 1895.

THE latest thing out is pneumatic shoes. And we are really to walk "on air."

IT WAS a Maine boy who defined a demagogue as "a vessel that holds wine, gin, whiskey or any other liquor."

THE Fifty-fourth congress will meet one week from next Monday. Will it be another billion-dollar affair? Let us hope not, at any rate.

HERE is a nut for you to crack: There are people who would not tell a lie for ten cents, but would tell eleven for a dollar. The first correct answer will be framed.

THIS silver question is bound to swamp the country yet. A man out in Kansas won't allow his children to go to Sunday school where they teach a "golden text."

WE beg leave to amend our war cry. It now reads: Honest money for honest men. We modestly claim that for sound and sense, and likewise for practical use, this motto cannot be beaten.—Mobile Register.

THE Brooklyn Eagle correctly observes that Grover Cleveland remains the only unbeaten and the only vindicated public man in either party during the last four years that is alive today.

THE names of Philander Morgan, of Talladega, and S. M. Adams, of Bibb, are being discussed by the populists for governor next year. Capt. Kolb, the father of populism in Alabama, seems to have been shelved. Senator Goodwin, we predict, will rake in the plum. Burn-His-Arm-Off ain't in it.

THE people of Nashville have long-distance telephonic connection with Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, St. Louis and, in short, all of the large cities of the country. Conversation between these points is in every respect as distinct as were it carried on over an intramural system of wires.

THE people of Holland are like ourselves afflicted with tramps, but they handle them with more skill than we display. They put Mr. Tramp in a cistern with a pump at the bottom. Sufficient water is turned into the cistern to keep the poor sinner pumping like thunder to keep from drowning. One application effects a cure.

THE merchants of Monett, Mo., have adopted a novel scheme for inducing delinquent debtors to "cough up." They have hired the prettiest and most popular young ladies in town as collectors. The girls are having remarkable success, though the recreants, while paying up, declare it is taking an unfair advantage of them.

JAMES D. HARDY, Calera's own "Jim," was arrested Tuesday under an indictment found at the recent session of the Anniston City court for election frauds committed in Anniston at the last congressional election. This places Jim in rather a new attitude. He has often been accused of selling out, but all the time he has been loud in denunciation of ballot-box stuffers. Can it be that he has fallen so low? Perish the thought.

THERE are doubtless several causes for the collapse of populism shown by the late election, such as the revival of business, good crops, increase in the gold production, etc., for the populist party, like its predecessor, the greenback party, is chiefly a calamity party. It is doubtful, however, if any or all these causes served to discredit populism so much as the populists themselves. Even Kansas and Colorado could not stand Lewelling and Waite any longer, and it is no wonder that states that had escaped the infliction of populist governors and legislatures refused to try the experiment at this late day. A new and successful party may be one of the possibilities of the future, but if so, it will be a party that has sensible men to put to the front instead of a lot of crack-brained cranks.

WILD TALK.

Dr. Crowe was very violent in his utterances before the populist convention held in Birmingham last week. The following is a sample of what he said, taken from the proceedings of the meeting:

"There should be more work and fewer resolutions." He said, "He hoped before the conference adjourned an organization so compact, so well drilled and, if need be, so well armed, that should the rape of Alabama be attempted again in 1896 the ballot-box stuffers would be swept off the face of the earth."

He urged a cessation of this talk of fusion, of boodle and such things. He said "he didn't care who was nominated by the populists," he "would vote for him. But unless it be such a man as will fight for his rights, I will not go around over the state making an ass of myself, as I have done in the past."

"Last fall," he said, "as an adjutant under Governor Kolb, I went around over the state and organized a militia." He said he begged and pleaded with the leaders to let him go to Montgomery and capture the capital. They said the president was against them and would not let them do it. "Next year," he said, "Cleveland will not be president, and in his stead a man who favors them will be president. Give me a man who will fight for his rights and I will lay down my life in the cause."

THE DEAD MULE.

The Huntsville Tribune says: "When we hear a smart Aleck get up and say the silver craze is dead, it reminds us of an occurrence which took place in the suburbs of our city down on Dry creek during the latter days of the war. Dead mules were very common in those war days, hence when a party of urchins walked up on a large gray mule stretched out on the common, it was a matter of no surprise 'Do you see that mule?' said Andy, our colored companion. 'Well, that mule is dead, and I intends to have the pleasure of twisting one mule's tail before I dies; so here goes.' Thereupon Andy gave the reclining mule's tail a twist. No rifle ever went off quicker when you pulled the hair trigger than did that dead mule. It was all over in a second; the mule was quietly looking back and the little negro was falling through the branches of a neighboring tree. That mule was not dead, but sleeping. This is the present condition of the silver sentiment."

It is something of an admission to say that the mule even seems dead; for up to now, the contention has been that the free silver animal was alive in all his parts and growing more alive every day. Nevertheless, granting that there is life enough left in the silver mule to enable him to kick, we advise cautious persons to find out beforehand in what direction his heels will move.

The Tribune's simile reminds us of a story—a very old story, but ever true—about the "Dutchman" and his board tree. He was told to go into the woods and select a straight tree from which to hew boards. After awhile he returned hauling in a log that was distinguished by a warp of great size. "What sort of log is that for boards?" was asked of him. "You vant him straight, don't it?" asked the "Dutchman" in turn. "Yes." "Wal, dot dree he so straight he lean over to d' odder side!" And that is the way with the free silver mule. He is so dead that when he kicks he "hists" free silver men to kingdom come.

OUR SILVER SENATORS.

The silver campaign recently inaugurated in Alabama by Senators Morgan and Pugh, is being severely criticized by the press of the state, and we think justly so. We clip a few comments taken at random to show the drift of public opinion, in all of which we fully concur and heartily say, amen:

A COUPLE OF DEMAGOGUES.

Senators Morgan and Pugh are on a junketing tour through Alabama just now. It is evidently in the interest of Mr. Pugh with the purpose of securing his re-election, although free silver and the shortcomings of the Cleveland administration appear to be the principal themes of discussion. They opened their electioneering campaign at Tuskaloosa on last Saturday week and spoke at Greensboro on the following Monday. They do not seem to be drawing the large crowds that were expected, while enthusiasm is painfully wanting. The tenor of their speeches as reported is not such as to bring about harmony and good feeling in the democratic ranks, but rather, on the other hand, to stir up strife and discord. What more pitiable and painful sight could be presented to the people of Alabama than that upon which they look today? Two venerable senators—venerable both in age and in service—men who should stand in the front rank as statesmen, and who should be venerated as true statesmen—engaged in a junketing tour over their state like community politicians for the purpose of making votes to secure the election of one of the twain. O tempora! O mores! How have the mighty fallen! Has statesmanship taken its departure altogether? Are these truly degenerate days? Are they in truth the days of the demagogue and political trickster? It must be so or surely our venerable senators would not lend themselves to the role that is now engaging the attention of Alabama's senators.—Calera Sentinel.

COMPARED TO HAMLET.

We trust that the staid and dignified gentlemen, who for a long time represented, and recently have misrepresented Alabama in the United States senate, will not have their feelings outraged when we compare their present conduct to the crazy behavior of Hamlet. They are still "harping on my daughter," still continuing to discuss a question that is practically settled.

Neither Senator Morgan nor Senator Pugh, nor any one of the gentlemen who took part in the rencent conference at Birmingham, has the slightest hope that the national democratic convention next year will declare for the free coinage of silver at 16 to 1. Whatever doubt there might have been on that subject has been put to rest by the result of the recent elections.

Why then do they continue the silver agitation in this state? Why do they continue to inject national issues into our state politics? It may be that Senators Morgan and Pugh, having lived so long in Washington, know nothing about Alabama affairs and state issues, but the other members of the conference do, and there is no excuse for the position they have taken. Men who talk of harmony in the party in one breath and in the next proclaim that the salvation of the Alabama democracy depends upon its declaring for a policy to which an overwhelming majority of the party throughout the Union is opposed, are not safe leaders in these times of peril.

It is time for plain speaking. The Herald is no man's champion, and is not especially interested in any man's personal ambition. It seeks the good of the party and of the state, and if any man or set of men put personal ambition or selfish aims and ends above these objects we do not regard them as friends of the people. If the Alabama democracy are to come together. Senators Morgan and Pugh had best go back to Washington.—Mobile Herald.

HAVE SOWN THE WIND.

"Thou canst not say, I did it." As the free silver 16 to 1 bubble has collapsed past discussion, the southern tour of the two self-satisfied statesmen from Washington to Alabama, at this time, can have but one meaning. They want to brazen out the wreck of the democratic party they have largely helped to make, by carefully cussing out President Cleveland. They did this ignorantly in advance of his nomination and election by the people. Having thus cut the bridges behind them, they have done all they could to cripple his democratic administration.

They have played the role of successful marplots along with Gorman, Brice, Smith, Hill, etc. They fiddled while these men danced. They have systematically and carefully sown wind; their democratic constituents reap the whirlwind. If they get through their self-appointed canvass without being groaned out, they may congratulate themselves on the great patience and good manners of our Alabama people. Apologies are too late and do not meet the requirements of the occasion. Senatorial egotism, arrogance and want of judgment has put us on the ragged edge again—Huntsville Mercury:

DEFER DISCUSSION.

We have an idea which we think is a good one, and we offer it as a suggestion to our senators and representatives in congress. Congress meets in December. The people elected each and every one of you to represent them in the respective bodies to which you have been sent. This you cannot do to the best advantage while you are junketing around in Alabama making "gold-bug" or "free silver" speeches, as the case may be, and looking after your political fences. Now, suppose you all hie yourselves away to Washington—start right now, if necessary—and be at the opening, and remain there looking after the interests of the people who sent you there for that purpose. We can very well defer the further discussion of the money question to a future time. There has never been a time when there was a greater necessity for every democratic member to be in his seat.—Brundridge News.

SHOULD ASK FORGIVENESS.

Before Senators Morgan and Pugh concluded to shout economical heresies in the ears of the democrats of this section, if, indeed, they shall undertake so foolish a turn in their tour of the state, the News trusts that some friend will convey the fact to them that fully four-fifths of the section are sound money men; that their course in congress in opposition to Mr. Cleveland's administration has well nigh worn their patience threadbare. The fact about the matter is that Alabama's senators could better their while imploring forgivenes for past offenses and soothing party unity than by spouting spurious ideas at this time. For once in their long and otherwise valuable careers let the venerable gentlemen see the political handwriting and drop silverism indefinitely.—Center News.

MORGAN AS AN ALARMIST.

Senator Morgan is getting to be somewhat of an alarmist in his great devotion to the white metal. We quote from his Tuskaloosa speech the following: "Unless the present policy is abandoned the young men in the audience would live to see the people in open rebellion against the government." He meant the administration policy, of course.—Alexander City Outlook.

THE POSSIBILITY OF GOOD HIGHWAYS.

From the Philadelphia Times.

Whether public sentiment ever becomes powerful enough to compel the adoption of sensible methods in the construction of permanent country roads, the improvements in the machinery for road making have certainly made the construction of good roads possible at a less cost than at any former period. In the old time the broken stone spread upon a macadamized road was usually avoided by those driving over it during dry weather, the clay or gravel sides of the roadway being preferred. The broken stone would be worn down to a smooth track only when the wet weather of the fall and winter made the sides of the road bed impassable.

The invention of the steam stone-crusher and the ponderous steam roller has changed all this. The stone is now crushed at the quarry at a much cheaper rate than it could be done by the old-fashioned method of breaking it with hand hammers. When it is spread upon the roadway the heavy steam rollers do in a single day the work of many days and thousands of heavily-loaded wagons under the old system. The crushed stone is rolled and compacted into a solid mass at once, and, with a top layer of finer stone, the surface is rolled as smooth as that of a gravel road in dry weather. Under the modern system the macadamized road becomes a model driveway, so far as the surface is concerned, as soon as it is completed, and for stability has no equal.

The illustrations of the ease and comparative cheapness with which good roads can now be constructed, which are furnished in the suburbs of every large city, should be sufficient to serve as object lessons for all the country. A good stone quarry can be opened in any township in any county in this commonwealth, a steam stone-crusher at the quarry will furnish an unlimited amount of the best material for a solid road bed, and a heavy steam roller will complete the work, if properly handled. In plain terms, good, sustantial roads are possible in all sections of the commonwealth, and if once constructed, would be found to be cheaper in the long run than the existing country highways which are a succession of quagmires a part of the year, inches deep in dust the rest of the time, and good roads never.

To secure good roads constructed upon sound principles it is necessary first that the present patchwork system of keeping roads in repair by scraping clay from the gutters into the center of the roadway to be returned to the gutters again by the combined action of rain, frost and heavy travel shall be abandoned as an utter waste of work and money. The next essential is that the most important highways be selected first for permanent improvement, and that each highway so selected shall be completely macadamized within township or county lines before another is attempted. One highway in a township improved after this manner would work a revolution in our entire system of road-making, and lead to the utter abandonment of the cheap and nasty roads that now disgrace our state and nearly every other state in the union.

WHAT NEXT?

The latest proposition of Nicola Tesla, the electrician, and upon which he had made considerable progress when his laboratory was destroyed by fire, is staggering to the ordinary intellect. It is no more nor less than the creation of artificial sunlight.

Had he announced his purpose a century ago, the burning of his laboratory would have been ascribed to Providence as a punishment for sacrilege, and he himself, doubtless, burned at the stake. Judging from the results of his present experiments, supplemented by his bewildering explanation of those he has in contemplation, nothing will now stay his hand unless he should encounter some hidden and unknown force, which, jealous of human encroachment on its supreme domain, shall burst forth and annihilate him.

In the vibratory theory, which is the root of his investigations, he deals with trillions as glibly as the schoolboy with his dozen marbles. Listen to him: "The light of the sun is the result of the vibration in the 94,000,000 miles of ether which separates us from the center of the solar system, of which we are a part."

His idea is to produce on earth vibrations similar to, and of sufficient number, as those that cause sunlight, and thus give us a light as intense as that of the sun, with no danger of obstruction from the clouds, and with the heat feature eliminated.

To illustrate his principle, it is only necessary to observe in a long bar of glass the brilliancy of the light it produces through vibration alone. In general terms, it is a prismatic experiment applied to electricity. "All I have to do," says he of the magician's wand, "is to duplicate by machinery the number of vibrations required to light up the sun, and the practicability of my theory will have been demonstrated. It is difficult for me to give you an idea that you may readily grasp about the question of vibration. In ordinary life we do not deal with the figures that confront the investigator in these problems. I have come to the conclusion that sunlight is produced by five hundreds trillions of vibrations of the atmosphere per second. In order to manufacture the same kind of light it will be necessary to produce the same number of vibrations by machinery. I have succeeded up to a certain point and am still at work on the task."

H. W. Nelson and Rev. A. F. Liles, having recently exchanged property, are moving today, Mr. Liles into town and Sheriff Nelson to the country.

The appointment of D. R. McMillan probate judge has necessitated a change in the law firm of which he was a partner, and it is now Brown & Leeper. See card elsewhere.

The Farmers' Mutual of Alabama organized for this county yesterday. At a meeting held in the court house James McGowen was elected president, and J. R. White secretary and treasurer.

John W. Johnston recently sold his farm one mile west of this place to H. W. O'Brien, of Orrville, Ala., and he expects Mr. O'Brien and family to move here in a few days. We extend them a cordial welcome, and may many others do likewise, (we mean locate here.)

Just as we go to press we learn that Calera was visited by a distructive fire Tuesday night. We have been unable to get the particulars, but learn that the Chemical Works and the Baptist church were totally destroyed. A brisk wind was blowing at the time, and the wonder is the whole town was not wiped out.

We publish in this issue a valuable receipe for the cure of hog cholera. Mr. G. E. Abbott, of near Shelby, with whom many of our our readers are acquainted, has tested this remedy thoroughly for several years, and he says it will cure the disease certain if properly given. Clip it out and give it a trial, and we fermly believe it will prove valuable.

The agricultural department at Washington has recently issued a bulletin showing the production and price of cotton for one hundred years. It contains much information that should be valuable to our farmers, and as we have quite a number they can be obtained by calling at this office. They are absolutely free, so don't hesitate to call if you care to post yourself.

Last Friday Messrs. Reynolds, Latham and Wyman, three of Montevallo's prominent citizens, came here and held a conference with a few of our citizens to devise ways and means to hold the Girls' Industrial School in this county. They found our people heartily in sympathy with them in their laudable undertaking, and ready to give them any assistance in their power. Our Montevallo friends seemed highly gratified, and left feeling greatly encouraged.

Marriage Licenses Issued During the Past Week.

Reuben Baugh to Carrie Archer; Wm. M. Calohan to Emma E. DuBose; W. T. Falkner to Florence Stewart; John M. Byers to Ellie Falkner; Benj. J. Owen to Ida Mason; Albert D. Whitfield to Mattie Curry. Colored: Granville Harkins to Mary Jane Garner.

To My Prtrons.

Owing to the fact that I have more business than I can properly attend to, I have placed my notes and accounts in the hands of Brown & Leeper for collection. Please call on them and settle promptly. Thanking all for past favors.

E. D. Hall.

Sunday about noon four wagons passed through town laden with people and chattels hailing from the bleak plains of Nebraska and bound for the more enticing clime of Georgia. This morning four more wagons from the same place came through making for the same destination. A little enterprise on our part would stop many of these people in our county. Will we make the effort? If so we will give you the opportunity in a few days.

To Our Former Customers.

Being anxious to wind up the old business, and not having time to look after it personally, we have placed all our accounts and notes in the hands of W. F. Thetford, Jr., for collection. Please call on him and settle promptly. Thanking you all for past favors, we remain,

Are the people of Columbiana and vicinity aware of the fact that with the single exception of Anniston, we have the only school in the state where tuition is absolutely free? Well it is a fact, and one that we are not a little proud of. And, by the way, we have now over 150 pupils enrolled, with steady accessions every week. Should we not be proud of such a school, and should we not uphold it in every way possible?

A quiet marriage took place Tuesday afternoon at 2:30, at the residence of the bride's father, Dr. W. S. DuBose, only a few friends being present. W. M. Calohan and Emma DuBose were united in wedlock, Rev. W. I Sinnott officiating. They left at once for Atlanta to spend a few days at the Exposition, after which they go to Virginia to visit Mr. Calohan's parents where they will remain about three weeks. They were accompanied to Atlanta by Mrs. W. S. DuBose, Mrs. Ola DuBose, Mrs. Anna Burt and Kate DuBose.

Wilsonville Warblings.

The cold weather is upon us.

Oscar Tinney has entered "society."

We are sorry to report the illness of little DeVote Kilpatrick.

Born.—To Mr. and Mrs. Amos Smith, last Tuesday evening, a boy.

Mrs. Hall, of Calera, is visiting her brother-in-law's family, Mr. J. H. Weldon.

Messrs. Arnold and Will Tinney went calling down the road Sunday evening.

Mr. 'Fayette Ray spent a few days in Atlanta last week visiting the Exposition.

Mr. and Mrs. Judge McGowen, who have been residing over the river, have moved to Oxmoor.

Miss Essie Mason, of Columbiana, spent a few days last week with her friend, Miss T. Hammond.

Mrs. George McGowen, who has been visiting relatives in Jacksonville, returned home last Tuesday.

We are pleased to report the improvement of Mrs. Morgan Fowler's little boy, who has been quite ill.

Miss Annie Morris, who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Fowler, left Monday for her home in Sylacauga.

Messrs. Williamson and Will Smith went to Childersburg Sunday night on "very particular business." Ahem.

The Literary League will meet at the residence of Mrs. S. A. Densler next Friday night. All under 50 and over 12 years of age who can behave themselves are cordially invited to attend. Membership fee, five cents.

Wilsonville is getting to be quite a "society" town. We already have three—the F. A. K., the W. S. S., the Literary League—and we are thinking of organizing another. Hurrah for Wilsonville. Nellie Bly.

His Retort Courteous.

From the Houston Post.

She had yielded to the fascinations of the new woman idea and was at least a neck ahead of the most advanced. Her husband was meek and lowly, and they lived out on Fannin street.

After supper she put on her bloomers, got her hat and cane and said she was going down to the club for an hour or two. Henry had gone to bed and was trying to figure out why he had been born.

She reached up to the gas burner and said:

"Is there anything I can do for you, Henry, before I put out the light?"

"Yes, my dear. I'm feeling rather nervous tonight. Would you mind looking under the bed to see if there's a woman there before you go out?"

Hog Cholera.

Dr. T. J. Dodge, of Hamilton, Ill., writes as follows to The Iowa Homestead on the subject of hog cholera:

I deem it my duty to give to the public, free, my recipe for the cure of what is termed hog cholera. I have used this remedy for thirty-five years, and raised hogs on my ranch in Nebraska and never lost a hog.

I have experimented by placing one well hog with a lot of sick ones and keeping it well by the use of this remedy. You will confer a great favor upon the farmers of our country by publishing this recipe in full. I am now engaged in other business, and have been for sixteen years, and am willing to let others prosper by the long years of experience of mine with a remedy I discovered myself for the cure of this dreaded disease.

The prescription and directions are as follows:

Arsenic, one-half pound; cape aloes, one-half pound; blue vitriol, one-fourth of a pound; black antimony, one ounce. Grind and mix well the remedy before using.

The following are the directions for using:

First—Sick hogs in all cases to be separated from the well ones, and placed in dry pens with only five large hogs or eight small ones in each pen.

Second—Feed nothing but dry food, but no water, only the slop containing the remedy until cured.

Third—When hogs refuse to eat, turn them on their backs, and then, with a long-handled spoon, put the dry medicine down their throats.

Fourth—Dose for large hogs: One teaspoonful three times a day for three days; then miss one day, and repeat amount until cured. Shoats or pigs, one-half the amount.

Fifth—As a preventive, one teaspoonful, once a week, will keep your hogs in a healthy condition to take on fat. I can place one well hog in a pen with one hundred sick ones, and with this remedy keep him well.

Sixth—Let no other stock but hogs have access to this remedy, as it is to them a deadly poison.

Dr. Dodge adds, that for many years he sold his recipe for $5, and treated hogs at the rate of $1 per head, paying the owner 10 cents a pound for all that died after treatment began.

Fruit as Medicine.

From the Popular Science Monthly.

Why, for ages, have people eaten apple sauce with their roast goose and sucking pig? Simply because the acids and pectones in the fruit assist in digesting the fats so abundant in this kind of food. For the same reason at the end of a heavy dinner, we eat our cooked fruits, and when we want their digestive action even more developed we take them after dinner in their natural uncooked state as desert. In the past ages instinct has taught men to do this; today science tells them why they did it, and this same science tells us that fruit should be eaten as an aid to digestion of other foods much more than it is now. Cultivated fruits, such as apples, pears, cherries, strawberries, grapes, etc., contain on analysis very similar proportions of the same ingredients, which are about one per cent of malic and other acids, and one per cent of flesh-forming albuminoids, with over eighty per cent of water.

Digestion depends upon the action of pepsin in the stomach upon the food which is greatly aided by the acids of the stomach. Fats are digested by these acids and the bile from the liver. Now, the acids and pectones in fruit peculiarly assist the acids of the stomach. Only lately even royalty has been taking lemon juice in tea instead of sugar, and lemon juice has been prescribed largely by physicians to help weak digestion, simply because these acids exist very abundantly in the lemon.

Photography as a Cure for Drunkenness.

We commend this story to the attention of our temperance contemporaries, "merely adding," as Mr. Richard Swiveller would say, that "if it isn't true, it's very good:" "A woman in Salemville, Pa., determined that her husband should know how he looked when he was drunk. She knew how he looked well enough, and needed not that any man should tell her. Her children also knew by sad experience, but the man himself had a very imperfect idea of his case. So once when he came home and fell into a maudlin slumber, she sent for a photographer to come forthwith, and on his arrival she set before him his work. She ordered the photographer to photograph her husband as he sat in the chair. The photographer did his work, and did it well; and when the photograph was finished and laid beside the husband's place at breakfast it was a revelation, and the sobered gentleman experienced a decidedly new sensation. There was no need of explanation; the thing explained itself. There was no chance for contradiction; the sun tells no lies. There was no room for argument; a reform has taken place."

Free Pills.

Send your address to H. E. Bucklen & Co., Chicago, and get a free sample box of Dr. King's New Life Pills. A trial will convince you of their merits. These pills are easy in action and are particularly effective in the cure of Constipation and Sick Headache. For Malaria and Liver troubles they have been proved invaluable. They are guaranteed to be perfectly free from every deleterious substance and to be purely vegetable. They do not weaken by their action, but by giving tone to stomach and bowels greatly invigorate the system. Regular size 25c per box. Sold by Parker & Armstrong, druggists.

Women ought to be expert marksmen, for they can "rifle" their husband's pockets and never "miss" a dime.

TENDS TO DISRUPTION.

From the Nashville Banner.

Senators Bate and Harris, in this state, and Senators Morgan and Pugh, in Alabama, seem to be engaged in a determined effort to disrupt the democratic party in the South. No other rational interpretation can be put upon the silver convention which met in this city Saturday, and the simlar movement that has been inaugurated in Alabama. Senator Bate presided at the meeting held here Saturday, and that convention was the carrying out of the program inaugurated by Senator Harris, in connection with Mr. Buck Hinrichson and other silver democrats of national note at Memphis and Washington. The most that the movement can do is to disrupt the democratic party, because there is no possibility of a free coinage law being put into effect in the United States at any time in the near future. The congress soon to meet will certainly not enact such a measure, the present administration is opposed to it, and the results of the campaigns just closed show almost conclusively that the policy will find no favor with the congress and the president to be chosen one year hence.

Under no possibility could there be a free coinage enactment before March 4, 1897. And without an extra session of congress no law can be put into effect before the beginning of 1898. This is allowing that the congress and president to be elected next year will favor free coinage and shall display extraordinary activity in putting the policy into effect. But there is not even a slight possibility that such a result will come of the election next year. The entire East, without regard to political division, is opposed to free coinage; the republican party in all sections is opposed to free coinage, and a large number of the democrats in the South and West, it seems a majority of them, occupy the same position. Under these conditions free coinage, if it has any prospects at all, does not appear to have the ghost of a chance for at least six years to come—not until the nineteenth century is numbered with the past and the first year of the new cycle has begun.

Why, then, this constant agitation in which the senators from Tennessee and Alabama are so conspicuous? The democratic party in Tennessee is already in a badly shattered condition, and that of Alabama is in no better shape. It would seem that shrewd political leaders would be warned by the defeat of the party in Kentucky and allow so dangerous a firebrand as the silver issue has proved in the democratic household to smoulder.

And Tells Charming Stories From Backwoods Life—Andy Lucas With His Head Done Up in a Red Rag—"Pizen, Fightin Mad" and Crazy for the Weed—Some News From Down on Panther.

(Copyright, 1895.)

With his turkey-red bandana looped and tucked and tied and twisted all around his throat and forred in the regular nigger fashion—with his breeches in his boot legs and a pair of Texas spurs on, which kept up a scandlous rattlin—with his stake an' ridered shirt on, givin fresh signs of tobacco, likewise also some few blood stains—with his left eye bunged and shut up, and the other bruised and cloudy, come the naturalborn horse trader, come the onlyest Andy Lucas.

Fresh From the Hill Country.

Andy he had went on a trip somewheres over in the hill country to see if he couldn't lay claims to some stray hogs, and in the main time he had been "a havin a little fun with one of the boys." On his return back home he rid by to give me the general facts in the case before the news could leak out in the settlement.

"Listen to a man what knows the road and has covered all the ground and traveled all the gaits, Rufe," says Andy as he laid one finger alongside of his nose. "Don't you never start off to take no long trips ridin of a blamed old mule by the name of Beck without good tobacco and plenty of it in your breeches. That's what's the matter with your side partner this evenin. That's how come my noble forred done up in a red rag, as it were, and that's the meanin of these wounds and scars, these gay and gaudy colors on my gentle countenance.

"I had tobacco, two or three plugs of it, and that which was good, somewheres around the place, but in the general hurry and confusionment of the trip I had to swap breeches and I went off without a crumb in my clothes. I thought about it over here at the first creek, but I didn't want to stop and turn around and come back and break my luck. I was headed for the hill country, where everybody uses the weed, and I reckoned as how I wouldn't have to wait and suffer long. So I rid on, wantin tobacco so bad till I was spittin white right then. Somethin like a half mile further on I met up with a pale, sickly-lookin, tallow-faced boy drivin one ox and goin to mill. He looked to me like a boy as mought maybe use tobacco, so I popped the question to him. But he lowed he didn't use it, and I says to him, says I: Well, young man, if you don't use tobacco you ought to put a little salt in your dirt.

"So I rid on. A mile or so further down the road I saw a yaller nigger pickin cotton clost to the road, and now, thinks I to myself, thank the Lord I will git some tobacco. I went at him kind and familious like, and called him Bill, and then brought up the great and growin question of tobacco with him.

"Yasser, I uses it," says he—"dat is I uses it whensomever I can get it, but there ain't narry crumb in my breeches today, boss. I done tuck and turned my pockets dis mornin."

"So I popped the spurs to old Beck and rid on. But by this time, Rufe, blamed if I want weak and sick and nervious as a cat. I tried chawin some persimmon bark, but whilst it made me spit free and spit yaller it wouldn't sorter half way do for tobacco. The more I rid and the further I went the worse I got."

Got Pizen, Fightin Mad.

"But now presently that sick feelin kinder wore off, and then I commence gettin mad—ralo mean, pizen, fightin mad. Rufe, did you ever feel mean enough to hit your own body and rob your old grandmother? Well, now that was me to a nat's heel. When I got way over there in Murder Creek swamp I couldn't stand it no longer. So I dismounted and got down, I did, and cut me a good hickory stick and lit into that old mule Beck. Man sir, I give her the dad-blamdest most alloverest beatin that any one mule ever had to tote out of them woods.

"But yet still at the same time that didn't bring in no tobacco, Rufe, and tobacco was the mainest thing with me at that time. As your friend and fellow-servant, I do hope and trust you never will live long enough to want anything as bad as I wanted tobacco. By gatlins, I was waterin at the mouth and slobberin worse than any steer calf roped off from his mammy for the first time. But I rid on, and I didn't meet nobody till I got way over there in the old Staggers lane. Torectly I saw a man comin up the road ridin of a mule like me, only he was ridin in a walk and me goin in a full gallop. By this time I reckon I must of been about three-thirds crazy as well as foamin mad. I was cussin old Beck at the top of my voice and plowin up her sides with my spurs at every jump."

He Heard the Cussin Part.

Soon as ever I got in hearin distance of the man comin up the road I lit into cussin him and callin for tobacco with every breath. He heard the cussin part, and by the time I rid up to him, he was down on the ground, with his mule hitched and his coat off, ready for a fight. And nothin else would do him but a fight. I then got down to argifi the case with him, and blame if he didn't light onto me whilst I had one foot in the stirrup. So we had it right there in the big road, up and down and over and under for a few rounds, but he had got in the first lick and he made it count. And then, Rufe, I was so scandlous weak and nervious till I couldn't fight much nohow. The truth is mighty even when it hurts, Rufe, and the naked, unwashed truth is that the stranger give me a blame good beatin. I found a tremendius big pile of difference between whippin a blamed old mule name Beck and lickin a man by the name of Weaver, which the stranger give me that as his name.

"When it was all over with he wanted to know what in the thunderations was the matter, and all I could say was tobacco—to-bacco—to-bacco. Well, sir, nobody would of thought it, but blamed if he didn't pull out a plug of the bullist store-bought stuff I have flopped a lip on in many a day, and cut me off a full square. Inside of th e minits I had come to my senses, and we shook hands and parted friends.

"But remember what I tell you, Rufe. Don't you never start off to take no long trips on a blamed old mule by the name of Beck without plenty of tobacco in your breeches."

Some News From Panther Creek.

Aunt Nancy Newton driv by one day last week on her return back home from Bunk Weatherford's. She tarried and remained over long enough to take a social family smoke with me, and when she went away she left a big bundle of news from down on Panther Creek.

"The folks in our settlement are mostly God-fearin people, Rufus," says the dear delightful old soul between the puffs of blue smoke from her pipe, "and they are multiplyin and replenishin the earth accordin. Right along in durin of the last three weeks thirteen new babies have come into our midst to face the trials and troubles and tribulations of this vain and fleetin world, as it were. Misos Strickland—Dunk's wife—she was the first one to show down, and as you and Blev and Andy would say, she holt a pair of jacks, which is to say, two boys. Next come John Andrew Newton's wife—Sallie Stringer as she use to be—and she likewise also laid down a pair, but they was queens, you understand, two girls. That's four. Then Will Tom Pickense's wife—Rosebud Buckalew that use to be—and she jest naturally took the rag and pulled up the bush by comin across with three at one trip—two boys and a girl. That's seven. Well, then, first one of the neighbors and then another had logrollins at their house till there was five more babies in the settlement. And that's thirteen.

"They are all mighty poor down there, Rufus, in regards to this world's goods. But they don't mean no harm by that, and they walk upright and blameless in the commandments as best they can. If it want for the children all the goodness in the human race would soon wash out anyhow, and whilst I aint in that branch of the business, it makes my old heart glad to see the earth multiplied and replenished reglar and frequent.

"What's past helpin should be past weepin, as the old sayin runs, but I do wish in my soul the whole thirteen was mine and I could live long enough to see 'em all grown and married and settled off in thirteen different homes."

The "Happiest and Most Luckiest."

Old man Shade Walton is now about the happiest as well as the ugliest and most luckiest man in our settlement," Aunt Nancy went on presently.

"The old man went up to the county fair the other day and when he come back home he had a five dollar bill in gold hid away in his sock. Henceforwards after that he aint done a blessed thing but trapse around the settlement showin everybody his new money and tellin how he got it. He never win it and he didn't find it, but whilst up there seein of the sights he met up with a man from somewheres over in Georgy, which he was a rank blank stranger to old man Shade.

"My friend, says the man from Georgy soon as eyer he clapped his eyes on Shade Walton, I have got five dollars in gold which belongs to you. It was guv to me forty years ago by my grandfather, and he told me if I ever met up with a man that was uglier than me I must pass it on down the line. The money is yours. Here it is. Take it and be happy.

"Well, naturally of course, old man Shade he took the money. He couldn't do nothin else convenient. And I reckon by rights it belongs to him, cause he is the sorriest lookin man I have ever saw, and bless gracious he is ugly enough to wean a mule colt."

When Thanksgivin comes I will have a heap of things to be thankful for. But I will roturn particlar thanks to the good Lord that my Aunt Nancy Newton ain't gone nowheres.

RUFUS SANDERS.

HINTS TO HOUSEKEEPERS.

An easy way to prepare croutons or crusts for tomato or bean soup is to butter one or two slices of bread on both sides, cut in small squares and brown in the oven.

For cleansing faucets: Use equal parts of fine sand and salt mixed with vinegar to polish, and when thoroughly dry rub a lemon over it to keep it from tarnishing. This will be found an excellent remedy for cleaning all kinds of copper pans, etc., that are used on stoves for cooking purposes.

It is worth while to recall, with the trying winds of autumn upon us, that a baked lemon is an excellent remedy for hoarseness, and one often resorted to by singers and public speakers. The lemon is baked like an apple, and a little of the heated and thickened juice squeezed over lump sugar.

A good way to clean lamp chimneys is to hold the palm of the hand against one end of the chimney and breathe into the other, then wipe it carefully with a dry cloth, which will remove all black or other stains. After this a better polish can be given by rubbing it with a cloth moistened with alcohol.

ABOUT PERFUMES.

Perfumes were introduced into Spain by the Arabs, who brought many recipes for making them from the east.

Napoleon loved perfumes, and always had a bottle of rose water or violet water emptied into his bath tub.

From the offensive fusel oil the skill of the chemist has been able to extract the odors of several flowers and fruits.

The recipes of over 300 different oils and perfumes have been preserved in the remains of Roman literature.

In many of the perfume factories of south Europe only the purest olive oil is used in fixing the perfumes of flowers.

Nearly every known perfume is now successfully imitated by the sympathetic processes of the chemical laboratory.

Pastilles are wafers made to be set on fire and in the process of burning give forth the odor of certain plants or flowers.

OF GENERAL INTEREST.

—With the early penmakers the problem of a point was the most serious, and a long time elapsed before it was definitely solved.

—Common rot in wood is caused by bad piling or exposure, and the infallible signs of this disease in wood are yellowish patches on the ends of the pieces or yellowish dust in the cracks.

—The sheets of steel for pen-making are, in their original condition, eight feet long and three feet wide. From these strips are cut wide enough to permit of the cutting of three or four pens.

—A hat is "pounced" or smoothed by means of a machine which polishes the whole surface smoothly with emery paper. Formerly this process was done by hand, the workmen using pumice stone for that purpose.

—A peculiar Puritan-like sentence was imposed on three offenders in Norristown, Pa., a few days ago. They were accused of assault and battery, and were released on their promise to accompany their accuser to church on each of the twelve next succeeding Sundays.

—Though contrary to the usual practice, night air will ventilate a cellar more thoroughly and cause less humidity than the hot air of midday. Open the cellar windows at sunset and leave them open until six in the morning, and the air will be cooler and dryer than if the cellar is closed at night and open during the day. The screens or gratings should be so arranged that the windows can be opened and closed without moving them.

—M. Moissan recently exhibited the largest black diamond ever found to the Academie des Sciences. It weighs three thousand seven hundred and sixty-six carats, is apparently without flaw and is the size of a large pear. It came from Bahia, in Brazil, where it was found last July. The largest black diamonds previously known weighed six hundred and twenty, eight hundred and ten and one thousand seven hundred carats and were not free from flaws.

—Among an interesting collection of relics brought from Russia for the Memorial museum at San Francisco recently were two guns that were on the ship commanded by Behring, after whom Behring sea was named. The guns were hauled overland from Cronstadt, two centuries ago, through Russia and Siberia, nine thousand miles, to the Pacific. The vessel sank in the Okhotsk sea, and the guns remained under water for one hundred and fifty years, and until about a year ago.

—"Jotham's fable of the trees (Judges ix., about 1209 B. C.) is the oldest extant, and as beautiful as any made since." Nathan's fable of the poor man, (II. Sam. xii., about 1034 B. C.) is next in antiquity. The earliest collection of fables extant is of eastern origin, and preserved in the Sanscrit. The fables of Vishnoo Sarma, or Pilpay, are the most beautiful, if not the most ancient, in the world. Prof. Max Muller traced La Fontaine's fable of the Milkmaid to a very early Sanscrit collection. Æsop's fables, supposed to have been written about 565 or 620 B. C., were versified by Babrius, a Greek poet, about 130 B. C., and turned into prose by Maximus Planudes, a Greek monk, about 1320.

THE CAST OF A BELL.

Interesting Process Which Few Founders Have Been Able to Master.

The operation of casting a bell is a most interesting one. The flask wherein and whereon the mold is made consists of two parts, constructed of boiler iron, of a general bell form, and plentifully perforated with holes for escaping gas while casting, one being so much less in size than its fellow as to give space for the loam forming the mold between the two. The "pattern," as the term is generally used, is provided. The two parts of the mold are "swept" by "formers," accurately finished from thin iron to the form intended for the inner and outer surfaces of the bell. These "formers" are mounted and rotated over the applied loam. Five courses of loam and clay are successively applied, "swept" and baked, to complete each mold. Before this work is done, however, the inner flask is wound near the top with a rope made of hay. As the shrinkage is very great as the castings cool, difficulty would be met with in getting the flask and loam out of the nearly parallel inside top; this "pinch" is obviated by using this destructable base, which permits the collapse of the loam after the heat of the metal has consumed the hay.

The five courses laid on the flasks are: Loam, a mixture of loam, fire clay and manure; two successive coatings of powdered fire clay, and, lastly, a thin coating of brick and fire clay combined with foundry facing. Each of these coatings is baked in an oven before the succeeding one is applied. The coatings are "swept" by the formers, as applied, both in the inner and outer flasks, by careful adjustments as to thickness of materials, so that when the exterior mold is placed over the interior, a space corresponding to the intended thickness and shape of the bell shall exist. Inscriptions of embellishments to be made upon the bell are provided for with the last coating by means of a "knurl" or wheel, having the desired motto raised upon its periphery, the wheel being carefully rolled around the soft surface and leaving its imprint in the clay. Other designs are impressed from dies of the required ornament, and the usual "beading" is accomplished by notches in the edge of the sweep.

The two parts of the flask being placed together are firmly held in position by many clamps, the tendency of hot bell metal to squeeze through and force a separation of flasks being very great. As the mold nears completion a fire is started in a near-by reverberatory furnace, in which is placed the desired charge of copper, and when the copper is melted the tin is added in its proportion. The melted metal being ready, the furnace is tapped, the bright stream caught in a huge ladle swung over the mold by a crane and poured into the open mouth of the mold until it is filled. After cooling and removal from the mold the bell is usually polished with sand and water in special revolving grinding machines. The tongue and clapper, the yoke and wheel are now attached and the whole suspended in its frame. In making a chime the bells are, after completion, temporarily set up and regularly tested by skilled bell ringers, from the permanent chiming stand of the foundry.

A bell of such proportions as the large one proposed for Milwaukee's city hall has to be molded and cast in a pit.—Milwaukee Wisconsin.

HOW PRUNES ARE CURED.

An Art Which the French Possess Above All Other People.

Consumers of the useful prune, that simple fruit that takes the place of richer preserves, may not know how the French growers prepare the fruit for market, and what a process of the most primitive kind it goes through before being packed for exportation. As soon as the prunes are harvested they are taken to a building called the fruitery, where they remain a few days to complete maturity. The fruit is then subjected to not less than three, and frequently four, distinct cookings before being pronounced fit for market. The first two preliminary cookings have for their object evaporation of water contained in the fruit; the final cooking, which dries the fruit, imparts a certain brilliancy much sought by buyers. You know that rich gloss? The sun-dried prunes are most delicious to the taste, but the exigencies of the trade do not permit of such long preparation. In several districts of France the most primitive means are practiced in curing the fruit. In Provence it is plunged in pots of boiling water, then placed in baskets and gently shaken until cool, when it is put upon long trays and exposed to the sun's heat to complete the desiccation.

At Digne the prunes are not gathered until ripe. Women feel the fruit with their nails to avoid injury to the soft pulp. The fruit is strung on small twigs in such fashion as not to touch. These sticks of prunes are stuck into straw frames, which are suspended in the sun until the prunes easily detach from the stick, the pit is then removed and the same process of sun drying is gone through and, when thoroughly dessicated, packed for market. The trays used in rural districts are quaint affairs, varying in form, dimensions and construction according to locality. The peasants make them during the winter months, and they are clumsy and cumbersome, and the only excuse is the peasant cannot afford to buy and is not skillful enough to make better ones. Perhaps some day a little Yankee skill may enter into this primitive construction, which is now a frame made of hoop, to which is fastened a wicket-like bottom fashioned from rushes and willow twigs.

A FATHER'S DESPAIR.

A Sad Affliction of a Four Years' Old Child.

From the Citizens' Journal, Atlanta, Texas.

Tuesday morning, August 13th, the editor of the Journal, in company with G. W. Taylor, the stableman of Linden, Texas, drove out seven miles northwest of Linden to the residence of Mr. John Miller. We were received and well entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Miller. Their son, Buford J. Miller, at about four years old, became pale and weak and nothing seemed to do him any good. He continued in this condition until he was about twelve years old, at times eating too much for one or two meals and then eating but little for weeks afterward. At twelve years of age his feet and legs began to swell, and developed into what his physicians said was a bad case of dropsy.

Mr. Miller had two good physicians to treat him; first Dr. A. J. Oliver, of Linden, and then Dr. J. P. Mills, of Almira, Texas. They both, after making a trial, gave up the case. They could not benefit the patient.

Mr. Miller then tried a number of patent medicines, without any good result. He had spent much money and his son Buford appeared to have no blood, no appetite, and was so weak that he could not walk a hundred yards without stopping to rest. Mr. Miller had given up in despair when one day a neighbor, Rev. S. G. Echals, who lives near Linden, advised him to try Pink Pills.

Mr. Miller said he had no hope, and did not want to make the trial, but his neighbor insisted. The next question was where could he get the pills. He went to Jefferson and found that J. F. Crow, a druggist, had them. Mr. Crow was an old neighbor and friend and persuaded him to give the pills a thorough trial, promising that if he would take three boxes and Buford received no benefit from them he would charge nothing. Mr. Miller took three boxes of Pink Pills home with him, and says before Buford had taken one box there was a wonderful improvement. This was about eighteen months ago. To-day Buford Miller is a stout, hearty young man about nineteen years old.

We met several of his schoolmates at Linden who state there has been a wonderful change in Buford Miller. He is well known by the people of Linden.

His mother, Mrs. Miller, was also afflicted with dropsy about seven years, suffering much in the spring of the year. After seeing that Pink Pills were benefiting her son she concluded to try them for herself. This was about a year ago, and she remarked that if it had not been for Pink Pills she did not know what would have become of her. She had no symptoms of dropsy the past spring. She said too much can not be said in praise of Pink Pills.

Mr. Miller referred us to J. F. Stoveall, the druggist in Linden, Eb. Frarxier, merchant, and many others who are well acquainted with his family and know the facts.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are not a patent medicine in the sense that name implies. They were first compounded as a prescription and used as such in general practice by an eminent physician. So great was their efficacy that it was deemed wise to place them within the reach of all. They are now manufactured by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N.Y., and are sold in boxes (never in loose form by the dozen or hundred, and the public are cautioned against numerous imitations sold in this shape) at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, and may be had of all druggists or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company,

MRS. ADAMS' LETTER.

LYERLY, Chattooga Co., Ga., Oct. 4, 1895.

Two medicines have done me so much good I cannot find words to express my gratitude for them. I was down with a complication of troubles, catarrh of the bowels and falling of the womb. For seven weeks I could not sit up. Two bottles of McElree's Wine of Cardui and one package of Thedford's Black-Draught cured me. I have recommended the Wine of Cardui Treatment to a number of suffering women, and not one has failed to find relief by its use. If I can do anything to help bring this good medicine to the attention of sufferers, I will be glad. MRS. E. C. ADAMS.

PACK the little coats and gowns,
And make the house-place neat;
Put some cakes for traveling
Beneath the wagon seat;
Give an extra mess of oats
To good old Jim and Gray—
We're going home to father's house
For Thanksgiving day.

So oft we've lived the journey o'er
With the welcome at the end,
Sweet mother's kisses on our cheek,
And the hand-clasp of each friend;
And many a time the little ones
Have traveled in their play
"All the way to grandpa's house
For Thanksgiving day."

The dear home fields have yielded up
Their grasses and their grain;
The bins and barns are running o'er
From orchard and from plain;
And with the rich year's discipline,
Its hours of work and play,
Some fairer things are harvested
For Thanksgiving day.

Our arms, so full of blessedness
The years have helped us win,
Have opened wide enough to let
A little stranger in.
For the first time two little feet,
From angel-land astray,
Will toddle into grandpa's house
For Thanksgiving day.

We know the place is all astir
With plans of goodly fare,
And mother's look and mother's voice
Are present everywhere;
And to a neighbor dropping in
She pauses just to say:
"The children are all coming home
For Thanksgiving day."
—Mary F. Butts, in Harper's Weekly.

GIVE THANKS.

Thank God for the glorious gift of life,
And this beautiful world of ours,
With its shimmering seas, and waving trees,
Its frost, and dew and flowers;
For radiant moons and tranquil Junes,
For sunshine and for rain;
For pearly dawns and crystal morns,
For mountain, mead and plain.

Thank God for treasures that He gives
From earth and tree and vine;
For golden yields from fertile fields,
For flax and wool and wine;
For healthful roots; for ruddy fruits;
For Plenty's laden horn;
For flocks and herds, for bees and birds,
Give thanks this festive morn.

Give thanks for reunited bands,
For hearth and home and health;
For faith and love, so sure to prove
Sweeter than fame or wealth;
For hopes that bless, for lips' caress,
For counsel and for cheer,
Give thanks upon this morn that brings
The feast of all the year.
—Good Housekeeping.

EE here, Martha!" said Uncle Ben Curtis, as he shoved back from the breakfast table on Thanksgiving morning and wiped his mouth on the nearest piece of tablecloth he could get hold of, "this is reg'lar old-fashioned Thanksgivin' weather."

"Yes," replied Aunt Martha, as she scraped the butter off her plate back on the butter dish.

"Six inches of snow and cold 'nuff to freeze a dog."

"Yes."

"I hain't got much to do this mornin', and I guess I'll run down to Widder Black's and see what I can do for 'em. It's a tarnal shame, the luck that woman has had."

"Some of us git along and some of us don't," drawled Aunt Martha, as she put the meat scraps on a plate for the dog.

"Durned if we don't!"

"Benjamin, don't cuss. A cussin' man'll never come to any good."

"Who's a-cussin'? I said it was a tarnal shame, and so it is. Jim Black was a-gittin' along as well as any of us when that well caved in on him and made his wife a widder. It wasn't 'nuff that she was hard-workin' an' economizin', but she must go 'n' fall down and break her leg, and her baby hain't over a year old. Who's takin' keer of her?"

"Hanner Bebee. I meant to hev gone down yisterday, but them pigs' feet had to be taken keer of. I guess I'll make up a basket of stuff to send along. Hanner Bebee is a purty good gal on pork and beans and sich, but she ain't no hand to git up dainties. You give her my luv and tell her she's got to be right up and down with Hanner to git a full day's work out o' her."

When Uncle Ben set out he carried a basket which contained jelly cake, tea, a pumpkin pie and other articles, and as he pursued his way along the frozen road he drew his old fur cap down over his ears and soliloquized:

"Yaas, darn my buttons, but I'm sorry fur Nancy Black. On top of all the other hard luck comes that four-hundred-dollar mortgage on the farm, and it's my solemn opinion she'll never be able to raise it. If I was able I'd buy and hold it, but I hain't. I've got to see Squar' Potter, the old skinflint, and tell him he must give the widder and the fatherless a show. The tarnal old critter is probably countin' the days till he kin turn 'em outdoors, but if he ever tries it he'll hear what the folks around here thinks of him. I see that Hanner has got a purty good fire in the kitchen, but I don't believe she's fed the stock. As Aunt Martha says: 'Hanner is one of them sort o' gals who can't work without a boss.'"

Uncle Ben turned into the gate, passed around the house and entered the kitchen without knocking, to find Hannah doing up the breakfast dishes.

"Mornin', Hannah. How's the widder and the fatherless?"

"She rested purty well last night," replied the girl.

"Fed the stock yet?"

"No; I was just goin' out."

"That's just like the Bebees—allus an hour behind time! When yer father died and his funeral was sot fur two o'clock it didn't come off till three. I'll do the chores fur ye this mornin', and you see if the widder and the fatherless kin find anything in that basket to tempt their appetites."

Half an hour later Uncle Ben reentered the kitchen and marched through to the sitting-room bedroom to see the unfortunate widow.

"Say, Nancy, I'm dog gone sorry fur ye!" he said, as he wiggled out of his overcoat and flung his cap on the floor. "Here it is Thanksgiving day and everybody gittin' ready to canter 'round and stuff their stomachs, and you a-lyin' here with a broken leg! I say it's a tarnal shame!"

"It's an unfortunate thing, Uncle Ben," the widow replied, "but I am going to try and not worry over it. Who knows but what it is all for the best?"

"Mebbe 'tis, but I'll be hanged if I believe it! Aunt Martha sent her luv, and I guess she'll be down about Saturday."

"She is very, very kind."

"And she said you'd hev to boss Hanner more or less to make her step around. Some folks hev to be sorter driv, ye know."

"Hannah is doing very well, I'm glad to say."

"How's the young 'un?"

"As good as pie."

"That's nice. Some youngsters is all right, and some seem to be possessed of the old Harry. Look a here, Nancy, I hain't no hand to go pokin' my nose into other people's bizness, as I guess you'll allow, but thar's a matter I'd like to ask about. You remember we went to skulo together, and the night we had the spellin' bee you'n me was the last ones up, I went down on 'doctrine,' and you went ahead 'till the teacher was pretty nigh tuckered out. I kinder feel as if I was related to ye, ye know."

"Yes; what do you want to talk about, Uncle Ben?"

"About that mortgage. In course I know thar's one on the farm, fur I was with Jim when he got the money, but how about the interest?"

"I won't be able to pay a shilling of it when due."

"You don't tell me!"

"On the first day of the month the farm will probably be advertised for sale, but I believe the law allows me to stay on for a few months."

"Has Squar' Potter bin up here lately?"

"He was here yesterday. He will take the place as soon as the law allows."

"The blamed old skunk! Excuse my cuss words, Nancy, but when I'm excited they slip right out. If that old skinflint turns you outer house and home I'll go down the road and take off my coat and lick him 'till he bellers like a calf!"

"No, Uncle Ben. He lends his money to live on the interest, and it is only right that he should be paid. I was in hopes to be able to pay him the interest, but this misfortune will prevent."

"It's a downright shame, and I don't keer who hears me say so! Say, Nancy, thar's a heap o' shelled corn on the barn floor which orter be winnowed out and put away afore the rats lug it off."

"I was hunting for a box to put it in when I fell and broke my leg. If you'll go up into the attic, Uncle Ben, you'll probably find something. I believe there's an old blue chest up there with nothing in it, and it will hold the corn."

"D'ye mean that old chist which Jim bid off at auction over to Jackson's vendue?"

"Yes."

"I was thar' and bid two shillin's fur it. Jim raised my bid to thirty cents and got it fur a wood box. Never used it, eh? I believe Jackson said he got that chist at a baggage sale in Boston a dozen years before, an' thar' was a lot o' duds in it which hev belonged to some furreigner. Wall, I'll go up and hev it down and take keer of that corn. Corn is goin' to be corn afore next spring. I s'pose Hanner Bebee would walk over that pile a hundred times and never see it. The Bebees was a good-hearted lot, but perfeckly shiftless."

In the farmhouse attic, stored away with quilt frames, broken chairs, bunches of mayweed and catnip, and hingeless trunks and boxes, Uncle Ben found the old blue chest. There was a thick layer of dust on the lid, and he

"Whew! but how the dust does git into a house! Ya-as, that's the same old chist, and I laffed at Jim all the way home for buyin' it. Come outer here and downstairs and be sum good fur sumthin'! Guess you'll hold all that corn and a bushel or so more. If Hanner Bebee had bin the right sort of gal she'd hev—"

"Durn my hind buttons and gosh-all-fish-hooks! Hanner, whar be ye! Struck my hide if I hain't broke every bone in my body and busted myself all to flinders! Hanner! Hanner!"

"What's happened?" shouted Hannah from the foot of the kitchen stairs.

"This blamed old chist has went and gone and knocked me head over heels down them attic stairs and killed me as dead as a door nail. Hurry up and git the durned thing off'n me!"

"Why, Uncle Ben!" exclaimed Hannah, as she reached the chamber floor and found the old farmer doubled up at the foot of the attic ladder and the old blue chest holding him fast.

"Git it off'n me!" he shouted. "That's jest like a Bebee! The time your father's cow fell in the well he took two hours to think of it and let her die! Hang it, do ye want to break my back!"

"You'll soon be a pirate if you keep on cussin'," said Hannah, as she pulled the chest away and helped him up.

"I'm a pirate now, and dog-gone me if I don't cuss all the rest of the day!" shouted Uncle Ben. "Thar, durn ye, take that—and that—! Why, I'll bust ye all to smash and throw the pieces into the fire!"

It is needless to explain that he kicked the chest instead of Hannah, and that the busting and smashing also referred to the ancient-looking receptacle. The bottom was turned toward him, and the third kick from his heavy cow-hide a portion of it gave way and Hannah uttered a shriek of surprise.

"Lemme at it! Lemme bust it all to kindlin's," shouted Uncle Ben, as he danced around.

"Look, Uncle Ben—see there!"

"Money—gold and silver—dog-gone my steers!"

Yes, it was money—gold and silver coins of Holland and Germany. There was a false bottom to the chest, and they had been hidden under it for a dozen years or more. It was the chest of a Holland immigrant, but how it had gone astray and finally been sold as unclaimed no one could have found out, had they wanted to. There was just seven hundred and fifty dollars in the "find," and Uncle Ben carried it downstairs in his old fur cap and poured it out on the bed before the eyes of the wondering and astonished cripple, and said:

"Nancy Black, it's all yours—every dollar of it, and thar's 'nuff to pay the mortgage and the doctor and leave ye sumthin' to boot."

"And you found it in the old chest?"

"That's whar' it was, but if the blamed thing hadn't fell on me nobody would hev knowed about it. Nancy, I'm doggoned glad!"

"Oh, Uncle Ben, the Lord has not deserted me, after all!" she sobbed.

"No, I guess not, but if I hadn't got mad and cussed and kicked you'd never hev got it. The Lord sorter helped, I s'pose, but cussin' did the most of it, and from this time on Martha may blow all she's a mind to, but I'm goin' to say all the gosh-all-fish-hooks I wanter."—Detroit Free Press.

THE PURITAN THANKSGIVING.

A Story of Uncomplaining Fortitude, Splendid Faith and Undaunted Heroism.

In what penury, what hardship, what sense of exile, what darkness of bereavement, what dependence upon the Divine hand and gratitude for its bounty, were the earliest Thanksgivings kept! The story of the Plymouth colony can never be too often recalled by Americans. For uncomplaining fortitude, for sturdy endurance, for strength that knew no faltering, for splendid faith and undaunted heroism, that story has no equal on the page of history. Many delicate women died in those first years, but we never read that they weakened in courage while they lived. Theirs was the underlying might of a purpose which had its root in principles; and, whoever may celebrate the Pilgrim Fathers, women should forever keep green the memory of the heroic Pilgrim Mothers.

We like to think of the groups which assembled at those Puritan dinner tables in those far-away days. The harvests were reaped; the churches and the school-houses were built; the children were brought up in the fear of God. In the cold meeting-house on the top of the nearest hill there had been a long service, prayers, psalms, sermons, all of a generous prodigality of time to which we in our religious services of to-day are strangers. Then came the unbending, the lavish dinner, the frolic of the little ones, the talk beside the fire, when the parents drew upon the reminiscences of fair England, or of Holland by the sea.

Many a troth plight was spoken in the twilight of Thanksgiving day. Youths and maidens then, as youths and maidens still, met and fell in love. The beautiful story which never grows old was told by the ardent suitor to the blushing girl in the Puritan home, as in our households yet.

"Long was the good man's sermon,
But it seemed not so to me,
For he spake of Ruth the beautiful,
And then I thought of thee."

After all, the world changes little in essentials as time passes. The girl will wear her blue or her orange a few days later this year, but on Thanksgiving day, as on all days, her lover will find his sunshine in her eyes, and her favor will be his highest incentive to manliness and nobility.—Harper's Bazar.

A Home Festival.

Thanksgiving should be a Home Festival as well as a season of praise and prayer. There is nothing at all incongruous in such a dual observance. In the home is the hope of the nation, and everything which tends to the sweetening of its atmosphere, the strengthening of its ties, the perpetuation of its influence, or the deepening of the affection of its members, deserves recognition and encouragement. Better homes mean a better people and a better nation.

Let Thanksgiving be then a home day a day consecrated to the service of God and to the furtherance of domestic happiness and family joy. Let it be a time for calling in all the loved ones, all the wanderers from the old hearthstone, to renew again the tender memories of earlier days, and to rekindle the sympathies and affections which time and distance often deaden and make cold.—Christian Work.

THE KING BIRD.

But "uneasy lies the head that wears a crown."—Chicago Mail.

Give Thanks for It.

If life is worth livin'
Jest go ahead an' strive;
Each day a big Thanksgivin'
That a feller is alive!

Alive to feel the sunshine—
Alive to breathe the air;
As man an' boy, to feel the joy
Of simply bein' here!

The day in darkness closes,
But the stars begin to glow;
The world is full of roses,
In spite o' all the snow!
—Washington Star.

Athletic Exercise.

Perley—Hullo, Jinx! going to take Thanksgiving day off?

Jinx—Yes. Going to devote it to athletics.

Perley—Good. What kind? Golf or football?

Jinx—Neither. I'm going to carve a turkey I raised myself, for ten people. There's exercise for you! — Harper's Bazar.

What It Is For.

"What's Thanksgiving for?" asked a teacher of a primary grade of her class the other morning as the subject was mentioned. But the cries of "Football!" and "Turkey!" were so mingled that the teacher hadn't the heart to disabuse the little ones. So she let it go at that.—Indianapolis Sentinel.

His Last.

Briggs—This is probably the last Thanksgiving Bickerly will celebrate.

Griggs—How's that?

FLAME AND DEATH

Work Havoc at Another Great Fire in Chicago.

Four Firemen and One Girl Killed—A Dozen Other Men, Women, and Children Hurt — Forty-Seven Firms Burned Out—Loss, $400,000.

CHICAGO, Nov. 23.—A fire, disastrous to life and property, swept through the dry goods and woolen exchange this morning. Five firemen, while in the active discharge of their duty under orders and totally unconscious of danger, were carried through a floor and buried under tons of wreckage from the five floors above. Four of the men lie dead, but the fifth was not seriously injured. One girl fell from a window, and received injuries from which she died. A dozen other men, women and girls were hurt or overcome by smoke, and many were rescued from imminent death.

The dead are:

Patrick J. O'Donnell, lieutenant of engine company No. 2, 2840 Wallace.

Thomas J. Prendergast, pipeman, 3023 Butler street.

Martin Sherrock, 2838 Lowe avenue, pipeman.

John Downs, pipeman, 2858 Wallace street.

All the dead and injured firemen were members of Engine company No. 2. Their captain, Lewis Fiene, escaped the awful plunge to death only by hanging to the wall of the window on the second floor until released from his perilous position by firemen on a ladder.

The owners of the burned building are Kuh, Nathan & Fischer, the clothing firm, whose factory and warehouse is at Van Buren and Franklin streets, opposite the scene of death and destruction.

Forty-seven firms were burned out in the L-shaped building, which was one of the most fireproof and ornamental in the wholesale business district.

The loss on the building is $100,000, amply covered by insurance. The aggregate loss of the many tenants is placed at $300,000, the heaviest individual losers being Stein and Biers, $75,000.

This fire started at 9:15 o'clock on the fourth floor of the seven-story building, in the garter factory of Stein & Co., where many girls were at work. They ran screaming and half fainting from fright to the windows on the Van Buren-street side of the building.

The frantic girls were determined in the half-crazed mental condition to hurl themselves to the stone flagging, but were partly restrained by the shouts of the citizens on the street and the quick work of the firemen. One extension ladder was run up and a fireman mounted it, but when his feet touched the rungs of the second section, either his weight or some defect in the ladder caused it to slip back to its original position, bringing its top four or five feet below the sill of the fourth-story window, where a large number of girls had gathered. Either crowded from behind or frenzied by fear, Nellie Turner, Kittie Landgraf and Harry O'Neill made a wild attempt to lower themselves so that they could touch the top rung of the ladder. In doing this the foolhardy ones slipped and fell headlong to the pavement.

Capt. Hermanson tried to grasp the dress of Kittie Landgraf as her body flew past him, but he failed, and she struck the sidewalk.

A few seconds elapsed, and the same spot where Miss Landgraf's body had struck was covered with the unconscious form of Nellie Turner, who had taken the terrible plunge in an effort to save herself. She was saved from death, however, by being momentarily held by three firemen in her descent, thus breaking the force of her fall.

Three other girls, who had more presence of mind succeeded in reaching the ladder by dropping from the window sill.

Shortly after 1 o'clock came the second tragedy of the fire. The flames had been practically extinguished and the firemen of Engine company No, 2 were ordered to the fourth floor in the rear to put out any incipent blaze that might be found, much of the contents in that part of the building only being water soaked. No one of the veteran firemen, from Chief Swenie down, imagined there was any danger from falling floors. The unfortunate men had taken their hose from the fourth to the second floor, and no fire being found Capt. Fiene went to the window on the north, and was in the act of shouting to Peter Hart, the driver of the company, to shut off the water when the fatal crash came.

From the top floor came an avalanche of tons of timber, fire-proof tiling, merchandise, safes, radiators, fixtures from the different offices and a mass of other stuff on the heads and on all sides of the firemen, who put duty before fear for safety.

Capt. Fiene clung to the window sill until rescued, and then bravely joined the small band of rescuers whom Chief Swenie sent to the debris. Only one faint voice was heard, that of McNally. All the others had probably been killed instantly.

AN INCENDIARY FIRE.

Results in the Death of Three Persons Near Stony Point, Ky.

BROWNSVILLE, Ky., Nov. 23.—Three persons lost their lives by an incendiary fire in a colored cabin near Stony Point, in this county, Thursday night. The cabin was owned by Gibson Armstrong, colored, who, with his wife, two daughters and niece, Mollie Whitney, were asleep when the fire broke out. Nancy Armstrong and Mollie Whitney were burned to death in the cabin, and Fannie Armstrong was so badly burned that she died yesterday.

THE GOLD DEFICIT.

Another Issue of Bonds Likely to Occur Soon, But No Panicky Feeling is Visible, for Which President Cleveland Takes no Small Credit to Himself—No More Reliance on Voluntary Contributions of Gold.

CHICAGO, Nov. 23.—A special from Washington says:

Conditions to-day indicate strongly that there will be another bond issue in January, if not before.

It is impossible to secure any authorized statement on the subject from the treasury department. Withdrawals of gold for to-day's shipment leaves the reserve but little over $81,000,000. If the shipments the next few weeks keep pace with the aggregate of the week just closing, there might be ground for expecting a realization of the prediction made a few days ago that the president would order another bond sale when the reserve reached $75,000,000.

It is said by men in authority at the treasury that the probability of another bond issue does not hinge on the $75,000,000 limit. No limit, in fact has been fixed and the chances are the reserve will fall much below $75,000,000 before an issue of bonds is made.

The reason for this assurance is the fact that the present drain on the reserve is attended by no panicky feeling in the commercial world. For this favorable condition the president claims no small share of credit because he believes the public confidence rests solely upon his assurance that bonds would be sold as soon and as often as it became necessary to maintain the redemption fund in the treasury.

Treasury officials make no concealment of the fact that they have ceased to rely on the voluntary contributions of gold from bankers, such as were made a few weeks ago. These masters of finance are showing no disposition whatever to prolong their spasm of generosity exhibited a few weeks ago.

The shipment of gold next week will be light, it is predicted, owing to the fact that none of the particular vessels which usually carry these golden cargoes go abroad next week.

It is the presumption, therefore, of those who are only too glad to take optimistic views of the situation, that this week's large shipments were to meet part of the demands of next. Yet there is no hope that the drain on the reserve will cease for several weeks.

DUN'S COMMERCIAL REVIEW.

A Generally Unfavorable Showing, for Which There is No Visible Cause.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—R. G. Dun & Co. say to-day in their weekly review of trade:

Failures for the first half of November amount to $6,143,808 in liabilities, against $5,692,303 last year, and $7,248,279 in 1893. Failures for the week have been 520 in the United States, against 322 last year, and 42 in Canada against 31 last year.

Reaction in business there is none. Efforts to explain it, or to attribute it to this or that temporary influence, are wasted.

Gold exports have been large, amounting to $2,257,000 last week and presumably to $7,350,000 this week, but are rather a result than a cause of existing conditions.

A little selling of American stocks on European account has followed forced realizing in foreign stock markets, but the new compact of trunk lines promises better earnings for railroads, though it has no speculative effect, and meanwhile the corn-carrying roads are doing especially well.

Products are lower, without disturbance or sign of panic. The more sober estimates of wheat months ago rose 50,000,000 bushels or more above the government and speculative guessers, and now a reputable estimate of 475,000,000 bushels excites little remark.

Corn declines half a cent further. Pork products also have reason for weakening, lard 15 cents per hundred pounds and pork 25 cents per barrel. The cotton market has been assisted all the week by small receipts and remarkable stiff statements of scarcity.

Iron and steel products are lower, averaging 1 per cent. for the week and 7 per cent from the highest, Bessemer, anthracite No. 1 and bar being quoted lower, while sales below quotations are frequent. There is frequent competition for orders, most works having little ahead and new business is remarkably small.

Structural work is cut down by the strike of the houseworkers here, and quite a number of mills, principally bar, have stopped within a few days. The associations reaffirm prices, but do not sell enough to keep the works busy.

The demand for cheap boots and shoes is a shade better. Shipments for the month were 22.7 per cent. less than last year. Leather is weaker, though only one class is quoted lower, but hides at Chicago have again declined about 2 per cent. and average relatively lower now than leather or shoes.

A Monster Petition.

TOPEKA, Kan., Nov. 23.—The petition containing 6,743 names of Kansas people memorializing congress to take some action in the case of ex-Consul John L. Waller, now in prison in France, has been delivered to Treasurer of State Atherton. He will have it bound, and then will forward it to Congressman Curtis.

CAPT. HOWGATE.

Taken to the Albany Penitentiary.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23. — Warden Leonard of the district jail left yesterday with Capt. Howgate for Albany, N. Y., to deliver him to the prison authorities. Capt. Howgate was the former disbursing officer of the signal service, who after many years absence and a sensational escape, was re-arrested in New York and recently convicted in the criminal court of the District of Columbia and sentenced to eight years imprisonment for forgery and embezzlement.

WHEN LIBERTY CAME

It Found Eugene V. Debs Quietly Sleeping in Jail—The Morning Spent Returning Calls—After Making a Lecture Tour of Several of the Principal Cities, Debs Will Settle Down to Publishing a Weekly Industrial Paper.

WOODSTOCK, Ill., Nov. 23. — When liberty came to Eugene V. Debs at midnight he was fast asleep, but the nervous tension attendant upon so important an era in his life would not long permit him to remain so, and at 3 o'clock he was wide awake and ready to get up. His brother Theodore persuaded him to lie in bed two hours longer, but at 5 o'clock he insisted on rising, and at 7 he had had his breakfast. Then he indulged in the luxury, denied him for twenty-six weeks, of taking a walk in the open air unwatched and unrestrained.

"It is good to be free again," he said to the representative of the United Press. "It is an indescribable feeling, and no one who has never been through a period of confinement can appreciate it. I am glad to have been through this experience, but I am also glad it is over. It is like a surgical operation—it does you good, but it is something you would rather have behind you than before you."

Telegrams of congratulation came drifting in all the morning. There several from friends in Chicago, a number from Terre Haute, Mr. Debs' home; one from the St. Louis Trades assembly and one from the Omaha American Railway union organization. One from the Trades assembly at Birmingham, Ala., read:

"Birmingham sends greeting. Southern hearts are with you till liberty lives again."

Mr. Debs reiterated his assertion, made on a previous occasion, that he would never again accept money from a labor organization for services rendered. He intends to earn his living by publishing a weekly industrial paper, of which he will be editor also. First, however, in response to many requests, he will make speeches in most of the big cities of the country.

"I never intend to accept another political office," said he. "I have one desire only, and that is the unification of labor. To that end I shall devote my life. Under no circumstances will I ever again lead a strike."

At 11 o'clock a neat little cutter was driven up to the jail door, and Debs and his brother clambered in. In one hand Theodore held a card with the names of twenty persons on it. On these people the American Railway union president called during the morning. All of them had paid him a similar compliment while in jail. The afternoon was spent in preparing for the journey to Chicago.

OUR MERCHANT MARINE.

Annual Report of the Chief of the Bureau of Navigation—Our Shipmasters Handicapped By Navigation Laws that Are Relics of Bygone Days.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—The annual report of Mr. Eugene F. Chamberlain, chief of the bureau of navigation, shows that the numbers and tonnage of our merchant fleet for the year has been nearly stationary. On June 30 it comprised 23,240 documented vessels of 4,635,960 tons, a decrease of 50,000 tons since June 30, 1894. This decrease is attributed to business inactivity two summers ago, the production of our ship-yards in April, May and June, this year, much exceeding the production during the same months in 1894. The chief events have been the initial trips of the St. Louis and St. Paul.

The report is devoted chiefly to recommendations for the repeal of many of our navigation laws of the last century, which were copied verbatim by the earliest congresses from laws of King George III. of England. Commissioner Chamberlain points out that every other nation long ago repealed these laws, but we alone retain them as a handicap on our merchant marine. He shows that our merchant marine is in the keenest competition, first with merchantmen of foreign nations, whose governments have freed them from the shackles of old laws, which we still retain; second, with American railroads, which are strongly organized, and have protected themselves generally from burdensome laws under which navigation interests are compelled to operate.

The free ship bill, which was the chief measure advocated in the last report, is again recommended, but more briefly. Mainly from the fact that Americans can not buy ships where they please and sail them under the American flag is due the fact that the United States and Italy, alone among maritime nations, have a smaller carrying capacity on the ocean than they had twenty years ago when President Grant urged congress to pass the free bill. The significant fact is adduced, going and coming, the voyage between the United States and Europe was made only 252 times by vessels under the American flag, and 10,233 times by vessels under foreign flags.

Comparing the fine demonstration of our naval power at Kiel, with the fact that only five American merchant vessels, with crews all told of barely 150 men, visited Germany during the entire year, Commissioner Chamberlain quotes effectively Capt. Lanahan's statement that a navy can not long exist without a large merchant marine as a reason for its maintenance, and that while, like the navy of Louis XIV., it may be fair to look upon, it will prove a growth which, having no root, soon withers away.

HENDERSON'S PLEA SUSTAINED

The Dunlap (Kas.) Chopper Acquitted on the Ground of Self-Defense.

EMPORIA, Kas., Nov. 23.—Dave Henderson, the colored school teacher who chopped four people in the head with a hatchet the other evening at Dunlap, and who had a hearing before a justice of the peace Thursday, was released on the evidence, his plea of self-defense being sustained. The parties whom he assaulted are placed under bonds to keep the peace. Henderson is now in Emporia, but says he will go back to Dunlap.

COLUMBIANA, NOV. 28, 1895.

THANKSCIVING.

Today has been set apart for returning thanks as a nation to the Ruler of the universe and a more beautiful custom does not exist than this. Gratitude is of itself a gift divine, but it should be cherished, nurtured and made a part of our nature. There is but one way to accomplish this. We may vainly imagine that refinement and education soften and smother, so to speak, the more brutal passions, and cultivate the nobler instincts of our natures; and this is true but only to a very limited extent. Education, we admit, has a tendency to ennoble us, and place us on a higher plane than the less fortunate class who were deprived of its benefits, but education of itself does not reach the heart, the conscience. God alone can purefy the heart and quicken the conscience. He alone can give us the mastery over our sordid, selfish natures. This accomplished we are then in position to acquire refinement through the sources at our command.

Outside of charity, gratitude is the noblest vertue of which we are possessed. We admire it in our associates, and cherish it fondly when we have it bestowed upon us for some act of kindness on our part. And if we poor mortals appreciate gratefulness how much more does our Creator, who provides for our every want? There is no comparison, yet we should be reminded daily and hourly of our duty while receiving the bounties at his hands.

The past has been a year of almost universal prosperity, and is it not meet and proper and should it not be a pleasure and not irksome, to go to Him today with thankful hearts and express our gratitude? Should we not today as a nation fall at His feet with one accord and pour out our gratitude to Him for blessings and mercies that are innumerable and beyond our feeble comprehension? "Enter into his gates with thankfulness, and into his courts with praise; be thankful unto him and bless his name."

REV. DR. A. W. McGAHA.

This eminent divine and cultured gentleman, esteemed and honored by all our people, delivered an address to the citizens of this place Tuesday at 11 o'clock in the court house. His subject was one of peculiar interest to us just now, the Girls' Industrial school and whether or not it shall be kept in this county or allowed, through negligence or failure to appreciate its immense advantages, to be removed elsewhere.

We cannot, of course, with our limited space, reproduce the speech entire as we would like to do, but we shall attempt only to give a brief synopsis. Dr. McGaha said in the outset that if he was compelled to choose between the sexes, he would readily decide in favor of educating the girls in preference to the boys, as the mother exerts a refining influence over her children not possessed by the father. Of all the women on the globe he considers the southern women the peer of any. The United States is the grandest country on earth, the South the most highly favored section, and Alabama the garden spot of the South. We have been blessed with peculiar advantages, and if we fail to make the most of our opportunities we will be supplanted by others who will drive us from the land of promise as were the Canaanites by the slaves brought from Egypt. Unless we educate our daughters they will be the cooks and washerwomen for the coming generation.

The theory that women are inferior to men in intellect has been exploded long ago, and it is a fact recognized by all today that woman is man's equal, save in physical strength and endurance. She is capable of as high culture and mental development as her brother, and this is being demonstrated every year in our leading colleges. Every man and women has a God-given talent, and should be given all the latitude possible in developing it. There are boys and girls scattered throughout this section throbbing with manhood and womanhood, anxiously awaiting an opportunity to rise to a higher plane of usefulness.

The Girls' Industrial school appeals to our pride and judgment, for it is destined to be the crowning gloy of Alabama. There are 26,000 girls in near proximity to its present location, and if we allow this prize to slip from our grasp our doom is sealed. Counties often appropriate five, ten and fifteen thousand dollars to hold fairs in which to exhibit their stock and farm products. Do we esteem our horses, mules and hogs of higher value than our daughters? A failure to make the appropriation asked would indicate as much. He had rather have this school located in his town than six iron furnaces or a new railroad, for it would add more to its material prosperity than either or both of them.

Provision has been made in Montevallo for each of the sixty-six counties in Alabama to purchase a lot at a merely nominal value upon which they can erect dormitories and give the girls the advantages of this school at a price within the reach of all.

Dr. McCaha spoke three-quarters of an hour, and his logic, common sense and eloquence carried conviction, as was evidenced by the number who, at its close, signed the petition asking our commissioners to appropriate $5,000 toward permanently locating this school in our county. Positive assurance was given that with this amount Montevallo could and would raise the balance.

THE VICE OF OUR CURRENCY.

The fundamental vice in our currency system is the legal tender notes, redeemable in coin by the government and reissuable under the law. This threatens the stability of the whole volume of our currency, and has caused immense losses by fluctuations of which it was impossible to keep the public aware. It was never contemplated that the government should convert itself into a bank of issue. The treasury is simply a public agency for the management of the financial affairs of the government. The circulation of legal tender United States notes and the treasury notes has a tendency to drive out of use and out of the country the very coin in which the government is compelled to redeem them; and it has expelled millions of dollars from our borders. No other government in the world is required to supply gold from its treasury to discharge the private obligations of its citizens, and no government ought to be required to do so. The fact that the government is required to borrow money is an injury to its credit, and the credit of its people; but the injury resulting from this cause is insignificant in comparison with the ruin that would follow an abandonment of the reserve while the notes are outstanding; for all our currency would thus be reduced to the silver standard. The theories that the government can create money by placing its stamp upon paper; that a legislative enactment can make 50 cents 100 cents; that artificially inflated prices, paid in depreciated currency, are better for the people than natural prices paid in a sound currency; and various other vagaries are all directly attributable to the long-continued use of legal tender paper. The proposition that a promise of the government to pay money is money, is just as absurd as the proposition that a promise to deliver a horse is a horse. The agitation of the free coinage of legal tender silver at a ratio which would put only 50 cents worth of bullion in a silver dollar is predicated upon the same vicious principle. The United States note was a forced loan from the people to the government, which the government promises to repay in dollars, but the free coinage of legal tender silver at the ratio of 16 to 1 or at any other ratio not in keeping with the commercial value of the two metals would be a forced loan from the people to the owners of silver mines and silver bullion owners without a promise of repayment by anybody. One loan was forced for the benefit of the government in a time of war, but the proposition of the advocates of free coinage is to force another loan for the benefit of private individuals and corporations in a time of profound peace. In pith, the two measures are precisely alike. The free coinage of legal tender silver would be far more unjust than the issue of legal tender United States notes.—JOHN G. CARLISLE, Secretary of the Treasury.

THE GOVERNORSHIP.

Has harmony in the ranks been established? If so, who is playing on the harmonicum? And who is dancing to the melodious strains? Morgan is not, Pugh is not, Hood is not, Lane is not. The prophets who predicted a great tidal wave of harmony won't do to rely upon.—Decatur News.

Johnston on a platform of harmony would suit us. But if we are to have a war to the knife, if others are to insist on the captain's showing his dagger then let the fight proceed, turn loose the dogs of war, and let the fellow who gets enough first make some exclamation of impatience at the continuance of the game. If it is blood, then let it run rivers!—Eufaula Times.

The Advertiser says "it is authorized to state that Governor Oates will not, in any event, be a candidate for re-election." This settles the question, and the governor will be in the race for the senate. Another bitter struggle for a governor will be the result, as we don't believe the administration democrats will be willing to support Captain Johnston. Many of our people are for him and they are democrats, too.—Abbeville Times.

Captain Johnston has gone so far with his fight on democratic administrations that it is extremely doubtful if he could win if nominated. In order to be sure of success the democratic party must nominate a leader who has never faltered or wavered in his democracy and certainly one who is not making war on the only democratic president the country has had for years. Alabama must not follow Kentucky and Maryland, but to nominate Johnston would cause certain defeat.—Gadsden Times-News.

There should be some sound money candidate for governor announced within a short time. It will never do to have a rotten-money candidate upon the democratic insignia, especially a man who abuses and blasphemes the administration. If Captain Joseph Forney Johnston would be the democratic standard-bearer, the News invites him to cease spouting cheap money, agree to stand upon a gold standard platform, or send the state democracy to the devil in his efforts to Densonize and Hardinize Alabama. —Coosa River News.

It is said that Captain Joe Johnston was urged by leading democrats from every section in Alabama to make his announcement for governor upon the belief that his candidacy will more readily unite the party than that of any other man in the state. Thus step by step the free silver democrats are being led into the gold bug camp. Captain Johnston has been, and is yet a strong advocate of free silver, but listen—"If the national convention of the democratic party should nominate a man for president upon the sound money or single gold standard platform, I will support him,"—or words to that effect.—Choctaw Alliance.

Now, the News has no word of abuse or denunciation for Captain Johnston. We admire many of his excellent qualities, and if a state convention of the democratic party should adopt a free silver platform and nominate him, no man in Alabama will support him more cheerfully and zealously than the editor of this paper, but we are not willing to give up our settled convictions in advance and fall in with his in order that there shall be no contest for the nomination. We prefer to "try conclusions" a bit before we abandon the fight for sound money and the administration.—Montgomery News.

There never has been any chance to avoid the issue. It would have been forced even if Governor Oates, in the interest of peace and quiet, had consented to stand again. The powers that seem to control the silver wires would have out a candidate on that distinct line, and as Captain Johnston is their man, the issue will be kept to the front until decided. His candidacy means a struggle for the national convention delegation and the next legislature in favor of the free and unlimited coinage of silver. Whatever lack of harmony may exist will be due to those who insist upon warring upon the national democratic administration.—Montgomery Advertiser.

Democratic success next year is of much more importance to the people of Alabama, and especially those of the black belt, than the money question or any other question. We fear the result if the party is forced into a hot factional fight for the governorship. We are an admirer of Grover Cleveland, have supported his administration and are what is known in common parlance as a goldbug, yet we had rather see a democratic free silver man governor of Alabama than to hazard the success of the party at the polls next year by a bitter contest between democrats for the nomination for governor. There are thousands of sound money men of the same opinion.—Greensboro Watchman.

The only hope for the democratic party next year is in securing harmony in the party all along the line. Democrats used to be patriotic enough for this—let them lose sight of all else than party success. Would it not be a good policy to lay the axe at the root of the matter, let down as softly as you will, but let down all the old horses and start this race with fresher and better ones? Let us have men without a record if you please, but pure, good, patriotic men. For the success of the party and peace in our own beloved state let Pugh, Johnston and Oates be retired. They have had notoriety enough. Let us have a rest. —Centreville Press.

The sound money democratic papers of the state are not inclined to accept Captain Johnston as the nominee of the democratic party without a struggle. In the main they do not oppose him on personal grounds, but they do oppose his policies and methods, his antagonism to the national administration and the fact that his election will throw the state out of line with the other democratic states; his desire to open the democratic primaries to populites, republicans and greenbackers on a bare promise to support the nominee. All these tend to drive from Captain Johnston the support of the sound money democrats and make them anxious to see a good democrat with sound money views contest for the nomination with Captain Johnston.—Huntsville Mercury.

THAT UNHOLY ALLIANCE.

What was called as a free silver conference in Birmingham last Wednesday turned out to be a purely populist gathering, with a sprinkling of republicans. The meeting passed a lot of resolutions, which could have been expressed in a single sentence, thus: "Resolved, That we, the populists of Alabama, allow ourselves to be swallowed by the republicans." And the republicans proceeded to swallow. After the meeting, quite a number of men who had followed Kolb off from the democratic party through honest and conscientious motives, declared that they would not be turned over, bound and gagged, to the republicans. Captain Kolb, Parson Adams and other leaders, fought the idea of fusing to the very last, but Bowman and his crowd were the victors and they pledged the party to the republicans, it matters not who they may name as their candidate for governor, even if it should be Bill Stevens, and the platform may be what they please to make it.—Jasper Eagle.

EXTREMES TOGETHER.

Think of it—that the populites at Birmingham the other day called on all honest men to unite in support of the 16 to 1 spurious silver dollar and honest elections—two opposite contradicting extremes, and Bob Mosely's crowd stood at the door waiting to accept the proposition. Was a more subtile bait ever thrown out to simple-minded gudgeons? The subtle enemy of the Lord's garden in Eden could learn lessons of artful intrigue from the saints and sinners who met on a common platform in Birmingham to hatch out a plan by which they could cheat the popular mind into the conviction that they are an honest set bent on the good of the state. The Lord deliver the state from the vandalism contemplated by the Birmingham 500 concoctors.—Asheville Ægis.

DEMOCRACY SHOULD UNITE.

We see from the Birmingham papers that at a recent meeting held at that place the republicans, populists, independents, Kolbites, in fact, all the isms and elements opposed to the democratic party in the state, have formed a coalition or combination and are going to make a strenuous effort to carry the state at the next August election. In view of this fact it behooves the democratic party to settle all their petty disputes, become united, and be prepared to meet this combination of isms and put it to flight. This can only be done by uniting the democratic forces and preserving a solid front to the common enemy—the isms.—Hamilton News-Press.

REPUBLICANS CAN DICTATE.

The "fusion" of the populites and republicans at Birmingham, last week, means simply that the republicans can now fashion any terms that they would have the populists adopt. Of course there will be some kind of a fly-varnished cheap-money declaration in the conglomerate platform, but this foolishness the republican leaders can easily explain away to the national leaders. Another thing, the republican is the only national party. They know this, and since they have odds in the presidential contest—knowing that they would get the federal patronage, anyhow—they will easily dictate a majority of the candidates, and thus maintain party honor. Moreover, they will institute a howl for honest elections, giving themselves favor before the national republican convention, and fetch lots of abnormal enthusiasm from the hearts of the "dear people."—Center News.

CAPTURED BODILY.

The republicans of Alabama, nine-tenths of whom are negroes, captured the Kolbites, Jeffersonians, populites Coxeyites last week at Birmingham. Captain Kolb made a bold fight in his paper, the Tribune, against this sale to the republicans, but finally succumbed to the inevitable in order to kill democracy in this state and turn it over into the hands of the worst enemies the South has ever had.—Dadeville Herald.

THE BLOODY LEADERS.

We have given a large portion of the proceedings of the pop's conference at Birmingham last week, because we want our readers to see what some of the bloody leaders are doing. There are several facts worthy of special notice. One is, the pops, or rather the leaders, are now in the republican camp, and another is, that the Genial Reuben was not a big dog in the pow wow, and another is, that many of the pops there were disgusted and will not follow any such bloody leaders any longer.—LaFayette Sun.

MOSELEY'S TERMS.

The Birmingham populite conference decided on a divide of the spoils of office with the republicans. This is what Bob Mosely demanded, and now the contract is drawn for ratification. Our opinion is that the respectable republicans of this state will be so disgusted at the open division of the spoils of office as to refuse to indorse the trade, while democrats who had quit the party for the house the jackall built will also refuse to be transferred to Bob Moseley's ranch in any such way. Come home, boys; our father's house is the best you can do, and it is good enough for us all.—Asheville Ægis.

NOT IN IT.

The anti-fusionists were not in it at the Birmingham mass meeting. They were captured, bag and baggage, by the fusion crowd and delivered over to Aldrich and his gang.—Ozark Star.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS.

J. H. Reynolds, of Shelby, was in town Sunday.

E. D. Hall transacted business in Birmingham Tuesday.

A. M. Piper, of Shelby, was in town a few hours yesterday.

Dr. J. B. Berkstresser, of Sylacauga, is in town talking insurance.

D. W. Kidd, of Harpersville, paid us an appreciated call last Friday.

Mrs. Milner, of Leeds, spent last week with her son, W. R. A. Milner.

Henry Fallon, of New Orleans, La., is at home for a visit among relatives.

Gordon DuBose left yesterday for Atlanta, to spend a few days at the Expositson.

C. L. Meroney, of Montevallo, was shaking hands with his many friends here Tuesday and yesterday.

Mrs. Rufus Lester spent last week with home folks, on Yellow Leaf. Her sister returned with her for a visit.

Mrs. D. R. McMillan and children, with Miss Patty Mason, spent Friday and Saturday with Childersburg relatives.

During the absence of Prof. Greek Miss Ida O'Hara will be in charge of the primary department of the free school.

Miss Louie Longshore returned Monday from Atlanta, where she has been for several weeks on a visit to her sister.

Do you enjoy a good laugh? If so, ask Frank Spears, the Chesterfieldian liveryman, of Shelby: "Is you de hackman?" He will explain.

J. K. Milner, sometimes dubbed Colonel, once in a while Major, but most "in generally" plain John, was in town a few hours yesterday.

John Porter having recovered sufficiently to return to business, left Monday for Brocton, to dish out calicoe, potatoes, onions, and "sich like."

J. T. Leeper and W. F. Thetford, jr., took in the game of football last Sasturday in Tuskaloosa, between the University and Auburn teams. Score, 40 to 0. In plain English, they saw no game.

The annual conference of the A. M. E. church is in session here this week. There are a large number of delegates present and, no doubt, they are having a soulstirring season of religious refreshment.

W. A. Walburn, who, by the way, is reported by the Saginaw correspondent as the "wisest" man in that progressive village, came over Saturday and remained with his family until Sunday afternoon. "Bill" is a "plum good un."

Do not spend your money for low proof high wines which are flavored with chemicals and called corn and rye, but let me sell you the pure juice, regular distilled from the grain, at $2 to $4 per gallon. GEO. W. CHAMBERS, Talladega, Alabama.

If you are in need of pure, unadulterated whiskies for medical purposes you can find ten-year-old Gibson rye whisky, oily and smooth as velvet; also Kentuky Yellow Stone. D. W. Harpers, McBrier, Rose Bud, Cognac, Apple and Peach brandies, imported Canadian Club, as well as brandies and gin, at GEO. W. CHAMBERS', Talladega, Ala.

Prof. W. B. Greek received a telegram last Friday calling him to his old home in Northern Ohio, where his father was very low, and no hopes of recovery. He left Sunday, and will probably be absent two three weeks. He has our hearty sympathy in this unexpected trial.

For your Xmas 'nog or for the holiday reunion, let me sell you your whiskies—something that will give satisfaction—as I buy all my liquors direct from the distillery, paying cash for same, I can sell you the pure juice.
GEO. W. CHAMBERS,
Talladega, Ala.

I. D. Mason and Rev. T. M. Wilson returned from Conference Tuesday. Brother Wilson, much to the satisfaction of this charge, will be pastor here another year. We welcome you back, Bro. Wilson. The many friends of Mrs. T. M. Wilson will be pleased to know of her rapid recovery from her recent severe illness.

A. B. Milner is striving vigorously to prepare to pass the examination necessary to obtain a position in the railway postal service, and he's going to get it, too, for he's made of the right material. He is a bright young man, and has a promising outlook before him. He is certain to succeed in life, for he has never yet learned how to fail in any undertaking.

Died—At his home in Sylacagua, Tuesday, the 19th, W. Curtis Cannon. Mr. Cannon had many friends here, who will hear the sad news with regret. He was a brilliant young man, a true Christian, and seemingly in the stength of manhood and perfect health, when he was suddenly carried away by that dread disease, consumption. The CHRONICLE and many friends here extend heartfelt sympathies to his bereaved wife and father.

County court convened Monday, Judge D. R. McMillan presiding. An innovation in Shelby county courts was inaugurated by Judge McMillan—the oocning of court with prayer. This is eminently right and proper and will, without doubt, yield good results. Ex-Gov. Cobb was called upon to preside in a few cases in which Judge McMillan was engaged before his appointment. The court has been moving along as smoothly and with as little friction as if our new judge was an old hand at the business, and so far this week all cases set for the day have been disposed of before noon.

Our Preachers.

Wilsonville Warblings.

Mr. Arnold left Sunday for a week's visit to the Exposition.

Hurrah! for new dresses you should have seen them Sunday.

The young folks had quite a pleasant drive Sunday afternoon.

Rev. J. B. Kilpatrick will hold Thanksgiving service at the Baptist church.

Rev. J. M. McCord preached very interesting sermons Sunday morning and evening.

Mrs. Self had another bad spell Saturday night, but we are glad to hear that she is recovering.

G. P. Stephens and family intend moving to Texas on next Thursday. We are very sorry to lose them from our place.

Charlie Lilly, son of P. T. Lilly who resides a few miles from here, was accidentally shot Sunday morning. We are sorry to hear of this, and wish for him a speedy recovery.

A large party was given at the residence of Mr. Stinson Friday night, but as Aunt Jerusha was not there, she cannot give the particulars. If you wish to know them, ask Mr. Arnold.

The Wilsonville Institute has brought its new pupils every Monday but two since the opening, and we hear of more who intend to start after Christmas. We are greatly in need of more room and certainly should have it.
AUNT JERUSHA.

Harpersville Echoes.

Farmers are through gathering.

William Millender is acting as bailiff for beat 10 at present.

There was not any preaching at any of our churches last Sunday.

Rev. Mr. Corley has been quite sick for several days, but is improving now.

Mrs. H. G. Self is visiting her children at Woodard, Ala., this week.

E. V. Caldwell has been made an honorary member of the "possum club."

Tom Davis went to Atlanta last week to take in the Exposition and see his girl.

Ed. Elliott has the contract for building the bridge across Locust creek near Cresswell.

Smith Rowe has rented the Mallory farm down on the Coosa river, and will move there this winter.

Mrs. Borum, who has been spending the fall with her daughter, Mrs. Terry, at Talladega, returned home a few days ago.

Water is almost as scarce as money and some of the populites who have been hurrahing so long for Kolb and anarchy haven't got either.

Sid Warren, liveing 10 miles north of here, had the misfortune to get his saw mill and several car loads of lumber burned up a few nights ago.

Wilson Jones went up to Atlanta last week to see the great sights of the world, and to see his girl too, and he and Mr. Davis look as happy this week as a jay bird on a spring morning.

Charley Elliott, of near Columbiana, moved through here last week to Vincent, where he is going to run a hotel and livery stable—a long and much need want for the growing little town of Vincent. He will occupy the Chandler building, and the public will do well to call on him.

As Kentucky went so will Alabama go if the democrats split on the money question, which they are very likely to do if things go on as they are now. It is time for a halt. If our leaders will only get together on this money question we will bury populiteism and republicanism so deep in the next election that it will take a second blowing of Gabriel's trumpet to wake them up.

THE INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL AND SHELBY COUNTY.

BY REV. W. I. SINNOTT.

The trustees of this school have decided to ask Montevallo for $9,000 to aid in erecting buildings as a condition of the school being located permanently there. This action on their part is necessitated because the appropriation made by the legislature is not sufficient to erect buildings and pay salaries of teachers also. Montevallo has done nobly, but is not able to raise the entire $9,000 herself, and therefore, asks Shelby county to help her. Can we afford to do it, or, as we may lose the school from our county if we do not help, can we afford not to do it? I think we should help for the following among other reasons:

1. The influence the school will have in elevating our common schools. In free public education it is found indispensible to have high schools and colleges. The wisest statesmen therefore have generally been advocates of colleges and universities. Witness such splendid universities as those of Virginia, Texas, Michigan, Wisconsin and other states that have raised the standard of teaching in these states. If Shelby county had $100,000 for her common schools it would be true economy to use $10,000 or $20,000, if necessary, of this amount in training teachers. The poorer the neighborhood the greater the need of good teachers in the public schools, for where the people are wealthy they can have private schools if the public schools do not suit them.

2. An industrial school enables poor girls to obtain a good education and fits them to make their own support if this be necessary.

To send a girl to a first class college usually requires from $50.00 to $150.00 tuition; $100 to $150 for board, and $100 to $200 for other expenses. Entire expenses from $200 to $400 or $500 for ten months. But the daughters of the poor, though longing for an education, cannot pay these prices.

At the Industrial school tuition will be free, board at cost and opportunities given the girl to pay part of her expenses by work which she learned to do at college. Two girls of my acquaintance attended the Industrial school at Columbus, Miss. One of them at the end of the first year found her means insufficient for her expenses the next year. She had studied dress-making along with books and organizing a class among her friends, she taught them what she had learned at school about this industry and made $25.00 besides for her expenses next year. The other girl by practicing at school what she learned about cooking there made about $75 00, nearly enough to pay her expenses that year.

Many girls when grown find self-support a necessity, and some have to support their families also. By getting an industrial education along with the literary one, they often do this in ease, pleasure and comfort.

3. In a few years this school will so increase the value of property in the county that the amount received in taxes will reimburse us for the $5000 asked for. A good school like this will make our own property more valuable and will induce others to move to our county because of advantages offered by our school.

Can we then refuse to give the $5000 asked for? Shall we stand in the way of our own interest intellectually and financially? Let us all sign the petition asking our county commissioners to appropriate this $5000 for higher education. About ten years ago Mississippi at the request of the farmers of that state, led by the state grange and a few earnest women—Mrs. Judge Peyton being especially prominent in the movement—established an industrial school for girls, perhaps the first ever founded by a state. To obtain this school Lowndes county, including its county seat, Columbus, gave $100,000 to have it located in its bounds, and I have never heard that she regretted it nor is it likely that we will regret appropriating the small amount asked of us.

LOST AN ISLAND AT POKER.

Anecdote of Pierre Bottineau, a Pioneer Frenchman, Who Lately Died.

There died, the other day, at his home in Red Lake falls, a man who was so thoroughly identified with the early history of Minnesota that to try to relate it without mentioning his name would be like trying to make bricks without straw. This man was Pierre Bottineau, the offspring of a French father and an Indian mother, and he possessed all the characteristics of both races.

Mr. Bottineau was a native of what is now North Dakota, having been born twelve miles west of the place where Fargo, N. D., now stands. At the time of his birth Lord Selkirk formed a colony of Swedes and Scotchmen near Fort Garry, and when Bottineau was ten years of age these people began an exodus for other points. Young as he was, Bottineau was an experienced guide, skilled in wood and prairie craft, and more than one of Lord Selkirk's colonists he piloted out of the wilderness.

In many of the early expeditions of the United States government Pierre was employed as a guide and scout, and was one of the principal members of the noted Sibley expedition, which crossed the plains in the early days. He was well acquainted with almost every foot of the Dakotas, Minnesota and Wisconsin, and at one time was the owner of vast tracts of valuable land, which he subsequently lost in some way or another. Mr. Bottineau was a warm friend of James J. Hill, the railway magnate, having met him at St. Paul when that place was little more than a trading point, and where Mr. Hill was employed as a freighter.

In 1841 Mr. Bottineau took up a claim on the spot where St. Paul now stands, but after having held it for a short time traded it for a horse and cow, which he drove away to his home in the wilderness, little thinking that the land he had almost given away would in a few years be the site of a great city. Later on Mr. Bottineau purchased for a small sum a large portion of what is now Minneapolis, but lost the greater portion of it through the dishonesty of purchasers and the rest through his weakness for poker, a game which he thought he understood, but which other people understood better than he.

There is a story, which the older residents of Minneapolis declare to be true, that Bottineau was once the sole owner of Nicollet island, lying in the Mississippi river, which divides Minneapolis into East and West Minneapolis, and which is now one of the most important business and residence districts in the city and valued at many millions of dollars, and that he lost it during a game of poker. A party of men met one evening at the home of one of them, so goes the story, to play their accustomed game. The stakes kept growing larger and larger, until every jack pot contained a small fortune, even for that early day.

Ever since the game had begun Mr. Bottineau had been losing steadily, but at last he was dealt a hand upon which he hoped to regain all his losses and win something besides. He was given four queens pat, and drew one card, secured an ace, leaving only four kings with which his hand could be beaten. As he saw, or thought he did, which amounted to the same thing, one of the players discard a king, he considered his hand invincible, and played it accordingly. His opponent also considered his hand a good one, and promptly raised every bet made by Bottineau.

Soon all the players but Bottineau and his opponent dropped their hands and retired from the game, after which they sat and watched the conflict. The table was heaped with money and the personal belongings of two men, who were wishing they had more to wager upon their respective hands. At last all the men possessed lay on the table in front of them, and it was Bottineau's bet. Carefully looking over his cards he thought a moment and then remarked that all he had left was Nicollet island, which was once the home of Father Hennepin, one of the earliest settlers of Minnesota, his log cabin stood upon a little mound in the center of the island up to a few years ago, when it was pulled down to make room for the residence of Col. King.

This island Bottineau was willing to bet against two hundred dollars. The bet was called by the man on the opposite side of the table and Bottineau laid down his four queens with a smile of triumph on his face. With a shout his opponent laid on the table, face up, four kings and a tray. There was a dead silence for a moment. Then Bottineau called for writing materials, made out a deed to the island and left the place. Since that day he never touched a card or countenanced gambling in any form.

After drifting around the country for a time Pierre went to Red Lake falls, where he took up a claim, and where he remained up to the time of his death, at the age of 84 years. He gradually acquired other property and left his heirs a valuable estate. With the death of Pierre Bottineau passes away the last of the old-time Canadian voyageurs and guides, who were such an important factor in the upbuilding of the northwest. He was the father of twenty-seven children, only a few of whom survive him. The one best known is J. B. Bottineau, who spends much of his time at Washington as the attorney of the Turtle mountain Indians.—Chicago Times-Herald.

Grace before Meat.

There's a difference between being full of thanksgiving, and being full of Thanksgiving dainties. But the one thing generally leads to the other. How can it be helped when the turkey is so good, and the pie so enticing? Here's a helpful hint. For that full feeling after Thanksgiving — take a pill. Not any pill, mind you. There are pills that won't help you. Take the pill that will. It's known as Ayer's Pill — and it's perfect. It is sugar-coated, pleasant to the palate, and its operation, like that of nature, is effective and without violence. Keep this in your mind if you want to enjoy the holiday season: Grace before meat, but a Pill after Pie.

OUTLOOK OF THE DEMOCRATS.

The Party Will Fight for Tariff Reform and Honest Money.

So much for the past. Of what consequence are the questions now imminent, and the position of the parties now upon them. Of these the most important, no doubt, is the silver question. Our country can adjust itself to any kind of a tariff, but it never can adjust itself to a dishonest dollar. Fortunately the question has become at last the subject of constant and serious discussion. The people have put on their thinking caps, and with characteristic earnestness and thoroughness are going to think the problem out, and settle it permanently without evasion or compromise. Parties must and will adopt themselves to this situation. It is not difficult to foresee the course of the democratic party. It has on its hands a radical difference of opinion and a first-class fight. It has had this before. It was divided on the tariff question. It fought this out within its ranks to a right conclusion, then it became stronger, united and victorious. It never would have made any progress if it had feared to face the fight or halted because of dissenters. It is now repeating that experience. Everywhere it is debating the silver question. The recent victories for sound money in Kentucky, Iowa and Ohio show the effect of full discussion and make it certain that the democratic party will not commit itself to the silver heresy, nor weaken its credit and standing by seeking harmony through compromise of principle. Harmony will come, as it did in the tariff, when the party, through struggle, takes and obstinately holds a sound position. I confidently predict that in '96 the democratic party, in its national platform and candidate, will stand for sound money, and will oppose the free coinage of silver. Both principle and expediency suggest this course. It is in line with the traditions and past of the party; with its platforms and principles; with the whole record of its administration, for which it is responsible; with its own action in opposing and repealing the Sherman law; and with its devoted loyalty to one who for 11 years has been the most conspicuous and valiant champion of honest money and sound finance. Any other course invites discreditable defeat.

While the silver question is likely, in the next campaign, to be uppermost in the public mind, the tariff will, no doubt, as in the past, be an issue between the parties and the subject of much discussion. Between the parties there is a radical difference on the principles involved, but just how important the issue is to be depends largely on the action of the republican congress and national convention. The burden rests upon that party. The democracy, after a long contest over the tariff, has passed a law which, though a very conservative measure, is a long advance in the right direction. Business and industries have accepted it, and are contented and prosperous under it. Democrats are anxious to give it the test of time and experience. Will the republicans acquiesce in this, or do they propose to turn backward to McKinleyism? Should they nominate McKinley without repudiating his tariff views, the tariff will at once become the vital issue of the campaign. He represents distinctly one idea. His nomination would be a challenge to the country to return to a tariff policy which it has defeated and discarded. The democratic party would gladly accept the challenge and fight the old battle over again; but this time it would have with it the business interests, which have adapted themselves to present conditions and demand a rest from further tariff changes. The issue would be between a fair trial of a successful tariff and a return to a discredited policy.

One other question is likely to be an important issue in the campaign, namely, the foreign policy of our country. Until a comparatively recent date there was substantial agreement that such policy should not be one of conquest or aggression, but should avoid "entangling alliances," and make Washington's farewell words and the proper assertion of the Monroe doctrine the bulwark of national safety and honor. The San Domingo fiasco of Grant's administration was believed to have ended permanently any other course. But recently republican leaders have revived a defeated and almost forgotten jingoism, and proclaimed a policy of foreign interference and annexation. By annexation of the Hawaiian islands they would have the country try the experiment of governing a distant, divided, foreign people, and of assimilating them and their institutions. By interference at Samoa they would involve us in entangling alliances with Germany and England, and in a responsibility unusual and unnecessary. By assisting Nicaragua in resisting payment of England's claim and the English occupancy they would pervert the Monroe doctrine and establish a precedent which would force us into the foreign quarrels of every petty, irresponsible republic of Central and South America.

How far these views of republican jingoists control and permeate the party will be determined in its next convention. The democratic administration, in its conduct of our foreign affairs, has met constant, bitter criticism, but has absolutely refused to depart from the traditional policy of our country, and to involve her in novel and everlasting foreign complications. It has not believed that conquest or colonial acquisition is conducive to her strength or welfare, nor national honor best upheld by tyranny over a feeble but friendly power. The republican party may make an issue over this democratic record. If so, a most important question of far-reaching consequences will demand serious attention. For one, I believe it will take much more than the bluster of jingoism to persuade the people that it is wise, safe or patriotic to plunge our country into the maelstrom of international strife and ambition, and to abandon a course where we have found peace with honor, and have grown to be the most powerful, prosperous and happy of the nations of the world.—Ex-Gov. Russell, in Century.

——McKinley's presidential boom is being rapidly perforated by the manner in which the democrats are showing up his administration of affairs in Ohio. In his own financial misfortunes Gov. McKinley had the sympathy of the entire country, but when he gets the state's affairs hopelessly confused it is different.—St. Louis Republic.

McKINLEY NOT WANTED.

Western People Are Not in Favor of High Protection.

From several sources comes intelligence of combinations among republican leaders to prevent the nomination of McKinley. Quay, of Pennsylvania, is in this deal, and presumably the head of it. He is apt to assume the leadership in matters of this sort, or, indeed, in any case where it is possible. Platt is the "me too" in the combine. Now it is affirmed that John R. Tanner, who aspires to be boss of Illinois, is not only in the combination, but that he went into it with the assent of the republican managers of the state.

New York, Pennsylvania and Illinois will have 72, 64 and 48 delegates respectively in the next republican national convention, in all 184. Of course they cannot do anything by themselves, but they would form a fine nucleus for others to gather around. They might hold the balance of power in all important discussions. The transfer of their votes on a ballot might easily compass the nomination of one of the contestants.

Mr. Quay, for reasons of his own, is hostile to McKinley. Why he is so is not well understood. Platt declares himself for Morton, but the general opinion in republican circles is that Mr. Morton's age will take him out of the list of real contestants. It is believed that Quay and Platt are both looking to Reed, though this is guesswork. As to Tanner, it is questionable whether he would undertake to turn the state of Illinois over to Reed, but this does not prevent him from working against McKinley. The reason for his opposition to the Ohio man may be inferred from what he said in an interview nearly a year ago:

"The republican party has won a great victory because the people are again willing to trust it with leadership. The party was defeated in 1892 because it had committed itself to the folly of McKinleyism. The people of Illinois and of the western states generally do not believe in the high protection advocated by republicans of the McKinley school. If the party leaders take a conservative position on the tariff question in 1896 the republican ticket will be elected. If, on the other hand, the party should make the mistake of pledging itself to a revival of McKinleyism its candidates will be defeated."

Mr. Tanner not only takes ground against McKinley, but he is disposed to ignore the pretensions of Shelby M. Cullom. He does not like the idea of throwing away the influence of his state in advocating the cause of a merely nominal candidate who is certain to drop out before the decisive ballot. In doing this, however, h antagonizes all of Cullom's friends, and exposes himself to the danger of being beaten by a combination of the supporters of Cullom and McKinley. So for the present the position of Illinois in the anti-McKinley combination may be treated as doubtful.

It is well to bear in mind that a good many things are certain to happen between this date and the meeting of the republican national convention, so that combinations made now are likely to be confronted with very unexpected conditions. In a little more than a month a republican house is to meet, and it will, doubtless, undertake to formulate some legislation to supply the deficit in the revenue that was caused by the judicial defeat of the income tax. There are known to be many republicans who are anxious to use this pretext to reopen the whole tariff question and to formulate a bill on McKinley lines for the president to veto. Should the party commit itself through its representatives in congress to a policy of this sort, it would render it somewhat awkward to reject McKinley on the grounds mentioned by Tanner. Indeed, if a new tariff fight should be inaugurated during the coming winter, it is difficult to see how it could fail to give McKinley considerable prestige in his own party. Mr. Reed, however, who will be speaker, will have a direct personal interest in preventing this, and it may be in his power by the make-up of committees and the exercise of his authority to head it off.

The democrats have no reason to object to the nomination of McKinley, for it will be impossible in the campaign to separate his candidate from McKinleyism. They have especially to congratulate themselves that the time is near at hand when the republicans will have to abandon the policy of negation, and commit themselves to some definite line of action. In doing this they will speedily develop the rivalries and antagonisms among themselves, and manufacture a good deal of campaign material for their opponents.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

COMMENT OF THE PRESS.

——Senator Sherman tells an interviewer that free wool has cost the country $40,000,000 or $50,000,000. It would be interesting to know how much the free wool which Mr. Sherman has pulled over the country's eyes in his role of financial wiseacre has taken out of the pockets of the people.—Philadelphia Record.

——Under a reduced tariff the United States is the greatest iron-producing country in the world, and American iron is sold in England. At the same time wages for American workmen in the iron factories and in the iron mines are higher by from 50 to 200 per cent. than in any other country in the world. The democratic tariff policy vindicates itself.—Chicago Chronicle.

——A republican paper comments upon the elections under the heading "Democratic Bossism Downed." It is to the credit of the democratic party that it has nearly everywhere thrown off its bosses. The republicans, on the other hand, have elevated and confirmed their bosses—Quay in Pennsylvania, Platt in New York, Cox in Ohio, with Elkins, Manley, Clarkson and all the rest. It will be discovered that this contrast will tell in next year's election. We are bossed too much. Democrats have resented it, and republicans are certain to do so.—N. Y. World.

——All the emotional republican writers and shouters are expressing jubilant thoughts over the republican victories in Ohio and Maryland as a "defeat of bossism in politics," meaning Brice and Gorman. And the same writers and shouters are greatly jubilant over the republican victories in New York and Pennsylvania, which were the mere victories of Platt as boss in one state and Quay as boss in the other—probably the most imperious, corrupt and conscienceless political bosses in the United States. Consisteney is not a jewel in the estimation of the republican jubilant writers and shouters.—Chicago Chronicle.

nothing lost

Scott's Emulsion makes cod-liver oil taking next thing to a pleasure. You hardly taste it. The stomach knows nothing about it—it does not trouble you there. You feel it first in the strength that it brings: it shows in the color of the cheek, the rounding of the angles, the smoothing of the wrinkles.

It is cod-liver oil digested for you, slipping as easily into the blood and losing itself there as rain-drops lose themselves in the ocean.

What a satisfactory thing this is—to hide the odious taste of cod-liver oil, evade the tax on the stomach, take health by surprise.

There is no secret of what it is made of—the fish-fat taste is lost, but nothing is lost but the taste.

Perhaps your druggist has a substitute for Scott's Emulsion. Isn't the standard all others try to equal the best for you to buy?

A HUMAN MONSTER

Who Is Infinitely More Culpable Than His Hirelings.

WHOLESALE SLAUGHTER OF ARMENIANS

Said to Have Been Directly Instigated by the Sultan in Order to Nullify Orders in the Direction of Reform.

LONDON, Nov. 30.—Neither the assent of the sultan to each of the powers having a second guard ship at Constantinople nor the promulgation of paper reforms will quiet the rising public wrath over the progress of his policy of extermination directed against the Christians of Asia Minor. The clamor for strong and decisive dealing with the sultan comes from conservatives and liberals alike. The popular conviction grows that Abdul Hamid is jockeying with the powers, and that the palace clique, to whom his obstinacies and duplicity are attributed, agree with, but do not rule, him.

The speaker's Constantinople correspondent, who first directed attention to the Armenian outrages, has since become a recognized authority on the subject. He declares that he has ample evidence that the sultan is personally responsible for the whole series of massacres. He explains that the late outrages commenced as soon as the sultan accepted the reforms applying to six vilayets, giving Christians rights that depended on their numbers. The massacres have been chiefly confined to these vilayets, the object being to so reduce the number of Christians as to give them no claim to any influence.

The work of extermination proceeds as systematically as it is possible for the Turkish authorities to carry it on. Both the Kurds and the troops are acting under the orders of the authorities in their work of pillage, rapine and murder. The correspondent estimates that 10,000 persons were massacred between November 13 and 25, while the sultan was posing before Europe as being desirous of effecting reforms, and as being benevolently inclined toward the Armenians.

Commenting upon the matter furnished by its correspondent, the Speaker says that among the brutal murderers who are engaged in wiping out the Armenians there is not one so brutal and criminal as this wretch, Abdul Hamid, whose very existence is a reproach to humanity. Can the civilized world, the paper asks, look on with no stronger feeling than tepid disapproval while the monster who owes his power to the protection of Great Britain consummates a crime that is almost without a parallel.

A SENSATION

Caused in Oklahoma by the Indictment of Bank Officials.

PERRY, Okla., Nov. 30. — A great sensation has been created in the territory over the grand jury here returning indictments against some prominent men who are charged with wrecking a bank here. Four indictments each were found against J. V. N. Gregory, who is many times a millionaire, of the state of Michigan, and whose name has been used here as a bank president since the opening of the Cherokee strip; Fred W. Farrar, cashier of the late First state bank; Fred Gum, clerk in the bank, and L. Merry Richardson, Jr., who was formerly cashier of the First state bank, which sold out to Farrar, Gregory and others last June. Richardson, Sr., who is the wealthiest man in Oklahoma, and was a probable candidate for governor of the territory and is now a democratic national committeeman. The indictments are for receiving money on deposit in the bank when in a failing condition.

THEY SAID GOOD-BY

To the "Father of American Football," Walter Camp, and Family.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 30.—The Stanford university football men said goodby to Mr. and Mrs. Walter Camp Friday, and the "Father of American Football," and his wife and boy left for the east on the Overland express. The 'Varsity eleven presented Mr. Camp with a parting souvenir of his third annual visit to California in the form of a heavy gold ring, with an inlaid setting of gold quartz, while Mrs. Camp was the recipient of showers of California violets.

SOCIALIST UNIONS

In Berlin Not Yet Closed, But Likely to Be.

BERLIN, Nov. 30.—The Vorwaerts confirms the report that the socialist leaders, Liebknecht, Auer and Braun, were examined Friday before a criminal inquiry justice, in the case against Auer and others, charged with violation of the association law. The Vorwaerts adds that the socialist unions have not yet been closed, though it is expected that they will be. The police, the paper says, have searched the house of Herr Singer.

MINISTER THEDIM'S WIDOW

Leaves Washington to Return to Portugal With Her Husband's Body.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—Mrs. Thedim, widow of the Portuguese minister who died a few days ago, left the city Friday at midnight en route to Portugal. The corpse of the dead diplomat, which is to be transported to Portugal, was conveyed to New York on an earlier train.

The Portuguese minister and wife, during their brief sojourn in Washington, were great favorites with diplomats and government officials. Consequently, when Mrs. Thedim departed from the capital city Senor De Lome and numerous envoys from the Spanish-American republics were at the Pennsylvania railroad station to pay her a last sad and respectful farewell.

Accidentally Killed a Fellow Student.

Gold Shipped to Europe.

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—L. Von Hoffman & Co. shipped $1,000,000 gold to Europe to-day. This is in addition to the $750,000 engaged by Baring, Magoun & Co., and makes a total of $1,750,000.

PERSISTENT DAN STUART.

Determined to Arrange a Meeting Between Corbett and Fitzsimmons.

CHICAGO, Nov. 30.—Dan Stuart was in Chicago Friday on his way from Dallas, Tex., to New York.

"If Corbett or Brady will sign the papers which I have submitted to them there will surely be a fight without interruption," said Stuart. "I have selected a battle-ground within 2 miles of El Paso, Tex., but not on Texas soil. I will put up a $20,000 forfeit that there will be no interference. The new articles of agreement call for a fight with five-ounce gloves to a finish, $2,500 forfeit money, and a purse of $20,000. I will endeavor to have the date on or about January 10. All that is now necessary for a meeting is Corbett's signature. I believe I can get the men together, and if so will hang up a second purse for George Lavigne and Jack Everhart, and thus give two fistic events at the same time.

"I've a great scheme on now for the future which is meeting with the encouragement of a certain railway, and that is to get a concession of fifty acres of land from the Mexican government near Juarez and make improvements on it for athletic contests. There is every probability that I will have all the railways back of me when plans materialize and the franchise is granted. I will attend to this after the Corbett-Fitzsimmons meeting. I am going to camp on the trail of Corbett and Brady until I get their signatures or they show that they will not fight."

BRADSTREET'S

Weekly Review of Trade Conditions Throughout the Country.

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—Bradstreet's weekly review says:

The volume of general trade shows a falling off compared with the preceding week, largely owing to the intervention of the Thanksgiving holiday, but in part to the continued effect of mild weather east and south, storms in the central west and the usual disinclination of buyers to add stocks during the closing month of the year. Western jobbers report activity noticeable in clothing, woolen goods, rubbers, shoes and holiday specialties, with some increased demand for coal and light hardware. General trade remains unchanged at the south, with mercantile collections in some instances improving the tendency of cotton to move slowly, and the movement of merchandise smaller than in October. On the Pacific coast a smaller volume of business is reported from San Francisco, with shipments east of wheat, which strengthen the local grain market. Considerable merchandise continues to go to Alaska from Seattle, and at Portland complaints are made that the passenger rate war between that city and San Francisco threatens to hurt local trade.

Exports of wheat (flour included as wheat) from both coasts of the United States and from Montreal amount to 2,460,000 bushels, as compared with 2,916,000 last week, 2,667,000 in the week a year ago, 2,140,000 two years ago, and 4,553,000 in the week three years ago.

There are 283 business failures reported throughout the United States this week, a noticeable falling off from the total one week before of 323, and even when compared with the total one year ago, 307. In the last week of November, 1893, there was 298 failures, and in the corresponding week of 1892 the total was 268.

THE CHINESE MUST GO.

Writ of Habeas Corpus Dissolved and Celestials Ordered Deported.

CHICAGO, Nov. 30.—Judge Grosscup, in the United States court, ordered the writ of habeas corpus, by which three Chinese, detained in Chicago under the deportation law, regained their liberty, dissolved, and ordered that the Chinamen be remanded to the custody of United States Marshal Nat S. Stearns in Vermont. They will then be sent out of this country as soon as possible. Contrary to previous statements made Attorney Thomas A. Milchrist did not ask for an appeal. He at first intended to do so, but changed his mind in regard to the matter.

THE DEADLY PARALLEL

Shows Durrant to be a Plagiarist as Well as a Murderer.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 30.—Theodore Durrant is a plagiarist. Soon after he had been sentenced he said he had written a poem. A morning paper secured and published it as a literary freak. It was much commented on and freely criticised. It now turns out that the "poem" was stolen almost bodily from "Ad Leones," previously published in a magazine. The "deadly parallel" clearly shows the fraud of the prisoner. He merely adapted the original poem to his uses by changing a word here and there.

HANGED BY A MOB.

Two Negroes Convicted of Criminal Assault Lynched.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 30.—Two negroes, Joe Robertson and Oziah McGaughey, who were convicted at Lewisburg, Friday, of criminal outrage and sentenced by Judge Jones to twenty-one years each in the penitentiary, and who were taken from the train at Fayetteville and lodged in the Lincoln county jail for safe keeping, were taken out by a mob at about 8 p. m., despite the efforts of the sheriff and his deputies to disperse them, and hanged to trees in the courthouse yard.

FLAMES AT BENTON, MO.

Several Buildings Destroyed and Little of the Loss Insured.

BENTON, Mo., Nov. 30.—At 4 a. m. fire destroyed Dr. Butler's building, Cremona hall building and Heisserer's restaurant building. In the Butler building were Luta Gray's millinery establishment, Wm. Riscig's grocery and Dr. Butler's office. Nothing was saved. The lower floor of the hall building was occupied by L. B. Russell's drug store, the contents of which were saved. The contents of the restaurant were also preserved. The only insurance was $700, carried by Dr. Butler.

To be Turned Into a Japanese Cruiser.

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—The steamer State of California, which has been running between this port and the Clyde for the Allan line since she left the hands of her builders four years ago, has been sold to the Japanese government and will be converted into a cruiser.

INFURIATED NEGROES

Make a Futile Attempt to Seize Jessie Simms' Murderer.

HE WOULD HAVE BEEN A DEAD NIGGER

Had They Once Got Possession of Him; But the Police Were Present in Sufficient Force and a Lynching Was Averted.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 30.—Alexander Royle, who murdered Jessie Simms Friday morning and escaped, was captured in East St. Louis Friday night. He was fully identified and finally confessed the deed.

When Royle, who had been brought over from East St. Louis during the night, was taken to the morgue to be sworn, in accordance with a time-honored custom, over the body of his victim, he narrowly escaped lynching at the hands of men of his own color.

The news that Royle had been brought back spread like wildfire among the negroes, and they began to gather early from every direction toward the four courts, and by the time Royle appeared at the morgue, guarded by two policemen, nearly 500 blacks were congregated in the vicinity. They evidently lacked a leader, as no immediate demonstration was made, and the policemen, noticing the signs of impending trouble, immediately dispatched a messenger to headquarters, so that by the time the mob had gotten ready to act a force forty strong was ready to quell at once any hostile movement.

When the coroner administered the oath to Royle the prisoner was so scared as to be scarcely able to raise his hand, and his face was seen to blanch almost to whiteness as one of the negro onlookers, bolder than the rest, made a spring toward the culprit in response to cries from the outside to "lynch him."

The police, however, held the mob at bay with clubs and revolvers, while the prisoner was hustled through a side door to safety behind the bars of the city jail.

Royle is a brown mulatto, six feet and two inches in height, and is in his twenty-sixth year. He is an intelligent young man and converses with great fluency and grammatical accuracy. He discusses his crime dispassionately, without the least show of bravado, just as unconcernedly as if it were a thing which had to be done and Providence had appointed him as a special agent to carry out its designs.

ONE MINUTE IN JAIL,

But It was Merely that a Form of Law Might be Observed.

CHICAGO, Nov. 30.—Manager W. S. Elen and twenty-eight barbers from the Great Northern hotel shop were in jail one minute as a result of their refusal to pay fees, which they considered exorbitant, to Justice Lee. They were all released on a writ of habeas corpus, which was granted before they had been to jail at all, but it became necessary to send them there for a brief time in order to satisfy the requirements of the law. Bonds were then given by all the defendants.

The case which came up before Justice Lee was one for violation of the Sunday-closing law. The barbers were all held by the justice in bonds of $30 each, which they were willing to give, but they flatly refused to pay the required fee of one dollar each for the making out of the bonds on the ground that Judge Windes has ordered that no more fees be collected until he disposed of the application which is now pending to prevent justices from exacting these and other alleged exorbitant fees.

FIFTEEN SAVED

Of the Crew of the Abandoned American Ship Belle O'Brien.

LONDON, Nov. 30.—The British steamer Rose Morran, Capt. Norman, from Norfolk and Newport News for Leith, landed at Plymouth late Friday evening the captain of the American ship Belle O'Brien, from San Francisco, before reported foundered, together with his wife and thirteen of the ship's crew. These were picked up from a small boat on November 27 in latitude 49 north, longitude 15 west, as they were abandoning the sinking wreck. The second officer and two seamen of the Belle O'Brien are still missing, and one of the crew was drowned before the vessel was abandoned.

FLOOD GIVES IN.

After a Four Years' Fight for Liberty He Drops His Appeals.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 30.—John W. Flood, the defaulting cashier of the Donohue-Kelly bank, has given up the fight and will serve his sentence of seven years in prison. Accordingly his appeal for a new trial has been withdrawn from the supreme court.

Flood misappropriated $160,000 of the funds of the bank of which he was cashier, and has been fighting for his freedom for four years.

He is convinced that even if he escaped punishment for the crime which he was convicted, he would be prosecuted on other charges.

Dr. Donaldson Smith, the African Explorer.

LONDON, Nov. 30.—Dr. Donaldson Smith, of Philadelphia, the African explorer, arrived here Friday evening, having been absent on his African tour since the latter part of May, 1894. He brought with him an extraordinary collection of natural history specimens.

Succumbed to Apoplexy.

SALEM, Mo., Nov. 30.—After lingering about eighting hours from a stroke of apoplexy J. D. Dilworth died Friday. Mr. Dilworth was 68 years old, and resided in this (Dent) county over forty years.

SOUTHERN GLEANINGS.

Hector Lane Talks About Cotton.

Hon. Hector D. Lane, of Athens, Ala., president of the American Cotton Growers' Protective association of the United States, and Col. E. S. Heters, of Colvert, Tex., president of the Texas division of the association, were in Waco, Tex., recently, to attend a meeting of the executive committee. In an interview Mr. Lane is quoted as saying:

The effect of the work begun by the national association at Jackson, and taken up at the New Orleans meeting and subsequently at the Waco meeting last March, was a great reduction in acreage. I agree with Mr. H. N. Neill, the statistician, of New Orleans, that the present crop will fall under 6,500,000 bales. When we met at Jackson, Miss., last January, we were confronted with four-cent cotton, which was the result of the biggest overproduction ever known in the history of cotton. The crop last year was 9,700,000 bales. We reduced it 3,000,000 bales and brought the price to eight cents on the present crop. The bears are telling in the markets that the improved farming facilities, abundance of grain and feed and cheap horses and mules in the south will result in a Texas crop of 4,000,000 bales and a national crop of 11,000,000 bales next year. This kind of talk is being urged to 'bear' the present crop, which they see is running out. The object of our meeting here and the meetings that will follow is to prevent overproduction next year and the pauper prices that will result from such overproduction. We will issue addresses and keep it up, and will surely keep the planters in remembrance of the inevitable result of overproduction."

Flag Raising at Birmingham.

United States flags were raised over the city hall and all public school buildings in Bermingham, Ala., the other day, for the first time in the history of the city. Appropriate ceremonies were conducted at each place. Addresses were made by members of the Grand Army of the Republic and of the United Confederate veterans. "Dixie" and "America" were sung and anvils were fired. The flags were presented by various citizens and organizations, the one over the city hall coming from the Birmingham trades council.

Elopement Suddenly Terminated.

An attempted elopement terminated rather sensationally near Montgomery, Ala. A. Meriwether, an electric car motorman, and the pretty young daughter of Col. Pete Harrison, a farmer, determined to marry, and, engaging the services of a notary, drove into the country. Just as the party halted to tie the nuptial knot the irate father appeared on the scene with a gun and opened fire. The groom fled for safety.

Reward Offered for Lynchers.

Gov. Stone of Mississippi has offered a reward of $500 for the arrest and conviction of each of the mob who engaged in lynching the negro at Crystal Springs, who had been convicted at Brook Haven as Jack Yarborough, alias Charles White, and sentenced to the penitentiary for life. It is estimated there were about 150 men taking part in the lynching. He also offered a reward of $250 each for the arrest and conviction of each of the persons liberating Will Purvis, at Purvis, a short time since.

Because Her Mother Interfered.

On account of her mother's refusal to allow her to receive the attentions of Dell Glover, Miss Emma Carroll, an 18-year-old girl of the vicinity of Light's Chapel, not far from Clarksville, Tenn., secured a razor and cut her throat. In a note she wrote that she had taken her life for love, and requested her parents to keep her body from the grave two days, and then bury her in a white dress trimmed with blue ribbon.

Eight to Be Tried for Arson.

Gov. Carr of North Carolina has ordered a special term of the superior court for Lenoir county to try eight men charged with setting fire to the town of Kinston and causing $150,000 loss. Detectives were at work many weeks to catch the incendiaries, who set fire to the town several times. The grand jury, at the recent term of court, found true bills against the men who are to be tried.

Thirteen Horses Burned.

The large stable of J. P. Etsch, a wealthy farmer near Hopkinsville, Ky., was destroyed by fire, together with all its contents, consisting of thirteen horses, all his crop, vehicles and farming implements. The fire was the work of incendiaries. The loss is estimated at $6,000, with no insurance.

The Deacon Led the Shiners.

Reports from Union county, Tenn., say revenue officers captured a still, twenty persons and 1,000 gallons of whisky. The still was run near a church, and a deacon of the church was the leader of the moonshiners.

Fatally Shot at a Wedding Feast.

At a wedding supper near Madisonville, Ky., George Winstead shot D. G. Fowler, a prominent farmer, through the lungs, producing what physicians say is a fatal wound.

Engineer and Fireman Killed.

An Illinois Central passenger train ran into a box car blown across the track by high wind at Jackson, Tenn., killing Engineer Wooley, of Water Valley, Miss., and his fireman.

Convention Delegate Dies.

Delegate Sprott, of the South Carolina constitutional convention, died a few days ago, making the third death which has occurred among the members of the convention.

Rum-Crazed and Ferocious.

Charles James, intoxicated, went down the main street of Birmingham, Ala., the other night, attacking everyone he met, until badly shot in a saloon fight.

Edwin F. Kelly.

Edwin F. Kelly, a prominent citizen of Hopkinsville, Ky., for over three-quarters of a century, died in Jackson, Tenn., after a brief illness, aged 90.

A Sad Mistake.

Anderson Bird, a farmer who lived near Middleton, Ala., died from the effects of morphine administered by his wife by mistake for quinine.

Eloped With Her Stepson.

Mrs. Louise Eblin, a widow, aged 54, quite wealthy, who resides near Curdsville, Ky., eloped with her stepson, aged 18, and they were married.

THE DEATH SENTENCE

Pronounced Upon Herman W. Mudgett, alias H. H. Holmes,

FOR THE MURDER OF BENJ. F. PITEZEL.

The Motion for a New Trial Was Previously Denied in an Elaborate Opinion Read in the Court of Oyer and Terminer.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 30.—Herman W. Mudgett, alias H. H. Holmes, who was convicted of murder in the first degree for having caused the death, in this city, of Benjamin F. Pitezel, was, in the court of oyer and terminer, refused a new trial and sentenced to be hanged. The opinion denying the accused a new trial was delivered by Judge Arnold, it having been concurred in by Judges Thayer, Wilson and Arnold, who heard the application for a new trial. Judge Arnold then pronounced the death sentence.

Holmes, who had been brought into court to hear the opinion, was not affected by the adverse decision, and when Judge Arnold, in deliberate tones, sentenced him to be "hanged by the neck until dead," the air of apparent indifference, which was so manifest throughout the trial, was not deviated from by the alleged multi-murderer. Holmes was then returned to the county prison, and a death watch was placed over him. The date of execution will be fixed by Gov. Hastings.

The opinion covers thirty-seven type written pages, and Judge Arnold occupied an hour in its delivery. Every phase of the noted case was gone into and the fifteen points raised by the defendant's counsel in the application for a new trial were disposed of seriatim.

It is believed that the case will be appealed to the supreme court.

GAVE THE PLOT AWAY,

And a Post-Office Robbery at Anna, Mo., Didn't Occur.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Nov. 30.—Three men, who were heavily armed and had planned to rob the post office at Anna, a railroad station south of the city, were arrested by the police Friday night. They are E. D. Ware, Walter Vanloon and Charles Simon. The men confessed that they had planned to rob the post office, knowing there was a considerable sum of money there. Simon claims to have acted the part of a spy and says he informed Deputy United States Marshal Smith of the plan to rob the post office. Smith and a constable were guarding the post office and were to shoot Vanloon and Ware when the signal was given by Simon. A reward of $150 is offered by the government for the capture of all the post office robbers, and Simon says he was to receive a part of the reward after the attempt had been made, if the deputy marshal and constable were successful in capturing Vanloon and Ware.

THE DEFENDANT WINS,

But the Supreme Court of Michigan Will Now Hear the Case.

LANSING, Mich., Nov. 30.—The case of Receiver Stone of the Central Michigan savings bank, which failed in the panic of 1893, against Nelson F. Jennison, a prominent business man of this city, to recover a deposit of $2,800 withdrawn from the bank on the day of its failure, was decided in favor of the defendant after the jury had deliberated twenty-four hours.

The case was an important one as $30,000 was withdrawn from the bank on the day of its failure, and nearly $175,000 in the three or four preceding days.

The inference from the verdict is that the bank was insolvent, when it paid Jennison his deposit. The case will go to the supreme court.

ALEXANDER DUMAS.

Funeral of the Famous Litterature in Paris.

PARIS, Nov. 30.—The funeral of Alexander Dumas took place here. The hearse arrived at the Dumas house, No. 11 Rue Ampere, at 11:30 a. m., at which time the street, as well as the adjoining street, Rue Alphonse de Neuville, was crowded with people. Before the coffin was placed in the hearse the wreaths and floral offerings, of which large numbers had been sent to the house, were brought out and put upon two special cars provided for the purpose.

FIVE HUNDRED DROWNED

During the Recent Storms and Floods in Southern Russia.

BERLIN, Nov. 30.—A dispatch to the Cologne Gazette from Odessa says that 500 persons were drowned by the recent storms and floods in southern Russia, and that the people in the devastated districts are in great distress. The damage to property can hardly be estimated.

Murderer Harris Said to Be Insane.

FREEPORT, Ill., Nov. 30.—A sensation was created here Friday when Dr. McFarland, the Jacksonville (Ill.) expert, decided that Murderer Frank W. Harris is insane. McFarland will recommend to the governor that a commission examine Harris.

Canadians to Pray for Ingersoll.

KINGSTON, Ont., Nov. 30.—The Christian Endeavorers of the Dominion of Canada has been requested to unite in prayer to God for the conversion of Col. Robert G. Ingersoll on Sunday, December 1, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

Assigned.

GLOVERSVILLE, N. Y., Nov. 30.—The extensive globe jobbing firm of Cheney & A. C. Johnson made a general assignment this morning. The liabilities are said to be very large.

FIRE AT ARCOLA, ILL.

Broomcorn Warehouse Destroyed, Entailing a Loss of $30,000.

ARCOLA, Ill., Nov. 30.—The worst fire, viewing it from a financial standpoint, that has occurred in this city since the eventful Monday afternoon in September, 1880, when nearly half the town was buried in ruins by flames, occurred here early Friday morning. The mammoth broomcorn warehouse of George F. Howell & Co., of Philadelphia, and L. B. Chambers & Co., of this city, and the largest in Illinois, was burned, together with its contents of 500 tons of broomcorn. Three box cars on the Vandalia siding were also consumed. Loss, $30,000; insurance, $12,400.

Weekly Bank Statement.

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—The weekly statement of the associated banks shows the following changes:

Reserve, decrease	$ 931,6 0
Loans, decrease	2,682,800
Specie, decrease	133,100
Legal tenders, decrease	1,9 4,200
Deposits, decrease	4,382,600
Circulation, increase	5,600

The banks now hold $18,613,300 in excess of the requirements of the 25-per-cent. rule.

Notice to Close.

BERLIN, Nov. 30.—The presidents of the various unions of the socialist party were served by the police at noon, with formal notices of the closing of their organizations.

Planing Mills Burned.

MOUNT VERNON, N. Y., Nov. 30.—The planing mills of the D. C. Burton Lumber Co. were burned. Loss, $50,000; insurance partial.

Exchanges, $115,170,045; balances, $8,351,560. Bar silver, 67¾. Mexican dollars, 54. Government bonds easier. State bonds dull. Railroad bonds higher. Silver at the board was dull.

There was quite a rush to cover shorts in the industrials after 11 o'clock, and under large purchases Sugar rose to 102¼. Tobacco to 82½, Chicago Gas to 63⅝. Leather preferred to 64 and Cattle Feeding to 19⅝. The other prominent stocks rose ½@1½ per cent. Western Union leading. Toward noon the demand from the bears ceased, and a reaction of ½@¾ per cent. followed. The railway list at this time developed weakness, and the grangers, Louisville & Nashville and Missouri Pacific sold at the lowest point of the day. It was said in the room that a prominent operator who has been long on a big line of grangers sold out his holdings because of the poor showing of the Burlington for October. Speculation closed firm for the industrials and weak for the railway list.

BROWN CHEMICAL CO. BALTIMORE, MD.

THE * CHRONICLE.

C. C. DuBOSE, Editor and Proprietor.

COLUMBIANA, DEC. 5, 1895.

DEMOCRACY FIRST.

Since Capt. Joseph F. Johnston announced that he was a candidate for governor, THE CHRONICLE has each week published a few extracts taken at random from the leading papers in this state. The most casual reader has doubtless been impressed with the wide diversity of opinion regarding Capt. Johnston's candidacy, and the probable results to the democracy of Alabama, should he be nominated.

THE CHRONICLE has not been hasty in expressing an opinion, preferring rather to think the matter over carefully in all its details, hoping thereby to reach a sounder conclusion. And now, that we have given the subject due consideration, we propose to speak out in meeting. Our position can be expressed in a few words. The continued triumph of democracy and its principles is nearer our heart than all the aspiring politicians in christendom, and if it becomes necessary to sacrifice one or all of them in order to clear the road for democracy's triumphant march, we say, let the merry war go on until the last one has been decapitated.

We thought, two years ago, and we still think, Capt. Johnston made a fatal mistake in his attack on Cleveland's administration, and we feel certain that his effort to fofce the silver heresy into state politics is a worse blunder still. What he hopes to gain by pursuing this policy we must confess we are at a loss to know, but we do know that he is sowing seed of dissension and strife in the democratic party, and is very largely responsible for the want of harmony in her ranks today. If it were possible to nominate and elect him on a free silver platform, he would cut about as much figure in shaping national financial legislation as would the boss of a squad of laborers. Then why force this issue?

We have not pursued the course adopted by several papers of abusing and maligning Captain Johnston. We like him personally, but we are unwilling that democracy hazard the risk of defeat in order to satisfy his ambition. Is he greater than his party and shall he cram the silver craze down our throats whether or no? Would it not be well for him to be governed by the will of the party, and not attempt to dictate?

THE CHRONICLE advocates harmony and will use its influence in that direction. We would greatly deplore a better fight between the sound money advocates and the free silverites, and we hope the issue may be avoided. In the interest of peace and unity we would be willing to tender Capt. Johnston the nomination without a struggle if he will stand on the platform made by the convention, and will let the silver question take care of itself. But we are for democracy first, and if he is unwilling to accept the nomination on these terms, we are for the man who will. If he is to continue a disturbing factor in state politics the sooner he is laid on the shelf the better.

Capt. Johnston has his destiny within his grasp. If he pursues a wise course he can win in a trot. If, however, he maintains his present attitude his defeat is a certainty. Captain, the choice is yours.

EDISON believes that the problem of navigating the air cannot be accomplished by using either balloons or aeroplanes. He says: "I would construct actual ships of the air—yachts, schooners, and brigantines—which would tack and jibe and sail before the wind. My idea is that the lifting power of these air ships should be gas stored in the sails. I would construct gas bags shaped like the sails of a yacht."

A COMPLETE and immediate revolution of transportation methods involving a reduction of freight charges on grain from the West to New York of from 50 to 60 per cent., is what is predicted in the November Cosmopolitan. The plan proposes using light and inexpensive corrugated iron cylinders, hung on a slight rail supported on poles from a cross-arm—the whole system involving an expense of not more than $1,500 a mile for construction. The rolling stock is equally simple and comparatively inexpensive. Continuous lines of cylinders, moving with no interval to speak of, would carry more grain in a day than a quadruple track railway. This would constitute a sort of grain-pipe line. The Cosmopolitan also points out the probable abolition of street-cars before the coming horseless carriage which can be operated by a boy on asphalt pavements at a total expense for labor, oil, and interest of not more than $1 a day.

HERE now is a most pathetic appeal, which must go plumb to the core of even a political soul, for the ceasing of silver jargon: "Why keep up this agitation of the silver question? Let us retire the free silver mummy till times shall get hard, prices low, and blight and pestilence and famine shall again reign in our land. Its services are certainly not now wanted. Its boon companions are disease, misfortune, bankruptcy, wreck and ruin; and while the genial sun shines, fortune smiles and plenty abounds in the land, who cares a darn whether silver was stricken down in 1873 by a dagger in the dead of night, or whether she peacefully expired at high noon with all her friends and relatives present. Give us a rest, ye twangers of the silver lyre! Give us a rest!"

THE meanest man bobs up pretty regularly all over the country, but New York has the distinction of having the meanest woman. She is an "old maid" who rooms in a house with a newly-married couple. She claimed that the kisses of the young people disturbed her and wanted them to stop kissing.

OVER seventy-five new cotton factories have been established in the South within the last three months. Many of these organizations have not made public the amount of their stock, but the aggregate stock of those reported is $4,700,000.

WITH a republican congress in session and a blizzard raging, we are in the middle of a bad fix. And worse yet, Tom Reed is speaker of the house. Shades of the departed, why are we thus afflicted?

ACCORDING to the report of United States Labor Commissioner Wright, the strikes and lockouts of seven and a half years have cost capital $35,000,000 and labor $47,000,000.

A FARMER in Medina, Mich., sold his wife the other day for $10. He needed the money to buy a couple more dogs.

THOMAS B. REED.

From the Philadelphia Times.

Thomas B. Reed, of Maine, who was unanimously nominated for speaker of the house in party caucus last evening occupies the proudest and the most perilous position of any man in the republican party of the nation today. He differs from Blaine as a great leader in his studiedly aggressive attributes. Blaine was more brilliant than Reed, and at times exhibited the highest courage in his magnificent dashes in political warfare, but he was not the master leader of the party policy, nor had he the courage to enforce party discipline that Reed has always exhibited when in power. He is today the autocrat of his party, and as such will be more potent than any score of others in shaping its movements and destiny.

Mr. Reed has made a record as a party leader when speaker of the Fifty-first congress, and it stands out singly in the history of individual leadership in the house since the days of Clay. He was not only speaker, but he was master—more, he was autocrat of his party and of legislation. There was not an act of importance passed by the Fifty-first congress that was not passed by his command. There was not a measure rejected that was not rejected by his orders. He ruled with a rod of iron, and while many protested and threatened revolt, the imperious personality af Reed made all take pause when it came to the point of open rebellion. Such was his record as leader in the Fifty-first congress; and now, after two democratic congresses have intervened his party returns to power with a majority quite equal to that which his congress gave to his opponents in 1890.

During the last four years Mr. Reed has, as a leader of the republican party in congress, accepted no other duties than to object and to obstruct. He never proposed a measure or a policy. Even when the credit of the nation was trembling in the balance, and when the interests of the whole people demanded the greatest statesmanship, political interests dwarfed every quality of statesmanship when he could have created a sound financial policy that would not only have rescued the country from its peril, but that surely would have made him the next president. He has thus lost one opportutity to realize the dream of his life, and now he is upon his second trial.

Mr. Reed cannot forget that under his leadership the Fifty-first congress found a treasury overflowing with a surplus of over $100,000,000; that when the first session of that congress closed not only was the surplus dissipated, but over $50,000,000 of the bank redemption fund, always regarded as a trust fund of the government, was expended with the surplus and that under the enactments of that congress the Harrison administration closed with the national treasury bankrupt some $34,000,000. The result of Mr. Reed's leadership in that congress was the defeat of his party in the elections of 1890 by over a million majority. Since then two democratic congresses have come, and by democratic folly aided by financial and industrial depression, that party has been defeated by a majority even exceeding that given against the republicans as a national verdict on the record of the Fifty-first congress.

The time has come when Mr. Reed must act. He can no longer object; he can no longer obstruct. He is now the autocratic leader of the party that confidently and reasonably expects to elect the next president, and he hopes to be its candidate. Will he be strong or feeble in his now role of leadership? Will he play politician, or will he develop as statesman? If he shall go mousing in the sinuous ways of the politician to reach the presidency he will surely defeat himself, and do much to impair the chances of his party success. If he shall now be, first of all, a national statesman looking to national interests as the best way to promote party interests, he will not only give the country increased prosperity during the present congress, but he will be the next president of the United States. At no time in the history of the republic has any one man been in a position to wield so much power for his own and his country's weal or woe as Thomas B. Reed possesses today.

WHAT THE PAPERS ARE SAYING.

A JOB FOR SIGN PAINTERS.

If the free silverites shall have their way they propose to commit the Alabama democracy to the 16 to 1 idea outright. The will say they are in favor of Mexicanizing our finances. That is their platform and they propose no compromise and hold out no olive branch. Now, the sound money people could afford to be a little indifferent if it were not for the ridiculous figure the state democracy would cut. We could be indifferent because, as Senator Morgan has said, nothing practical is in sight for the silver idea now, and Tom Watson is on record as saying that the free silver coinage idea is "asleep forever." Of course, every man who can think, knows that the truth lies between the opinions of these eminent silverits somewhere. Senator Morgan knows, Senator Pugh knows, Captain Johnston knows, and they will not question it, that the coming national convention of the great democracy will incorporate no free silver idea, and make it so pronounced that no man shall doubt where it stands, though the last platform was rather plain. But people who are blind will be able to read the next financial plank. The body will write it on the rocks if they cannot put it deep enough on paper. Mr. Morgan and Mr. Pugh and Mr. Johnston, and all other thinking people, are prepared for that plank in the next platform. We could, therefore, as sound money people, appear to be indifferent as to what idea won in this state since free silver has had no chance, and Governor Johnston, if he wins, could open no mints. But what sort of a figure would the captain cut caroling over the state with his auburn moustache and his handsome presence, shouting free silver at the top of his voice, and Whitney or Dave Hill holding a commission from the national democracy telling everybody, everywhere, that the great democratic party stands for sound money and that the highest law-making body of the party has so writ in unmistakable words in its 1895 magna charta? Would not the captain's feeble free silver campaign be a sight for the gods? How dare a man go before the people and proclaim what democracy stands for right at a time when the national democracy, fresh from all the states, declares his position to be absurd? Shall we, in Alabama, have one platform for the August campaign and another for the November campaign, and both campaigns on at the same time? If so, we had best send out our orators with one of those turning placards, "sound money" on one side and "free silver" on the other, so that the lightning changes may be made in full view of their spell-bound audiences. But will not such a procedure throw the people into fits? We think so.—Eufaula Times.

THE SUPREME QUESTION.

A close reading of the newspapers of the state discloses the fact that a difference of opinion exists as to the best plan of conducting the preliminary campaign for the nomination of a candidate for governor next year. Some papers advocate putting out a candidate on both sides of the financial question and letting it be a fight to the finish, while others combat this idea on the ground that the strife and hard feeling engendered by a factional fight inside the party at this time will greatly cripple the party's chances of success. While the Inquirer believes that the financial question must be settled by a direct vote of the people, it is in doubt as to the propriety at this time of precipitating a preliminary canvass in this state with it as the main issue. What the party needs most now is harmony and good feeling in its ranks. All signs point to a hard fight next year, and the party will need the combined help of all democrats, and that without reference to their financial views. The supreme question is the triumph of democracy in the state election. Now, what will the party do?—Piedmont Inquirer.

STATE POLITICAL MIRROR.

Governor Oates' interpretation of the presidential administration is not that of the democratic press of this state nor of any other state. The Ægis has read Mr. Cleveland differently, and so has all the non-partisan democratic press of the country. The president has not aspired to the roll of a demagogue in his administration, nor sought to please the will of a partisan; but as a leader he has proven himself the equal of all other democratic presidents, besides a safe and sound one. The fault was not in the president, but in a few self-constituted leaders of the Gormon, Hill and Morgan stripe, trying to pull the president by the nose, and when they found out that couldn't be done, they set to work to pull down his administration. The country has administered such leaders a second rebuke, but still they stupidly follow on, to cover their shame in the ruin of their party, if they can.—Ashville Ægis.

AGAINST HIS METHODS.

We wage no war on Captain Johnston, but we are tooth and toenail for a fight against his policy and his methods. Free silver is not and never can be a state issue, and there is no more hope for the national party on a free silver platform than there is for snow flakes in Hades. Pugh, Morgan and Johnston "need no ghost come from the grave to tell them that." We maintain, and the national democratic party maintained, that free silver coinage at the ratio of 16 to 1 is dishonest, unwise and unsound. Were there no personal reasons for opposing Johnston's candidacy—and we may assume there are not—the fact that he represents free silver in Alabama would be our warrant for declaring against him until he has the banner of leadership placed in his hands by the convention.—Greensboro Beacon.

MUST BE CONSISTENT.

The democracy of Alabama cannot, dare not, make the race on a platform at variance with the national democracy, or with a candidate who distorts it to make it mean free silver. We must be in line with the national party. If we want free silver be populists and be done with it. It is silver monometallism and nothing else. We must not let a platform or candidate be put out in 1896 that opposes our president and our party. Sound money and the cause of the adminstration must prevail or we are gone up.—Greensboro Watchman.

THIS FROM THE JOURNAL.

A candidate placed upon a platform that doesen't have a bold, outspoken, honest, manly, democratic ring about it on the financial question will as surely be beaten as he is nominated, and he ought to be beaten. A party not bold and honest enough to declare its honest convictions on a question of such vital concern to the people is not fit to manage the affairs of the people. If it mistrusts itself, how can it expect the people to trust it?—Montgomery Journal.

SOME SUGGESTIONS.

If the sound money democrats are forced to support Captain Johnston, it should be for the reason that the honest money forces shall fail to present a dynamo-like leader. No objection to Captain Johnston personally, in fact we rather like him, but he should stop his redomontade against the administration, cease airing his grievances against Mr. Cleveland, whether or not he should become the standard bearer.—Centre News.

LET'S HAVE NO STRIFE.

If Captain Johnston is to be nominated unanimously, and if harmony, sweet harmony, is to be the keynote of the coming campaign, why not quit saying tantalizing things about him? Don't give us a half-way harmony. Let's have it all in its fullness. "We be brethren, let there be no strife between us."—Decatur News.

AMUSEMENT AHEAD.

The next state campaign will be full of amusing contretemps if the silverites should win and carry out their foolish resolution to run a platform in violent contrast to the national platform. Such a campaign would furnish no end of amusement to a man who did not love his party or state.—Eufaula Times.

MAY BE A WINNER.

Of course we are for Governor Oates for whatever he wants, the earth included. The fact remains, however, that in the interest of harmony that Captain Johnston for governor and Governor Oates for the senate on a conservative platform may be a winning ticket.—Decatur Herald.

LIFE SAVED BY

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL

"Seven years ago, my wife had a severe attack of lung trouble which the physicians pronounced consumption. The cough was extremely distressing, especially at night, and was frequently attended with the spitting of blood. The doctors being unable to help her, I induced her to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and was surprised at the great relief it gave. Before using one whole bottle, she was cured, so that now she is quite strong and healthy. That this medicine saved my wife's life, I have not the least doubt."—K. MORRIS, Memphis, Tenn.

Important Notice to Subscribers.

During this week we have mailed statements to every patron on our books, except those at Harpersville and Vincent, whom Mr. R. B. Posey, our agent, will see personally. We earnestly request that each individual will favor us with a prompt remittance. The amounts are small and can be paid without inconvenience, and we want to urge each one to do us the favor to attend to this matter at once. Do not delay until you happen to have business that will call you to the county seat, but remit by mail. It costs only three cents. We are very anxious to clear our books before the first of January, and start the new year with clean lists. Brother, if you have received a statement, this refers to you personally. Don't get your feathers ruffled and say hard things, but step up like a little man, send in your little dollar, and you will not only feel better, but we will feel better towards you, and it will enable us to make some of our creditors happy also. We are in dead earnest. Let every man respond promptly, and it will encourage us to give you the very best paper possible during the year just ahead. Our parting admonition is: Pay up and pay NOW.

Harpersville Echoes.

Renfro Martin went up to the Exposition last week.

Rev. J. R. Steelly, of Talladega, has located in our beat.

Mr. Martin has shipped four or five car-loads of cotton seed this fall.

Mrs. Smith Rowe and children spent last week with relatives at Childersburg.

R. H. Gill returned home last week from several days' visit to his son at Blountsville, Ala.

Dr. McGaha and H. C. Reynolds spoke here last Wednesday in behalf of the Girls' Industrial Institute.

Thanksgiving Day was observed at the Baptist church. The services were conducted by Prof. C. H. Florey.

The old mill which has been here so long is being moved to its new location this week, just over at the big spring.

The negroes gave a pay supper last Friday night in behalf of their new Baptist church, and realized quite a nice sum.

We all up here, regardless of politics, want Shelby county to give the $5,000 asked for in securing the Industrial School at Montevallo.

Mr. Editor, if the Commissioners give the $5,000 asked for, the petition asking them to get a tin dipper for McGowan spring will be withdrawn.

Marvin, son of our "boss" sawmill man, J. N. Marvin, Esq., had the misforune to get one of his arms broken while working at the mill last Friday.

Judge Russell put on his dignity and derby hat one evening last week and went down on the river and pronounced Mr. Jones and Miss Morrill man and wife. The judge says saluting the bride has gone out of fashion.

"JAKE."

Wilsonville Warblings.

J. F. Pope was in Rome last week.

How we wish Thanksgiving would come every day.

J. H. Weldon transacted business in Weldon Friday.

Mr. George Smith has returned to his work. We wish him great success.

Mr. Stephen and family left Thursday for Texas, where they will reside in future.

We are glad to welcome Misses Tula and Amelia Vick as members of our school.

Mrs. Porter and children, of Jacksonville, are visiting Mrs. George McGowen, here.

Mrs. Hall returned home Sunday, after a few weeks' visit with relatives at this place.

Charles Arnold has returned from Atlanta, where he has been taking in the grand sights.

Messrs. Duramus, Buck Daniels and Claude Jackson left yesterday for Atlanta, to attend the Exposition.

The sociable given at the residence of Mrs. Jackson, last Thursday night, was enjoyed by all who attended.

The Literary society will meet at the residence of J. F. Pope next Friday night. All cordially invited to attend.

Rev. W. M. Montgomery and wife left Friday for their new home in Heflin. We are sorry to lose them, and wish them success.

Dr. McGaha and Bro. Reynolds lectured here last Tuesday on the subject of the Alabama Industrial School, Shelby county. Hurrah for them. Let Shelby county have some great schools.

Buck Daniels was seen driving a cow home last week, and the people opened their eyes. Redbird has heard it whispered, "I wonder if he is going to get married." REDBIRD.

A Letter From a Former Resident of Shelby County.

FARMERSVILLE, TEX., Nov. 25.

EDITOR CHRONICLE: I am going to send in my dues for your paper, which I have been reading for sixteen years and don't think I can do without, for it has been my home paper and companion so long I would be lost without it. It tells all the county news and keeps me posted in politics. The grand old democratic party is my home for life in that line.

The pops are very quiet at this time in this part of Texas. I think they have about run their race but will not own up, but time will tell their fate.

I live two miles northeast of Farmersville, at the crossing of the Santa Fe and east line, a nice little town of 1,100 inhabitants and surrounded by a fine farming country, mostly black moxie land, which made an average of forty bushels of corn per acre this year, and corn is selling at 15 cents. I made 1,100 bushels this year, and out of sixty acres of cotton I have sixteen bales. Had it not been for the boll worm I would have gotten forty bales.

It has been raining for three days and nights, but changed off about 10 o'clock to a considerable drift of snow from the north.

Mr. Editor, I went to Dallas to the fair on sound-money day, but it rained and was so muddy that there was not a good turn out. Dallas is a fine town and well constructed. At 7:30 that night I took the Central and went south 160 miles and got off at Benchly, in Robison county, on the Little Brazos river. There is any amount of fine land in that country, but too many negroes for me. I will say this for the benefit of parties not satisfied in old Alabama, where there is a bitter, and many times two bitters to one sweet. There are too many people in Texas now—at least in this part. They can't all get homes. Alabama is hard to beat, if I am any judge. If I live, I expect to come back to see old Shelby and the good and faithful democrats that have been so true.

I bid you and your paper God speed.

JAS. M. TATE.

Give Tramp Freaks a Cold Shoulder.

Making a freak of one's self pays better than work. A large number of loafers, fakirs and freaks have discovered this fact and have become a pub-nuisance. Men start naked and otherwise and travel in various ways around the world on wagers. Women and men circle the globe on bicycles. Two girls are tramping across the country; a man is walking on stilts; another is crawling on all fours and two others recently started to roll a beer barrel 300 miles.

A remarkable thing about these fool performances is that they nearly all wager to earn large sums of money on the trip. The naked man and the woman bicyclist were to return with $5,000 each, and they are said to have succeeded. This money come from the "sucker" class, presumably—people whose curiosity get the best of their judgment and pocket-books. It wasn't earned. It was faked. The freaks find that they can make a living, see the country, live fat, do nothing and make money humbugging the people, and the graft is being overworked.

No worthy purpose is subserved, no good is done and in many instances the tramps are frauds. Helping them to money or notoriety in the local press is encouraging bummers and dead beats, and feeding a class that is too lazy to work and too shiftless to be of any value to any community. No man who is willing to make a public ass of himself for notoriety and collections ought to be countenanced. Give these tramp freaks a cold shoulder; put a stop to the flow of coin they are after, shut off the free feeds and the nuisance will speedily come to an end.

Queer Conduct of Bland.

From the Louisville Courier-Journal.

When Mr. Bland arrived in Savannah Thursday and found that only one seat had been sold for his free silver lecture that night he cancelled his engagement. We are surprised at Brer Bland. A man who can make sixteen ounces of silver equal to one ounce of gold can surely make one seat equal to sixteen seats; and a man who can make one seat equal to sixteen seats can, of course, make sixteen seats equal to sixteen hundred seats. Why did not Magician Bland wave his flat wand over that one seat and lecture to a packed house?

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Dimendale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitancy in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist church, at Rives' Junction, she was brought down with Pneumonia succeeding La Grippe. Terrible paroxisms of coughing would last hours with little interruption, and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results." Trial bottles free at Parker & Armstrong's drug store. Regular size 50c and $1.00.

Democracy's Need.

The party must put forward its best man for governor in this state. It cannot afford to put forward a man who will go into the field with a divided party behind him.—Montgomery Journal.

Still, you must know that if by some hook or crook your favorite, Captain Johnston, should receive the nomination on a free silver platform (which we cannot think will ever be) he will enter the field with a divided party behind him. It seems to us that what Alabama democracy most needs at this juncture to insure party harmony, and later, at the polls, victory, is a leader without a record to clog his candidacy.—Tuskaloosa Times.

With a String to it.

We don't want the impression to go out that we are inclined to hedge on the financial question, for such is not the case. When it comes to the matter of a candidate for congress we are for a sound money man "till the cows come home;" that is one reason we are "ferninst" Bankhead, and for that reason we will take advantage of every legitimate opportunity to bring about his defeat and secure the election of a sound money man in his place. With the governorship it is different; the chief executive of a state can have no voice in shaping our national finances, therefore a man with free silver views filling that place could do us no harm in that regard. For this reason we are not averse to Captain Johnston as governor. We believe that he has made a mistake in making silver the paramount issue in Alabama, for it has needlessly created strife in the party ranks when harmony has been the most urgent need. But in spite of this mistake we honor Captain Johnston for the good he has done the party in the past, and the democrats of the state, regardless of their feelings toward silver, honor him, and will give him a united support provided Governor Oates is not a candidate, and provided again that if Captain Johnston is the nominee he does not follow the example of P. Wat Hardin, of Kentucky, and bolt the party platform which, without fail, will contain a sound money plank.—Carrollton West Alabamian.

Sound Doctrine.

The Times is not in favor of a compromise between Alabama politicians that involves the election to high and important office of any man who does not represent the honest sentiment of the people. Public office was not created for aspiring politicians, and we know of no reason why the wishes of the people should be sacrificed in order to place this or that politician, however prominent, into position.—Florence Times.

"STIR ROUND SOME."

"Great Gobs" of Sense in a Plain Family Talk—"The Darnin Gourd and That Basket of Old Socks Means a Whole Passle"—How to Be Healthy and Hongry and Happy.

(Copyright, 1895.)

Hit was waxin late along into the night, and I was thinkin to myself that I mought as well to go and bring in some kindlin and set the rat traps and wind up the clock and retire to bed. But in the maintime it would seem like Mother she had got sorter wound up her own sweet self. She was wound up for one of her plain family talks, and talk she would. She was ripe and ready with one of them fireside lectures, and it was necessary compelled to come forth. And naturally of course it was a mighty good time of year for me to lay low and say nothin and suffer and be strong.

"Stir Round Some."

"You have now been on the lifts for two or three weeks, Rufus, and I want you to git up and git out and stir round some," says Mother, as she picked up her darnin gourd and got out a basket of old socks. White people, whensomever I see the darnin gourd and that basket of old socks come out and report for duty I am ready to hear somethin drap. It means some new socks made out of old ones, but it likewise also means a whole passle more than that. It means that the day and hour have come when somethin must be said.

"I would love the best in the world to see you come around on your feet oncst more, Rufus, but all the doctors in creation couldn't tell for certain what you have got," she went on to say. "I reckon maybe the good Lord knows what ails you, but He won't tell it. But if it aint one thing the matter it is somethin else. From all the general appearments of the case it looks to me like you mought be sufferin with a general mixtry the dumps and the studs and the mullygrubs. At any rates you have got somethin or other and a mighty bad case of it, and it has now come to that pass where it makes me sore in spirit and weary in the flesh.

"Stir round some. That is the mainest thing for you, Rufus. Stir round some. Go out amongst the highways and the byways and mix and mingle with the folks. It will beat bluemass and snake root tea and salts and the like of that clean out of sight. There is many a man in this country that feels and looks a tremendius big sight worse than you and has a whole lot more bad luck and hard times than you do. You have stayed here at home mopin and moanin around in the low grounds as monstrous long till you have come to think that all the trials and troubles and tribulations, and sorrows and worriment in the created world are right here on our place. But that aint so. No doubts it seems that way to you, but that is jest simply because your wife's husband is lookin darkly through a set of green goggles, as it were. Stir round some. That is the mainest thing for you, Rufus. Stir round some.

"You will mighty soon find out that other people turn up sick sometimes as well as you. Some people fall out and fight and split the blanket and quit, whilst some die and are buried, and others land in the Poor House. But bless gracious we aint come to that yet. Other people git their potatoes frost bit and ruint, providin they dig 'em in rainy weather, like you did, and then leave 'em out in the patch of a cold frosty night. Other people have their hogs to take sick and die with the colery, or maybe their cows go dry all at oncst, or the dogs pitch in and kill their sheep, and so forth and so on. In the long run the good Lord is more than probable to even things up all along the line, Rufus, and we raley couldn't expect to have everything our own way all the time. If all the machinery runs smooth and even and I can have my own way about things in general one-half of the time I am more than thankful for that much. Stir round some. That is the text I am preachin from to-night, Rufus. Stir round some."

"So Much for Sperits-of-Cats-a-Fightin."

Well Mother she went on at that rate till late bed time—never missed a lick nor jumped a cog. And even when she got through and took out and quit, I didn't say nothin. But yet still at the same time it was my own private personal opinion that her head was as big as a hamper basket and as level as a squash. She was the doctor in this case, and there was nothin left for me to do but to take the medicine like she had fixed it up. So bright and early the next mornin I saddled up and lit out. I didn't start out to go anywheres in particulr. The mainest thing with me was to "stir round some."

I then give my horse the ribbons and naturally of course we soon rounded up at the old Scroggins place. But Blev he want at home. He was way off somewheres down in the woods paster playin doctor as best he could to a sick mule. By roamin and ramblin around promiscus for some time finally at last I found him. He was foolin and physicin with his young mare mule, Kizzie.

"Things are comin top side down and wrong side out with me, Rufe," says Blev, "and you know when they start to comin wrong they most in generally always come in flocks and squads and droves. The best cow on the place laid down night before last and said her prayers and kicked the bucket and turned her cloven hoofs up to the hog weed and the daisies. No, I don't know what was the matter with her. Nothin at all so far as we could see and find out. Accordin to your doxology, I reckon her time had jest naturally come and she had to go. At any rates, she is gone where the honeysuckles bloom and the tree frog sings forever. But dadblame it, that want nothin to speak of. Mandy she took on about it powerful and shed a few tears on the sly, and it was all over.

"Then last night this young lady, which you know she is the best mule in the settlement, she had to turn up missin. I didn't know a blame thing about it till feedin time come and she want on hand. When the stars begin to twinkle and the chickens fly up to roost—when the gold of evenin meets the dusk of night, as it were—if Kizzie aint in the lot crackin corn and chawin fodder I can gamble on it that somethin mighty wrong has come to pass. So I had to pole off after supper and find out what was goin on. When I found her she was rippin and snortin around down here with a scandlous bad case of the cholic. By gatlins, Rufe, you ought to of been here to see her roll and tumble and plow up the earth and paw the open air. It was a plum sight to look at. I didn't know it in time to help it, but I found out too late that Miss Kizzie had been foragin around over there in the pea field all day, and late in the evenin she come on back acrost the spring branch and stopped to squench her thirst. So consequentially a tremendius big lot of swellin had been goin on and somethin had to be done right away immediately to keep down serious trouble. I had brought the fixments along with me, and I then drenched her with sweet milk and molasses, and sody and salt, and the Lord knows what all. But it was pure vanity and vexation. The rollin and tumblin went on reglar and steady and fast and furious till past midnight. In the main time I had a quart of good whisky at the house, and it stood to reason with me that Kizzie needed it in this hour of her pains and tribulations. I had travelled the same road myself, you understand. But it had cost me six bits in spot cash, and I was savin it back for some future day when it mought fit a case of pushency between me and you and Andy Lucas. And yet a man would be blind stavin crazy to lose a hundred dollar mule in orderment to save six bits worth of sperits-of-cats-a-fightin. So presently I went back to the house after the bottle. It was like payin taxes or sheddin eye teeth, Rufe, but by gatlins I fetched it, and Kizzie took it. You bet she took it, and she took it like she knowed what it was and the wonders it would do. And by the twelve epistles, she got up on her feet inside of twenty minits and shook herself right and natural. She aint to say plum straight as yet, but she is clean past the danger line and on the mend. So much for sperits-of-cats-a-fightin."

When I left the Scroggins place Blev had led Kizzie back to the lot and she was lickin salt and nosin around the fodder rack.

"Havin a Hog Killin Time."

From there I rode on over to the Stribblin place to see how everything was comin over there. Handy he was sawin away on his fiddle when I first driv up, and when I lit and dismounted and got down and went in he met me with a smile as broad as a crib-door.

"You are jest in time to be too late, Rufe," says Handy. "We have been havin a regular hog killin time around here. Two weeks ago the colery got in amongst my hogs and from that the funeral procession proceeded. By gum, I had twenty-seven head of hogs and they was fat and thrifty as you ever saw. Everybody said I was elected on the meat question by a good, safe majority. But confound the luck, the colery killed twenty-six of 'em in ten days. It did'nt leave but one for seed, and this mornin I took my axe and went forth and knocked that lonely one in the head. I thought I mought as well to give it to the colery or the buzzards, and make a clean sweep and a smooth job of it. It is all in a life time anyhow, Rufe, and everything that goes up must come down."

Headed for the Poor House.

Oncst more I turned my horse loose and rode down the ridge and across the creek on my return back home. I had already went far enough to find out that there was some trouble goin on in the world besides what come to me and mine. Down there in the swamp, jest beyond the bridge I met up with Dunk Strickland, and Dunk he was lookin like a man that was sent for and couldn't possibly go. His mouth was standin wide open like a beaver trap, and his face was as long as a rainy Sunday. I lowed maybe somebody was dead at his house, and after passin compliments with him in regards to the weather I was raley skeered to ask him about his folks. But Dunk is a man that most in generally always tells everything he knows, without waitin for questions.

"With nine mouths to feed and dry goods to buy for the whole shootin match, and six of 'em gals at that, my name is mud, Rufe, and the poor house is my home. Me and my wife had been married six years and had five children, and all gals but one. And now they are doublin on me and comin two in a burr. The doctor was at my house last night, and when he went away this mornin he left two twin babies there, which belong to the Strickland generation. They are both gals of course, and the next news you hear they will be callin for calico and red ribbin. I can't stand it, Rufe, blamed if I can stand it. You are on to all the tricks, and I want you to go and take out papers of compellment and send the Strickland family to the Poor House."

As to me, I didn't tell Dunk whether I would or wouldn't in regards to the papers of compellment, and whilst he looked like he was fixin to cry, I didn't feel sorry for him a blame blessed bit. Instid of whinin and pinin he ought to of been singin songs of praise and thanksgivin. Maybe if they will keep doublin on him till the figures run up to twelve or fifteen he will do about a little and be a full grown man.

So I then went on home, feelin like the good Lord has blessed me as free and liberal as any livin man, both in my bread basket and store. I had a right tolerable good appetite to eat that day at dinner, and from then henceforwards continually all the time I have been healthy and hongry and happy.

The next time you git under the weather and on the lifts remember what I tell you that Mother told me: "Stir round some." You mought take out your little note book and set it down. But at any rates, "stir round some." It is a dead shot for the mullygrubs and the most pleasantest medicine in the world to take: "Stir round some."

TO GAIN WEIGHT.

Pale, Thin People Usually Are Diseased.

The First Thing Necessary to Gain Flesh Is Health, Then Proper Food for Both Body and Nerves.

From the Journal, Kirksville, Mo.

Henry Gehrke is a thrifty and prosperous German Farmer living four miles south of Bullion, in this (Adair) county, Mo. Mr. Gehrke has a valuable farm and he has been a resident of the county for years. He is very well known hereabouts and well respected wherever he is known. Last week a reporter of the Journal stopped at Mr. Gehrke's and while there became much interested in Mrs. Gehrke's account of the benefit she had not long since experienced from the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. She said she wanted everybody to know what a great medicine these pills are, but as so many people are praising them now-a-days, she modestly doubted whether her testimony could add anything to what others had already said of them. Her only reason for talking for publication about Pink Pills was that the people of Adair and neighboring counties might be convinced, if any doubted, that oft-published testimonials concerning Pink Pills were genuine statements from the lips of persons who have been benefited by the use of them. Speaking of her own interesting experience, Mrs. Gehrke said:

"A little over a year ago I was completely broken down. I had been taking medicine from a doctor but grew worse and worse until I could scarcely go about at all. The least exertion or the mere bending of my body would cause me to have smothering spells, and the suffering was terrible. I thought it was caused by my heart. When everything else had failed to relieve me and I had given up all hopes of ever being anything but a helpless invalid, I chanced to read some testimonials in the Farm, Field and Fireside, also in the Chicago Inter-Ocean, and the sufferings of the people who made the statements were so nearly like the suffering I had endured that when I read that they were so greatly benefited by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People I did not hesitate to go at once and purchase two boxes. I took them according to directions and before the first box was used I felt a good bit better. Really the first dose convinced me that it was a great remedy. Before the two boxes were used up I sent my husband for three more boxes, so that I would not be without them. When I had used these three boxes I felt like a different woman and thought I was almost cured.

"Since that time I have been taking them whenever I began to feel badly. When I began taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, I weighed only 113 pounds and after I had been using the medicine for about six months I weighed 122 pounds. I have had a good appetite ever since I commenced taking Pink Pills and instead of mincing along, picking such food as I could eat even with an effort, I eat most anything that comes on the table. I am not the invalid I was. I do not have to be waited upon now as if I was a helpless child, but I work all the time, doing the housework and ironing and working in the garden without that dreadful feeling which comes over a person when they are afraid they are going to have one of those spells that I used to have.

"Work don't hurt me any more. I honestly believe that had it not been for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills I would now be in my grave. I still have what the doctor calls bilious colic but the Pink Pills have made me much better and the spells are not so frequent and are nothing like as painful as before I began to use them. I would not be without the Pink Pills for that disease alone under any circumstances, to say nothing of the other diseases for which they are especially recommended. I take pleasure in telling my neighbors the benefits I have received from Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, and know of several who have been greatly benefited by them."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are considered an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effects of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions, that tired feeling resulting from nervous prostration; all diseases resulting from vitiated humors in the blood, such as scrofula, chronic erysipelas, etc. They are also a specific for troubles peculiar to females, such as suppressions, irregularities and all forms of weakness. In men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork, or excesses of whatever nature. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent postpaid on receipt of price, (50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50—they are never sold in bulk or by the 100) by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

NO JOY IN LEADVILLE.

Life There Has Grown Too Tame to Interest the Visitor.

There used to be a deal more variety and life in Leadville than there is now. In its early days every phase of human nature was represented here, and if there was any wickedness common to any other section of the globe of which this camp had no specimen some public-spirited bad man would import a supply. It was a lively mining camp in all that the term implies, and never hid the light of its wickedness under a bushel. Nothing was hidden, neither the saloons nor the gambling houses nor the worst places. The man who wanted to be bad need seek but lightly for an opportunity. As for the divertisement of an impromptu duel to the death, that was so easily obtained as to quickly lose its charm. Everybody carried a "gun," and, soon or late, everybody used it with a fellow-being for a target.

Now this is largely changed. Leadville is not yet a prominent way station on the route to the better land, but is as peaceful as the average town of its size in or out of the mining region. Men here are too busy to attend to the affairs of their neighbors; there does not seem to be an undue amount of drinking, and business goes on about as it does elsewhere. State street is still here, and those who knew it in other days may be interested in knowing that its sanitary condition from a moral standpoint is still bad and needing fumigation and disinfection. An energetic and general conflagration along that thoroughfare would result in a purification of the moral and physical atmosphere. Still, I contend that Leadville is no worse than many other towns, and by comparison with some of them, and especially with its former self, is a bright and shining light set upon a hill.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Lord Bramwell's Piety.

The late bishop of Winchester is said to have possessed, among his many other qualities, that of sarcasm. A good story is told of a retort he made to the late Lord Bramwell, who, meeting him on his way back to his room to take off his robes after reading prayers in the house of lords, apologized for having been absent from the ceremony. "When I kneel down it gives me palpitation of the heart," said Lord Bramwell; "and it would not be respectful for me to sit or stand while your lordship was praying." Bishop Thorold, perhaps knowing almost as much about the old baron's sanctity as did Lord Bramwell himself, answered, in measured tones: "Pray do not mention it, Lord Bramwell! I am sure your lordship can be equally devout whether you are standing, kneeling, or sitting—I will not say lying!" The playful old judge afterwards inquired who had read prayers that afternoon, and, on being told, remarked, with a sparkle in his eyes: "He's a sharp fellow." — Household Words.

CHEAP GREENHOUSE.

How to Add a Plant Room to the Ordinary Farm House.

If it were understood how easily, and at how little expense, a plant room can be added to an ordinary farm or village house, there would certainly be more of these useful and pleasure-giving adjuncts to country and suburban homes. The illustration gives a suggestion of a very neat and simple addition that will let in enough sunlight, even though the roof be of shingles instead of glass, to keep plants growing thriftily all winter and to start a large assortment of plants for the kitchen garden, which will bring vegetables upon the table at least a month earlier than is now the case. In cold climates the season for garden growth is too short to give us the full benefit of fruits and vegetables. A sunny room like that figured here will very materially lengthen the season, and with a succession of plantings after the weather becomes warm will make the garden a joy throughout the whole summer. If desired, such an addition can have the roof of glass also, which will force plants along still faster, but this is not necessary, and will increase the cost of building and of heating. With a southern exposure and windows about three sides, as shown in the sketch, very excellent results may be obtained. An oil stove may be used for heating; or a hot water pipe, or a hot air flue from the furnace or boiler, if one is used for heating the house, may be carried into the plant room. Build tight to keep the wind out, and heating will be a comparatively easy matter. —Orange Judd Farmer.

NEW ROAD MATERIAL.

Refuse Molasses Used with Considerable Success in Utah.

The Utah Sugar company has begun a novel use for the waste product from the works at Lehi, known as by-product, or molasses. Roads are actually being constructed with the sirups, which are valueless as sugar producers, the life having been extracted. The molasses is used as a cement, the body of the road material being made up of gravel. This new method was first used on the road leading from the country road to the sugar factory, and the travel over this thoroughfare since the opening of the sugar season has demonstrated the value of the sirups and gravel as materials for the improvement of roads. The piece of road that has been so improved is as hard as macadam, and even the heaviest loaded wagons do not cut it up. The sirups are first poured over the roadway to be improved, and then a layer of gravel is sprinkled on. More sirup and gravel follow in their turn, until the road is in perfect condition. There seems to be just sufficient potash salts in the molasses to give it the necessary cementing qualities.

This making of roads and walks with refuse sirups from sugar factories has also been successfully tried in California. It is not at all unlikely that at the end of the present season the company will make more improvements on the roads leading to the factory. At first the molasses showed a tendency to ooze up through the gravel, but the application of an extra coating of gravel remedied this and made the road as smooth as a floor and as hard as pavement.—Salt Lake Herald.

WHAT DESTROYS STREETS.

To Carry Heavy Loads on Small-Tired Wagons Is Almost Criminal.

Without doubt the heavy carting and drayage of modern times have much to do with the perishableness of modern pavements. The hardest rock itself cannot long withstand the continuous grind of heavy loads supported upon narrow tires. To this foolish and destructive fashion of building carts and drays designed for the transportation of great weights the bulk of failure in modern pavements is due. It must be remembered that the celebrated roads of antiquity were never subjected to similar tests, and that the smaller the surface called upon to sustain great weight the less naturally will be the resistive power offered, and the greater will be the pressure upon the point of contact.

If anyone will take the trouble to ascertain the weight of an average load whose like is hauled by hundreds through our chief cities daily, measure the width of the tire and then figure the pressure per square inch to which a pavement is exposed, based upon the fraction of a circle, which touches a straight line, we will have a better idea of what road builders of the present day have to contend with. This width of cartwheels and tires should be regulated by law with a view to municipal economy, and each commonwealth should endeavor by legislation to enforce honesty in laying of foundations for every foot of pavement used.—Lippincott's Magazine.

American Butter in Ireland.

After a most diligent inquiry I can find no merchant who handles American butter. Several years ago it had some foothold in this market, but at present there appears to be no demand for it. The reason assigned is its poor quality. One dealer tells me that good margarine is preferred to the imported product, and sells for more. Another says that if America wishes to establish a large trade she will have to send only the finest quality of centrifugal creamery butter, this is the quality that Denmark and Sweden are sending, and because of the improved methods of making and superior and uniform quality it takes the lead of all competitors.—Consul at Belfast.

So "They Say."

The average road commissioner
Would do more good, we guess,
If he'd work the roads a little more
And the public a little less.

Royal Baking Powder

ABSOLUTELY PURE

A ROYAL BAZAR.

Ladies of High Decree Wait Upon the Purchasers.

We pressed on, and the desire of our hearts for ten days past was realized. We began to buy things of royalty. The bazar was given for the benefit of Princess Beatrice's Isle of Wight volunteers. So of course it was about her booth, decorated in green and black—the colors of her regiment—that the crowd pressed in eagerness to gaze or to buy. As the members of the royal family were not "tagged," it was difficult to know who was who, and, to our surprise, the gentry that were near us did not know by sight their own royal family. But we quietly persisted, and found the lady in blue and black—and a handsome gown it was, of black silk much covered with raised passementerie, and with blue silk sleeves—was Princess Beatrice. She was neither too fat nor too red, as the English women said she was. Her features are good, her teeth perfect, her face interesting and animated, and she carries herself beautifully. One of us four, of the "stars and stripes," in her eagerness to own a souvenir from royal hands, forgot to listen to the manner in which the English addressed these exalted personages, and asked, in a perfectly dignified, but wholly American way: "Will you please tell me the price of this vase?" Princess Victoria, of Schleswig-Holstein, turned away to hide her smile, but immediately returned to business and gave the price. When it was paid for she called in all the four royalties near to make change, did the article up in a royal "wapse" of paper, and handed it to us with a smile and much less condescension than is vouchsafed us from many of those duchesses that are hired to stand behind our counters at home. This princess was not pretty, but her gown and hat were. The latter was white straw, and her dress was blue silk finely striped with white, the body covered with real lace. There was such a dainty, pretty lady-in-waiting—Miss Minna Cochrane. Her hair was white, but her face and figure were young. She wore a gray chiffon with white chiffon body, white satin bows on her shoulders. The princess called her Minna, and she adorned the booth, besides being of real service.—Harper's Bazar.

THE midnight stars shine overhead
With more than usual brightness;
The hills and valleys are arrayed
In robes of dazzling whiteness;
And jeweled sprays of frost and rime
To forest boughs are clinging;
And sweet the anthem and sublime
The Christmas bells are ringing.

It wakes old memories again;
The vanished past is nigh us;
We feel anew old bliss, old pain,
And long-lost friends are by us—
Friends who have reached the better land,
Friends who have never faltered
In friendship e'en around us stand
With friends estranged and altered.

And voices silent long we hear
Sweet words of pardon speaking;
And other voices reach our ear,
Our words of pardon seeking;
The wrongs we met too trivial seem
To merit angry feeling;
The wrongs we did we greater deem
While Christmas bells are pealing.

And we forget to scheme and plan
While Christmas bells are telling
Of him who came in guise of man
On earth to claim a dwelling.
The sweet bells sounding near and far
Calm, holy thoughts are bringing,
And Heaven and earth the nearer are
While Christmas bells are ringing.

THERE! That's off my mind for another year."

Mr. March gave an impatient little fling to the last sheet in a series of letters he had been writing. Short and stereotyped they were—all running much like this:

"DEAR —: Inclosed find a trifle in remembrance of the day, with good wishes for all. Affectionately,
"JOHN MARCH."

"It's a kind of nuisance," went on Mr. March, as he gazed at five checks which lay on his desk with the letters, each one dashed off and left to dry while the others were written. "I don't know—" a grumbling coming into his tone—"really, I don't—why I should keep it up year after year. There are some things which might be considered outgrown as time goes on, and this is one of them."

Still Mr. March had a feeling that it would not be discontinued, this every-Christmas offering of a small sum of money to each one of his kindred; it was too firmly based on old association. With the passage of the years he had grown apart from them; his interests and theirs had become widely separated, and yet he could not well have persuaded himself to sever this almost only link which bound him to the members of his own family.

It had begun soon after he had left home and come up to the great city in search of the fortune which had finally crowned his efforts. He had done well from the first; and, even now, as he gazed upon the five checks, he recalled with a slight warmth at his heart the first time he had sent home gifts of money. They had been smaller then; a dollar each to three cousins, five dollars each to his brother and sister. What a stir they had made in the family. John could easily realize the feeling of opulence which it spread over his home roof and that of his uncle living near. Later he had enlarged the gift. Brother, sister and cousins had married and set up homes of their own. None of them had, like himself, prospered abundantly; and when first John March had written out three checks for ten dollars and two for twenty-five, he still knew the rejoicing they would carry into families in which money was scarce.

He had rejoiced in doing it, all the more that a little effort and self-denial had been necessary accompaniments of the gifts. That was many years ago. Time and circumstances had built up walls between him and his relatives, and the old heartiness of good will was wanting.

"It is really time I was letting it go." A thought crossed him of how good the bit of money still came to its recipients. "But I'm under no obligations to keep it up. I have made my money—they had the same chance. Their lives are what they have made them, just as mine is what I have made it. They expect help from me, and they have no right to."

He fretfully recalled the time when it had been represented to him that unless the brother who still held the old homestead had a lift of a few hundred dollars the place would pass out of his hands. It had been given, and that was the end of any trouble from David. With his sister it had been worse. She had made an unfortunate marriage, and then been widowed. Meek and mild in her disposition, she had never directly applied to him except when in extremities, but was given to keeping her burdens and struggles before him in a way which he sometimes found exasperating.

Cousin Tom had been a scapegrace—always in trouble, always looking for some one to help him out and set him going again on the basis of many promises of better things. Cousin Harvey was the possessor of a large family and small everything else. It was not so very long since Mr. March had helped him out west, finishing his assistance with the suggestion that in future it would be agreeable that he should keep his difficulties to himself. Cousin Matilda had a sickly family; a wail from her on the subject of pressing doctor's bills was frequently heard.

"No," resumed Mr. March, as he folded one of the checks, "people have no right to inflict their misfortunes on some one else just because he has achieved success where they have failed. —That you, Mike?"

"It's mesilf, sor. Ready to shut up when you say the worrud."

"I'll take the key myself. I'm not quite done yet, but you needn't wait."

Mike, however, showed no hurry to leave, but busied himself about the room with occasional glances at Mr. March.

"That'll do, Mike," at length said the gentleman, somewhat annoyed by the rattle of shovel and tongs, which seemed to show unusual excitement in Mike. He came slowly toward Mr. March—an undersized figure of an oldish man with a painful limp.

"If I might be thrubblin' ye jist a minnit, sur."

"Go on, Mike; no more lawsuits, hey?"

"No more o' thim. It's the funny man ye are, sor." Mike shook his head, his whole insignificant face beaming with delight. "It's only that bein' it's the blessed sayson comin' so near—Christmas eve to-morrow, glory be to God!—that I'm axin' a bit o' help o' ye, Musther March, to sind a bit of a prisint to me two brothers, Pat an' Dinnis."

"So you have relatives, too, have you?"

"Thanks to the blissid saints I have, sor. An' so I'm comin' to ye to fix up the bits o' paper that'll carry some money to thim two—the leetle mite of a scrap that manes so much." Mike laughed aloud as if in great relish of the subject.

"Check, hey? Well, here," Mr. March again opened his check-book and again began rapidly filling a blank. "To the order of—what's the name?"

"Patrick O'Toole,"—Mike paused a moment as the name was written, then proceeded—"five hun'erd dollars."

"Hey?" Mr. March gave his chair a little jerk and gazed into the thin, freckled face surrounded with its fringe of ill-kept red hair streaked with gray.

"Five hun'erd dollars to Patrick O'Toole," repeated Mike in the deliberate tone of one taking special pains to make himself understood.

"What do you mean, Mike?"

"Jist phat I'm afther sayin', sur. Five hun'erd dollars to Patrick O'Toole, an' five hun'erd dollars to Dennis O'Toole."

"Out of your damage money?" Mr. March asked, between two short breaths of astonishment.

"That'd be it, sur. Where else would the likes o' me be gettin' five hun'erd dollars?"

"Where, sure enough! Why—" Mr. March gazed at the old janitor with a comical mixture of amazement and friendly contempt. "Why—you old—fool!"

Mike stood quietly with a broad grin on his face.

"Do you mean to say," went on the gentleman, "that you're going to give such amounts out of the two thousand dollars you got as damages from the street railway for injuries which have made you a cripple for life?"

"Such amounts" seemed a little bewildering to Mike.

"Would ye be thinkin' I ought to be dividin' aiquil wid 'em, bein' they're me own brothers, sur?" he began.

"Go long with you!" said Mr. March, with a laugh and a stamp of his foot. "Mike," he continued, seriously, "if you do mean such a crazy thing, I hope you will hear me when I advise you against it. Why, man, you are getting old. Your two thousand dollars is almost all your dependence for your old age—for you and your wife."

"It's the ould wife and mesilf 'll be airnin' this many a year yit, sur, plase the Lord."

"But, Mike, think of the difference this money will make in your comfort. With your simple ways it will make years of ease in your life. You can sit by your fire in your own snug hired room, instead of working hard—you with your crippled limb."

"Musther March," he said, "I know it all, none better nor mesilf. I know jist how much aisier it is to sit by the fire nor to go out in the perishin' cold wid the ache in me ould bones. But ye see, sur, they're me own flesh an' blood—Pat and Dennis. They feel the pinch and the hardness jist like mesilf. Would it be mesilf 'u'd sit by me fire takin' me aise knowin' things was harder for thim nor for me? Be me sowl! Musther March, I'm thinkin' it's the stingy ould rascal I'm bein' not to give thim more."

"Mike, you're a fool!" repeated Mr. March, but more quietly than before, and simply to fill in the pause.

"It'll be raichin' 'em the mornin' of the blissid Christmas day." Mike took a few limping steps in growing excitement. "Think of it, sur! It'll be makin' 'em feel rich! It'll bring the shmile to their faces, and the laugh to 'em, God bless 'em! on His own birthday! It'll aise the ache that no one but the blissid Lord an' thimsilves knows of."

Yes, there was a radiance added to the gentleness in the faded eyes—a radiance written by a joy of which few in this self-seeking world know the taste.

Without saying more Mr. March wrote the checks, to which the old man added his tremulous signature. As the sound of the limping footsteps died away in the hall, Mr. March turned again to the five checks on his desk.

"They look small—yes, they do." Mechanically he added a cipher to the one nearest him. "That looks better." A cipher was added to each check. "One hundred. Two hundred and fifty. They'll all have to be written over."

Mr. March leaned his head on his hands, less in a hurry to get home than he had thought. The glorified face of the old servitor was still before his mind's eye. Mr. March doubted if ever in his life he had looked into a happier one.

"Cutting down his bit of a nest-egg so—the poor old simpleton! Likely enough to end his days in the poorhouse yet."

But it was with a softened smile that the rich merchant thought it. Then his mind ran over his own affairs. Prospered from his first beginnings he had, during these few later years, taken huge strides towards a colossal fortune. Seven figures it would take, he well knew, to express what he was worth, and the initial figure would not be one of the smaller ones, either. His own family lived well, but not extravagantly; his yearly expenses were but a small proportion of his rapidly increasing yearly income

"And I've never made anyone feel rich. Old Mike's ahead of me there." With a shrug of his shoulders he drew towards him one of the checks and added to it another cipher.

Rich? There was not one of these families to whom such a check would not come as an angel's gift, with stares and catches of breath, tears of joy from care-burdened elder ones, shouts of delight from youngsters. He knew it all, for he had been poor himself, long ago.

"One thousand dollars. Twenty-five hundred dollars."

There was a little excitement about it. Mr. March left his chair and walked up and down the floor. How had it been that he had never before realized what a small scratch of his pen could do? They were his own flesh and blood. They were in one way and another enduring the hardness, the daily and nightly wear of mind, the pitiful, gnawing solicitude which belongs with small means. Soul, mind and body, the hardness touched them all, binding them down with its iron touch, narrowing them with its cruel limitations. His own flesh and blood. They had stood to him as of far less value than this money he had been accumulating—money which could never bring to him more than food, clothing and lodging.

Yes, it could. It could bring to him, to his very self, his very heart, the happiness of five families—this rare privilege which he thanked God could come with an easy scratch of his pen.

As he still crossed and recrossed his office floor his movements became quicker, a glow spread over his face, and a new light shone in his eye. At length he sat down and slowly wrote again the checks, lingering over them as over an enjoyable task; and when all were finished each showed still one more cipher.—Sydney Dayre, in Demorest's Magazine.

NATIONAL RED CROSS

Busily Engaged in Mobilizing Its Skilled Staff

FOR ITS RELIEF CAMPAIGN IN ARMENIA.

These Workers, Scattered Throughout the Country, Have Already Notified Miss Barton of Their Readiness to Respond.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—At the headquarters of the American National Red Cross the permanent staff is busily engaged in making arrangements for mobilizing the skilled staff that will initiate the relief work in Turkey as soon as the requisite guarantees of hearty support are forthcoming. These workers are now scattered throughout the country engaged in the various occupations which sustain them when no great calamity requires their presence. Most of them are already aware that their services will be required in desolated Armenia during the next six or eight months, and without exception they have notified Miss Barton that they are arranging their private affairs for a possible year's absence, and will be ready to share with her the dangers and responsibilities involved in the greatest of relief movements. The preparations for the present undertaking are necessarily attended with greater deliberation and caution than those hitherto carried out under Miss Barton's guidance, as in no former experience of the organization has it been necessary to leave this country and operate far from its principal sources of encouragement. This, however, does not deter the executive officers of the American National Red Cross, who are confident of the cordial support of all the national Red Cross organizations, acting under the convention of Geneva. In fact, a cablegram of approval from the international president of the Red Cross, Gustave Moynier, of Switzerland, leaves no doubt as to the co-operation of all countries in the work.

Until Miss Barton arrives in Turkey, however, and the distribution of food to the starving is actually inaugurated, complete dependence is naturally placed on American sympathy with the persecuted sufferers.

FAILED TO AGREE.

The Jury in the Ketcham Case at Chicago Disagrees.

CHICAGO, Dec. 14.—After being out 19 hours the jury in the case of Ketcham against the Chicago & Northwestern Railway Co., for damages on account of having been blacklisted for participating in the big American Railway union strike, told Judge Barke at the opening of court that there was no possibility of an agreement and they were discharged. This is the first case to come for trial under the common law against conspiracy where the plaintiff alleges blacklisting for going out on strike, and was regarded in the nature of a test.

FOUR MEN KILLED

By a Premature Explosion Near La Follette, Tenn.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Dec. 14.—A premature explosion of powder and dynamite Friday afternoon at Big Creek Gap, near La Follette, Campbell county, suddenly killed four men and two mules, and four other men are missing. The dead are: Andrew Broyles, aged 20, single; Neal Dabney, aged 25, leaves a wife and two children; John Webb, aged 21, leaves a wife; Price, white, age unknown.

The explosion occurred on the works of the La Follette railroad, which is under construction through Campbell county.

THE STATE OF TRADE

As Indicated by Bradstreet's Weekly Review.

NEW YORK, Dec. 14. — Bradstreet's weekly review says:

With the exception of mild weather in cities in Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska and Minnesota, cold weather has stimulated sales of seasonable merchandise at nearly all points, but only by contrast with preceding weeks. Wholesale trade is dull; merchants preferring to reduce stocks at the end of the year to make ready for annual inventories. In retail lines, particularly in holiday specialties, there has been a marked increase in demand, though thus far, in some instances, not equal to expectation. Irregularity is shown in mercantile collections, general trade throughout the country being relatively most satisfactory in the central Mississippi valley. Exports of wheat (flour included as wheat) from both coasts of the United States this week aggregated 2,458,000 bushels, against 3,155,000 last week, 2,533,000 in the week a year ago, 3,217,601 two years ago and 3,277,000 in the corresponding week of 1892. Exports of Indian corn amount to 2,391,000 bushels, as compared with 1,867,000 last week, 292,000 in the week one year ago and 1,277,700 in the corresponding week of 1893. The present week's total foreign shipments of Indian corn are the largest for any week since that ending May 2, 1892, and are explained by our telegraphic advices from New Orleans of an extraordinarily heavy outward movement there. There were 313 business failures throughout the United States this week, compared with 315 last week, 383 in the like week one year ago, 337 two years ago, and as contrasted with 298 in the second week of December, 1892.

BROWN CHEMICAL CO. BALTIMORE, MD.

THE * CHRONICLE.

C. C. DuBOSE, Editor and Proprietor.

COLUMBIANA, DEC. 19, 1895.

THE republican national convention will be held at St. Louis June 16.

THE Greenville Living Truth says that it is "about a foregone conclusion" that Philander Morgan will be the populist nominee for governor next year.

OF THE repuplican national committee 11 favor Reed for president, 10 favor McKinley, 9 favor Allison, 4 Cameron, 3 Morton and the rest, 9, scattering.

THE Hartford Courant summarizes the opinions of the southern democratic newspapers upon the president's message and draws the conclusion that might have been drawn in advance, namely: "It comes to this, then, that Mr. Cleveland's revised financial programme commends itself to the southern democratic journals angrily rejected by the southern democratic journals suffering from the free silver hallucination—which was to be looked for."

WITHIN a short time the old home of Jefferson Davis in Richmon, Va., will be thrown open to the public as a Confederate museum. The "White House of the Confederacy," as it has been called, has been the property of the city for many years, and has recently been used as a school house. A room in the house will be assigned to each of the states that seceded for a collection of relics, and the first response is from Georgia, which sends the cape, gauntlets and sword of General Lee, among other things.

A LAND GRANT ASKED FOR THE GIRLS' INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL.

A special to the State-Herald from Montgomery dated December 16, says: Governor Oates has, at the suggestion of the board of trustees of the White Girls' Industrial school, directed a letter to each of the Alabama senators and to all of the congressmen from this state, asking that they use their efforts to secure from congress a land grant as an endowment for the institution. The governor reminds them that the state appropriation is only $15,000, which is not near sufficient to sustain the school, and he begs them to do all in their power to urge congress to act in the matter. The governor also calls their attention to the fact that the negroes have three flourishing industrial schools in the state, and the white people have, excepting the institution in question, not one. It is earnestly hoped here that the school will be handsomely endowed by congress, and that it will be made one of the foremost educational institutions of the state.

SIMPLE BUT WEIGHTY.

From the Union Springs Herald.

Two of our prominent citizens met near the postoffice one day last week, and were soon engaged in a discussion of the silver and gold questions, one favoring free silver and the other wanting nothing but sound money. The former seemed not to understand how the free silver and unlimited coinage of silver would depreciate the silver dollars at the 16 to 1 ratio, whereupon the other presented the simplest yet most forcible argument against free silver.

Taking the premises that a little scrap of paper has but little intrinsic value and that the amount of silver in a dollar is not worth its face value only by the indorsement of the government, the latter person asked the other to name the "meanest nigger" on his place.

"Now," said he, "if you endorse that negro's note for ten dollars, I'll cash it. If you endorse it for one hundred dollars, I'll cash it. You might go on endorsing it, I might cash it, but when you endorse that negro's note for fifteen thousand, or more, I wouldn't touch it, because you would simply endorse yourself beyond your means. It's the same with the government endorsing silver to a face value above its worth, and under present conditions the government is not proof against endorsing itself out."

Of course, you have all heard this argument before, but it will bear repetition, and is well worth anyone's time to consider it thoroughly. Consider, also, what the condition of the government would be when it endorsed itself beyond its means, and also consider what the dollars would be under such an event.

WHAT IT COSTS TO BE GOVERNED.

W. E. Eurtis' Washington Letter in Chicago Record.

According to Secretary Carlisle's calculations it will cost $418,091,073.17 to run this government during the next fiscal year. The appropriations for the present year made by the last congress amount to $412,753,264.81.

The president of the United States and his staff cost $93,200 a year; congress is a luxury for which we pay $7,958,817; our consular and diplomatic service, including the support of the state department, will require $1,888,278; it costs $24,526,968 to support the army and $25,583,675 the navy; we pay $8,750,458 to the Indians; the postal service costs $150,000 less; the federal courts last year cost $3,549,000, but the largest item of expense is the pensions we pay our old soldiers. They amounted last year to $141,381,570, and $3,000 more is asked for the next fiscal year. This money is distributed through a number of agencies and divided pretty evenly among the Northern states. Although the older states sent larger quotas to the war, the general movement of immigration to the West has carried the old soldiers and their widows with it, so that they have become distributed over the North and West. Massachusetts has a smaller pension roll than Kansas, although she furnished more than 150,000 soldiers for the union army and Kansas less than 20,000; 20 per cent. of the population of Kansas enlisted and less than 10 per cent. of the population of Massachusetts.

Ohio gets the largest share of pension money, although Pennsylvania furnished more troops to the union army. There was distributed last year at the Columbus agency $15,496,856. Pennsylvania got the next largest amount. There was disbursed at the agencies in Philadelphia and Pittsburg last year $14,504,624. A larger amount was disbursed at Topeka, Kan., but it was distributed among the veterans living in Missouri, Kansas, Colorado, New Mexico, $14,945,557. The old soldiers in New York got $13,799,710.

A larger amount of pensions is paid in Indiana than in Illinois, although the Illinois agency pays all the navy pensioners in the northwest. The total paid out in Chicago last year was $10,792,514, while the Indianapolis agency disbursed $10,922,860. Washington comes next, disbursing $9,207,200 in New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and the south Atlantic states. All pensioners residing abroad are also paid from the Washington agency. Iowa and Nebraska got $8,362,895, while the Milwaukee agency divided $7,647,587 among the pensioners of Wisconsin, Minnesota and the Dakotas. The old soldiers of the union army living south of the Ohio river and west of the Blue Ridge mountains are paid at Knoxville, Tenn., where $7,374,226 was disbursed. The Boston agency paid out $7,437,835 in Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut. Michigan soldiers got $7,022,796. In Maine alone $3,009,545 was disbursed and $3,053,708 was divided between New Hampshire and Vermont. On the Pacific coast $3,065,686 was paid through the San Francisco agency.

There are now 970,524 persons on the pension rolls. Of these 3,826 are widows and twenty-one surviving soldiers of the war of 1812, 3,911 are widows and 3,012 are survivors of the Indian wars, 7,868 are widows and 12,536 are survivors of the Mexican war.

During the last year 39,186 names were added to the pension rolls and 42,411 were dropped.

The average annual value of each pension last year was $133.99. Of the total amount appropriated for pensions $561,304 was given as fees to examining surgeons, $71,866 as salaries to pension agents, $466,928 as clerk hire, $22,902 for rent of pension agencies, $177 for fuel, $385 for lights and $22,818 for contingent expenses. The amount paid in actual pensions on account of the army was $136,093,265 and the navy $3,650,980. Under the general law $58,906,628 was paid to dependent invalids, $18,111,504 to dependent widows, parents and children and $79,220 to army nurses.

THE GOVERNORSHIP.

What the Papers Have to Say About It.

Captain Joe Johnston is already in the field as a candidate for the democratic nomination for governor, and challenges all comers to the contest. There is more involved than the mere election of a governor. It is a matter of principle, and they have made it a national issue. They have made war upon the national administration of their own party and base their claims for support upon the abuse and sneering criticism of President Grover Cleveland and those who endorse him. Captain Joe says that "all who agree with Cleveland should receive scourges upon their backs," etc. His success carries with it the election of a legislature who would choose Senator Pugh's successor. We wish it distinctly understood that we wish him remanded to private life. He has outlived his usefulness. It also involves the election of delegates to the national democratic convention. We want a delegation of sound money, Grover Cleveland democrats, who are in line with the great majority of their party on the money question. For these and other reasons, we accept the challenge of these disorganizers and malcontents, who seek to divide and betray their party, and will place in the field very soon a man who will represent us, and call upon the true democrats of the state to rally to his standard. Who shall it be?—Tuskegee Reporter.

PUT ASIDE THE EXTREMIST.

Party harmony seems to be the desire of the great majority of democrats these days, and they are casting about to find a man who will best unite the factions of the party. When he is found he will be nominated and elected by an old-time majority. At the present writing, Capt. Joseph F. Johnston seems to be the most available man for the position. Notwithstanding the bitter fight, even now made against him, he has no words of censure for any one. He is minding his own affairs, abusing no one, censuring no one, but on the contrary acting in every way as becomes a man who desires party peace and harmony. Contrasted with this attitude we find the press opposed to him wildly beating the air, in a vain attempt to prove him unfit for the nomination, and also they are wildly beating the bushes, trying to scare up an opposition candidate, and, in short, doing many things to stir up strife and discord and bring on a bitter factional fight within the ranks of the party. Such actions alone show that the opposition is not properly a faction which will promote harmony. By all means let this factional strife be ended. Put aside the extremist and let the people get together upon a platform, broad and Uniontown Herald.

THE CAPTAIN CALLED.

Some days ago we asked Captain Johnston to disclaim responsibility for the repudiation doctrines enunciation by his organ, the Birmingham State-Herald. The captain remained silent, perhaps through the mistaken notion that he should not turn his back upon a faithful, even though fatally, indiscreet friend. The organ, however, has done the proper thing, for it now declares that it is no organ, but a plain, every-day newspaper that is able to differ with Captain Johnston, if need be, and is not to be considered the captain's mouthpiece. This must be a relief to the captain. No feeling of delicacy can longer be urged as excuse for his failure to answer our question. Does he or does he not support the doctrines that the State-Herald enunciated when it was his organ.—Mobile Register.

ANOTHER VIEW.

Of course, if the anybody-to-beat-Johnston clique can have their obdurate and reckless way, they will get some one to serve their purpose. Indications are now adverse to the candidacy of Hon. Richard H. Clarke; but they are cunning and full of that variety of blandishment that oftentimes misleads the ambitious. Mr. Clarke's reputation as an astute politician, as well as a patriotic citizen, raises strong presumption against his victimization. But they are bent and determined upon a wrangle, and the question of who will lead their little faction is altogether secondary. They could not possibly win the nomination, but they could sow seeds of discord such as would multiply with great rapidity before next August shall have rolled around.—Huntsville Argus.

ONE-SIDED HARMONY.

The free silver or Johnston organs are shouting themselves hoarse, says the Florence Gazette, for harmony in the democratic party, but somehow, they want it all their own way. They seem to think the sound money men have no rights that they should respect only on a Johnston platform. But they should remember that there are a whole lot of fellows that don't want to swallow Johnston and all free silver vagaries, and "dog-goned" if they are going to do it, that's all, until he is nominated by the convention. The sound money men propose to have their say when the time comes. This thing called "harmony" is all very well when mutual, but when it's all one-sided, like the Johnston platform, it don't go down very well.—Scottsboro Citizen.

WILL HE ALLOW IT?

The captain, if we can comprehend at all his mouthpiece's latest utterance, is opposed to a platform setting our people by the ears. If this is so he can be nominated and elected and the party saved. The captain is a patriot and this is his duty. But the Times can fly no free silver flag. The democratic party in this state cannot do it. Besides, in the face of the coming national platform, such a flag would be comical in the extreme and would subject us to all manner of ridicule. We don't care to be ridiculed and we don't care to follow a flag that would attract the attention of a lot of humorists all over the country. It ought to be Johnston and harmony, if the captain will allow it to be so.—Eufaula Times.

CLARKE MAY BE COMPELLED.

The sound money papers of the state have, almost as a unit, appealed to Hon. R. H. Clarke to enter the race for the gubernatorial nomination, and it looks as if circumstances will compel Mr. Clarke to relinquish for the time his senatorial aspirations. He, like the true democrat that he is, has announced that, while he hopes the change will not be forced upon him, yet he holds himself subject to the orders of his party.—Daphne Breeze.

STRICTLY A SILVER VIEW.

The duty of the party in Alabama next year is very plain. It is to nominate Johnston and adopt a free silver platform. Then there will be a reasonable hope of success. Let the party in Alabama follow the example of the democracy of Mississippi, the only state carried by the democrats in the November elections and win. Let the party follow the example of the party in Kentucky, Maryland, Ohio and other states and it will lose.—Montgomery Journal.

A NERVE SPECIMEN.

The greatest specimen of nerve exhibited of late is the request of Johnston men for harmony. They madly assert that the majority of the party should accede to their wishes for the sake of peace. We had plenty of harmony before they started their crusade against the administration, and we will have it after they are buried under the avalanche of public opinion.—Clanton View.

IT'S ALL OVER.

The democracy has decided that Captain Johnston should have the nomination, and that same democracy is going to give it to him.—Russell Register. If this is true, we move that the party pass a vote of thanks to the Russell Register, adjourn to 1898 and save campaign expenses.—Mobile Register.

OF SILVER PROCLIVITIES.

Captain Joe Johnston is solid with the people and grows in favor daily. He has the advantage of any man who has gubernatorial aspirations from the fact that he stands on a platform broad enough and liberal enough to accommodate all the people.—Tuscumbia North Alabamian.

VERY TOUCHING.

The efforts of the State Herald to keep everybody off the gubernatorial track but Johnston are decidedly amusing, and its solicitude lest some good man should enter into the race and be sorry for it is very touching indeed.—Montgomery News.

ONE OF EACH KIND.

Joe Johnston for governor, W. C. Oates for United States senator would be a team no one need dread but the ward politicians. It would most certainly please the people at large.—Prattville Progress.

BUT WILL HE DO IT?

Mr. Johnston has it within his power to allay dissension and combine the party on healthy state issues—but will he do it?—Daphne Gulf Breeze.

Whisky and Pistols.

From the Clarke County Democrat.

If every man in Alabama would keep sober and carry no deadly weapons during the next three weeks there would be a great improvement in the moral record of murders and many less serious crimes prevented. If a man knew that a bottle of whisky and a pistol would make him a murderer, and probably without provocation, he would shudder at the sight of either, but lives will be taken during these weeks and pistols and whisky will be the cause. Either is bad, but the two taken together may well be compared with the pestilence that walketh in darkness and the destruction that wasteth at noonday. How glad and how thankful would be the editor of this paper to believe that he had influenced some one to discontinue the use of intoxicating liquors and the carrying of deadly weapons, and in this way had probably prevented the shedding of innocent blood and saved the tears and anguish of mothers and wives and daughters and sisters.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS.

J. G. Parker spent Sunday in Calera.

Mrs. T. L. Seale visited Calera Thursday.

Dolls, dolls, and dolls, at
JOHNSTON & WHITE'S

P. B. Harrell, of Shelby, spent Thursday in town.

J. P. Spencer paid Birmingham a flying visit yesterday.

I. W. Bailey, of Calera, was a visitor in town Monday.

J. S. Walton, of Weldon, paid us an appreciated call Tuesday.

W. R. Weaver, of Aldrich, paid our office a pleasant call Monday.

We learn that Judge McMillan is quite ill, but we hope he may soon be at his office again.

Johnston & White have just received a new line of men's and boys' hats. Don't fail to see them.

E. D. Hall, mine host of the Colonial, was quite sick for several days, but has recovered.

Miss Emma Looney will leave tomorrow for Fayetteville, her home, to spend the holidays.

For fruits, candies, currants, cocoanuts and holiday goods go to
JOHNSTON & WHITE'S.

Senator McEldery, of Talladega, was in town two or three days this week attending court.

J. W. Moore, of Weldon, we learn, has moved to our city. We congratulate him on his selection.

Isaac Cromwell, who moved from this place to Indian Territory about a year ago, is here on a visit.

Sam Strickland has moved into town, in order to take advantage of our superior school facilities.

Authors, dominoes, yacht races, steeple chase and other games.
JOHNSTON & WHITE.

Mrs. I. W. Bailey, of Calera, who has been on a week's visit to relatives in this place, returned home Sunday.

Johnston & White have just received a pretty line of Christmas goods. Don't fail to visit their store when in town.

We have just received a new stock of ladies' and children's shoes. Let us give you prices on them.
JOHNSTON & WHITE.

Look out for the Christmas tree and a real Santa Clause. Go, and take the children; but by all means make the little ones happy by putting a present on the tree for them on Christmas Eve.

Our genial tax assessor, J. H. Hammond, having sold his property in Wilsonville, has moved to this place and is occupying the residence of the late J. S. Leeper. Here's our hand, Brother Hammond.

H. W. O'Brien and family, of Orrville, Ala., are now citizens of our county. He has purchased the farm of J. W. Johnston, one mile south of town, and last week moved there. We extend them a hearty welcome.

Hon. R. W. Cobb has been quite sick the past two or three days, but is now improving.

J. H. Duran died this morning in Calera, after a long illness, and will be buried here tomorrow morning. For a number of years he was a resident of this place, but has lived in Calera for about ten years.

With this issue, we bid our friends adieu until 1896. There will be no paper Christmas week. We believe we have earned one week of rest, and we propose, as is our custom, to take it. A merry Christmas to all.

Joe M. Spencer has purchased E. D. Hall's stock of merchandise, and has moved into the brick store adjoining, owned by W. B. Browne. His stock is about straightened out and he is now ready for business.

Geo. W. Chambers, of Talladega, sells the best whisky for the money to be found anywhere. He buys in large quantities direct from the manufacturers, and therefore his goods are pure. Orders filled promptly by return train.

Do not spend your money for low proof high wines which are flavored with chemicals and called corn and rye, but let me sell you the pure juice, regular distilled from the grain, at $2 to $4 per gallon. GEO. W. CHAMBERS, Talladega, Alabama.

We learn today on good authority that it is the intention of the Shelby Iron company to reopen their store in a short time. The date has not yet been settled upon, but it is not likely to be longer than six or eight weeks.

For your Xmas 'nog or for the holiday reunion, let me sell you your whiskies—something that will give satisfaction—as I buy all my liquors direct from the distillery, paying cash for same, I can sell you the pure juice.
GEO. W. CHAMBERS,
Talladega, Ala.

Our Sunday Schools propose to unite and have a Christmas tree on the evening of the 24th. We have not been furnished with any further particulars, but this announcement will be sufficient to insure a large crowd of little ones. They will go to see the tree and get the presents, and not to hear speeches.

If you are in need of pure, unadulterated whiskies for medical purposes you can find ten-year-old Gibson rye whisky, oily and smooth as velvet; also Kentuky Yellow Stone, D. W. Harpers, McBrier, Rose Bud, Cognac, Apple and Peach brandies, imported Canadian Club, as well as brandies and gin, at GEO. W. CHAMBERS', Talladega, Ala.

We have been requested by an active member of our city council and an earnest friend of our free school to urge our people to pay their city taxes at once. Quite a large number of our citizens agreed voluntarily to pay half in November, and the balance in January. Very few have paid a cent. The need of this money is urgent and all are requested to call now on the city treasurer and pay these taxes. The school must run, and it takes money to pay the teachers. They have been faithful in the discharge of their duties relying on the promises made. Now they must be paid. Every man in Columbiana should do all he agreed to do towards maintaining the school, and should do it promptly.

Card of Thanks.

Kindness has been compared to the light of a lamp or candle shining far out into the night guiding and cheering the lonely traveler struggling through the darkness. So in affliction's trying hour a gentle word, a sympathetic glance, a friendly act, inspires courage and hope in the sinking heart, a strong faith in God, reminding us that there still lives in man something divine, a fragment of the great love that sees and pities all. In our recent affliction, and many times in the past, the same thoughtful, sympathetic friends have stood with us around the death bed of our loved ones, ministering so patiently and gently to every want; and although words can but feebly express our gratitude and appreciation, yet we would offer this small tribute to all who have contributed in any way to our comfort or assistance in our times of trouble. May He who comes not to be ministered unto but to minister, reward you; may the healing of His seamless robe be by your bed of pain and His rod and staff be your comfort and stay through the dark valley and shadow of death. J. P. SPENCER.

Wilsonville Warblings.

Mr. Bolin's sawmill has been running under full headway.

The Methodists are talking of erecting a parsonage at this place.

Mr. James Ray is building a new cottage for Mr. Ed Niven at West End.

Mr. Wm. Kidd and Mr. Jas. Wilder, of Vincent, ran over Sunday on a visit to relatives.

Mr. J. H. Hammond has sold out his interests here and will leave us, with his interesting family, in a few days.

Miss Maude Williamson and Miss Lula Densler spent Saturday and Sunday at Mr. J. W. Bolin's, and report a large time.

All are enthusiastic upon the subject of our own Institute and the Girls' Industrial School. We must educate, we must educate.

Mr. George Smith's bright face and jolly good cheer will be missed from our midst, as he has returned to his enviable railroad position.

Mr. Bob Fowler is anxiously looked for, that he may tell us of his shipwreck and other marine experiences on his recent trip to Central America.

Mr. Charlie Adkins, of Calera, is visiting in Wilsonville. The great question among us girls is, Will he continue to visit here now or will his visits change other changes?

Mr. Brooks De Arman, the dear man unbluffable, will be missed one week from school and by our town; but grieve not, dear girls, for he will return all our own, as before, with the new year.

You should see the S. P. L. L.'s in their badges e'ere long. They are a fine looking company when on parade. The only question about their future success is that we now crowd any room about town.

Our late trio from the Exposition report a treat well worth any young man's time and money spent on such a trip. Mrs. Densler and daughter, Olive, have not returned.

The architecture of Mr. Pope's handsome new brick store is fully up with the most modern of our city stores. We learn that he will in a few days open up in his new house, just in time for the holiday trade.

As the new Methodist minister had not arrived, we had no preaching on Sunday, but instead, had an interesting prayer meeting at the Presbyterian church morning and evening.

Mr. Robert O'Hara will be a citizen of our town by January 1. He settles permanently among us for the purpose of educating his children, and will enter five at the Institute at our new year's opening.

Since witnessing the marvelous growth of our school since September 1, and in view of the fact that we are to be stormed with new pupils on the 1st of January, our entire people are stirred as never before upon the subject of adding an ample room to the Institute building. The Masonic lodge of this place has pledged itself to donate $60 and a splendid heater; and, though all outsiders have not been seen as yet, we feel safe in assuming that when the field has been canvassed we will have a splendid house of seating capacity for 150 pupils. This is to be finished the first or second week in January.

Finally, Mr. Editor, look out for Santa Clause, and our wish for you and yours is that he may come to you in great shape. We hear it whispered that he's getting his "fixins" ready for our neighbors and our neighbors' children. A merry Christmas to you and to all. W. S. S.

Harpersville Echoes.

There is a drove of mules in town.

Mr. Giles filled his appointment here Saturday and Sunday.

Mr. R. L. Flippin, of Birmingham, is spending this week at Harpersville.

Dr. Corley, a prominent dentist of Talladega, was here Saturday and Sunday last.

Webb Martin, after spending several months in the far west, returned home last Sunday.

Alvin Hitchcock has moved from the country to town and is occupying the Davis building, on North Highlands.

W. A. Gorman came over from East Lake last week and spent a few days here looking after his mother's business.

Who will be the first to try to have this whisky business stopped? It can be done, and why don't some one start the ball to rolling?

The great Henry Watterson struck the key-note a few days ago when he said that the democratic party would die unless new leaders took hold of it, and he might have added that churches, schools, societies, etc., would go the same way. The time has come for a change. The country needs it, and the people want it. Whenever this is done, the grand old democratic party will bloom again as a rose, all the churches will put on new life, the school-room will be overflowing, and societies will do much and lasting good. Let us have a change and let us have it now.

We notice that a great many newspapers of the state and, in fact, nearly all of them, are against Captain Joe Johnston for governor, and even our own much beloved CHRONICLE, is among the number. Why is all this fight against Mr. Johnston? Is it because he don't agree with Mr. Cleveland on the money question? Is he to be rid out of the democratic party simply because he don't agree with the president on that matter? Are Morgan and Pugh, the grand old war heroes of democracy, to be driven out of the party simply because their views and Mr. Cleveland's are not the same on the money issue? Surely not. I believe that we have just as good democrats that would make just as good presidents, if not better, than Mr. Cleveland. And now as the good-looking editor of THE CHRONICLE has declared himself on the situation, your humble servant will declare himself. I am for Joe Johnston for governor until the democratic convention speaks, and then if he is defeated fairly I am for the nominee, let him be who he may.

Wishing you and the many readers of THE CHRONICLE a merry Christmas and a happy New Year, I will make my bow and step aside until Janury, when I will take up my pen and in my feeble way continue to give you the news from this part of the moral vineyard.

Vandiver Locals.

Abb Waldrop has left this place and gone south.

Boys, let's have a Christmas tree at Chestnut Grove.

Jimmie Whitfield has got a severe attack of the fever.

Dr. Lawley's sawmill is cutting a great deal of lumber at Vandiver.

The farmers have planted more wheat in this country than they ever did before.

We agree with the writer from Harpersville on the whisky business, and hope the guilty parties will be punished to the extent of the law.

Christmas is coming and the parties have commenced, but we hope that the teachers and leaders of this community will not take a part in such things. SMALL BOY.

POSTAL SAVINGS BANKS, ETC.

From the Richmond Dispatch.

In the United States senate Mr. Quay, of Pennsylvania, has introduced a bill to establish postal savings banks. It provides for deposits of from ten cents to ten dollars at all money order postoffices, and for allowing interest on deposits which do not exceed $500. This measure the founder of the Dispatch in his lifetime always supported when he had the opportunity to do so. The result of the passage of such a law as Mr. Quay proposes would be the transfer of the money now lying idle in old stockings and in safety-boxes to the custody of Uncle Sam. If such a law were now in force Mr. Carlisle would have no trouble in using these deposits in carrying on the government's financial operations. Such a law would encourage economy and tend to promote thrift amongst the small depositors, though $500 is not a small sum looked at from Mr. Quay's point of view. It would cause many a dollar to be deposited in the postal savings banks which now goes into the drawer of the saloon keepers. The people have unbounded confidence in the national government; yes, all the people, whether they be plutocrats, laying up millions of dollars of bonds, or the masses of the people, possessing the means of depositing only a few dollars at a time. The money which would be deposited in postal banks under the proposed law would not have to remain idle. On the contrary, it might be and ought to be and would be employed by the government, and, as the rate of interest would probably be not over 2 per cent., the government would make or save money by the establishment of places of deposit which would always have on hand an abundance of money. The government would, of course, use this money, but Uncle Sam, as we have said, would nevertheless be always ready to pay his depositors.

Akin to Mr. Quay's proposition is the proposition to make the telegraph a part of the postal system of the country. We have heretofore called attention to the article of Justice Walter Clark, of North Carolina, in the American Law Review, in which he discusses the constitutionality of the proposition in question. One single point ought to suffice to satisfy the doubter. Judge Clark says that the same section of the constitution of the United States which empowers congress to declare war, raise and support armies and navy, coin money, regulate commerce, and borrow money on the credit of the United States includes the permission to establish postoffices and postroads, and if the power of the government is exclusive as to these other provisions, it is also exclusive as to the postoffice, for all these powers are conferred by the same section and by the same words. "Numerous decisions of the supreme court of the United States," says Justice Clark, "holding the power of congress over the postoffice and the carrying of mails to be exclusive render necessary any discussion of an undisputed point."

By all means let the thrifty people have postal savings banks. Rich and poor, the government and the people, will profit by them.

Notice to Non-Resident.

The State of Alabama, Shelby County.

Savanah Higgins, complainant, vs. Ed Higgins, defendant, in Chancery. Sixth District, Northeastern Chancery Division.

In this cause, it is made to appear to the Register by the affidavit of J. N. Cook that the defendant, Ed. Higgins, is a non-resident and that his place of residence is unknown, and further, that, in the belief of said affiant, the defendant is over the age of twenty-one years. It is therefore ordered, by the Register, that publication be made in the Shelby Chronicle, a newspaper published in the County of Shelby, once a week for four consecutive weeks, requiring him, the said Ed Higgins to plead, answer or demur to the bill of complaint in this cause by the 5th day of January A. D. 1896. or, in thirty days thereafter, a decree pro confesso may be taken against him.

Probate Court, December 10th, 1895.

Estate of James M. Johnson, deceased.

This day came C. W. O'Hara, administrator of said estate, and filed his application in due form and under oath, praying for an order of sale of certain lands and personal property described therein, and belonging to said estate, for the purpose of division among the heirs, upon the ground that said property cannot be equitably divided among said heirs without a sale. It is ordered that the 20th day of January, 1896, be appointed a day for hearing such application, at which time all parties in interest can appear and contest the same, if they think proper.

The January Number of "The Delineator"

Is called the Winter Holiday Number. The Fashion articles for the month are timely and complete, covering the entire field of styles for ladies, misses and children, millinery, lingerie, dress goods and trimmings. The rich holiday display in the shops is interestingly described. Mrs. Roger A. Pryor's article on The Social Code relates to society balls and to balls and parties for children. The space devoted to Woman's Work and Advancement includes a thoughtful conversation between Edith M. Thomas and Dr. S. R. Elliott on Woman in Business, an interesting paper by Miss Margaret McNaughton discussing Architecture as a profession for women, a graphic description by Lucia M. Robbins of Woman's Work at the Atlanta Exposition, Harriet Keith Fobes' directions for burnt decorations upon cardboard, and the continuation of Sara Miller Kirby's Kindergarten articles. The first of a brief series of papers on the Care of the Teeth, by a well known New York dentist, will be found exceptionally valuable. Mrs. A. B. Longstreet describes the carving of meats, and in seasonable cookery impromptu luncheon menus receive attention. In Mrs. Witherspoon's Tea-Table Gossip are noted some new home made holiday gifts. The review of holiday publications includes mention of many particularly intended for young readers. The novelties in knitting, tatting, crocheting and lace-making are illustrated and described.

NATURE'S WAY:

There is no reason why the period preceding childbirth should be full of discomfort. There is no reason why childbirth itself should bring a feeling of dread to the mother. Nature does nothing wrong. It is the abuse of nature by wrong living, lack of exercise, ill-fitting clothes, that brings about the tortures of childbirth.

Perfectly healthy women go through the ordeal with comparative ease. Nature intended it that way. Women approaching motherhood have really but one thing to do—get strength generally and locally.

"FOOL NOTIONS."

Squire Rufus Sanders Still Fresh and Quaint.

The Smartest and the Best of People Have Fool Notions—A Few From Aunt Nancy Newton—Blev Scroggins Starts the Procession—Andy Lucas and His Mark—"An Under-Bit in the Left."

(Copyright, 1895.)

About the most strangest thing in this world to me is how many smart people take up fool notions. It ain't no sign for common that a man is a natural-born fool because he takes up fool notions. Me and you, my friends and fellow citizens, and most everybody, have our own fool notions. The fact is I have took notice that rale smart people are more probable to have weak spots on that line than anybody else. The onlyest man I ever saw that didn't have any fool notions never had a lick of sense to start on.

Aunt Nancy's Fool Notions.

You mought saddle up right now and pitch out and ride three hundred miles before you could find another woman as smart as my Aunt Nancy Newton. She has never went off to college and she don't put any on frills and fancy fixments to speak of. She is what I call a plain, old-fashion, flint-and-steel woman. But when it comes to havin sense—plenty of it and some to spare—my Aunt Nancy is right there. And yet still at the same time, that dear, delightful old soul can take up more fool notions, it seems to me, than any one woman in the whole discovered country.

If Aunt Nancy was to turn in tonight and dream about crossin high and muddy waters—freshets and floods and the like of that—she wouldn't sleep no more in a week. She says it is a dead certain sign of death in the family for anybody to dream about crossin muddy waters. But if a death in the family had come to pass every time I have dreamt about crossin floods and freshets and muddy waters the Sanders generation would of faded out years and years ago. So that is jest simply one of Aunt Nancy's fool notions.

I was buildin of a new house last summer in one of the most loveliest spots on the broad bosom of the earth perhaps. There is a big oak grove all around and a spring right down there under the hill.

"You will have to take your ax, Rufus, and cut them trees down," said Aunt Nancy the first time she driv by. "It will never do to leave 'em standin there. They will draw lightnin, Rufus, they will draw lightnin as certain as the Lord made little apples."

Well, I never have cut them trees down, and what is more I never will. They have been standin right there for a hundred years, I reckon, and they never have drawed any lightnin yet. And so far as I can see there ain't no particlar reason why they will start to drawin of it now. But at any rates, that is one more of Aunt Nancy's fool notions.

If Aunt Nancy was to run out of a job on a Thursday night—as smart and stirrin as she is—she would set down and smoke her pipe and hold her hands and play with the children a whole entire day before she would start a piece of work on Friday. "It's bad luck, Rufus, it's bad luck," says she, and that is the onlyest reason she can give. The Good Book tells us to work six days and rest on Sunday, but it don't say nothin about taken Friday for luck. Every day is workin day with me, excepin Sunday, and I have had more good luck than any man in the settlement. Whereas, accordin to my doxology, that is another one of Aunt Nancy's fool notions.

And then Aunt Nancy she runs everything by the moon. She regulates the weather, and sows her garden seed, and plants out her flowers, and sets her hens and kills her hogs all accordin to the size and shape and stage and general appearments of the moon. As to me, it takes my level blamdest to keep up with the sun, and I don't know one turn of the moon from another. But the weather changes with the seasons, and the garden seed come up, and the chickens hatch off, and the flowers grow at our house the same as they do over at the Newton place. So there we are with one more of Aunt Nancy's fool notions.

Finally at last, accordin to my figuration, it would take a hamper basket and a good big book to hold all the senso and all the fool notions that Aunt Nancy has got in her head.

The Procession Proceeded.

It ain't so very often—maybe not more than onct a year—that my friend and fellow servant Blev Scroggins breaks out in a fresh place, but whensomever he does turn loose he can take up some of the blamdest biggest fool notions of any rale smart man I have ever saw.

One day last week Blev come by my house drivin four mules to a big wagon, and hit empty. Him and his wagon and mules was raisin more dust and noise and confusionment along the big road than a drove of wild steers on a stampede. I wondered in my soul what in creation was comin to pass, but Blev he driv up and stopped to tell me the news.

"I am goin over here in the hill country to move Jule Nabors this mornin," says Blev. "I reckon no doubts you wonder how it comes to pass that an all-wool, iron-bound, moss-covered Democrat like me can hook up his mules and go and move a rantankerous Third party idiot like Jule Nabors. But you will see the pint when I give you the mainest facts in the case. Little Bunk Weatherford has sold his place to Handy Stribblin and bought the old Turner place where Jule Nabors is now livin. In the main time Handy Stribblin sold out to the Widder Brantly, and the widder she rented her place out to Tance Stringer, and so forth and so on. Now Tance Stringer is crowdin the widder, and the widder she is crowdin Handy Stribblin, and Handy he is crowdin Little Bunk Weatherford, and [illegible] is crowdin Jule Nabors, whole shootin match. He is the onlyest Third party man in the line, and to a man on the fence or up a tree it looks like he won't move his pegs more for pure cussedness than anything else.

"Naturally of course it ain't my funeral, Rufe, but by gatlins the procession must proceed. It ain't fair and it aint right for one sorry man like Jule Nabors to block up the business of a settlement in that way. Little Bunk and Handy and the widder and Tance Stringer are all ready to move and dead crazy to start, and whilst I ain't got nothin particlar to do with the case I am sick and tired of so many people fussin and foolin and fiddlin around on account of Jule Nabors. From last reports it seems as if Jule has rented land from old man Mose Trammel, and the onlyest reason he can give in now for scotchin the procession is that he can't get no wagon and team to move with. That is the news that come to me last night and I am now on my way to the hill country. When I get there Jule Nabors he will move and the procession will proceed." And Blev he driv on.

It was after supper that night when Blev come thunderin by on his return back from the hill country, but I helt him up and got the latest news.

"By gatlins, Rufe, I moved him and the procession can now proceed in regular order," says Blev. "Jule made out like he want ready and tried his blamdest to turn me back. He took the studs and bucked and kicked and snorted and cavorted. But I told him it want no use, I had come over to move him, and he had to move. I couldn't make that long trip with a four-mule team for nothin, and dadburn him, I moved him. I know it want my funeral, and you mought maybe say I took up a blame fool notion, but it had to be did, Rufe—it just simply had to be did."

I will leave it for you to say as to whether Blov was right or wrong in takin the job to move Jule Nabors. And I will say that he was dead right about one thing. It was my privato opinion that he had went and took up a blame fool notion.

Years and years and years ago—when we was only chunks of boys—Andy Lucas had a rale nasty fight one day at school with a youngster by the name of Bunch Marlowe. It was a fair fight with nothin but the weapons which mother nature had give them, and the way they fit and scratched and chawed and bit was a plum sight to see. The performance went on fast and furious till finally at last Bunch bit a plug out of Andy's arm, and Andy he bit a three-cornered slice out of the other boy's left ear.

"Dadblame him, I put a clean, smooth underbit in his left ear," said Andy, as we went on home that evenin, "and henceforwards from now on that is my mark. If I ever come up to be a man and have any stock around me I will mark every blasted one of 'em with an underbit in his left."

Time went on and Andy waxed big and strong and devilish accordin. By-and-by he married off and settled down, and presently he got some stock around him. It was now time for him to pick a mark and put his stock in it, and he marked everything with "an underbit in the left." The last time I was over to his house me and Andy went out to the lot and down in the paster to see his stock.

"I have now got thirteen hogs and nine sheep and twenty-three goats and four cows and three calves and one man in my mark, Rufe," says Andy, "and every blame one of 'em wears an underbit in the left."

Curious like, ain't it? I know you think so. Me too. But that is only one of Andy's fool notions.

Remember now, and don't make no mistakes in regards to fool notions and fool people. They don't come together by a whole tremendius big lot. But in this present day and generation mighty nigh all the people—particlar the smartest and the best—most in generally always have some few fool notions.

It is estimated that 300,000 barrels were used in Chicago for making oil lard; and that St. Louis, Kansas City and Omaha took 200,000 for the same purpose. About 250,000 barrels went to Holland for making margarin, and large quantities to southern Europe for mixing with olive oil."

WHITE HOUSE WELL GUARDED.

The President and His Family Secure from Molestation at All Hours.

At the beginning of every winter Col. Wilson, superintendent of public buildings and grounds, places in position near the front of the white house two or three watchmen's boxes and about the same time dispatches appear in certain newspapers to the effect that the president is erecting arsenals for his personal protection. These miniature houses are used as places of refuge during cold and stormy nights for the policemen detailed to the duty of guarding the executive mansion.

It is true the white house is well guarded, but no one familiar with the history of the executive mansion and the experiences with cranks often encountered there will deny that this precaution is well taken. A large force of watchmen, including police officers, is on duty inside the mansion at all hours, day and night, and a continuous patrol is maintained by the local police of the grounds immediately surrounding the mansion. The outside watches are so arranged that there are never less than six policemen on duty at any time, day or night. This force is distributed so as to command every avenue of approach to the building, north, south, east and west, and it is hardly possible for anyone to approach the building at any time from any direction without detention.

During the past two years this police surveillance has been maintained continuously regardless of the long and frequent absences of the president and family. As an additional safeguard automatic alarm signals are fixed in convenient places in different parts of the house and a strong force of police could be secured almost at a moment's notice. The mansion is also in direct telegraphic communication with police headquarters, the military posts at Washington barracks and at Fort Myer, Va., and the marine barracks, and it would not take very long to secure a strong detachment of men from each of the places named.

The white house is better guarded now than it has ever been before, except during the war, and no precaution has been neglected to insure the security of the president and his family from molestation. Cranks are a constant source of annoyance at the white house, but under the present excellent system of espionage it is well nigh impossible for even the mildest specimen of that genius to get nearer the presidential presence than the outer portal of the building. It is also unlikely that there will ever be a recurrence of the experience of a few years ago, when a man, delirious with drink, forced an entrance through a back door into the blue parlor and made a desperate effort to inflict personal violence on President Harrison.—Chicago Times-Herald.

A HUMAN LEOPARD.

Black Spots on Hands, Face and Body.

The Inexplicable Affliction of a Chillicothe Man—Physicians Unable to Determine the Cause.

From the Constitution, Chillicothe, Mo.

A reporter on the Evening Constitution was making the usual routine for news one morning, and had just left the city hall when he came across W. C. Wright, a highly respected pioneer citizen of North Missouri, who has lived in Chillicothe a number of years. The reporter asked Mr. Wright if he could not relieve the monotony of the morning by furnishing a live news item, and to the astonishment of the newsgatherer, the fine looking gentleman replied: "Well, yes; I can give you a sensation, if you desire it."

The reporter grabbed his note book and asked Mr. Wright to proceed.

"It is a miracle," he began.

The reporter became excitedly interested.

"Yes," continued Mr. Wright, "I have noticed a number of interviews in the Constitution with people who have experienced remarkable results from the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Some of your readers may think these statements are exaggerated, but when you have heard my story, you will conclude that those cures are common."

"And, what was the matter with you?" asked the reporter, doubting that the robust form standing in front of him had ever seen a sick day.

"I don't know," said Mr. Wright, "and never found anybody who did. It was in 1890, when I was just 48 years of age, that black spots began to break out on my hands, then my face and then over my body, until I became a walking human leopard. I had lost some near relatives, and my nerves were shattered. I was the most uneasy, restless, irritable, sensitive person you have ever seen. I was not only miserable myself, but made everybody around me miserable. I was nearly crazy; thought I had leprosy and was losing my mind. I could not sleep to save my life. I had no appetite and no energy.

"The original cause of my ailment was over-work and over-heat, having over exerted myself by lifting in hot weather and this was augmented by a case of malaria and the loss of my wife. The strained tendons were cured but I had become so nervous and my blood so thin and appetite so scant, that I despaired of my life. Then was when the black spots came.

"After realizing my condition, I started out to cure myself, if it should take all the property I had. I consulted the local physicians and they were unable to phase the black spots or cure my insomnia. I went to Kansas City and consulted the noted specialists with the same result. I then kept a druggist busy ordering every patent medicine that my friends recommended. It was the same thing, and my misery grew apace, and I felt like taking 'Rough on Rats.' Finally, I noticed an article, copied in The Constitution from another paper, telling of the cure of a man from nervous prostration by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I concluded to try it, and you see the result," and Mr. Wright showed his clear-skinned hands and arms and his fine complexion.

He is large and robust in health and a living testimonial to the efficacy of Pink Pills.

"I began to improve the first week. That was a year ago. Now I have a craving appetite, can sleep nine hours without missing a wink and have not been troubled with nervousness for nine months. That's my miracle. Is it not worth telling to the world?"

The reporter acknowledged it was miraculous and the interview ended. A few stains of brownish tint can still be recognized on Mr. Wright's body, but otherwise he is a perfect specimen of healthy looking manhood.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are not looked upon as a patent medicine, but rather as a prescription. An analysis of their properties shows that they contain, in condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effects of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions, and the tired feeling resulting from nervous prostration, all diseases resulting from vitiated humors in the blood, such as scrofula, chronic erysipelas, etc. They are also a specific for troubles peculiar to females, such as suppressions, irregularities and all forms of weakness. They build up the blood, and restore the glow of health to pale and sallow cheeks. They are for sale by all druggists, or may be had by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y., for 50c per box, or six boxes for $2.50.

Fire! Fire! That Dreadful Cry

Is fraught with import doubly dire to the unhappy man who beholds his dwelling or his warehouse feeding the devouring element uninsured. Happily most people who can, insure—everything but health. Nine-tenths of us neglect the preservation of this when it is in palpable jeopardy. Incipient indigestion, liver complaint, la grippe, inaction of the kidneys and bladder and malaria are all counteracted by Hostetter's Stomach Bitters.

The The The Best. Rest. Test.

There are two kinds of sarsaparilla: The best—and the rest. The trouble is they look alike. And when the rest dress like the best who's to tell them apart? Well, "the tree is known by its fruit." That's an old test and a safe one. And the taller the tree the deeper the root. That's another test. What's the root,—the record of these sarsaparillas? The one with the deepest root is Ayer's. The one with the richest fruit; that, too, is Ayer's. Ayer's Sarsaparilla has a record of half a century of cures; a record of many medals and awards—culminating in the medal of the Chicago World's Fair, which, admitting Ayer's Sarsaparilla as the best—shut its doors against the rest. That was greater honor than the medal, to be the only Sarsaparilla admitted as an exhibit at the World's Fair. If you want to get the best sarsaparilla of your druggist, here's an infallible rule: Ask for the best and you'll get Ayer's. Ask for Ayer's and you'll get the best.
